reth it openly: & the very shadowe of death bringeth be to lpght. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth them. He maketh them to multiply, and dyueth them a waye. He chaungeth & herthes of them that rule the people of the earth, and dysapoynteth them: so that they go wandrynge out of the waye, and grope in the darke without lpght: he maketh them also to stagger to and fro, lyke dyonken men.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Job reproveth his frendes with theyr owne sayenges, and condemneth ypocryt.

Al thys haue I sene wpyth myne eye, heard wpyth myne eare, & vnderstand it. Loke what ye know, that same do I know also, neither am I inferiour vnto you. Neuerthelesse, I talke with the Almighty, & my desyre is to comen with god. As for you ye are workmasters of lyes, & vnprofytable phisycions altogether. Wolde god ye kept your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyle men. Nowe heare my chydpyng, and ponder the sentence of my lyppes.

Do ye speake iniquitie agaynst God, & talke agaynst hym wpyth disceyte: Wyl ye not accept the person of hym? Or wil ye contende w God? Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to rekenyng? For as one mā mocketh an other, so do ye mocke hym. He shall punyssh you, & reprove you, yf ye do secretly accept any persone. Shall he not make you asrayde, when he sheweth himselfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you your remembraunce is lyke vnto a sparke, and your bodies lyke the claye.

Holde your tonges, for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorowe shalbe the lesse. Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth, & and put my soule in mine handes? Lo, though he slay me yet wyl I put my truste in hym. But I wil reprove myne owne wayes in his syght he shal make me whole, & there maye no ypocryte come before hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayenges with your eares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, & knowe that I shal be founde ryghteous. What is he, that wyl go to lawe wpyth me? (Let hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tonge, and dye. Neuerthelesse, graunte me two thynges, and then wylle I not hyde my selfe from the.

Drawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearfull dyede of the make me asrayde. And then call me, and I wyl answer: or els let me speake, and geue me thou an answer. Howe many are my mysdedes & synnes: Let me know my transgressions and offences. Wherfore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylte thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a synner leafe, and fote vpon dye stubble? for thou layest sharply to my charge, and punysshest me. For the synnes of my yowthe. Thou puttest my fete also in the stocks: and lokest narrowly vnto all my pathes, and markest & stepes of my fete where as I (not withstandyng) muste consume lyke as a soule carpon, and as a clothe that is motheaten.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Job describeth the lyfe of man, and prophesyeth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the godly, tyl they see that they loke for.

An that is born of woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is fulle of myserye. He cometh vp, and is cut downe lyke a flowre. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer contynueth in one state. Wylt thou open thyne eyes vpon suche one, and byngest me in thy iudgemente? Who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vn-cleane thyng? No bodye. The dayes of mā lyfe are determyned, the nombre of his monethes are knowen only vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his boundes, which he cannot go beyonde. So fro hym that he maye rest, vntill his daye come: which he loketh for, lyke as an hyzelynge doeth.

If a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyl sproute, and shote forth the branches agayne. For though & rote of it be woren olde, and the stocke therof be dead in & grounde yet when it getteth & sent of water, it wyl bud, and bynge forth the bowes, lyke as a tree that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished and consumed away, what becometh of him?

The floudes when they be dyed vp, and dryuers when they be empyte, are fylled agayne thow the flowynge waters of the sea, but when man slepeth he ryseth not agayne (of his owne strength) vntill the beauen perple: he shal not wake vp, nor ryle out of his slepe. What thou woldest kepe, and hyde me in the hell, vntill thy wrath were styllled, and to appoynte me a tyme wherein thou myghtest remembre me. Waxe a deade man lyue agayne? All the dayes of my lyfe wyl I waite tyl, tll my chaungyng shal come. Thou shalte call me: and I shal answer the, & despyle not thou the woike of thyne owne handes.

For nowe thou nobrest all my goynges, yet be not thou to extream vpon my synnes. My iniquitie is scaled vp, as it were in a bagge: but be mercifull vnto my wyckednes. The moister nes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are reued out of theyr place, & waters pearce thow the very stones by lyle & lyle, & floudes washe awaye the grauell and earth. And destroyest the hope of mā? Thou penyalest tyll agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungeth his estate, and puttest hym from the. And whether his chyldren come to worshyp or no, he can not tell. And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Wylle he lyueth: his flesh must haue trauayle, and wylle the soule is in hym: he must be in sojorne.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Eliphas repyeth Job because he ascribeth his hard and pynfull to hym selfe. He describeth the curle that layeth on the wycked, ceheryng Job to be out of the nombre.

When answered Eliphas the Themanite, and sayde: Shall a wyle mans answer be the scyence of the wynde, and fylle any mans belly, as it were the wynde of the East? Shal he reprove with a worde that is nothyng wylde?

mouth, and speake the thynges: whyche can do no good? As for shame, thou hast set it aside, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God, but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth and so thou hast chosen þ a crafty tonge. Thyne owne mouth condemneth the, & not I, yea, thyne owne lippes shalpe an answer agaynste the.

Arte thou the fyfste mā, that euer was bozne? Wast thou made before the byls? Hast thou herde the secrete counsell of God that all wyse-dome is to lytle for the? What knowest thou þ we knowe not? And what vnderstandest thou but we can the same? With vs are both olde and aged men: yea, suche as haue lpyed longer then thy father.

Thynkest thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God? With the is a lyngge worde. Why doth thyne heart so bewitche þ. And wherfore wycketh thou wyth thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so puffed vp agaynste God, & lettest such wordes go out of thy mouth? What is mā, that he shuld be cleane? what hath he (which is bozne of a woman) wherby he myght be ryghteous?

* Beholde he doth not trust his saintes: yea, the very heauens are not cleane in his syght. Howe much more then an abhomytable and vyle mā, whyche dynketh wyckednes lyke water? I will tell the, heare me: and I wyl shewe the þ I haue sene: whiche wyse men haue tolde, and hath not ben hysd from the? fathers vnto whome only þ erth was geue & no strainger went among the.

The vngodly sozoweth all þ dayes of hys lyf as it were a woman with a chylde, and the nombze of a tpyauntes peares is vnkownen. A fearfull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He helueth neuer to be delpyered oute of darkenesse, for the sword is alwaye before hys eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lpyung, he seeth playnly þ the dape of darkenesse is at hande. Sozow and carefulnesse wyl make him afraide, & compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge w his booke ready to the batayle. For he hath wretched out his hande agaynste God, & armed him selfe agaynste the almyghty. He runneth proude ly vpon hym, and with a styffe necke fyghteth he agaynste hym: where as he couereth hys face wyth fastenesse, and maketh hys body well lpyngge. Therefore shal his dwellyng be in desolate cyties, and in houses which no man inhabyterth, but are become heapes of stones. He shal not be ryche, neyther shal his substaynce contynue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shal neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flame shal drye vp hys bryanches: with the blast of the mouth of God, shal he be taken awaye. He helueth not that he is in vanitie, and yet is he out of the waye, & vanyte shal be his recompence.

He shal perishe, afoze hys tyme be doyne out, and his bryanche shal not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntimely grape fro þ vyne: and shal let his floure fall, as the olpye doth. For the congregacyon of ppyctes shal be desolate and vnfrutefull, and the fyre shal consume the houses of surpe as are greedy to receyue gyl-

tes. * he conceyueþ franayle, and beareth vanitie, and theþ bodye bynggeth forth decepte.

The xvi Chapter.

Job repetyng his myserie, sayeth that he suffereth more then hys wyckednes hath deserued.

Ob answered and sayd: I haue ofty-mes herde suche thynges, myserable geuerers of comforte are ye, all þ sorte of you. Shal not wayne wordes yet come to an ende?

Or hast thou yet any more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God that your soule were in my soules steade: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynste you, & shake my bed at you. I shulde comforte you with my mouth, and release your payne with the talking of my lippes. (But what shall I do) For all my wordes, my sozowe wylle not ceasse: and though I hold my tonge, yet wyl it not departe from me. But now that God hath set me aduersitie, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon.

And that thou hast fylled me wyth wycked-les, my fleshe is recorde, and my leanesse tyleth vp agaynste me, & beareth wytnes agaynste me. He is angrie at me, he hateth me: and gnaweth vpon me wyth hys teeth. Myne enemye shoulde vpon me wyth hys eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpon me, & smytten me vpon the cheke despyreful ly, they gather them selues togyther agaynste me. God hath put me in pzeace wyth the vngodlye, and delpyered me into the handes of þ wycked. I was in welth, but he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and sette me as a marke for hymselfe. Hys archers compasse me rounde about: he wounded my lopynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gyaunte. I haue sowed a sacke-cloth vpon my lpyngge, and lye wyth my heare in the duste.

My face is swollen wyth weppynge, & myne eyes is the shadowe of death. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my bloode, and let my cryenge fynde no redome.

For lo, my wytnesse is in heuen: and he that knoweth me is aboue in the heyghe. My fren-des geue me many wordes to scozne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a bo-dye myght please wyth God, as one man doeth wyth another: yet the nombze of my peares is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shal not turne agayne.

The xvii Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doeth payntlye abyde it.

My breathe synketh, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at deathes doze. Feward men are wyth me and myne eye must contynue in þ bytternes of the. O delpyer me, & loke out one to be my surety i thy fight, what is he þ knoweth who wyl pmes for me?

25 me: For thou hast withheld thy mercies from understanding: therefore shalt thou not let (them) be on thy side. He promyseth his friends parte of his good, but his owne chyldren spende it. He hath made me as it were a byword of the people: where as a foze I was theyr ioye. Myne eye is dymme for verpe heynesse, and all my strength is become lyke a shadowe. Vnmerciful men therefore shal wel consyder this, and the innocent shal take parte agaynst the hypocrite.

C The ryghteous also wyl kepe his waye, & he that hath cleane handes, wyl euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) saynge I can not fynde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past and my counsailes and thoughtes of my harte are vanisshed a waye, chaungynge the nyghte in to daye, and the lycht into darkenesse. Though I tary neuer so much, yet the graue is my house and I haue made my bed in the darke. I cal corruptyon my father, & the wormes call I my mother and syster. What helpeth then my longe taryenge? Who hath consydered the thynges, & I loke for? All that I haue shal go downe into the pytt, and lye wyth me in the dust.

C The. xviii. Chapter.

C Bilbad rehearseth the paynes of the vnsaythfull and wycked.

1 Ihen answered Bilbad the Subtyle & sayde: when wyl ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke well, and then we wyl speake. Wherefore are we counted as bestes, and reputed so vile in your syghte? He destroyeth hym selfe wyth his anger: Shal the earth be forlaken, or any stone remoued oute of his place, by cause of the? Yea, the lycht of the vngodly shal be put out: and the sparke of his fyre shal not burne. The lycht shal be darke in his dwellinge, & his candle shal be put out wyth hym. His presumptuous goynges are kepte in, and his owne counsel shal cast hym downe. For his fete are taken as it were in the net, and he is at his wyttres ende. His fote shal be holden in the snare, and it shal catche them that be theyr of blood: The snare is layde for hym in the grounde, and a pyttal in the waye.

C Fearfulnesse shal make hym asfayde on euery syde, that he shal not know, where to get out hunger shal be his strength: my fortune shal hang vpon hym. He shal eate the strength of his owne skynne, euen the fyre bozne of deathe shal eate his strength. His hope shal be rooted out of his dwellinge, verpe fearfulnesse shal byngne hym to the kyng. Other men shal dwel in his house (but shal be none of his) and hym stone shal be scattered vpon his habytacyon. His rootes shal be dreyed vpon hym, and aboute shal his brynche be cut downe: His remembraunce shal perishe from the earth, and he shal haue no name in the strete: they shal dreyne hym fro the lycht into darkenesse, and cast hym cleane out of the worlde. He shal neither haue chyldren nor kynfolkes amonge his people, no, nor any posterite in his dwellings. They that come after hym, shal be asfayde at his daye, and they shal go before, shal be asfayde. Suche are now the dwellynge of the wycked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

C The. xix. Chapter.

C Job recytech his myschaunces and greuous paynes. Bilbad prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

Ihen answered, and sayd: howe long wyl ye vere my soule, and trouble me wyth wordes? Lo, ten times haue ye reproued me: and are not asfayde for to laughe me to scorn: yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye wyl enhaunce your selues agaynst me, & accuse me to be a wycked person, by cause of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe they then, that it is god that hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wyth his net. Yf I complayne of the violence done vnto me, I can not be heard. And yf I cry, there is no sentence geuen with me. He hath hedged vpon my voyce, that I can not passe, and he hath set darkenesse in my pathes. * He hath spoyled me of myne honour, and taken the crowne a way from my heade. He hath destroyed me on euery syde: I am vndone: my hope hath he taken a way from me, as it were a tree plucked vs by the roote. My wrath is kindled agaynst me: he taketh me as though I were his enemye.

His men of warre came togyther, whiche made theyr way ouer me, and besieged my dwellinge rounde about. * He hath put my brethren farre a way from me, and such as were of myne acquaintance, are become straungers vnto me. * Myne owne kynfolkes haue forsaken me, & my frendes haue put me oute of remembraunce. The seruantes and maydens of myne owne house, toke me for a straunger: and I am become as an aleaunt in theyr syghte.

I called my seruant, and he gaue me no answer: no though I prayed him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe myght not abyde my breath. I was sayne for to speake saye for the chyldren of myne owne body. Yea, the chyldren despyed me. And when I was gone fro them, they spoke euell vpon me. All suche as were my moste famylpers, abhorred me: and they whome I loved best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my fleshe is a way, only ther is left me the skynne about my tesse. Hane pittie vpon me, haue pittie vpon me. (O ye my friends) for the haide of God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God doth, and are not satisfied of my fleshe.

O that my wordes were nowe wyrtten: O that they were put in a booke: wold God they were grauen wyth an yron penne in leade, or in some cocontryne. For I am sure, that my remembrance shal not faile, and that I shal ryse out of the dust in the latter daye: that I shal be clothed agayne wyth my skynne, and se God in my fleshe. My selfe shal beholde hym, not wth other, but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed wyth my me, byd not ye saye: Why doeth he suffer persecutyon? Is there founde an occasion in me? But beware of the sheard, for the sheard wyl be auct.

be enenged of wyckednesse: & be sure, that there is a Judgemente.

The. xx. Chapter.

Sophar sayeth, that the vnfaithfull, the couetous, and the wycked shall haue a woyle ende.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayd: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why? my mynde is readye wythin me. I haue sufficiently hearde thy checkynge and reprofe, therfore am I purposed to make answer after mine vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namelye, that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creatyng of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of the vngodly hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of hypocrites continued but the tynklynge of an eye? Though he be magnified vnto the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he perisshed for euer, in so moche that they which haue sene hym, shall saye: Where is he? He shall vanishe as a dreame: so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a visi on in the nyght. So that they which sawe him before, shall haue no more syght of hym, and his place shall knowe hym no more. Hys chyldren shall be fayne to agree wyth the poore, and hys handes shall restore theyr goodes.

From hys yowth hys bones are full of pleasures, but now he shall lye downe wythin hym in the earth. Why? wickednesse was swete in his mouth, he dyd it vnder hys tounge. That he fauoured, that woulde he not forsake, but kepte it close in hys throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the popson of the serpent, within his body. The ryche that he deuoured, shall he partake agayn, for God shall drawe them out of hys belly, he shall sucke the gall of serpent, and the adders tonge shall slawe hym: so that he shall no more see the ryuers and brookes of honny and butter. The thyng that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp.

Great traunple shall he make for ryche, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, and not buylded them. His belly coude neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perishe in hys couetousnesse. There shall none of hys meat be lefte behynde, therfore shall no man loke for hys prosperitie. When he had plenteousnesse of euery thyng, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery syde.

For though the wycked haue neuer so moche to fill hys belly, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to raygne ouer hym: so that yf he flye the yron weapons, he shall be shot wyth the stele bowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quyer, and a glysterynge swerde thowwe the gall of hym, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darke nesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndlyd fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remayneth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wyckednesse, & the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substance that he hath in hys house, shall be taken awaye and perishe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the poore cyon that the wycked man shall haue of God, & the herpytage that he maye loke for of God: by cause of hys wordes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Job receyeth the prosperitie of the wycked, and after destruction theyr todayne ruine and destruction.

Job answered and sayde: O heare my wordes, and that shall be my comforte of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorn. (ye if I lye you.) Is it for mannes sake that I make this dysputacyon? Whyche yf it were so, shoulde not my sperte be then sore in trouble? Marke me well, and be abashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth. For when I consyder my selfe I am afraide, & my flesh is smytten with feare. * Wherefore do wycked men lyue in helth and prosperitie, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches: Theyr chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Theyr houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. Theyr bullocke gendzeth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

They sende forth theyr chyldren by flockes and theyr sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare wyth them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musycke at theyr pleasure. They spende theyr dayes in welthyngnesse: but todaynly they go downe to helle. They saye also vnto God, go from vs: we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtye, that we shoulde seue hym? And what profyte shoulde we haue to submytte our selues vnto hym? Lo, there is utterlye no goodnesse in them, therfore I wyl not haue to do wyth the counsaile of the vngodly. Howe ofte shall the candle of the wycked be put out: howe oft cometh theyr destruction vnto them? What sorow shall God gyue them for theyr part in his wrath? Yea they shall be euil as hawe before the wynde, and as chaffe that he shalme carpech awaye.

And though God saue theyr chyldren from such sorowe, yet wylle he so rewarde them selues, that they shall knowe it. Theyr owne destruction and myserye shall they see wyth theyr eyes, and drynke of the fearful wrath of the Almyghtye. For what careth he what becometh of his household after hys death, when the number of hys monethes is cut shorte? In as moche then as God hath the best power of all, who can teach him any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtye, and at hys best ryche, and in prosperitie, euen when his bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of marie. An other dyeth in sorowe and heynesse, and neuer hadde good dayes. They shall slepe bothe alpe in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. of the vngodly: haue ye not asked them that go by the way? Doubtlesse, ye can not denye these tokens, that * the wycked is kept vnto the day of destruction, and that the vngodlye shall be brought forth to the daye of wrath. Who darre reprove hym for his waye to his face? Who wyl rewarde hym, for the vnglacynousnesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to hys graue, and dwel amonge the heape of the deade. Then shall he be sayne to be buryed amonge the stones of pplayne. All men also must folow hym, and there are innumerable gone befoze hym. How mayne then is the comforte that ye geue me? Doth not falsched remaine in all your answers?

The. xxi. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vnglacynousnesse.

Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answer, and sayd: May a man be profitable vnto God, as he is wyle maye be profitable to hym self? Is it any auauntage vnto the Almightye, that thou arte ryghteous? Or shall it profite hym, that thou makest thy wayes payte? Is he afrayde to reprove the, and to stepp forth with the in to iudgement? Is not thy wyckednesse great, & thyne vnglacynous dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for noughte, and robbed the naked of the p clothyng: To suche as were wery, hast thou geue no water to drynke, and haste withdrauen breade from the hongrye. Shulde such one the as vseth violence wronge and oppresyon (doynge all thynges of parcialite, and hauing respect of persons) dwel in the lande? Thou hast sent wydowes a waye emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Ec. xlii. b.
Ezech. ix. d.

Therfore arte thou compassed aboute wth snares on euerye syde, and sodenly vered wth feare: Shuldest thou the se no darknesse? Shulde not the waterflood runne ouer the? Now * because that God is hyer then the heauens, and because thou seest that the starres are so hye, wylt thou therfore saye: Tush, how shuld god knowe? Doth his dominion reach beyonde the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer hym that he maye not se, and he dwelleth aboue heauē. Doe st not thou kepe the olde waye that vayne men haue gone? Which were cut downe out of tyme, and whose foundacyon was as a runnyng water whyche sayd vnto God: go from vs, and what did the Almightye wth them? He fylled theyr houses w good thynges. But the counsaile of the vngodlye is farre frome. The ryghteous sawe it, and were glad, & the innocent laughed him to scorn. Is our encrease hewen downe? As for the remnant of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

Deu. xxx. b.

Therfore reconple the vnto God, & be content, so shall all thynges prospere wth the ryght well. Receyue the lawe at hys mouth, and laye vp hys woordes in thyne harte. For * yf thou wylt turne to the Almightye, thou shalt stande fast, and put al vnglacynousnes from thy dwellinge: Thou shalt make golde as plentyfull as the duste, and the golde of Ophir as the syntes of the ryuers. Yea, Almightye God hys owne selfe shall be thy defence, and thou shalt haue pletye of slyuer. Then shalt thou haue thy desire in the Almightye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto hym, & he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promysse. Then loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prospere wth the: and the wycked shall thynne in thy wayes. For * who so blysseth hym selfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so loatheth mekely shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer the country, because of the vnglacynousnesse of thy handes.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he both knoweth & feareth the power and sentence of the Judge, and sayeth that he hath beheld in hys ryghteousnesse.

In answered, and sayde: My sayinge is yet thyse daye in bytternesse, and my hande heuy, because of my grounyng. O that I myght se him, and synde hym. O that I myght come befoze his seate to plede my cause befoze him, and to fyl my mouth wth argumentes. That I myght knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: and that I myght vnderstand what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he please agaynst me wth hys greate power and strength? No, but he wyl make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall entre disputacion wth hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for ever. He holde, though I go befoze, I synde hym. If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of hym. If I go on the left syde where he doth hys worke, I can not attayne vnto hym. Agayne If I goe on the ryght syde, he hydeth hym self, that I can not se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it, and * trespeth me as the golde in the fyre.

My fote doth kepe his pathe, hys hys waye haue I holden, and wyl not go out of it. I wyl not forsake the commaundement of hys lippes, but loke what he charged me wth hys mouth, that I haue shut vp in my harte. He is styll at one poynt, and who wyl turne hym backe? He doeth as hym lysteth, & byngeth to passe what he wyl. He perfourmeth the thynges that is appointed for me, and many suche thynges doeth he. This is the cause that I synke at hys presence, so that when I cōsider hym, I am afrayd of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my harte softe: and seying that he is Almightye he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darkenes, neyther hath he couered the cloude fro my face.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

Job describeth the wyckednesse of men, & sheweth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

Consydering the, & ther is no time byd fro the almightye, howe happy neth it, & they whyche knowe hym, do not regard his dayes: For some men ther be, & remoue other lande markes: & robbe them of theyr cattel and hys same for theyr owne: that * dryue a waye & alle of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes or for a pledge: that thrust & poore out of the waye and oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Beholde, euen as the wyld asses in the deserte go theyr forthe to theyr worke: & ryle by tymes to spople to spoyle: yea, the very wyldzenesse minnstreth foode for the chyldren. They reape the cozne felde that is not theyr owne: & let the bynepard of the vngodlye alone. They are the cause that soman men are naked and bare, haupnge no clothes to couer them, & to kepe them from cold so that when the howzes in the mountaynes haue rained vpon them, & they be al wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckyng fatherlesse chyld, and take the pledge from the poore. In so moch that they let hym go naked wythout clothynge and haue taken awaye the sheafe of the hongry The poore are fayne to labour in their oyle mylles: yea, and to treade in their wynepresses, and yet to suffer thyrste. The men of the Citie crye to the Lorde wyth syghynge, & the soules of the flayne also make theyr complaint. But God despiseth them not for al this, where as they (not withstandyng) are conuersaunt amonge them, that abhorre the lycht: they knowe not his way nor contynue in his pathes. * Tymely in y monyng do they arysse, to murder the symple and poore: and in the nyght they go a stealyng.

The eye of the aduoutre wayteth for y dare knes, and sayth thus in hym selfe Cuth, there shall no eye se me: and so he dysguyseth hys face.

In the nyght season they search y houses and hpye them selues in the dape tyme, but wyl not knowe the lycht. For as soone as the dape breaketh, the shadow of death cometh vpon them and they go in horryble darknes. The vngodly is swifter then the water: theyr porcyon shal be curled in the earth, and he shall not beholde the waye of the bynepardes. O that they (for the wykednes which they haue done) were drawe to the hell, sooner than snow melteth at y drowth and heate. O that al compassyon vpon them wer forgotten: that theyr depnties were wormes, y they were cleane put out of remembraunce, and vngodlynesse vtterlye heuen downe lyke as a tree. He hath opprelled the barren, that he can not beare, and vnto the wyddowe hath he done no good. He drew the myghtye after hym with hys power, and when he was gotten vp, no ma was wythout feare, as long as he lyued. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyl not receyue it, for theyr eyes looke vpon theyr owne wayes. They are exalted for a ycle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerty, and taken out of the waye: yea, and vtterly plucke of, as the eares of cozne. Is it not so? Who wyl then rezyoue me as a lyar, and say that my wodes are nothyng worth.

The xxv. Chapter.

Bylbad proueth that no man is cleane and wythout synne before God.

Then answered Bylbad the Subite, and sayde: Is there power and feare wyth hym aboue, that maketh peace spytynge in hys byghenesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose lycht arysseth ouer all? But howe may a man copared vnto God? be iustified? Or how can he be cleane, that is borne of a woman? Be-holde the Moone shyneth nothyng in compary-son to hym, and the starres are vncleane in hys syght. Howe muche moze then, man: that is but corruptyon: and the sonne of man, which is but a worme.

The xxvi. Chapter.

God sheweth that man can not helpe God, and proueth it by hys myacles.

Ob answered, and sayd: whom hast thou helped? hym that is wythoute strength? What coforte gyeest thou vnto hym that hath no strength?
Where is the counsaile that y shuldest gye hym, whyche hath no wysdome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryghte lyuynge? To whome hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the breath to come out of thy mouth? Are not dead thynges shapen vnder the waters: and thynges by y waters lyde? Hel is naked before hym, and the very destructyon it self, can not be hpyd out of hys syghte. He stretcheth out y north ouer the empye, and hangeth y earth vpon nothyng. He byndeth the waters in hys cloudes and the cloud is not broken vnder them. He holdeth backe hys stole, that it cannot be sene: and spredeth hys cloude before it.

* He hath compassed the waters wyth cer-tayne boundes, vntyll the dape and nyght come to an ende. The very pylers of heauen tremble and quake at hys reprofe. * He sylleth the sea, wyth hys power, and thowowe hys wysdome, smyteth he the strength therof. Hys sprete hath garnished the deuens, and his hande hath made the rebellious serpent. Lo, this is now a shorte summe of his wayes. But who is able suffycently to reherse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thundre of his power?

The xxvii. Chapter.

The constanthe and perfyrmte of Job, and the parte of the vnsaythful wyth God.

And Job proceeded & went forth in his communication, sayeng.
As truly as god lyueth (which hath taken awaye my iudge-ment) and the almyghtye that hath vexed my mynde: My lippes shal talke of no vanyte, & my tongue shal speake no dyscepte, whyle my breathe is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrelles.

God forbyd, that I shuld graunt your cause to be ryght. As for me, vntyll myne ende come wyl I neuer go fro myne innocency. My rygh-tuous dealynge kepe I fast, whyche I wyl not forsake: my harte shall not rezyoue me of my dayes. Therefore myne enemye shal be found as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vnrighuous. For what hope hath y ypocrite though he hath greute good, & though God gye hym rycheesse after his hartes desyre?
Doeth God heare hym the sooner, when he cryeth vnto him in his necessite? Hath he such pleasure and delyte in the Almyghtye, that he darre alwaye call vpon God? I wyl teach you in the name of God, and the thyng that I haue of the Almyghtye

Job.

Almpgdyte, wyl I not kepe from you. Behold pe stande in your owne conceyte, as though pe knewe all thynges. Wherefore then do ye gaboute w such vayne wordes, sayinge: *Thys is the porcyon that I wycked shall haue of God and the heritage that tyrantes shall receyue of the Almpgdyte. Vt he get many chyldren, they shall peryshe wth the swerde; and hys poste-ryte shall haue scarcenes of bread. Loke whom he leueth behynde hym, they shall dye & be buryed: and no man shall haue pitye of hys wyddowes. Though he had as muche moneye as the dust of the earth, and rayment as readye as the clay, he maye well prepare it: but the godly shal put it vpon hym, and the innocēt shal deale out the money. Hys house shall endure as the moth, and as a boote that the watchman maketh.
*When the ryche mā dyeth, he carryeth nothyng wth hym: he is gone in the twynkelyng of an eye: and hath nothing. Destruction taketh hold vpon hym as a water floode, & the tempest stealeth hym awaye, in y night season. A vehement east wynde carryeth hym hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh hym out of hys place. It rus-sheth in vpon hym, and spareth hym not, he may not escape from the power therof. The clap mē theyr handes at hym: yea and lest of hym: when they loke vpon hys place.

Chapter. xxi.

Job beweth that the wysdome of God is unsearchable.

A place is a place: where spyners is brought oute of, and where gold is tryed: where yron is digged out of the ground, and stones resoluēd to metalle. The darkenesse shal ones come to an ende: he can seke out the ground of all thynges, the stones, the darke, and the shadowe of death. Wth the ryuer of water parteth he a sonder the straunge people, that know no good neghbourhede: such as are rude, vn-manerly and boysterous. He byngeth food out of the earth, and that whyche is vnder, consumeth he wth fyre.

There is founde a place, whose stones are all cleane Sapphys, and where the clottes of the earth are all golde. There is a way also that the byrdes know not, that no vulturs eye hath sene wherein the Lyons whelpes walke not, & wher no Lyon commeth. There putterh he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe out of the rockes and loke what is pleasant, his eye seeth it.

Out of dropes byngeth he greates foudes to-gyther, & the thyng that is byd, byngeth he to lyght. Howe commeth a man then by wysdome *Where is the place that men finde vnderstandyng? Merely no man can tell howe worthy a thyng he is, neyther is he founde in the lande of them that lyue. (at theyr owne pleasure)

The deys sayeth he is not wth me. * These sayeth he is not wth me. He can not be gotten for: (the most pure) golde, neyther may I pryce of her be bought wth any siluer: no wedges of gold of Ophir no pcyons Onix stones, no Sapphys maye be compared vnto her. No, neyther golde nor chrystall, neyther swete odoures, nor golden plate. There is nothyng so worthy, so so excellent, as ones to be named vnto her. For perfyte wysdome goeth farre beyond the mental.

The Topas that cometh out of Inde: maye in no wyse be likened vnto her: yea, no maner of pauell howe pleasant and fayre so euer it be.

From whence then cometh wysdome, and where is y place of vnderstandyng? She is hid from the eyes of all men lynyng: yea, and from the soundes of the ayre. Destruction and death saye, we haue heard tell of her wth our eares.
But God seeth her waye, & knoweth her place.
For he beholdeth the endes of the world, and lo-keth vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he wepeth the wyndes & measured the waters: when he set the capne in order, and gaue the mpyghe floudes a lawe. Then byd he se her, the dactoned her: yea, prepared her and knewe her. And vnto man he sayde: Beholde: * to feare the Lord is wysdom, & to forsake euill is vnderstandyng.

Chapter. xxii.

Job complayneth of the prosperite of the tyne past, sub-tlylly reproouyng hys frendes of inuery, because they sayd that Job had prospered accordyng to hys deservyng.

Job proceeded and wente forth in hys communication, sayinge: O that I were as I was in y monethes by past, and in the dayes when God pleased me: when his lyght shyned vpo my head, when I wente after the same lyght and shynyng sunthorow the darkenesse. As it was wth me when I was yonge: when God prospered my house: when the Almpgdyte was wth me: when my chyldren stood aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer wth butter, and when I do-nye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle, when I wit-thorow the cite vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayze in the street: when the yongme (as sone as they sawe me) byd them scine, and when the aged arose, & stode vpon vnto me, when the byncies lefte of the y talkyngs, and layde theyr hande to theyr mouth: when the mpyghe kept theyr voyce, and when theyr tonges cleaued to the rooffe of theyr mouth. When all they that heard me, called me happye: and when all they sawe me, spake good of me. For I dyd myd pooze when he cryed, and so byd I the fatherles, and hym that had none to helpe hym. He that shuld haue bene lost, gaue me a good word and the wyddowes hart praysed me. And why I put vpon me ryghtuousnes, whyche couered me as a garment: and equypte was my crowne. I was an eye to the blynde, and a foote to the lame: I was a father vnto the pooze: & when I knew not y cause, I sought it out dyligently. I brake the chawes of the vnyghtuous mā, & pluckt the spople out of hys teth.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shoulde haue bene as many as the sandes of the see. For my rate was sped out by the water spere: and the dewe laye vpon my corne. My honoure increased more and more, and my house was the stronger in myne hand. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded: and with splene they ayed for my counsaile. ¶ If I had spoken, they would haue it none other waies, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They waited for me, as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me as the grounde doth to receyue the latter shoure. While I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest.

And the lychte of my countenance wolde they not put out. When I agreed vnto theyr waie, I was the chefe, and sat as a kynge wth his attynne aboute hym. And when they were in heures, I was theyr comfortour.

The. xxx. Chapter.

The great despayre of men, and curse of God that Job suffereth.

I At now they that are ponger then I haue me in derision: yea, euen they whose fathers I wold haue thoughte scorne to haue let wth the dogges of my cattell. The power & strength of theyr handes myght do me no good, for þ time is but losse amonge them. For very misery and pouertie they fled into þ wyldernes, a darke place horrible and wast, plucking vp nettels amonge the bushes and the sumpter rotes for theyr meate.
And when they were dysuene forth, men cryed after the, as it had bene after a thefe. Theyr dwel-lyng was besyde foule brokes: yea in the caues and denues of the earth. Amonge the bushes went they aboute cryng: and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were the chyldren of fooles and vylaynes whych are brydd out of the world. * Howe am I theyr song and am become theyr iestynge stocke: they abhorre me, and styte farre from me, and stayne my face wth spetle. For the Lorde hath loosed the strength of my bodye, and broughte me lowe.
The hyddle haue they cast out of my syght. Vpon my ryght hande rysse the yong men agaynst me, they haue hurte my fete treadynge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wold destroy. My pa-thes haue they cleane marred. It was so easie for them to do me harme, that they neded no mā to helpe them. They fell vpon me as it had bene the breakinge in of waters, and came in by deares to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned a-gaynst me.

Myne honoure banquysshed a waye moze slytly then the wynde, and my prosperite be-parted hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde poured full of heynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me.
My bones are pearced thowowe in the nyght season, and my senexes take no rest. For the vehe-mentye of sorowe is my garment chaunged and accorpyng to the dysuerlite of heynesse, am I gydded wth my coote. He hath cast me into the myre, and I am become lyke albes and duste.
When I crye vnto the, thou dost not heare me, and thoughte I stande before the, yet thou regar-dest me not. Thou arte become myne enemye, and wth thy violence hande thou takeste parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou byddest let me by on bye, as it were aboute the wynde, but now hast thou gyuen me a very soze fall. Sure I am that thou wylt delpue me vnto death: euen to þ lodgyng that is due vnto al men lyuyng. Howe vse not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed already, but where hurt is done, there vse they to helpe. Wyl not I wepe wth hym þ was in trouble: had not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I loked for good, euil happened vnto me: and where as I waited for lychte, there came darkenesse.

My bowels seeth wthyn me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me.
Heckly and lowly came I in: pra, and wthout any displeasure, I stode vp in the congregacion and comuned wth them: But nowe I am a companion of dragons, and a fellowe of Estriches.
My skynne vpon me is turned to blacke, & my bones are hente wth heate: my harte is turned to sorowe and my pyppre to wepyng.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

God receyeth the innocencye of hys prayere, and humble of hys deuotion.

I Made a couenaunt wth myne eyes I * that I wolde not loke vpon a dam-sell. For how great a porcion shall I haue of God? and what inheritance shalt thou almyghtyge on hye? As for the vngodlye & he that iopneth him selfe to the company of wycked doers, shall not destruction & miserie come vpon hym? * Woth not he se my wayes & tell all my goynges? If I haue walked in va-nite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceyne, let me be wayed in an euen balauce, that God may se myne innocencye. * Yf so be þ I haue wythdra-wen my fete out of the ryght waye, & yf my hert hath folowed myne eye lychte: Yf I haue stained or defyled my handes, thā shall I lowe, & an other eat: yea, my generacis & posteritie shalbe cleane rooted out. Yf myne harte hath lusted after my neghbours wyfe, or yf I haue layed wayte at other man, and let other mē lye wth her. * For this is a wyckednes and synne, that is woorthye to be punished: yea, a synne that vterlye shuld cōsume & roote out all my substaunce. Wyl I curse thyne scoone to do ryght vnto my seruauntes & maydens, when they had anye matter agaynst me? But seing that God wyl lye in iudgement what shal I do? And for somoch as he wyl nedes vysyte me, what answer shall I geue hym? He that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym also: were we not both shapen alphe in our mothers bodies? When the poore despyed any thynge at me, haue I denyed it them? haue I caused the wydowe to stande waytynge for me in wayne? haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherles hath had no part wth me? for mercy grewe vp wth me fro my yowth, & compassion from my mothers wombe. haue I seene anye mā peryshe thowow nakednesse, & want of clothynge?

Or any poore man for lacke of rayment, whose sydes thanked me not, because he was warmed wth the wolle of my sheper?

Wyl I curse lyfte vp myne hand to hurt þ fa-therles? yea in the gate where I sawe my leife to be in anthezite, then let myne arme fall fro my shulder, and myne arme holes be broken fro

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

Elihu after the other had synghed they communication rejoyced them of solychesse. See maketh not a man wyse: but the sperte of God

Elihu the sonne of Barachel, the Buzite of the kynred of Ram, was verie sore dyspleased at Job, bycause he called hym selfe iust before God. And his thre frendes he was angry also bycause they had found no resonable answer to overcome Job. Nowe tarped Elihu, tyll they had ended theyr communicacion wyth Job, for why? they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Buzite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job answer: he was mis-content. Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Buzite answered hym selfe, and sayd, * Consydeyringe that I am yonge, and ye be men of age: I was afrayed and durst not shewe forth my mynde.
For I thought thus wythin my selfe. It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wysdome. Euery man (no doubt) hath a mynde,

Ecc. xxxii. b

* but it is the inspiration of the almyghty that gouerneth vnderstandyng. Grete men are not al-waye wyse, neyther doth euery aged man vnderstande the thyng that is laudful. Therefore wyl I sprake also (heare me) and I wyl shewe you also myne vnderstandyng. For whē I had wyrtted tyll ye made an ende of your talkyng, and hearde your wysedome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I founde not one of you y made any good argument agaynst Job, that directlye coulde make answer vnto hys wordes: lest ye shulde saye: We haue founde out wysedome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. He hath not spokē vnto me, and I wyl not answer hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one worde) but in so much as ye wyl not speake, standyng still lyke domme men, & makyng no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte, to shewe hym an answer, and to shewe hym my meanyng: For I am full of wordes, & the sperte that is wythin me compelleth me.

Beholde, my belye is as the wyne, whyche hath no vent, and bursteth the newe vesselles in sonder. Therefore wyl I speake, y I maye haue a vent: I wyl open my lippes, and make an-swere. I wyl regarde no maner of personne, no man wyl I spare. For * yf I wolde go about to please men, I knowe not howe soone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherein Job offended: whych God maye we not aske: nor curiously seache out hys wordes.

Therefore, heare my wordes (Or Job) and herke vnto me al that I wyl saye: Beholde I haue nowe opened my mouth, my tonge hath spoken in my throte: My harte dothe orde my wor-des a right, and my lippes talke of your pnce wysedom. The sperte of God hath made me, and * the breath of the almyghty hath geuen me lyfe: Yf thou canste, then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me, face to face. Beholde, before God I am enen as thou, for I am fashyoned and made euen of the same molde. Therefore, thou nedest not to be a-frayed of me, neyther nedest thou to feare that my authoritie shalbe to heuie for the. Nowe hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane wythout any fauite, I am innocente, & there is no wyckednesse in me.

But lo, he hath pycked a quarel agaynst me and taketh me for hys enemye: * he hath put my foote in the stocks, and loketh narrowly vnto all my pathe: Beholde, in this hast thou not done right. I wyl make answer vnto the that God is more then man. And why doest thou stryue agaynst hym: for he shall not geue the accountes of all hys wordes.

For when God doth once commaunde a thyng there shulde no man be curyous to seache wher it be righte. * In dreames and visions of the

of the nyght (when slombrynge commeth vpon men, that they fall asleepe in theyr beddes) he couereth them in the eares, he infourmeth them, and sheweth them playnly that it is he, whych with draweth man from euyl, deliuereth hym from payde, kepeth hym from the graue, and his lyfe from the swerde.

He chasteneth hym with syknesse, and byngeth hym to his bed: he layeth soze punysshment vpon his boones, so that his lyfe maye awayne wryth no breed, and his soule abhorreth to eate any dayntye meate: in so moche that his bodye is cleane consumed awayne, and his boones appear nymore. His life draweth vnto the graue, and his lyfe to deatb. Now yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercifull vnto hym, & sayeth: he shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconceled.

Then shall his fleshe be as well lpynged as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in his pouth. For yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God, he shal be gracious vnto hym, and shewe him his countenance ioyfullye, and rewarde hym for his ryghteousnesse. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore, let a man confesse (and saye) I haue offended: I dyd vnrightheously, and it hath done me no good. Yea, he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall be the lyght. Lo, thus worketh God alway with man that he kepeth his soule from perisshynge, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lpynged.

Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, and I wyll speake. But yf thou hast anye thyng to say: then answer me, and speake: for thy answer pleaseth me. Yf thou hast nothyng, then heare me, and holde thy tonge: so shall I teache the wysedome.

Elihu prayeth the iustice of God, which iudgeth the worlde and gouerneth all Elihu procedynge forth in his answer, sayde: heare my wordes, (O ye wyse men) hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes, & the mouthe tasteth the meates. As for iudgement, lette vs seke it oute amonge oure selues, that we maye knowe what is good. And why? Job hath sayd I am ryghteous, but God doeth me wronge, I must nedes be a lyer, though my cause be ryght, and byolentye I am plaged where as I made no fault, where is there suche a one as Job, that bynkereth by scornfulnesse lyke water: whych goeth in the companye of wycked doers, and walketh wyth vngodly men? For he hath sayd: though a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shulde meddle wyth wyckednesse, and farre be it from the Almyghtye, that he shoulde medle wyth vnrightheous dealyng. * For he shal rewarde the wor-kes of man, and cause every man to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For sure it is, that * God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of the almyghtye is not vnrightheous. Who ruleth the earth in his stede? Or whome hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde. To whom hath he gyuen his vertue, for to drawe his spyrite and breath vnto hym? All flesh shal come together vnto nought, and all men shall tourne agayne vnto * dust. Yf thou nowe haue vnderstandynge, heare what I saye, and hearken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryght? Or maye he that is a very innocent man do vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye to the kynge: Thou arte wycked, or thou arte vngodlye, and that before the princes? * He hath no respect vnto the personnes of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore.

For they be all the worke of his handes. In the twinkelyng of an eye shall they dye: and at mydnyght when the people and the tyrantes rage, then shall they perishe, and be taken awayne wythoute handes. And why? * his eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth al his goynges. There is no darkenesse nor shadowe of death, that can hyde the wycked doers from him. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgement with God.

Maye one: yea, innumerable doeth he punyssh, and setteth other in theyr stedes. Therfore shall he declare theyr workes, he shal turne the nyghte, and they shalbe destroyed. They that were in the stede of Seares dealt lyke vngodlye men: and therfore he punysshed them, because they turned backe from hym, and wolde not conspyre all his wayes. In so moche, that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and nowe he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in trouble.

Yf he graunt pardone, who wyll condemne? And yf he hyde a waye his countenance, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people, or to any man, thus wyll he do. For the vngodlinesse of the people, doth God make an yppocrite to rapgne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hynde the. Yf I haue done amysse, enfourme thou me: Yf I haue done wronge, I wyll leane of. Can he do nothyng wythoute the? For thou haste reprobued his iudgement. Thou also hast thynne owne mynde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandynge tell me, and let a wyse man hearken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neyther spoken to the purpose, nor wyselye. O father, lette Job be well tryed, because he hath answered for wycked men: yea, aboue his synne he doeth wyckedlye: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplyeth his wordes agaynst God.

Job. v. b

A Libu spake moze ower, and sayde: Thykest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am righteous before God? For thou sayest: What advantage wyl it be vnto the, and what profyte shalt thou haue of my syn. Therefore wyl I gyue answere vnto the, and to thy companions with the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consydre the cloudes, which are hyer then thou.

B If thou hast synned, what hast thou done agaynst hym? If thyne offences be manye, what hast thou done vnto hym? If thou be ryghtous, what gyuest thou hym? Or what wil he receyue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendest to be: ther is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea, euery mā complayneth vpo the crueltye of tyrantes.

C For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? and that gyueth vs occasyon to prayse hym in the nyght? Whyche gyueth vs moze vnderstandyng then he doeth the bestes of the earth, and teacheth vs moze then he doth the foules of heauen.

D If anye suche complayne, no man gyueth answere, and that bycause of the wyckednesse of proude tyrantes. But yf a man cal vpon God, doth not he heare hym? Doeth not the Almighty accepte hys crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardone the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, & put thy trust in hym? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, neyther hath he pleasure in curions and depe inquisicions. Therefore doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and folowly doth he make so many wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherefore God punyssheth and correcteth.

A Libu proceeded forth in his talkyng, and sayd: holde the still a lytle, and I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyl open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstandyng, and proue my matter ryghtous. And truly my wordes shal not be vayne, seinge he is with the that is perfyte in knowledge, behold: the great God casteth awaye no man, for he hym selfe is myghty in power and wysedome.

As for the vngodly, he shal not preserve hym but shal helpe the poore to theyr ryght. He shal turne hys eyes awaye from the ryghteous, but as kynge shal they be in theyr throne: he shal stablish them for euer, and they shal be exalted.

But yf they be layed in pryson and chapnes or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyl he shewe them their woꝝke and the synnes wher with they haue vled cruel violence.

B He with punysshynge and nuryngge of them rosdeth the in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wyckednesse, and to amende. * If they now wyl take hede and serue hym, they shal were out theyr dayes in prosperitie, & theyr yeares in pleasure and ioye. But yf they wyl not hearken, they shal go thowowe the swerde, and peryshe or euer they be aware. As for suche as be fained ypocrites, they shal heap vp wrath for the selues, for they cal not vpo hym, though they be his prysoners. Thus shal theyr soules peryshe in foolysheesse, and theyr lyfe shal be condemned amonge the fornicatours. The poore shal he deliuer out of his affliction, and rounde them in the eare when they be in trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) fro the bottomelesse pyt that is beneth: and yf thou wylt holde the quyet, he shal fyll thy table with plenteousnesse.

Neuerthelesse, thou hast condemned the indygement of the vngodly: yea, euen suche a indygement and sentence shalt thou suffre.

For then shal not thy cause be styllled with crueltye, nor pacified with many gyftes. Thykest thou, that he wyl regarde thy rycheesse: he shal not care for golde, nor for all them þ excell in strength. Prolonge not thou the tyme, till there come a nyght for the to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not asyde to wyckednesse and synne, whych byther to thou hast chosen moze then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty hye power: Where is there suche a guyde and lawe gyuer as he? Who wyl reprove hym of his waye? Who wyl saye vnto hym: thou hast done wronge.

Consydre howe great & excellent hys woꝝkes be, whome almen loue and prayse: yea wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passethoure knowlege, neyther are we able to come to the experyence of hys peaces. * He turneth the water to small droppes, he dyspue th his cloudes to gyther for to rayne, so that they poure downe & droppe vpon men. He can sprede out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys Tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottome of the see. By th: se thynges gouerneth he hys people, and gyueth them aboundaunce of meate. With the cloudes he hydeth the lyght: & at hys commaundement it cometh agayne. The rysynge by therof sheweth he to hys frendes, and to the castell.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Elihu proueth that the wysdome of God is vnsearchable.

A This my hert is astounded, and moued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, & the noyse that goeth out of his mouthe. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, & hys lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A rotyng voyce foloweth hym: for hys glosseus maiestye gyueth suche a thondre clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sounde when God sendeth out his voyce: greater thynges doeth he whyche we can not comprehend. * When he commaundeth the snow, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, immediatlye the flowers haue theyr strength, and fall downe.

he sendeth feare vpon euerye man, that they myght know theyr owne workes. The beastes crepe into theyr denues, and take theyr rest: out of the South cometh the tempest, and coulede out of the North.

At the breathe of God the froste cometh, and the waters are shed abroad. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour, in geyng mofstnesse, and agayne with his lyght he dryueth a waye the cloude. He distributeth also on euerye syde, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale out his workes: that they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thowoe the whole worlde whether it be to punyssh any land, or to do good vnto them that seke hym.

Earken vnto this (O Job:) stand still, and consyde the wonderous workes of God. Art thou of counsaile with god, when he doth these thynges? When he caueth the lyghte to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsaile, when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wonders? And howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is still thowoe the South wynde? Hast thou helpe hym to spreade out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast out of cleare metall?

Teache vs what we shal saye vnto him, for we are vnmete bycause of darkenesse. Shal it be tolde hym what we saye. Shulde a man speake or shoulde he kepe it backe? For euerye man seeth not the lyghte that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes, whych he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe: Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayse and honour of Gods feare cometh from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equitye and ryghtousnesse: he is hyper then can be expressed. Let men therfore feare him, for ther shal no man se him, that is wyle in his owne conceit.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The wonders and maruailes that the Lorde hath done from the begynnyng.

When answered the Lorde vnto Job, out of the storme, & sayd: what is he? hider his mynde with foolyshe wordes. * Gyde by thy loynes lyke a man, for I wyl questyon with the: see thou gyue me a direct answer. Where wast thou when I layed the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnly, yf thou hast vnderstandyng. Who hath measured it, knoweste thou? Or who hath spred the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pylers of it? Or who layed the corner stone therof? Where wast thou when the moynyng starres prayled me to gyther, and all the children of God reioysed triumphantly? * Who shut the sea with doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a coueryng for it, and swaddled it with the dark: When I gaue it my commaundement, makynge doores and barres for it, sayeng: hether to shalte thou come, but no farther, and here shalte thou laye downe thy proude and hye waues. Hast thou gyuen the moynyng his charge (as sone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spryng his place, that it myght take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodlye myght be shaken out? Theyr tokens and weapons are turned lyke clape, and set vpon agayne: as the chaungyng of a garment. The vngodly shalbe dysappointed of theyr lyght: and the arme of y proud shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the ground of the sea? Or walkedst in y lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doores of the shadow of death? Hast thou also perceyued howe brode the earth is? Yf thou hast knowledge of all thyng then shewe me where lyght dwelleth: and wher darkenesse is: that thou mayest byngne vs vnto theyr quarters, yf thou canst tel the way to their houses.

Knowest thou? (asfore y wast borne) howe olde thou shouldest be? Wentest thou euer into the treasures of y snowe? Or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, * whiche I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre? By what waye is the lyght parted, and into what lande breaketh the east wynde? Who deuidereth the aboundance of waters into ryuers? Or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenyng and thundre, that it watereth and moftereth the dry and baren grounde to make the grasse growe, in places where nobody dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no man remaineth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hath begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hath gendred the coulde of the ayre, that the waters are as harde as stones: and yse congeled aboue the depe? Wylte thou byndre the swete influences of the seven starres? Or arte thou able to breake the cyrcle of heauen.

Canst thou bringe forth the moynyng starre, or the euenyng starre at conuenient tyme, and conueye them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vpon the or dinaunce therof vpon the earth? * Mozeouer, canst thou lyft vpon thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye poure downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canst thou thundre also that they maye go theire waye, and be obedyente vnto the, sayinge: Lo, here are we? Who gyueth sure wysedome, or stedfast vnderstandyng? Who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? Who stylieth the vehemēt waters of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne? Wylte thou hunte the praye from the lyon, or fede his whelpes lyng in theyr denues, and luyng in theyr couthes? Who * prouderth meate for the rauen, when his sponges crye vnto God and lye about for lacke of meate?

The xxxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewyng hym by the examples of his wordes: that his ryghtousnesse is vnscheable.

Knowest

Job humbleth hym selfe vnto God, the descriptyon of Behemoth and Leuiathan.

Knoweste thou the tyme when the wyld geestes, bynge fouthe theyre pounge amonge the stonye rockes?
Or lapest thou wayte when the hyndes vse to fawne: reckenest thou y monethes after they engender that thou knowest y tyme of theyr bearyng? Or whest they lye down when they cast theyr pounge, and when they are deliuered of theyr trauayle and paine? How theyr poungeones growe vp, and waxe greatte thorowe good fedynge? When they go forth and returme not agayne vnto them? Who letteth the wyld asse go free, or who looseth the bondes of the mule? Euen I which haue giuen the wyldrenesse to be theyr house, and the vntylled land to be theyr dwelling place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in the cittyes neyther regarde the cryenge of the dyuer: but seke theyr pasture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse. Wylle y vnicozne be so tame as to do the scrupce, or to abide stil by thy crybbe? Canst thou bynde the yoke about the vnicozne in thy fozowe, to make hym plowe after the in the valleyes? Hapest thou trust hym, (bycause he is stronge) or commyt thy labour vnto hym? Hapest thou beleue hym, that he wyl bring home thy corne, or to cary any thing vnto thy barne? Gapest thou the fayre wynges vnto the pecockes, or wynges and fethers vnto the storkes? For he leaueth his egges in the earth and layeth them in the dust. He remembreth not that they myght be troden with fete, or broken with some wyld beast. So hard is he vnto his poungeones, as though they were not his, and la-boureth in vayne without anye feare. And that bycause God hath taken wysdome from hym, and hath not giuen hym vnderstandynge. Whest his tyme is that he flyeth by on hye, he careth neyther for houle nor man.

Hast thou giuen the horse his strength, or lerned hym to bowe downe bys necke wyth feare, that he letteth hym selfe be dyuen for the lyke a greshopper, whereas the stoute neyng that he maketh, is fearefull? He breaketh the grounde with the hooves of his feete chearefullye in bys strength, and runneth to mete the harness men.
He layeth asyde all feare, bys stomache is not abated, neyther starteth he a backe for any sword.
Though the quyuers rattle vpon hym, though the speare and sylde glystereth, yet russeth he in fearcelye, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tusthe (sayth he) for he smelleth the battayle a farre of the noyse of the captaynes, and the shoutynge.

Commeth it thorowe thy wysdome, that the goosanke flyeth towarde the south? Doeth the egle mount vp and make his neste on hye at thy comaundement? He abideth in the stony rockes and vpon the hye toppes of the harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence se-keth he his pray, and loketh far about with his eyes. His poungeones are fed with bloode: and wher any ded body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

ma. xliij. c.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Can he that stryuet with the almyghtye, be at rest?
Shuld not he which dysputeth with God, geue him an answer?
Job answered the Lord sayng Beholde, I am to vile a person to answer the, therfore wyl I laye myne hand vpon my mouth. Ones or twyse haue I spoken, but I wyl lye nomore.

Then answered the lord vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayd: * gyd vp thy loynes now lyke a man, and tell me the thynges that I wyl aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous? Is thy power then lyke the power of God? Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as his doth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power: vp, decke the in thy solye a-raye, poure out the indignacion of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all the proude, loke wel that thou makest suche as be stubburne to obey: tread downe all the vngodly in theyr place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer theyr faces with darkenesse: Then wyl I confesse vnto the also, that thyne owne right hande shal saue the.

Beholde the beast Behemoth (whome I made with the) which eateth haye as an ox: lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauyll of his bodye. He spreadeth out his taylor lyke a Cedre tree, all bys byp-nes are styffe. Hys thynges are lyke pyres of brasse, hys rydye bones are lyke stauens of yron.
Hys ste, when God made hym, he ordayne the wyldernes for hym: that the mountaynes shuld geue hym grasse, where all the bestes of the felde take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the molles, the fennes hyde hym wyth theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the brooke couer hym rounde about. Lo, withoute anye labour myghte he drynke oute the whole floude, and sup of Jordan without any trauayle. Who darre laye hande vpon hym openly, and vnder-take to catche him? Or who darre put an hook thorowe his nose, and laye a snare for hym?

Darrest thou draw out * Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tonge with a snare? Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hym, or bore bys chaue thorowe with an aule? Wyl he make ma-nye fayre wordes with the, (thynkest thou) or flatter the? Wyl he make a couenaunt with the?
Or arte thou able to compell hym to do the continuall seruice? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with hym as a byrd, or geue him vnto the merdens, that thy companions may make refectory of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the machait men? Canst thou fyl the basket with his skynne, or the fyll thepanper with his head?
Darrest thou laye hand vpon hym? It is better for the to consyder what harme myghte happen ther

there thorowe, and not touche hym. No: when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon hym, he shall begyle the.

The. xli. Chapter.

¶ Of the same Hepathan wherof is mentioend in the Chapters afoze.

Noman is so cruell that is able to stypym vp. * Who is able to stande be-foze me? Or: who hath geuen me any thyng afoze hande, that I maye re-warde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare hym not whyther he threaten or speake saye. Who lyfteth hym vp, or stypppeth hym out of his clothes, or who taketh hym by the bytte of hys bydle? Who openneth the dooze of hys face? For he hath horrible teeth rounde aboute. Hys bodye is couered with scales, as it were with wyldes lockte in, kepte and well compacte together.

B One is so ioyned to another, that no ayye can come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon another, and stycketh so togyther, y they can not be sondyed. His nelynge is lyke a glysteryng fyre, and hys eyes lyke the moornynge wyne. Oute of hys mouthe goeth torches, and oute of hys nosterelles there goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hote se-thyng pot. His breath maketh the coles burne, and the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In hys necke remaineth strenght, and nothyng is to la-bourous for hym. The membris of his body are ioyned so strypte one to another, & cleaue so faste togyther, that he can not be moued.

his herte is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the stythe that the synyth synyeth vpon.
When he goeth: the mygdye are asfayde, and feare troubleth them. If any man drawe oute a swerde at hym, it shall not hurt hym: there may neither speare, iauelynge nor brestplate abyde him. he setteth as muche by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by brasse. he starteth not away for hym that bendeth þe bow and as for synge stones, he careth as moche for scabble as for thorn. he counteth the dartes no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scozne that shaketh the speare: he treadeth the golde in the myze, lyke the herde pottherdes. he maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styreth the see together lyke an oymment. he maketh a pathe to be sene after hym, the deepe is his walkyng place. Upon earthe is there no power lyke vnto his: for he is so made that he feareth not. If a mā wyl consydre all hys thynges, thys is a thyng ouer all the chyldren of vyrgyne.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth so; his friends, and his goodes are restozed double vnto hym.

is no thought hydde vnto the. For who can kepe hye owne counsaile so secrete, but it shalbe knowen? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstand not, the thynges that are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandynge. H erken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: an swere vnto the thyng that I wyll aske the. I haue gyuen dilygent eare vnto the, and nowe I se the wyth myne eyes. Wherfore I gyue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in dust and ashes.

Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these woꝝ B des vnto Job, it fortuneth, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased wyth the, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thing that is ryght: lyke as my seruaunte Job hath done.

Therefore, take you now seven oxen and seven rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, and *offer vp for your selues a burnt offering: and my ser-uaunt Job shall praye for you. hym will I accepte: and not deale with you after your foolysnesse: in that ye haue not spoken þe thyng which is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Sophar the Naamathite wēt theyze waye, and dyd accorðynge as the Lorde commaunded them. * The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned the captiuitie of Job, when he prayed for hys fren- des: Yea, the Lorde gaue Job * twofe as muche as he hadde afore.

And then came there vnto hym all his brethren, all hys sisters, and all they that had bene of his acquayntaunce afore, and dyd eate bread wth hym in his house, wondrynge at hym, and comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euery man also gaue hym a certayne summe of moneye, and a iewel of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was befoze: for he had fourtene. M. shepe, syre. M. camels, a. M. yoke of oxen, and a. M. asses. he had seuen sonnes also, and thre daughters. The fyrst daughter called he Zemina, the seconde Bezia, and the thyrde Kerenhabuch. In all the land were no women founde so fayre as the dought-ters of Job: and theyr father gaue them enberptauce amonge theyre brethren. After this lpyed Job an hundred and four-tye yeres, so that he sawe * hys chyl dren, and his chyl ders chyl dre into the fourth generacyon. And so Job dyed: beyng olde, and of a perfect age.

The psalmes of David,

The first Psalme.

BEATVS VIR QVI NON HABIT.

Blessed is that manne þ bath not walked in the counsaill of the vngodly, nor stāde in the waie of synners, and hath not sit in the seate of the scoznefull. But his delite is in þ lawe of the Lorde: and in his lawe will he exercise hymself daie & night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the water side that will byng forth his frute in due season.
His lea fall so that not wither & loke whatsoener he dooeth, it shall prosper. As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but they are like the chaffe whiche the wynde scattereth awaie from the face of the earth. Therefore the vngodly shall not bee able to stande in the iudgement, neither the synners in the congregacion of the righteous. But þ Lorde knoweth the waie of þ righ-trous, & the waie of the vngodly shall perishe.

The seconde psalme.

QVARE FREMVERVNT GENTES.

Why dooe the heathen so furlouly rage together? and why dooe þ people ymagyne a vaine thyng?
The kynges of the earth stāde vp and the rulers take counsaill together against þ Lorde, and against his anoynted.
Let vs breake their bondes a sunder, and cast a waie their cordes fro vs. He that dwelleth in heauen shall laugh them to scozne: the Lorde shall haue them in derisio. Then shall he speake vnto them in his wrath, and bere them in his foure displeasure. Yet haue I sette my kyng vp-on my holy hill of Sion. I will preache the lawe, wherof the Lorde hath saied vnto me.

* Thou art my soonne, this daie haue I begotten the. Desier of me, and I shall geue the the heathen for thyne enherytaunce, and the vtmost partes of the earth for thy possession.

* Thou shalt bruse them with a rodde of yro and breake them in peces like a potters vessell. Bee wise now therfore, O ye kynges, bee learned, ye þ are iudges of the earth. Serue the Lorde in feare, and reioyse with reue-rence. Kysse the soonne lest he bee angry and so ye perishe from the waie, if his wrath bee kendeuēd (yea but a litle) blessed are all they that put their trust in hym.

The thirde Psalme.

DOMINE QVID MVLTIPlicATI.

A Psalme of David when he fled from the face of Absalon his soonne.

Lorde, how are they increased, that troubled me? Many are they, that rise against me. Many one there bee that saie of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in God. Selah.

But thou Lorde, art my defender: thou art my worshippe, and the lifter vp of my hedde. I did call vpon the Lorde with my voyce and he hearde me out of his holy hill. Sela. I laied me downe and slept, and rose vp again, for the Lorde sustained me. I will not bee afrayde for tenne thousandes of the people that haue sette them selues against me rounde aboute.

Uy Lorde and helpe me, O my God, for thou smitest all myne enemies vpon the cheke bone, thou hast broken the teeth of the vngodly Saluacion belongeth vnto the Lorde, and thy blessyng is vpon the people. Selah.

The fourth Psalme.

CVM INVOcareM.

To hym that excelleth in musike. a psalme, of David.

Care me, when I call, O God of my righteousnes: thou hast sette me at libertie, when I was in trouble: haue mercy vpon me and her-ken vnto my praiser. O ye soonnes of menne howe long will ye blaspheme myne honoure: and haue suche pleasure in vanite and seke after leasyng? Sela. Knowe this also, that the Lorde hath chosen to hymself the mane that is godly: when I call vpon the Lorde, he will heare me. Stande in awe, and synne not: commen with your owne hearte, and in your chambre, and be still. Sela. Offer the sacrifice of righteousnes, and putte your trust in þ Lorde.

There bee many that saie: who will shewe vs any good? Lorde lift thou vp þ light of thy countenaunce vpon vs. Thou hast putte glad-nes in my heart, sence the tyme that their cozne and wyne, (and oyle) increased. I will laie me downe in peace, and take my rest: for it is thou Lorde onely, that makest me dwell in saufety.

The v. Psalme.

VERBA MEA AVRIBVS.

To hym that excelleth in songes of musike, a psalme of David.

Under my woordes, O Lorde, consider my meditaciō. O herken thou kyng and God, for vnto the will I make praiser. My voyce shalt thou heare by tymes, O Lorde, early in the mornyng will I directe my praiser vnto the, and will loke vp. * For thou art þ God that hath no pleasure in wickednes neither shall anye Psalme. vi. vii. viii. ix.

Shall not stande in thy sight, for thou hatest all them that woorken vanitie. Thou shalt destroy them that speake leasing: the Lord will abhorre both the bloodthirsty, and disceatful manne. But as for me I will come into thy house euen vpon the multitude of thy mercie, and in thy feare will * I worshippe towarde thy holy temple. Leade me, O Lord, in thy righteousness because of myne enemies: make thy waie plain before my face. For there is no faithfulness in his mouth: their inward partes are verie wickednes.

Destroy thou them O God let them perishe thowowe their owne imaginations, cast them out in y multitude of their vngodlynesse: for they haue rebelled against the. And let all them that put their trust in the, reioyce: they shall euer bee geuyng of thanks, because thou defendest them: they that loue thy name shall be ioyfull in y. For thou Lord wilt geue thy blessing vnto the righteous: and w thy fauourable kyndenes wilt thou defende hym, as with a shilde.

DOMINE DEVS MEVS.

Signaion of Dauid whiche he sang vnto the Lord in the busines of Chus the sonne of Iemini.

O Lord my God, in the haue I putte my trust: saue me from all them y persecute me, and deliuer me: Least he deuoure my soule like a Lion, and teare it i peaces: while ther is none to helpe. Oh Lord my God, * if I haue dooen any such thing or if there bee any wickednes in my handes: If I haue rewarded euill vnto hym that dealt frendely with me, yea, I haue deliuered hym, that without any cause is myne enemy. soule and take me: yea, let hym treade my life downe vpon the earth and laie myne honoure in the dust. Selah. Stande vp, O Lord, in thy wrath: and lift vp thy self, because of the indignacions of myne enemies: arise vp for me, in y iudgemēt that thou hast commaunded. And so shall the congregaciō of the people come about y, for their sakes: therfore lift vp thy self again.

The Lord shall iudge the people, geue sentence with me O Lord, accordyng to my righteousness, and accordyng to the innocencie that is in me. Oh let the wickednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but guyde thou the iust. For y righteous God trieth the verie heartes and reins. My help cometh of God, which preserueth them that are true of heart. * God is a righteous iudge, * (strong and patient) and God is prouoked euery daie. If a manne will not turne, he will whet his sword, he hath bent his bowe & made it ready. He hath prepared hym y instruments of death: he ordeineth his arrows against the persecutours. Beholde, * he traualleth with myschiefe, he hath conceived sorowe, and brought forth vngodlynesse. * He hath grauen and dygged vp a pitte, and is fallen hymself in to the destruccion that he made (for other.) For his traualle shall come vpon his owne bedde * and his wickednes shall fall vpon his owne pate. I will geue thanks vnto the Lord accordyng to his righteousness, and will praise y name of the Lord the moste highest.

The. viii. Psalme.

DOMINE DOMINVS NOSTER.

To hym that excelleth in Citheth, a Psalme of Dauid.

O Lord our gouernoure how excellent is thy name in all y world, thou that hast set thy glory above the heuens:

* Out of the mouth of verie babes and sucklynges hast thou ordeined strength because of thyne enemies, that thou mightest kill the enemy and the auenger. For I will cōside thy heauens, euen the woorkes of thy fingers: the moone and the starres whiche thou hast ordeined. * What is manne, that thou art mynde full of hym: and the loonne of manne, that thou visitest hym? Thou madest hym lower then y angels, to croune hym with glory and worship. Thou makest hym to haue dominion of the woorkes of thy handes: and * thou hast put all thynges in subieccion vnder his fete. All these and oxen, yea, and the bestes of the felde. The foules of the aire, and y fishe of the sea, & whatsoeuer walketh thowowe the pathes of the seas. O Lord our gouernoure, how excellent is thy name in all the worlde.

The. ix. Psalme.

CONFITEBOR TIBI.

To hym that excelleth vpon Almut Labben, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Will * geue thanks vnto the, O Lord, with my whole heart, I will speake of all thy maruallous woorkes. I will bee glad, and reioyse in y, yea, my songes wil I make of thy name, O thou moste moste hiest. While myne enemies are dyspuen backe, thei shall fall, & perishe at thy presence.

For thou hast maintained my right, and my cause part let in the throne that iudgeth right. Thou hast rebuked the heathen, & destroyed þ vngod-ly, þ hast put out their name for euer & euer. O thouemie, destructions are come to a perpetuall ende: euen as þ cities whiche thou hast destroyed, their memorialis is perished with them

But the Lorde shall endure for euer, he hath also prepared his seate for iudgement. For he shall iudge the worlde in righteousness, & ministre true iudgement vnto þ people. The Lorde is also wilbe a defence for þ oppressed: euen a refuge in due tyme of trouble. And thei þ knowe thy name, will putte their trust in the: for thou (Lorde) hast neuer failed theim þ like the. O praise þ Lorde, * which dwelleth in Sio, weue þ people of his dooynge. For when he maketh inquisition for bloodde, he remembzeth theim: & forgettreth not the cōplaint of þ pooze. Haue mercy vpon me (O Lorde) confidre the trouble whiche I suffre of theim þ hate me, thou that liftest me vp frō the gates of death. That I maie weue all thy praises within the portes of the daughter of Sio, I wil reioice in thy saluaciō.

The heathen are sounke downe in the pitte that thei made: in the same net whiche thei hvd pauely, is their owne fote taken. The Lorde is known to execute iudgement: the vngodly is trapped in þ worke of his owne hādes. A consideraciō. Sela. The wicked shall be turned vnto hell, and all the people that forget God: For the pooze shall not bee alwaie forgotten, the pa-ciete abidynge of the meke shall not perishe for euer. Up Lorde, and let no manne haue the vp-per hand, let þ heathen bee iudged in thy sight.
But thei in feare (O Lorde) þ the heathen maie knowe theim selues to bee but menne. Sela.

The x. Psalme.
VT QVID DOMINE.

Why standest þ so farre of (O Lorde) & hidest thy face in þ nedefull tyme of trouble? The vngodly for his owne lust, dooth persecute þ pooze: let theim bee taken in þ crafty wili-nes þ thei haue imaged. For þ vngodly hath made boast of his owne hartes desire, and spe-kerh good of the coueteous, whom God abhorreth. The vngodly is so proude þ he careth not for God, neither is God in all his thoughtes.

His waies are alwaie greuous, thy iudgementes are farre aboue out of his sight, and therfore desiethe he all his enemies. For he hath said in his hearte: tush, I shall neuer be cast downe there shall no harme happen vnto me. * His mouthe is full of cursyng, and descreat & fraude vnder his tong is vngodlynes & vanitie. * He spereth larkynge in þ cheuith corners of the stre-tes, & ptiuely in his larkynge dēnes doth he murder þ innocent, his eyes are set against þ pooze.

For he lieth waitynge secretly (euen as a Lib lurketh he in his denne) that he maie catch the pooze. He dooth rauishe the pooze, when he getteth hym into his net. He falleth downe & hum-bleth himself, that the congregacion of þ pooze maie fall into the hande of his capitaines. He hath said in his hearte: tush, God hath the forgotten, he hideth awaie his face, and he wil neuer se it. Arise (O Lorde God) and lift vp thyne hande, forget not the pooze. Wherefore should þ wicked blaspheme God, while he dooeth saie in his heart: tush, thou God carest not for it: Surely thou hast sene it. For thou beholdest vngod-lines and wrong. That thou maist take þ matter into thy hande: the pooze comitteth hymself vnto the, for thou art þ helper of the frendelesse Break thou the power of the vngodly and malicious, take awaie his vngodlines & thou shalt finde none. The Lorde is kyng for euer & euer, and the heathen are perished out of the lande. Lorde thou hast hearde the desire of the pooze: thou preparest their heart and thine care herkeneth therto. To helpe the fatherles and pooze vnto their right: that the manne of the earth bee nomore exalted against theim.

The xi. Psalme.

IN DOMINO CONFIDO.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

For the Lord put I my trust: how safe ye then to my soule: þ he should fle as a birde vnto your hill: For lo, þ vngodly bende their bowe, & make ready their arrowes wīn the quier that thei maie priue þ shot at them whiche are true of heart. For the foundations wil bee cast downe, & what hath the righteous dooe? * The Lorde is in his holy temple: the Lordes sete is in heauen. His eyes consider: (the pooze) & his eie liddes trieth the childre of mēne. The Lorde aloweth the righteous: but the vngodly, & hym that deliteth in wickednes, dooeth his soule abhorre.

Upon the vngodly he shall rayne snares, fire, and brimstone storme and tempest: this shall be their porcion to drinke. For þ righteous Lorde loueth righteousness: his countenance wil be-holde the thyng that is iust.

The xii. Psalme.

SALVVM ME FAC.

To hym that excelleth vpon an instrumente

For the Lord, for there is not one atfull lippes, & the tong þ speaketh proude thin-uaile: we are thei that ought to speake, who is Lorde ouer vs: now for the cōfortles troubles of the pooze: I will vp (saith the Lorde) & will help euery one, frō hym þ wellethe against hym & will set theim at rest. The wordes of þ Lorde are pure wordes euen as the siluer, whiche frō

CTo the chaunter of Dauid the seruant of p Lorde, whiche spake vnto p Lorde the wordes of this song (in the daie that p Lorde deliuered hym from the hande of all hys enemyes, and from the ande of Saule) and he sayed.

I Will loue p Lorde, my strength. The Lorde is my stony rocke, & my defence, my sauoure, my God, & my might, in whō I wil trust, my bucler p hōrne also of my saluacion, & my refuge. * I will call vpon the Lorde whiche is worthy to be praised, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes. * The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouerflowynges of vngodlinesse made me afraid. The paines of hell came aboute me, p snares of death ouertoke me. In my trouble will I call vpon the Lorde, & complain vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his holptemple & my complaint shall come befoze hym, it shall entre eue into his eares. * The earth trembled & quaked, the very foundaciōs also of the hilles shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. There wēt a smoke out in his presenc: & a consuming fier out of his mouth, so that coles were kyndled at it. He bowed the heauens also, and came downe, & it was darke vnder his fete. He rode vpon the cherubyns, & did flie, he came flying vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darknesse his secreete place: his pavilion rounde about hym w dark water & thicke cloudes to couer hym. At the brightnesse of his presence his cloudes remoued, haillestones, & cooles of fire. The Lord also thōdzed out of heauē, & the hieft gaue his thunder, haillestones and cooles of fire. He sent out his arrowes & scattered them, he cast forth lightnynges, & destroyed them. The spynges of waters wer sene, & the foundaciōs of the round world were discouered at thy chydnyng, O Lord, at p blastnyng of the bryeth of thy displeasure. He shall send downe fro the heigth to fetch me, & shal take me out of many waters. He shall deliuer me from my strongest enemye, & fro them which hate me: for they are to myghty for me. They preynted me in p daie of my trouble: but p Lorde was my vpholder. He brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euen because he had a fauour vnto me. The Lord shall reward me after my righteous dealing: accordyng to the clenness of my hādes shall he recompence me. Because I haue kept p wales of the Lorde: and haue not forsaken my God as p wicked dooth. For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes: & will not cast out his commaundementes fro me. I was also vncorrupt befoze hym: and eschued myne owne wickednes. Therefore shal p Lord reward me after my righteous dealing: & accordyng vnto the clenness of my handes in his eye sighte: With the holy thou shalt bee holy, & with a perfect man p shalt bee perfect. With the cleane thou shalt bee cleane: & with the froward thou shalt learne frowardnes: for thou shalt saue the people p are in aduersite, & shalt bypnyng downe the hie lokes of the proude. Thou also shalt light my candell: p Lorde my God shall make my darkenes to bee light. For in the I shall disconfite an hoste of men: & with the help of God I shall lepe ouer p wall. The wale of God is an undefiled wale * the word of p Lorde also is tried in the fier: he is the defender of all them p put their trust in hym. For who is God but the Lorde, or who hath any strength except our God? It is God p girdeth me with strength of warre & maketh my waie perfect. * He maketh my fete like heretes fete: and setteth me vp on hie. He teacheth myne hādes to fight, & myne armes shal breake euē a bowe of stele. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluacion: thy right hand also shall hold me vp, & thy louyng correccion shal make me great. Thou shalt make rōume inough vnder me for to go, p my fotsteppes shal not slyde. I will foloe vpon myne enemyes, and ouertake them, neither will I turne again, till I haue destroyed them. I will smite them, that they shall not bee able to stande: but fall vnder my fete. Thou hast girded me with strength vnto the battail, thou shalt throw downe myne enemyes vnder me. Thou hast made mine enemyes also to turne their backs vpon me, and I shall destroy them that hate me. * They shal crie but there shal be none to help them: yea, euen vnto the Lorde shall they crie, but he shall not heare them. I will beate them as small as the dust befoze p winde, I will cast them out, as p clāie in p stretes. Thou shalt deliuer me from the strynges of the people: and p shalt make me the heade of the heathen. A people whō I haue not knowen shall serue me. As sone as they heare of me they shall obey me: but the straunge children shall dissemble with me. The straunge children shall faile, and be afraid out of their prisiones.

The Lord liueth: & blessed be my strong helpper, & praised bee the God of my saluaciō. Euē the God whiche seeth p I bee auenged: & subdueth the people vnto me. It is he that deliuereth me from my enemies, and setteth me vp aboue myne aduersaries: thou shalt rid me from the wicked manne. * For this cause I wil geue thanks vnto the O Lorde, among the Scitiles and syng praises vnto thy name. * Create p spirit geueth he vnto his kyng: and sheweth louyng kyndenes vnto Dauid his anointed, and vnto his sede for euermore.

CELI ENARRANT:

CTo the chaunter, a Psalme Dauid.

He heauens * declare p glory of God, & the firmamente sheweth his handy worke. One daie telleth another: and one night certifieth another. There is nether speche nor lāguage, but their voices are heard emōg them. * Their soude is gone in to all landes: & their wordes into p endes of the worlde. In them hath he set a tabernacle for p sūne, whiche cometh forth as a brydegrome out of his chāber, & reioyleth as a gyauut to runne in his course. The statutes of the Lorde are right and reioyce the heart: the comaundement of the Lorde is pure, and geueth light vnto the eyes. The feare of the Lord is cleane, and endureth for ever, y^e iudgemētes of y^e Lord are true & righteous altogether. * More to be desired are thei then gold: yea the muche fine gold: swe ter also then y^e hony cōbe and y^e hony. * Moreouer by the is thy seruaunt taught, & in keepyng of them there is great reward. EXAVDIAT TE DOMINVS.

The Lord heare the in the date of trou ble, the name of y^e God of Jacob de fende the. Sende the help fro the sanc tuary, & strength y^e out of Sion. Re membze all thy offerynges, & accept thy burnt sacrifice. Sela. Graunt the thy heartes desire, & fulfill all thy mynde. We will reioyse in thy saluacion: and triumphe in the name of y^e Lord our God, the Lorde persourme all thy peticiōs. Now know I that the Lorde helpeth his a noynted, and will heare hym from his holy hea uen: euen with the wholsome strength of his right hande. Some put their trust in charrettes and some in horses: but we will remembre the name of the Lorde our God. Thei are brought downe and fallen, but we are rylen, and stande vpright. Saue Lorde, and heare vs, O kyng of heauen, when we call vpon the.

DOMINE IN VIR TVTE TVA.

The kyng shal reioyse in thy strēgth O Lord: excedyng glad shal he be of thy saluacion. Thou hast geuen him his heartes desire, and hast not denied hym y^e request of his lippes. Sela. For y^e shalt p̄uent hym with the ble synges of goodnes, and shalt sette a crowne of pure gold vpon his hed. He asked life of the and thou gauest hym a long life, euen for ever & euer. His honour is greate in saluacion: glory and greate worship shalt thou laie vpon hym. For thou shalt geue hym euerlastyng felicitie, and make hym glad with y^e ioye of thy countenaūce. And why? because the kyng putteth his trust in the Lord, and in the mercy of the moste highest he shall not miscary. All thyne enemies shall fele thy hande: thy right hande shall fynde oute thei that hate y^e. Thou shalt make thei like a fierie ouen in tyme of thy wrath: y^e Lord shall destroye thei in his displeasure, and the fire shall cōsume thei. Thei frute shalt thou rote out of the earth, and thei sede from among the children of menne. For thei intended mischief a gainst the, and imagined suche a deuice, as thei are not hable to performe. Therfore shalt thou putte thei to flight, & the strynges of thy bow shalt thou make redy against y^e faces of thei. Bee thou exalted Lord, in thyne owne strēgth so will we syng and praise thy power.

To the chaunter vpon the hynde of the daunyng, a Psalme of David.

My God: my God: (loke vpon me) why hast y^e forsaken me: & art so farre fro my health, & from the woordes of my complaint? O my God, I crie in the daie tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also I take no rest. And thou continuest holy, O thou worship of Israell. Our fathers hoped in the, thei trusted in the and thou diddest deliuer thei. Thei called vpon the, and were helped: thei put their trust in the, and were not confounded. But as for me I am a wor me and no manne: a very scozne of menne and the out cast of the people. * All thei that se me laugh me to scozne: thei shote out their lippes and spake the hed sayng: * He trusted in God y^e he would deliuer hym: let hym deliuer hym if he wil haue hym. * But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope when I hanged yet vpon my mothers breastes.

I haue been left vnto the euer sens I was bozne: thou art my God euen from my mothers wombe. O go not fro me, for trouble is hard at hand, & there is none to help me. Many are come about me, fat bulles of Basan close me in on euery syde. Thei gape vpon me with their mouthes as it were a rampyng & roynyng Lion. * I am poured out like water, and al my bones are out of ioynt: my heart also in the midst of my bodie is euen like meltynge ware.

My strength is dried vp like a potsherd, and my tog cleueth to my gummes: and thou shalt byrnyng me into y^e dust of death. For many dog ges are come aboute me and the counsaill of the wicked laie siege against me. Thei pearled my handes and my fete, I maie tell all my bones, thei stande starvyng & lokyng vpon me. * Thei part my garmentes among thei, and cast lot tes vpo my vesture. But bee not thou farre fro me, O Lorde: thou art my succour, haste the to help me. Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my dearyng from the power of the doggue.

Saue me from the Lions mouth: thou hast heard me also fro among the hornes of the vni cornes. I will declare thy name vnto my bre thren: in the midst of the congregacion will I praise the. O praise y^e Lorde ye that feare hym. Magnifie hym all ye of the seed of Jacob, and feare hym all ye seed of Israell. * For he hath not despised nor abhored the lowe estate of the poore: he hath not hid his face from hym, but when he called vnto hym, he hearde hym.

My praise is of the in the great cōgregaciō, of my my bowes wyl I perfourme in the sight of the that feare hym. The poore shall eate, & be satisfied: they shal seke after y^e Lorde shal prayse hym poure hert shall lyue for euer. All y^e endes of the worlde shal remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lorde, & all the kynredes of y^e nacions shal worshyp befoze hym. For the kyngdom is the Lordes, and he is the gouernour among the people. All suche as be fat vpon earth, haue eaten and worshypped. All they that godowne in to the dust, shal knele befoze hym, & no mā hath quickened his owne soule: * (My seed shal serue him: they shal be cousted vnto y^e Lorde for a generacyn. They shall come, & * (the heauens) shal declare his righteousnesse, vnto a people y^e shal be borne, whom the Lorde hath made.

conuert my soule, & bring me forth

Yea, though I walke thowow y^e valley of y^e sha-it vpon the seas, & prepared it vpon the floudes.

or who shall ryle vp in his holy place? Euē he hath not lyfte vp his mynde vnto vanitee, nor ceyue y^e blessing from the Lorde, & righteousness from the God of his saluacion. This is the ge-seke thy face, O Jacob. Sela. Lyfte vp youre mightie, euen the Lorde mightie in battayle.

Lyfte vp your heedes (O ye gates) & be ye lyfte

What man is he that feareth the Lorde? him

The sorowes of my hert are enlarged. O bring thou me out of my troubles. Loke vpon myne aduersytee and miserie, and forgiue me all my synne. Consydre myne enemyes howe manye they are, & they beare a tyrannous hate against and proue me, trye out my reynes, & my harte.

For thy louing kyndnesse is befoze myne eyes, &

DOMINVS ILLVMINATIO.

Of David.

A The Lord is my light and my saluacion: whom then shall I feare? the Lord is the strength of my life: of whom then shall I be afrayed? When the wycked (euen mine enemyes and my foes) came vpon me, to eate vpon my flesh, they stumbled & fell: Though an hoste of men were layde against me, yet shall not my harte be afrayed: & though there rose vpon warre against me, yet will I put my truste in hym.

B * One thyng haue I despyed of the Lord, which I will requyre: euen that I maye dwell in the house of the Lord all the dayes of my lyfe: to beholde the fayre beautye of the Lord: and to visyte his temple. For in the tyme of trouble he shall hyde me in his tabernacle: yea in his secrete place of his dwelling shall he hyde me, & sette me vpon a rocke of stone. And now he shall be lyfte vpon my heed aboue myne enemyes rounde aboute me. Therefore will I offre in his dwelling, an oblation with great gladnesse. I will syng and speake prayes vnto the Lord.

C Herken vnto my voyce, O Lord, when I crye vnto the, haue mercye vpon me, and heare me. My hert hath talked of the: Seke ye my face: thy face Lord will I seke. Ohide not thou thy face from me, nor cast thy seruauent away in displeasure. Thou hast bene my succour, leaue me not, neither forsake me, O God of my saluacion.

D When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord taketh me vpon. Teache me thy waye, O Lord, and leade me the ryght way because of myne enemyes. Delyuer me not ouer into the wyll of myne aduersaries, for there are falsse witnessen risen vpon against me, & such as speake wyronge. I shuld vnterly haue fainted: but that I beleue verely to se the goodnesse of the Lord in the lande of the liuyng. O tarpe thou the Lordes leisure: be strong, and he shall comforte thine hert, and put thou thy trust in the Lord.

AD TE DONINE CLAMABO.

A Psalme of David.

A As to what I crye, O Lord, my strength thynke no scozne of me, lest, if I make the as though I herdest not, I become like the dogge that bawleth into the pit. Harte I voyce of my humble peticions, when I crye vnto the, when I holde vpon my handes toward thy mercys seat of thy holy temple. O pluck me not away

B * (neither destroye me) with the vngodly and wicked doers: whiche speake frendly to the, & nypghbours, but ymagyn mischefe in the, & herres.

C Reward them according to thy wickednesse of the, & owne inuencions. Recompence them after the worke of their handes: pay them that they haue deserued. For they regarde not in the, & mynde the workes of the Lord, nor the operacyon of his handes, therefore shall he breake them downe, & not bulde them vp. Prayled be the Lord, for he hath heard the voyce of mine humble petitions. * The Lord is my strength and my helpe: my hert hath trusted in hym, & I am helped: therefore my herte daunteth for ioye,

D and in my songe will I prayse hym. The Lord is their strength: and he is the wholsome defence of his anoynted. O saue thy people, and geue thy blessing vnto thyne enherytaunce: seke them, and set them vpon for ever.

AFFIRTE DOMINO.

A Psalme of David: (at the performing of the tabernacle)

B Kyng vnto the Lord (O ye mightye) to the Lord woorthyppe and strengthe. Geue the Lord the honour due vnto his name woorthyppe the Lord with holy woorthyppe. * It is the Lord that commaundeth the waters: it is the glorious God that maketh the thonder. * It is the Lord that ruleth the sea. The voyce of the Lord is mightye in operacion: the voyce of the Lord is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the Lord breaketh the Cedres trees: yea, the Lord breaketh the Cedres of Libanus. He made them also to skippe lyke a Calfe: Lybanus also, and Siryon lyke a yonge Unicorn.

C The voyce of the Lord denydeth the flames of fyre, the voyce of the Lord shaketh the wyldeernes: yea the Lord shaketh the wyldeernes of Cadis. The voyce of the Lord maketh the hyndes to bryng forth yonge, and discouereth the thicke bushes: in his Temple doth every man speake of his honour. The Lord sitteth aboue the water floude, & the Lord remaineth a kyng for ever. The Lord shall geue strength vnto his people, the Lord shall geue his people the blessing of peace.

EXALTABO TE DOMINE

A Psalme and songe of the dedicacyon of the house of David.

E Will magnifye the, O Lord, for thou hast set me vpon, & not made my foes to triumphe ouer me. O Lord my God, I cryed vnto the, and thou hast healed me. Thou Lord hast broughte my soule oute of hel: thou hast kept my lyfe, fro them that go downe to the pytt. Synge prayes vnto the Lord (O ye sayntes of his) and geue thanks vnto hym for a remembraunce of his holynesse. * For his wrath endureth but the tyme of a nyght, but ioye commeth in the mornynge. And in my prosperytie, I sayde I shall neuer be remoued: thou Lord of thy goodnesse haddest made my hyll so strong. Thou dydest turne thy face: (fro me) and I was troubled. Then cryed I vnto the, O Lord, & gat me to my Lord right humbly. What profite is there in my bloude, when I gooe downe to the pytt? Shall the dust geue thanks vnto the? or shall it declare thy truthe? Heare, O Lord, and haue mercye vpon me Lord be thou my helper. Thou hast turned my heynesse into ioye: thou hast put of my sackcloth, and gyrded me with gladnesse. Therefore shall (every good man) synge of thy prayse without ceasynge: O my God, I will geue thanks vnto the for ever.

IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

To the chaunter a Psalme of Dauid.

In the, O Lord, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion: delyuer me in thy ryghteousnesse. Bowe downe thyne eare to me, make hast to delyuer me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and house of defence, & thou mayest saue me. For thou art my stronge rocke, & my castell: Be thou also my guyde, and leade me for thy names sake. Drawe me out of the net & they haue laped pryuely for me, for thou art my strengthe. * Into thy handes I commende my spirite: for thou hast redeemed me, O Lord & God of truthe. I haue hated the that holde of superstitious vanyties, and my trust hath bene in the Lord. I wyll be glad & reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast conspyred my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersities. Thou haste not shut me vp into the hand of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble, & mine eye is consumed for very heuy nesse, euen my soule and my body. For my lyfe is waxen old wpth heuynes, and myne yeares wpth mournyng. My strengthe fayleth me, because of myne iniquitie and my bones are consumed. I became a reprove amonge all myne enemies, but specially amonge my neighbours and they of myne acquaintaunce were afrayed of me, and they that dyd se me without, conueyed them selues fro me. I am cleane forgottē, as a dead man out of mynde: I am become lyke a broke vessel. For I haue herde the blasphempe of my multitude: & feare is on euery syde whyle they conspyre together agaynst me, and take theyr counsaill to take away my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the. O Lord, I haue sayd: thou art my God. My tyme is in thy hande, delyuer me from the hande of myne enemies, and from them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruante the lyght of thy countenance, & saue me for thy mercyes sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon thee: let not vngodly be put to confusion & be put to sylence in thy graue. Let thy lyng lyppes be put to sylence, which cruelly, disdainfully & spytefully speake agaynst thy righteous. How plentyfull is thy goodnesse, whych thou hast laped vpon, for they that feare thee: and thou hast prepared for them, that put their trust in the euen before the sonnes of men. Thou shalt hyde them pryuely by thyne owne presence fro the prouoking of all men, thou shalt kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle fro the strep of tongues. Thankes be to the Lord: for he hath thewed me marvelous great kyndnesse in a stronge captiue. And whyle I made hast, I sayd: I am caste out of the lyght of thine eyes. Neuer thelesse, thou herdest the voyce of my prayer when I cryed vnto thee. O loue the Lord, al ye his sayntes, for the Lord preserveth the that are saythful, & plentyously rewardeth he the proude doer. * Be strong, and be shall stablysh your herte, all ye that putte your trust in the Lord.

BEATI QVORVM.

An instruccion of Dauid.

Blessed is he, whose vnrightheousnesse is forgivenē: & whose synne is couered. * Blessed is the mā, vnto whom the Lord imputeth no synne, & in whose synne there is no gyle. For whyle I helde my tonge, my bones consumed awaye thorow my dayly cōplaynyng. For thy hande is heuy vpon me daye and night, and my moysture is like the drowth in Sommer. Sela. I wyll knowledge my synne vnto the, and myne vnrightheousnes haue I not hyd. I sayd: * I wyl confesse my synnes vnto the Lord, & so thou forganest the wickednes of my synne. Sela. For this shall euery one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the in a tyme when thou mayest be founde, but in the greates waterfloudes they shall not come nye him. Thou art a place to hyde me in, thou shalt preserve me from trouble: thou shalt compasse me about wth songes of delyueraunce. Sela. I wyll enfourme the, & teach the in the way where in thou shalt go: and I wyl guyde the wpth myne eye. Be ye not lyke horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng, whose mouthes must be holdē wth byt and byrdle, lest they fall vpon the.

Great plagis remayne for the vngodly, but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord, mercy embrace hym on euery syde. Be glad, O ye righteous, and reioyse in the Lord: and be ioyful all ye that are true of harte.

EXULTATE IVSTI IN DOMINO.

Reioyse in the Lord, O ye ryghteous: for it becommeth well the iuste to be thankfull. * Praise the Lord with harpe syngyng psalmes vnto hym with the lute and instrument of ten stringes. Syng vnto the Lord a newe song, syng psalmes lute & vnto hym with a good corage. For the word of the Lord is true, and all his workes are saythfull. He loneth righteousnesse & iudgement, the earth is full of the goodnes of the Lord. * Wp the word of the Lord are the heauens made: and all the hostes of the by the bryeth of his mouth.

He gathereth the waters of the see together as it were vpon an hepe, and layeth vpon the depe as in a treasure house. Let all the earth feare the Lord: stande in awe of hym, al ye that dwell in the worlde. * For he spake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it stode fast. The Lord bynggeth the counsaill of the heathen to nought, and maketh the deuyles of the people, to bee of none effect: (and casteth out the counsailes of princes) The counsaile of the Lord shall endure for euer: and the thoughtes of his hart from generation to generation. Blessed are the people, whose God is the Lord Jehouah, and blessed are the folke that haue chosen hym to be theyr inheritaunce. The Lord looked downe from heauen, & behelde al the chyldren of men: from the habytacion of his dwellynge, he conspydeth al them that dwell in the earth. He fastyoneth al the hartes of them, and vnderstandeth all theyr woordes. There is no kynge that can be saued by the multitude of an

IUDICA DOMINE NOCENTES.

Of Dauid.

I Leate thou my cause, O Lorde, with gaynst me. Laye hand vpon þe wilde and buckler, and stande vp to helpe me. Byng forth the speare, & stop the way agaynst them þe uacyō. Let them be confounded & put to shame þe seke after my soule, let them be turned backe and brought to confusio, þe ymagine mischefe for me. * Let them be as the dust befoze þe wind, and the aungel of the Lorde scattepng the. Let they way be darke & slippery, and let the aungel of the Lorde persecute them. For they haue pryncely layed they net to destroy me woute a cause, yea, even without a cause haue they made a pyt for my soule. Let a sodayne destruccyon come vpon hym vna wares: and his net that he hath layd pryncely, catch hym selfe: that he may fall into his owne mischefe. And my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: it shal reioyce in his saluaci-Falle witnesse dyd ryse vp: they layd to my warde me euyl for good, to the greates dyscom-forte of my soule. Neuer thelesse, when they were sicke, I put on sacke clothe: and humbled my soule wth fastyng, and my prayer shall tourne into myne owne bosome. I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my frend or my brother. I went heuelp, as one that mourneth for his mother. But in myne aduersyte they re-ioysed and gathered the together: yea, þe ver-abietes came together agaynst me vna wares makynge mowes at me, and ceased not. With the flatterers were busy mockers, whiche gnas-shed vpon me with they teeth. Lorde, howe longe wylte thou loke vpon this? O delpyer my soule fro the calamytes which they byng on me, and my dearynge from the lyons. So wyl I geue the thanks in the great congrega-cyon I wyl prayse the amonge muche people.

DIXIT INIVSTVS.

To the chaunter of David the seruaunt of the Lord.

A hearte theweth me the wyckednes of the vngodly, & there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he flatereth hym self in hys owne syght, till his abhominable synne be found out. The wordes of his mouth are vnrighteous and full of disceit: he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wylle and to do good. He ymagyneth mischefe vpon his bed, & hath set hym self in no good way, neither doth he abhorre any thyng that is euell. Thy mercy O Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy faythfulnes vnto the cloudes. Thy righteousness standeth lyke a stronge mountayne: thy iudgementes are lyke the great depe. Thou Lord shalt saue both man & beast. How excellent is thy mercy O God: and the chyldren of men shall put their trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them drynke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For wyth the is the well of life, and in thy lyght, shall we see lyght. Continue forth thy louyng kyndnes vnto them that knowe the, & thy righteousness vnto the that are true of hart. Let not the foote of pryde come agaynst me: & let not the hande of the vngodly cast me downe. There are they fallen: & that wycke wyckednesse: they are cast downe & shall not be able to stande.

The. xxxvii. Psalm.

NOLITE EMVLARE.

A Psalm of David.

Ret not thy selfe because of the vngodly: neyther be penyous agaynst the euell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse, and be withered euell as the grene herbe. Put thou thy trust in the Lord, and do good: dwell in the land and verely thou shalt be fed. Delite thou in the Lord, and he shall geue thee thy hartes desyre.
Commyt thy way vnto the Lord, and put thy trust in hym, and he shall bypunge it to passe. He shall make thy righteousness as cleare as the lyght, and thy iust dealing as the none daye.
Holde the styl in the Lord, & abide patiently vpon hym: but greue not thy selfe at hym whole way doth prospere agaynst the man, & doth after euell counsailes. Leane off from wrath, and let go displeasure: fret not thy selfe, els shalt be moued to do euell. Wycked doers shall be rooted out: & they that patiently abyde the Lord, those shall inherite the land. Yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodly shall be cleane gone: thou shalt loke after his place: & he shall be away. But the meke spirited shall possesse the earth, & shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngod-ly seeketh counsaill agaynst the iust, & gnaweth vpon hym with his teeth. The Lord shall laugh hym to scorn, for he hath seene, that hys daye is commynge. The vngodly haue drawen out the sweard, & haue bedded their bowe, to cast downe the poore & neddy, & to slaye suche as be of right conuersacion. They swearde shall go thorow their owne hart, and their bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng & the righteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and the Lord upholdeth the righteous. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly, and they enherptance shall endure for ever. They shall not be confounded in the perylous tyme, & in the da-yes of derth they shall haue ynough. As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: and the enemyes of the Lord shall consume, as the fat of lābes, pre-cuen as the smoke shall they consume awaye.
The vngodly borroweth, & payeth not againe, but the righteous is merciful & lyberall. Such as be blessed of God, shall possesse the land, and they that be cursed of hym, shall be roted out.

The Lord ordyeth a good mans goyng, and maketh his waye acceptable to hym selfe.

* Though he fall, he shall not be cast away, for the Lord upholdeth hym with his hande. I haue bene yong, & nowe am old: and yet sawe I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seede beg-gynge they: byead. * The righteous is euermor merciful, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. He flye from euell, and do the thyng that is good: and dwell for ever. For the Lord loueth the thyng that is right, he forsaketh not his that be godly but they are preserved for euermore: * (The vn-righteous shall be punished) as for the seed of the vngod-ly, it shall be roted out. The righteous shall enherpte the lande, & dwell therein for ever. * The mouth of the righteous is exercysed in wysdome, & and hys tonge shall be talking of iudgemente.

The lawe of hys God is in hys hart, and his goynges shall not slippe. The vngodly seeth & righteous and seeketh occasyon to slaye hym.
The Lord will not leaue hym in hys hande, nor condemne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lord, and kepe his waye, and he shall promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande: whē the vngodly shall perishe, thou shalt see it. I my self haue sene the vngodly in great power, and flozpyng lyke a grene bay tree: I wente by, and lo, he was gone: I sought hym, but (his place) could no where be founde. Kepe innocency, & take hede vnto the thyng that is right, for that shall bypunge a man peace at the last. As for the transgressours they shall perishe together, and the ende of the vngodly is, they shall be roted out at the last. But the saluacion of the righteous cometh of the Lord, which is also their strengthe in the tyme of trouble. And the Lord shall stande by them, and saue the: he shall delyuer them from the vngodly, and shall saue them, because they put theyr trust in hym.

For my wickednesses are gone over my head, & are lyke a sore burthen, to beaue for me to beare. My woundes synke & are corrupt. thowtwe my foolyshnesse. I am brought into so great trouble and myserye, that I go mourning al day longe. For my lynes are fylled wyth a sore disease, and there is no whole parte in my bodye. DIXI CVSTODIAM VIAS.

To the chaunter of Jeduthun, a Psalme of David.

Sayd: I wyl take hede to my wayes that I offend not in my tonge. I wyl kepe my mouth (as it wer with a bydle) while the vngodly is in my sight. I helde my tonge, and spake nothyng. I kept silence: yea, euen from good wordes, but it was payne and grefe to me. My hert was hote wythin me, & whyle I was thus musyng, the fyre kyndled: & (at the laste) I spake wyth my tonge: * Lord, let me knowe myne ende, & the nombze of my dayes: that I maye be certyfied howe long I haue to lyue. * Behold, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne longe, and myne age is euen as nothyng in respecte of the: and verely euer mā lypung is altogether vanytie. Selah. For man walketh in a vain shadowe, and disquyeteth hym selfe in vayne, he heapeth vp rychesse: & cannot tel who shall gather them. And nowe Lord, what is my hope? truly my hope is euen in the. Delyuer me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the foolishe. I became domine, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doyng. Take thy plague away from me: I am euē consumed by the meanes of thy heuy hande. Whē thou with rebukes doest chastē man for synne: thou makest his beawtie to consume awaye, like as it were a moth freetyng a garment. Euer mā therfore is but vanytie. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lord, and wyth thyne eares consydze my calling: holde not thy peace at my teares. For I am a stranger with the, and a sojourner, as al my fathers were. O spare my a lytle, that I maye recouer my strengthe, before I go hence, and be nomore sene.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

Waited paciētly for O Lord, & he reclinēd vnto me: & herd my calling. he brought me also out of horrible pte, out of the myze and clay, & set my fete vpon rock & ordred my goynges. And he hath put a newe songe in my mouth, euen a thanksgyng vnto our God. Many shall se it, & feare: and shall put their trust in O Lord. * Blessed is the mā, p hath set his hope in O Lord, & tourned not vnto the proude: & to suche as go aboute wylles. O Lord my God, great are thy wonderous workes, which thou hast done: like as be aliothy thoughtes which are to vsward: & yet there is no mā p ordzeth theim vnto the. If I would declare them, & speake of the, thei shoulde be mo then I am able to expresse. * Sacrifice & meate offeryng I wouldest not haue, but myne eares hast thou opened: burnt offerynges & sacrifice for synne hast thou not required. I haue declared thy righteousnesse in the great cōgregaciō: Lo, I wyl not refrayne my lyppes. O Lord, & that p knowest. I haue not hyd thy righteousnes wythin my harte, my talkyng hath bene of thy truth & of thy saluacion. I haue not kepte backe thy louyng mercy and truth from the great congregacion. Wylth drawe not p thy mercy from me, O Lord: let the lycht of thy kyndnes & thy truth alway preferue me. For innumerable troubles are come about me my synnes haue takē such hold vpon me, p I am not hable to lōke vp: yea, they are mo in number then the beares of my head, & my hert hath fayled me. O Lord, let it be thy pleasure to delyuer me, make hast (O Lord) to helpe me. Let theim be ashamed & confounded together p seke after my soule to destroye it: let the be dyuēn backward & be put to rebuke that wyspe me euell. Let them be desolate & rewarded with shame p save vnto me: spe vpon the, spe vpon the. Let all those p seke p, be ioyful & glad in the: & let suche as loue thy saluacion, say alway: the Lord be prayled. As for me, I am pooze and neady, but the Lord careth for me. DEVS NOSTER REFUGIVM.

To the chaunter, a songe for the chyldezen of Cozab vpon Alamothe.

God is our hope & strength: a very p̄sēt helpe in trouble. Therefore wyll not we feare, though þ earth be moued & though the hylls be carped in the myddest of the see.

* Though the waters therof rage & swell, though the mountaynes shake at þ tēpest of the same. Sela. The ryuers of the floude shal make glad the cytie of God, the holy place of þ tabernacles of þ most hiest God, is in þ middest of her, therfor shal she not be remoued: god shal helpe her, & that ryght early. The heathen make much ado, & the kyngdomes are moued but God hath shewed his voyce, & þ earth shal melt away. The Lord of hostes is wth vs, & God of Jacob is our refuge. Sela. Come hyther, & beholde the workes of the Lord, what destruccōs he hath brought vpon the earth. * He maketh warres to cease in al the worlde, he breaketh þ bowe & knappeth þ speare in sun dre, & burneth the charettes in the fyre. Be still then & knowe þ I am God: I wyll be exalted amonge the heathen, and I wyll be exalted in the earth. The Lord of hostes is wth vs, the God of Jacob is oure defence. Sela.

MAGNVS DOMINVS.

A songe of a Psalme of the chyldezen of Cozab (in the second daye of oure Sabbath.)

Reate is the Lord, and byghlye to be prayed, in the cytie of oure God, euen vpon his holpe hyll. The hyll of Syon is a fayre place, and the ioye of the whole earth vpo the northsyde lyeth the cytie of the great kyng: God is wel knowen in her palayces, as a sure refuge. For lo, þ kynges (of the world) are gathered and gone by together. They marry-led to se such thynge: they were astonied, and sodenly cast downe. Feare came there vpo the, and sorowe as vpon a woman in her trauayle.

Thou shalt breake the hyppes of the see, tho-rowe the east wynde. Lyke as we haue heard, so haue we sene in the cytie of þ Lord of hostes, in the cytie of oure God. God vpholdeth the same for ever. Sela. We wyte for thy louyng kyndnes (þ God) in the myddest of thy temple. (þ God) accorpyng vnto thy name, so is thy praise vnto þ worldes ende: thy right hande is full of righteousness. Let þ mount Sion reioyse, & the daughters of Iuda be glad because of thy iudgementes. Walke about Sion & go rounde about her, & tell the towres therof, Marke well her bulwerkes, set vp her houses, that yemaie tell theim that come after. For this God is our God for ever and ever, he shall be our guyde vnto deathe.

EXAUDITE HEC GENTES.

CTo the chaunter, a Psalme for the chyldren of Cozab.

Hearke this, all ye people: ponder it w your eares, all ye þ dwell in þ world. He and lowe: riche, and pooze, one w another. My mouthe shall speake of wisdom, and my hearte shall muse of vnderstandyng. I will encline myne eare to the parable, and shewe my darke speache vnto þ harpe. Wherefore should I feare in þ dates of wickednes: and when the wickednes of my heles compasseth me rounde aboute? * Their bee some þ put their trust in their gooddes, and bothe them selues in the multitude of their riches.

But no manne maie deliuer his brother, nor make agremente vnto God for hym. * For it coste moze to redeme their soules, so þ he mulke let that alone for ever. Yea, though he lyne long and se not the graue. * For he seeth, that wise menne also die, and perishe together: as wel as the ignoraunt & folishe, and * leaue their riches for other. And yet thei thynke, that their houses shall continue for ever, and that their dwellyng places shall endure from one generacion to another, & call the landes after their owne names. Neuertheles, manne will not abyde in honoure sayng he maie bee compared vnto the bestes that perishe: this is the wale of theim.

This is their foolishnes, and their posteritie praise their sayng: Sela. Thei lye in hell lyke thepe, death gnaweth vpon theim, and the righteous shall haue dominacion of theim in the morning: their bewtie shall consume in þ sepulchre out of their dwellyng. But God shall deliuer my soule fro the place of hel, for he shall receiue me. Sela. Bee not thou afraied though one bee made riche: or if the gloze of his house bee increased. * For he shall cary nothyng awaie with hym when he dieth, neither shall his poe foloe hym. For while he liued, he counted hymself an happie manne: & so long as thou dooest well vnto thy self, menne will speake good of þ. He shall foloe þ generacions of his fathers, & shall neuer be light. Wane beyng in honour hath no vnderstandyng, but is copared vnto þ bestes, þ perishe.

CA Psalme of Asaph.

He Lorde, euen þ moste mighty God hath spokē, & called the world from the rispyng vp of the sunne vnto þ going downe therof. * Oute of Sion hath God appeared in perfect bewty. Our God shall not kepe silence: there shall go before hym a consumpyng fier, and a mighty tempest shall be stered vp rounde aboute hym. He shall call the heauen from aboue, & the earth þ he maie iudge his people. Gather my saintes together vnto me, those that haue made a couenaunt with me with sacrifice. And þ heauens shall declare his righteousness: for God is iudge hymself. Sela.

Hear, O my people: and I will speake, I myself will testifie against the, O Israell. For I am God, euen thy God. I will not reproue the, because of thy sacrifices, or for thy burntofferings, because thei wer not alwaie before me.

* I will take no bullocke out of thy house: nor he goates out of thy foldes. For all the bestes of the forest are myne, and so are the cattell vpon a thousand hilles. I know all the foules vpon mountaynes and the wylde bestes of the felde are in my sight. If I bee hungry I will not tell the: for * the whole worlde is myne, and all that therein is. Thynkest thou, that I will eate bulles flesh, and drinke the bloodde of goates? Esa. i. c. Amos. v. d. Actes. vii. f.

Offre vnto God thankesgeuyng, & paie thy vowes vnto the moste highest. And * call vpon me in the tyme of trouble, so will I hear the and thou shalt praise me. But vnto the vngodly saied God. Why dooest thou preach my lawes and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Where as thou hatest to bee reformed, and hast caste my wordes behynde the: When thou sawest a thefe, thou consentedest vnto hym, and hast been partaker with þ aduouters. Thou hast let thy mouthe speake wickednes, and with thy tong thou hast sette forth disceate.

Thou sattest and speakest against thy brother: yea and hast sclaundered thyne owne mothers loonne. These thynges hast thou dooen, & I helde my tong: & thou thoughtest. * I am euen such a one as thy self: but I will reproue the, and set before the, the thynges þ thou hast dooen. Consider this ye þ forget God: lest I plucke you awaie, and there bee none to deliuer you. Who so offereth me thankes & praise: he honoureth me, & to hym þ ordreth his conuersaciō right, will I shewe the saluacion of God.

EXAUDI DEVS,

To the chaunter in melodies an instruction of David.

Care my praler (O God) and hide y not thy self from my petition. Take hede vnto me, & heare me, how I mourne in my praler, & am vexed. The enemy crieth so, & the vngodly cometh on so fast: for thei are minded to dooe me some mischief, so maliciously are thei set against me. My heart is disquieted within me, & y feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulness & trembling are come vpon me, & an horrible dyed hath ouerwhelmed me. And I saied: O y I had wynges like a doue, for then would I fle a waie, and be at rest. Lo, then would I get me a waie farre of, and remain in the wilderness.

Sela. I would make hast to escape, because y of the stozy wynde and tēpest. Destrope their tonges (O Lorde) and * deuide theim, for I haue spied vnrightheousnes and strife in the cite Dale and night go thei aboute within the walles therof: mischief also, and sozowe are in the middest of it. Wickednes is therein, disceate, and guyle go out of their stretes. For it is not an open enemy that hath dooen me this dishonour: for then I coulde haue bozne it: neither was it myne aduersary, that did magnifie hymself against me: for then * (peradventure) I would haue hid my self from hym.

* But it was euē thou my compaignion, my gypde, & myne owne familiar frende. We toke swete coufayll together, and walked in y house of God as frendes. Let death come hastily vpon theim, and let theim go downe quicke into hell, for wickednes is in their dwellynges, & among theim. As for me, I will call vnto God, and the Lord shall saue me.

In y euenyng & moynyng, & at none daie will I praiser

For thei will not turne nor feare God.

He laied his handes vpon such as be at peace with hym, & he brake his couenaunt. The wo-rdes of his mouth wer softer the butter, haupnyng war in his heart: his wordes were smother then burthe vpon the Lord & he shall northe the and EXAVDI DEVS DEPRECA.

C To the chaunter in the melodies of Dauid.

Hear me cryng (O God) geue care vnto vnto my praier. Fro the endes of the earth will I call vnto the, when my heart is in heuēes. Oh set me vp vpon the rocke that is higher then I. For thou hast been my hope, & a strong tower for me against the enemy. I will dwell in thy tabernacle for e-uer, and my trust shall be vnder the coueryng of thy wynges. Sela. For þe O Lord, hast heard my desires, & hast geuen an heritage vnto those þe feare thy name. Thou shalt graunt the bynge a lōg life, that his yeares maie endure thowm out all generacions. He shall dwell before God for euer: O prepare thy louynge mercy & faithfulnes that thei maie preferue hym. So will I alwaie synge praise to thy name, * that I maie daily performe my vowes.

C The. lxii. Psalm.

NONNE DEO SVBIECTA.

C To the chaunter: for Jeduthū, a Psalm of Dauid

My soule truly waiteth still vpon God for of hym cometh my saluacion. He verely is my strenght & my saluacion he is my defence so that I shall not greatly fall. How long will ye imagine mischief against euery manne: ye shall be slain all þe sorte of you: yea, as a totterynge wall shall ye bee, & like a broken hedge. Their device is only how to putte hym out whom God will exalte. their delite is in lies: thei geue good wordes with their mouth, but curse with their heart.

Sela. Neuertheles, my soule waite thou still vpon God, for my hope is in hym. He truly is my strenght, & my saluacion: he is my defence so that I shall not fall. In God is my health and my glozy, the rocke of my might, and in God is my trust. O put your trust in him alwaie, ye people, * powre out your heartes before hym, for God is our hope. Sela. As for the children of menne, thei are but vain, the children of menne are disceatfull vpon the waistes, thei are altogether lighter then vanitee it self. O trust not in wrong and robbery, geue not your selues vnto vanitee: if riches increase, set not your heart vpon them. God spake once and twice: I haue also heard the same: þe power belongeth vnto God And that thou Lord art mercifull for * þe redde-dest euery manne accordyng to his worke.

C The. lxiii. Psalm.

DEVS DEVS MEVS.

C A Psalm of Dauid when he was in the wilderness of Iuda.

God, thou art my God, early will I seke the. My soule thirsteth for the, my flesh also longeth after þe in a bare & drie land, where no water is. Thus haue I looked for the in holynes, that I might beholde thy power and glozy. For thy louynge kyndnes is better then the life it self, my lippes shall praise þe. As long as I liue will I magnifie the on this maner, and lift vp my handes in thy name. My soule shall be satisfied, euen as it wer with mary & fatnes, when my mouth praie-seth the w ioyfull lippes. Haue I not remembred the

the in my bed, & thought vpon the, when I was waking. Because thou hast been my helper, therefore vnder the shadow of thy wynges will I reioyce. My soule hangeth vpon the, thy right hande hath vpholden me. These also that seeke the hurt of my soule, thei shall go vnder the earth.
Let theim fall vpon the edge of the sword, that thei maie bee a porcion for foxes. But the kynge shall reioyce in God: * all thei also that sweare by hym shall bee commended, for the mouth of theim that speake lies, shall bee stopped.

EXAUDI DEVS ORACIONEM:

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

Eare my voice (O GOD) in my prayer, preserve my life fro fear of the enemy. Hide me fro the gatheryng together of the froward, and fro the insurreccio of wicked doo-ers. Whiche haue whet their tog like a sword & shote out their arrowes, euen bitter woordes.
That thei maie preyly shote at hym whiche is perfect: suddenly dooe thei hit hym and feare not.
Thei courage theim selues in mischief, and co-men emog theim selues, how thei maie late snares: and saie, that no manne shall se theim.

Thei imagine wickednes, & practyse it & thei hope secrete among theim selues, eueri mane in the depe of his heart. But God shall suddenly shote at theim w a swift arrow, & thei shall be wounded.
Pea, thei odone toges shall make theim fall, in somuche & who so seeth them shall laugh theim to scozne. And all menne that se it, shall saie: this hath God dooen, for thei shall perceiue that it is his woorde. The righteous shall reioyse in the Lorde, and putte his trust in hym: and al thei that are true of heart shall be glad.

TE DECET HIMNVS,

To the chaunter, a Psalme & song of David

Thou (O GOD) art praised in Sion & vnto thei shall & vowe be perfourmed (in Jerusalem) Thou & hearest & praier vnto thei shall all fleshe come. My misedes preuaile against me: O be & merciful vnto our sinnes. Blessed is the man whom & choicest & receivest vnto the: he shall dwell in thy court: & shall be satisfied w the pleasures of thy house, euen of thy holy temple. Thou shalt shewe vs wonderfull thynges in righteousness.
(O GOD) of our saluacio, & that art the hope of al endes of the earth, & of theim & remain in the pride of the sea: Whiche in his strenght letteth fast the moun-taines, & is girded about w power. Whiche stilleth the ragyng of the sea, & the noyse of his waues, & the madness of the people. Thei also that dwell in the uttermost partes (of the earth) shall be afraid at thy tokens, & that makest the out go-ynges of the mornynge & euenynge to praise the.

Thou visitest the earth, & blestest it: & makest it very plenteous. The river of God is full of water, & preparest their corne: for so & proudest for the earth. Thou waterest her forowes, & sendest rain into the litle valeies therof: & makest it soft w the drowpes of rain, & blestest the increase of it. Thou crownest thei peare w thy goodnes: & thy cloudes drop fatnes. Thei shall drop vpon the dwellinges of the wilderness: & the litle hilles shall reioyse on euery side. The foldes shall be ful of sheepe, the valleies also shall stande so thicke with corne, that thei shall laugh and syng.

IVBELTE DEO.

To the chaunter. The song of a Psalme.

Bee ioyfull in God, all ye landes syng praises vnto thei honour of his name, make his praise to bee glorious. Saie vnto God: O how won-derfull art thou in thy workes: tho rowe & greatnes of thy power shall thyne enemies be founde liers vnto the. For all the worlde shall worship the, syng of the, & praise thy name.
Sela. O come hither & beholde the workes of God, how wonderfull he is in his doyng toward the children of men. * He turned the sea into drye lande: so thei went thorow the water on fote there did we reioyse therof. He ruleth with his power for euer, his eyes beholde the people: and suche as will not beleue, shall not bee able to exalt theim selues. Sela. O praise our God (ye people) & make thei voice of his praise to be heard Which holdeth our soule in life, & suffereth not our fete to slip. For the (O GOD) hast proued vs: thou also hast tried vs, like as siluer is tried.

Thou broughtest vs into the snare, and laidst trouble vpon our loynes. Thou suffrest men to ride ouer our heedes, * we went thorow fire and water, & thou broughtest vs out into a welthy place. I will go into thy house with burnt offerynges, and will paye the my vowes * whiche I promised with my lippes, and spake with my mouth when I was in trouble. I will offre vnto the, fat brestsacrifices w the incense of rames I will offre bullockes & goates Sela. O come hither & herken all ye that feare God: & I will tel you what he hath dooen for my soule. I called vnto him with my mouth, & gaue hym praises with my tog. If I encline vnto my wickednes with my heart, the Lorde will not heare me.
But God hath heard me, & considred thei voyce of my prayer. Praise be God which hath not cast out my prayer: nor turned his mercy fro me.

DEVS MISEREATUR NOSTRI.

To the chaunter in metodies: a Psalme and song.

Od, * be mercifull vnto vs, and blesse vs, and shewe vs the light of his countenance: (and be mercifull vnto vs,) Sela. That thy wate maie be known vpon earthe, thy saynge health among all nacions. Let the people praise the O let the nacions reioyse and bee glad: for thou shalt iudge the folke righteously, & gouerne the nacions vpon earth. Sela. Let the people praise the (O GOD) lette all the people praise the. Then shall the earthe bring forth thei increase, and God, euen our owne God shall geue vs his blef syng. God shall blesse vs, and all the endes of the worlde shall feare hym.

EXVRGAT DEVS.

To the chaunter, a psalme and song of Dauid.

Numer. x. d.

Let God arise, & let his enemies bee scattered: let them also that hate him flee before hym. Like as smoke vanissheth, so shalt thou drie them awaie: & like as wax melteth at fire, so let þe vngodly perishe at the presence of God. But let þe righteous bee glad, and reioyse before God. Let them also bee mery and ioyfull. Oþs yng vnto God, and yng praises vnto his name: magnifie hym that rideth vpon the heauens, as it were vpon an horse: praise hym in his name: yea, & reioyse before hym. * He is a father of the fatherlesse, & defendeth the cause of the widdowes: euen God in his habitation. He is the God that maketh menne to bee of one mynde in an house, & bypnygeth the prisoners out of captiuitie: but letteth the rennegates continue in scarcenes.

Deut. x. d.

Exod. xiii. d.
Num. xiii. d.
Esay. xlii. d.

O God, when thou wentest forth before the people, when þe wentest thorow the wilderness. Sela. The earth shoke, & the heauens dropped at the presence of God: euen as Sinai also was moued at þe presence of God: whiche is þe God of Israell. Thou O God sendest a gracious rain vpon thine enheritaunce, & refreshedest it when it was dry. Thy congregaciõ shall dwell therein: for þe (O God) hast of thy goodnes prepared for the poore. The Lorde gaue the woorde: greate was the compaignie of the preachers.

Josua. x. d.

* Kynges with their armies did flee, & were discomfited: and thei of the houtholde diuided þe spoyle. Though ye haue lien among þe pottes, yet shall ye bee as the wynges of a doue that is couered with siluer wynges, & her fethers like golde. When the almighty scattered kynges for their sake, then were thei as white as snowe in zalmon. As the hill of Basan, so is Godes hill euen an hie hill as the hill of Basan. Why hope ye so, ye hie hillles: this is Godes hil, in þe whiche it pleaseth hym to dwell: yea, the Lord will abide in it for euer. The charettes of God are twety thousand, euen thousandes of angels: & the Lord is among them, as in þe holy place of Sinai.

Ephes. iii. d.

* Thou art gone vp an hie, thou hast led captiuite captiue, & receiued giftes for menne: yea euen for thyne enemies, þe Lorde God might dwell among them. Praised bee þe Lorde daily euen þe God whiche helpeth vs, and poureth his benefites vpon vs. Sela. He is our God, euen the God of whom cometh saluacion: God is the Lorde by whom we escape death. God shall wound the hed of his enemies, & the heery scalp of suche one as goeth on still in his wickednes. The Lorde hath saied: I will bypnyng my people again as I did from Basan: myne owne will I bypnyng again, as I did somtyme from þe depe of the sea. That thy fote mate bee dipped in the bloodde of thyne enemies, and that the tong of thy dogges maie bee red thorowe the same.

It is well sene, O God how thou goest, how thou, my God and kyng goest in þe sanctuary.

The syngers go before, the mynstrels folow after: in the mides are the damels playng with tymbrels. Geue thanks O Israell vnto God the Lorde in þe congregacions, from the grounde of þe hearte. There is litle Benjamin their ruler, and the princes of Juda their counsaill, & princes of zabulon, and the princes of Reuben. Thy God hath sente for the strengthe, stablisheth the thyng O God, that thou hast wrought in vs. For thy temples sake at Ierusalem: so shall kynges bypnyng presentes vnto the.

When the compaignie of the spearmen, and multitude of the mightie are scattered abroad among the beastes of the people (so þe humbly bypnyng peces of siluer) and when he hath scattered the people the delite in warre: Then shall the princes come out of Egipte, the Moyans lande shall soone stretch out her handes vnto God. Sing vnto God O ye kyngdomes of the earth: O yunge praises vnto the Lorde. Sela. Whiche sitteth in the heauens ouer all from the begynnyng: Lo he dooeth sende out his voyce: yea, and that a mightie voyce. Ascribe þe power to God ouer Israell: his worship and strength is in the cloudes. O God, wonderfull arte thou in thy holy places, euen the God of Israell: he will geue strengthe and power vnto his people. Blessed bee God.

SALVVM ME FAC DEVS.

To the chaunter vpon Hosanim of Dauid.

Salue me, O God: for þe waters are come in euen vnto my soule. I sticke faste in the depe myre, where no grounde is: I am come into depe waters, so that þe floudes rene ouer me. I am wery of cryng, my throte is drye: my sight faileth me, for waityng so long vpon my God. Thei that hate me without a cause, are mo then the beares of my hede, thei that are myne enemies, and would destroye me giltles are mighty: I paid them the thynges that I neuer toke. God thou knowest my symplenesse, and my fautes are not hid from the. Lette not thei that trust in the O Lorde God of hostes, bee ashamed for my cause, let not those that seke the bee confounded thorow me, O Lorde God of Israell.

And why? for thy sake haue I suffered reproche: shame hath couered my face. I am become a straunger vnto my brethzen: euen an aleaunt vnto my mothers children. For the zeale of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of thei that rebuke the are fallen vpon me. I wept & chastened my self with fastyng, and I was turned to my reproche. I put on a sackcloth also, and thei tested vpon me. Thei that sit in the gate, spake against me, and the drounkardees make songes vpon me. But Lorde, I make my prayer vnto þe in an acceptable tyme. Heare me (O God) in the multitude of thy mercy, euen in the truth of thy saluacion.

Take me out of the myre, that I synke not. Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me and out of the depe waters. Let not the water floudes floud drowne me: neither let the depe swalowe me vp, & let not pit but her mouth vpon me.

Hear me, O Lorde, for thy louyng kyndeness is comforte: turne the vnto me, accor-dyng vnto the multitude of thy mercies. And bid not thy face from thy seruunt, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and heare me. Drawe nie vnto my soule, and saue it: O deliuer me, because of myne enemies: Thou hast knowen my repose, my shame and my dishonour, myne ad-uersaries are full in thy sight.

Thy rebuke hath broke my heart, I am full of heuencelle, I looked for some to haue pitie vpo me, but there was no manne: neither founde I any to comfort me. * Thei gaue me gall to eate and when I was thyrsty thei gaue me vynesgre to drynke. * Let their table bee made a snare to take them selues with all, and let the thynge (that should haue been for their wealth) bee vn to them an occasion of fallynge. Let their eyes bee blinded, that thei se not: and euer bowe thou downe their backs.

Poure out thyne indignacion vpon them, & let thy wrathful displeasure take hold of them * Let their habitation bee voide and no manne to dwell in their tentes. For thei persecute hym whom thou hast smitten, & thei talke how thei maie bere theim whom thou hast wounded. Let theim fall from one wickednes to another, and not come into thy righte ousnes. * Let theim be wiped out of the booke of liuyng, and not to be wrytten among the righteous. As for me, whē I am pooze & in heuencelle, thyne help (O God) shall lift me vp. I will praise the name of God with a song: and magnifie it with thankesgeuyng. This also shall please the Lorde better thē a bullocke, that hath hoznes and hoofes.

The humble shall confidre this, & be glad: seke praister God, & pour soule shall liue. For p Lorde heareth the pooze, & dispiseth not his prisoners Let heauen and earth praise hym, the sea, & all that moueth therein. For God shall saue Sion, and buyde the citees of Iuda, that menne maie dwell ther, and haue it in possession. The posterite also of his seruantes shall enherite it: and thei that loue his name shall dwell therein.

DEVS IN ADIVTORIVM.

To the chaunter of Dauid to byng to remebraunce. (because the Lorde saued me.)

As the (O God) to deliuer me: make hast to helpe me, O Lorde.
* Let theim bee shamed & confounded. p seke after my soule: let them bee turned backward, & put to confusion & wishe me euill. Let theim (for their re-warde) be sone brought to shame, that crye ouer me, there, there. But let all those that seke the, bee to pfall and glad in the: and let all suche as delite in thy saluacion, saie alwaie: the Lorde be praised. As for me, I am pooze and in misery, QVAM BONVS ISRAELL.

A Psalme of Asaph.

A Ruly God is louyng vnto Israell euen vnto suche as are of a cleane heart. Neuertheles, my fete were al-moste gone, my treadynges hadde welnygh slippt. And why? * I was grieved at þ wicked, I dooe se also the vngodly in suche prosperite. For thei are in no perell of death but are lustie and strö. Thei come in no misfortune like other folke, neithere are thei pla-ged like othermē. And this is the cause þ thei be so holdē with pride, & overwelmed w cruelte.

Their eies swell for fatnes: & thei dooe euen what thei lust. Thei corrupt other, and speake of wicked blasphemie: their talkyng is against the moste highest. For thy stretche forth thei mouth vnto the heauen, and their tong gooeth thozow þ woelde. Therfoze fall the people vnto theim, & therout sucke thei no small aduau-tage. * Tushē (saie thei) how should God per-ceiue it? is there knowlage in þ moste highest?
Lo, these are the vngodly: these prospere in the wozld, & these haue riches in possessio: (And said)

The haue I clesed my heart in vaine, & washed my handes in innocēcie. All the daie long haue I been punished, and chastened eueri mornynge Pea, and I had almoste saied euen as thei: but lo, then should I haue condemned the generacion of thy childzen. Then thought I to vnderstande this, but it was to harde for me.

Untill I went into the Sainctuary of God then vnderstode I the ende of these menne. Namely, how thou dooest set them in the slippe places, and castest them downe and destroyest them. O how sodainly dooe thei consume, perishe, and come to a fearfull ende: * Pea eue like as a dreame when one awaketh, so shalt thou make their image to vanishe out of the citee.
Thus my heart was grieved, and it wente euen thozowe my raines. So folishe was I & ignoraunt, euen as it were a beast befoze the. Neuer theles, I am alwaie by the, for thou hast holdē me by my right hande. Thou shalt gyde me with thy counsaill: and after that receiue me w glozy. Whom haue I in heauen but the?

And there is none vpon earth, that I desire in comparison of the. My fleshe and my hearte faileth: but God is the strengthe of my hearte, & and my porcion for euer. For lo, thei that forsaie the shal perishe: þ hast destroyed all them that commit fornicacion against the. But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God to put my trust in the Lozde God and to speake of all thy wozkes: (In the gates of the daughter Sion.)

VT QVID DEVS REPVLISTI.

An instruccion of Asaph.

God, wherefore art thou absēt from vs so lōg? why is thy wraeth so hotē against the shepe of thy pasture? O thyne vpō thy congregacion, wōd thou hast purchaced and redemed of olde. Thinke vpō the tribe of thyne enheritaunce and mount Sion wherin thou hast dwelt. Lift vp thy scete, that thou maiest vtterly destroye eueri enemy, whiche hath dooen euill in the Sainctuary. Thyne aduersaries rooze in the midde of thy congregacions: and set vp their banners for tokens. He that hewed tymbre afore out of the thicke trees, was knownen to bypnyng it to an excellent wooske.

But now thei bzeake downe all the carued wozke therof with axes and hammers. * Thei haue set fire vpon the holy places, and haue defiled the dwellynge place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde. Pea, thei saied in their heartes let vs make hauocke of theim altogether: thus

We haue herd and knowen: and such as our fathers haue tolde vs. That we shoulde not hyde the from þ childzen of the generacions to come but to shewe the honour of þ Lord, his myght, and wonderfull workes that he hath done. He made a couenaunt with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe: which he comaunded our forefathers to teache theþ childzen. That theþ posterityte myght knowe it, and the childzen whiche were yet vnborne. To thintent that when they came vp, they myght shewe their childzen the same. That they myght putte theþ truste in God, and not to forget the workes of God, but to kepe his commaundementes. And not to be as their forefathers: a fapthlesse and stubburne generacion: a generacion þ set not theþ hert a right, and whose spirite cleaued not fastly vnto God. Like as þ childzen of Ephraim, whiche beþng harnessed and caryeng bowes, turned them selues backe in the dape of batayle. They kepte not the couenaunte of God, and would not walke in his lawe. But forgot what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he had shewed for them. Maruailous thinges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in þ land of Egypt, euen in the felde of zoan. * He deuyded the sea, and let them go thozowe: he made the waters to stande on an heape. * In the day tyme also he led them with a cloude, and all the nyghte thozowe, with lyght of fyre. He cloaued the herde: rocks in the wylbernesse, and gaue them drinke therof, as it had ben out of þ great depthe. He bzoughte waters out of the stony rocke, so that it gushyd out lyke the riuers. Yet for all this, they sinned moze agaynst hym, and prouoked the most hyest in the wildernes.

They tempted God in theþ hertes: & requyred meate for theþ luste. They spake agaynst God also, sayng: Hal God prepare a table in the wylbernesse? He smote the stony rocke in dede, that the water gushyd out, and þ streemes flowed withall: but can he geue bzeade also, or prouide fleshe for his people? When the Lorde heard this: he was wroth: so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and there came vp þenye dyspleasure agaynst Israel. Because they beleued not in God, and put not theþ trust in his helpe.

So he comaunded the cloudes aboue, & opened the doores of heauen. He rained downe Manna also vpon the for to eat, and gaue the food from heauen. So man dyd eate aungels foode, for he sente them meate ynough. He caused the East wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, & thozowe his power he bzoughte in the southwester wynde. * He rayned fleshe vpon them as thicke as dust, and fethered foules lyke as the lande of the sea. He let it fall amonge theþ tentes, euen rounde aboute theþ habitacyon. So they dyd eate, and were well fylled: for he gaue theim theþ owne desyre. They were not dysapoynted of theþ luste. * But whyle the meate was yet in theþ mouthes, the þenye wrathe of God came vpon them, & slue the welthpest of them: pea and smote downe, the cholen men that were in Israel. * But for all this, they synned yet more: and beleued not his wonderous workes. Therfore theþ dayes dyd he consume in vnytie, and theþ yeares in trouble. * When he slue them, they sought hym: and turned theim ly, and requyred after God. And they remembred that God was theþ strenght, and that the hyge God was theþ redemer. Neuertheles, they did but flatter hym with their mouth, and dissembled with hym in theþ tonge. For theþ herte was not whole with hym, neither contynued they steadfast in his couenaunte. * Suche was so merciful that he forgave theþ mynnydes, and destroyed them not. Pea, man a tyme turned he his wrathe awaye, and wolde not suffer his whole dyspleasure to arse. * For he consydered that they were but fleshe, and that they were euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and cometh not agayne. Many a tyme dyd they prouoke hym in the wildernes, and greued hym in the deserte. They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel. They thought not of his hande, and of the day when he deliuered them from the hande of the enemy. Howe he had wought his myracles in Egypt, and his wonders in the felde of zoan. * He touned theþ waters in to bloude, so þ they myght not drynke of the ryuers. * He sent lycce among them, and deuoured the vpon: and frogges to destroye theim. He gaue theþ scutes vnto the caterpyller, and theþ laboure vnto the grethopper. * He destroyed theþ vyners with haille stones, and theþ mulbertyrees with the frost. * He smote theþ cattel also with haille stones, and theþ flockes with poye thondre boltes. He cast vpon them the furpousnesse of his wrache: angre, displeasure, and trouble, & sent euell aungels amonge them. * He made a waye to his indignation, & spared not theim soules from death, but gaue theþ life ouer to the pestilence. * And smote al the fyre borne in Egypt, the most cypal and mightiest in the dwellinges of Ham.

But as for his owne people, he led the forth lyke shepe, and carped them in the wylbernesse lyke a floke. He bzoughte them out safely, that they shoulde not feare: and ouerwhelmed theim enemyes wth the sea. And bzoughte them to the borders of his sanctuary: euen to this mountaine which he purchaseth with his ryght hande. * He cast out the heathen also before theim, and sed theþ lande to be deuoyded among the for an herytage, & made the trybes of Israel to dwell in their tentes. So they tempted and displeased the most hye God, and kept not his testimonies. But touned theþ backes: and fell awaye lyke theþ forefathers, startynge asyde, lyke a broken bowe. For they greued hym with theþ hyll alters, and prouoked hym to dyspleasure with theþ ymages. When God heard that he was wroth, and toke soze displeasure at Israel. So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Bilo, and the tent that he had pitched amonge men. He deliuered theþ power into captivitye, and theþ beaultie into the enemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer also into the sword, and was wroth wth the enherytaunce. The they consumed they: ponge men: and they: may bens were not geuen to maryage. They: presers were slayne wyth the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacyon.

So þ Lord awaked as one out of slepe, & lyke a ghaunte refreshed wyth wyne. * He smote his enemies in the hinder partes, and put them to a perpetuall shame. He refused the Tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not þ tribe of Ephraim. * But chose the trybe of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon whiche he loued. And there he builded his temple on hye, and layed the foundacion of it lyke þ grounde whiche he hath made co-rynnall ye. * He chose Dauid also his seruaunt and toke hym awaye from the shepfoldes. As he was folowynge the ewes grete wyth yongones he toke hym, that he might fede Jacob his people, and Israel his enherytaunce. So he fed them with a faythful and true herte, and ruled them prudently with all his power.

DOMINE REFUGIUM.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

Lord, thou haste bene oure refuge fro one generacion vnto another. Before the mountaynes were broughte forth, or euer the earth and the world were made, thou art God from euerlastyng and worlde wythoute ende. Thou turneste man to destruccyon. Agayne thou sayest: come agayne chyldren of men. * For a thousande yeares in thy syght are but as yester daye, seynge that in the past as a watche in the nyghte. As soone as thou scatrest them, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse. In the mornyng it is grene and groweth vp, but in the euening it is cut downe: & withered. For we consume a waye in thy dyspleasure, and are a frayde at thy wrathfull indygnacion.

Thou hast set our misdeedes before the, & our secreete synnes in the light of thy countenance. For when thou arte angrye, all oure dayes are gone: we bypnyng our yeares to an ende, as it were a tale y^e is tolde. The dayes of oure age are thre score yeares & ten: and though men be so strong that they come to four score yeares: yet is their strength the but labour & sorowe: so soone passeth it a waye, & we are gone. But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, for euen thereafter as a man fareth, so is thy displeasure. * Teach vs to nombze our dayes, that we maye applye our hartes vnto wylidome. Turne the agayne, (O Lord) at the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. Satisfye vs wyth thy mercy and that soone, so that we reioyse and be glad al the dayes of our lyfe. Comforte vs agayne, now after the tyme that thou haste plagued vs, & for the yeares wherin we haue suffered aduersite. Shewe thy seruantes thy worke, and theyr chyldren thy gloze. And the glorious maiesty of the Lord our God be vpon vs: prosper thou the worke of our handes vpon vs: prosper thou our handy worke.

Who so dwelleth under the defence of the moste best that abyde under the shadowe of the almyghtye. I wyll saye vnto the Lorde: thou arte my hope, and stronge holde: my God, in hym wyll I truste. For he shall deliuer the from the snare of the hunter and fro the noysome pestilence. He shall defende the vnder his wynges, and thou shalt be safe vnder his fethers: his saythfulnesse & true the shall be thy helde and buckler. Thou shalt not be afrayd for any terror by night, nor for the arrowe that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darkenesse, nor for the spykenesse that destroyeth in the none day. A thousand shall fall besyde the: and ten thousande at thy ryghthande, but it shall not come nye the. Yea, wyth thine eyes shalt thou behold and se the rewarde of the vngodly. For thou Lorde art my hope, thou hast set thine house of defence very hye. There shall no euell happē vnto the, neyther shall any plage come nye thy dwelling. * For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in al thy wayes. They shall beare the in theyr handes, that thou hurte not thy fote agaynst a stone. Thou shalt go vpon the lyon and adder, the yong lyō and the dragō shalt thou treade vnder thy fete. Because he hath set his loue vpon me, therefore shall I deliuer hym. I shall set hym vp, because he hath knowen my name. * He shall cal vpon me and I wyll heare hym, yea, I am wyth hym in trouble, I wyll deliuer hym, and byng hym to honoure. Wyth long lyfe wyll I satysfye hym, and geue hym my saluacyon.

BONVM EST CONFITERI.

It is a good thyng to geue thanks vnto the Lorde, and to synge prayes vnto thy name, O most best. To tel of thy louyng kyndnesse earlye in the mornyng, and of thy truth in the nyght season vpon an instrument of ten stringes, and vpon the lute: vpon a lorde instrumēt, and vpon the harpe. For thou Lorde hast made me glad thowse thy workes, and I wyll reioyse in geuing praye for thy operations of thy handes. (O Lorde) howe glorious are thy workes: thy thoughtes are very depe. An vnwyse man doeth wel consydre this, and a foole doth not vnderstande it. When the vngodly are grene as the grasle, and when al the workes of wyckednes do floure. Then shall they be destroyed for ener. But thou Lorde art the moste best for euermore. For lo, thyne enemyes, O Lorde, lo thyne enemyes shall perishe, and al the workers of wyckednes shall be destroyed. But my horn shall be exalted, like the horne of an Elycōne, for I am anoynted wyth the oyle. Myne eye also shall see his lust of myne enemyes, & myne eare shall heare his besyde of the wycked that ryle vp agaynst me. The ryghteous shall floure like a palme tree and shall sprede a broad lyke a Cedre in Liba-

mus. Such as be planted in the house of the Lord shall floure in the courtes. * (of the house) of oure God. They shall also byng forth moze frute in theyr age, & shall be fat and well kynged. That they may shew, how true the Lord my strengthe is, and that there is no vnrighteousnes in him.

The waues of the see are myghtie, and rage horribly: but yet the Lorde that dwelleth on hye, is myghtier. Thy testymonyes, O Lorde, are very sure, holynes becommeth thine house for euer.

DEVS VLTIONVM.

Lorde God * to whome vengeance belōgeth: thou God to whome vengeance belongeth: shewe thy selfe. Arise thou iudge of the worlde, and reward the proude after their deseryng. Lorde howe longe shall the vngodly: how long shall the vngodly tryumphe? Howe longe shall al wycked doers speake so dysdaynfully, & make suche proude boastynge? They synne downe thy people, O Lorde, and trouble thine herptage. They murder the wydowe: and the straunger, and put the fatherles to death. And yet they saye: tush * the Lorde shall no se, neyther shall the God of Jacob regarde it. Take heed, ye vnwise among the people. O ye fooles when wyll ye vnderstande: he that planted the eare, shall he not heare? O he that made the eye shall he not se? O he that nurthured the heathen, it is he that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he punysh? * The Lord knoweth though tes of man, that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man, whō thou chastenest (O Lord) and teachest hym in thy lawe. That thou mayst geue hym pacyfe in tyme of aduersyte vntyl the pyt be dygged vp for the vngodlye. For the Lorde wyll not saye bys people, neyther wyll he forsake his enherytaunce. Vntyl ryghteousnes turne agayne vnto iudgemente. Al such as be true of herte shall folowe it. Who wyll ryle wyth me agaynst the wycked? O who wyll take my parte agaynst the euil doers? If the Lorde had not helped me, it had not sayled: but my soule had bene put to seplence. * But when I sayd: my fote hath slippyd, thy mercy (O Lorde) helde me vp. * In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule. Wilt thou haue any thyng to do with the scole of wickednes, which ymagineth myschefe as a lawe?

R* Praise the Lorde O my soule, O Lord my God, thou art become excedyng glozyous, thou arte clothed wyth maiestye and honoure. Whych the lapeth the beames of hys chambers in the waters, and maketh the cloudes hys charete and walketh vpon the wynges of the wynde. * He maketh hys Angels spretes, and hys mynysters a flaminge fyre. He layde the foundacyon of the earth, that it neuer shulde moue at a nyte tyme. Thou couereddest it wyth the depe lyke as wyth a garment: the waters stande in y^e hylls. * At thy rebuke they fflye, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayed. Besyde them shall the foules of the ayre haue habytacyon, and syng among the braunches he watereth the hylls from aboue, the earth is fylled wyth the fruyt of thy workes. and deuoured the frute of their ground. * He smote all the first bozne in their lande, euen the chief of all their strengthe. He broughte theim forth also with siluer and golde, there was not one feble persone among their tribes. Egypte was glad at their departyng: for thei were a fraide of theim. * He spred out a cloude to bee a couerpyng, & fire to geue light in the night scald at their desire, he brought quailles: and he filled theim with the brede of heauen. * He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed out: so that riuers ranne in the drye places. For why he remembred his holy promise, and Abraham his seruaunt. And he brought forth his people with ioye, and gaue theim the landes of & Hea-possession. That they might kepe his statutes, and obserue his lawes.

Praise the Lorde.

Geue: thanks vnto the Lorde for he is gracious: and his mercie endu-rcth for euer. Whocan expresse the noble actes of the Lorde, or shewe forth all his praise: Blessed are thei that alwaie kepe iudgement and dooe righteous Remembre me (O Lorde) accordyng to the fa-uoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: O vi-set me with thy saluacion. That I maie see the felicitie of thy chosen, and reioyse in the gladnes of thy people, and geue thanks with thyne enheritance. We haue synned with our fathers we haue dooen amisse, and dealt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in B Egypt, neither kepe thei thy grate goodnes in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the sea euen at y redde sea. Neuer theles, he helped them for his names sake, that he might make his power to bee knowne. * He rebuked the redde sea also, & it was dried vp: so he led theim thowwe the depe, as thowwe a wildernes. And he saued theim from the aduersaries hāde, and deliuered theim fro the hāde of theemie. * As for those that troubled theim, the waters ouerwhelmed theim, there was not one of theim left. * The be-leued thei his wordes, and sag praise vnto hym

But within a while thei forgat his workes: C & would not abide his counsaill. But lust came vpon theim in the wildernes, and thei tempted God in the desert. And he gaue theim their desire & sent leanes withall into their soule. Thei angred Moses also in the tētes, and Aaron the saincte of the Lorde. * So the earth opened and swallowed vp Dathan, and couered the congregacion of Abiram. And the fire was kindeled in their cōpaignie, the flamie brent vp the vngod-ly. * They made a calfe in Horeb, & worshipped a molten image. * Thus thei turned their glory into a similitude of a calfe, that eateth haye.
And thei forgat God their sauoure, whiche had dooen so grate thynges in Egypt. Wonderous woorkes in the lande of Ham and fearfull thynges by the redde sea.

So he saied: he would haue destroyed theim, had not Moses his chosen stand before hym in that gap: to turne a waie his wrathfull indygnacion, lest he should destroye theim. * Pea, thei thought scoone of the pleasūt lande: and gaue no credence vnto his worde. But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde. * Then lift he vp his hand against theim to ouerthrowe theim in y wildernes. To cast out their seede among the nations, and to scatfre theim in the landes.

* Thei iopned theim selues vnto Baall De: E or and eate the offerynges of the dedde. Thus thei prouoked hym vnto angre with their owne inuencions, and the plage was grate among theim: * Then stode vp Phinehes and pray: ed: and so the plage ceased. And that was counted vnto hym for ryghteousnes, amonge al posterities for euer more. * Thei angred him also at the waters of strife, so that he punished Moses for their sakes. Because thei prouoked his spirite, so that he spake vnauidedly with his lippes. Neither destroyed thei the heathen * as the Lorde commaunded theim. But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their woorkes;

In so muche that thei worshipped their idols whiche turned to their owne decaie. * Pea thei offered their sonnes and their daughters vnto deuels.

Thus were thei stained with their owne workes: and went a whozpyng with their owne inuencions. Therefore was the wrath of the Lorde kindeled against his people: in so muche, that he abhorred his owne inheritaunce.

G And he gaue them ouer into the hande of the Heathē, and thei that hated them were lordes ouer them. Their enemies oppressed them, and had them in subieccion. Many a tyme did he deliuer them, but thei rebelled against hym with their owne inuencions, & were brought downe in their wickednes. G Geue thākes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for euer. Let them geue thanks whom the Lorde hath redeemed and deliuered from the hande of the enemy. And gathered them out of the landes, from the east, and from the west, from the north and from the southe. Thei went astray in the wilderness out of the waie, and founde no citee to dwell in. Hungry and thursty: their soule fainted in them. So thei cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, & he deliuered them from their distress. B He led them forth by the right waie, that thei might goo to the citee, where thei dwelt. O that menne would therefore praise the Lorde, for his goodnes: & declare the wonders that he dooeth for the children of menne. * For he satisfied the empty soule, and filled the hungry soule with goodnes. Suche as sit in darkenes & in the shadowe of death, being fast bound in misery and iron. Because thei rebelled against the wordes of the Lorde, and lightly regarded the counsaile of the moste highest. He also brought downe their heart thowow heuenes: thei fell downe, and there was none to help them. So when thei cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, he deliuered them out of their distress. For he brought them out of darkenes, and out of the shadowe of death, and brake their bondes in sondre.

Exod. xvi. a.
Deut. xlii. a.

O that menne would therefore praise the Lorde for his goodnes: and declare the wonders that he dooth for the children of menne. For he hath broken the gates of brass, & smitten the barres of iron in sondre. For the menne are plagued for their offence, and because of their wickednes.

Their soule abhorred all maner of meate: and thei were euen harde at deathes doze. So whē thei cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, he deliuered them out of their distress. * He sent his word, & healed them, & thei were saued fro their destruction. O that menne would therefore praise the Lorde for his goodnes: and declare the wonders that he dooeth for the children of menne.

* That thei would offer vnto hym a sacrifice of thankesgeuyng: & tell out his workes with gladnes. Thei shall go downe to the sea in shippes, & occupy their busines in greate waters: These men se the workes of the Lorde, & his wonders in the depe. * For at his worde the stormy winde ariseth, whiche lifteth up the waves thereof. Thei are caried vp to the heauen, & downe againe to the depe, their soule melteth away because of the trouble. Thei rele to & fro, & stagger like a drunken manne: & are at their wittes ende. So whē thei crie vnto the Lorde in their trouble, he deliuereth them out of their distress. For he maketh the storme to cease, so that the waves thereof are still. Then are thei glad, because thei be at rest: and so he byngeth them vnto the land where thei would bee. O that men would therefore praise the Lorde for his goodnes: & declare the wonders that he dooeth for the children of men.

That thei would exalte hym also in the congregation of the people: & loue hym in the seat of elders. * Which turneth the floudes into a wilderness: and drieth vp the water springes. A fruitful lande maketh he barren: for the wickednes of them that dwell therein. Again, he maketh the wilderness a standing water: and water springes of a drie ground. And there he setteth the hungry, that he maie bulde them a citee to dwell in. That thei maie sowe their lande, and plant vineyardes, to yelde them frutes of encrease. He blessed them, so that thei multiply exceedingly: and suffereth not their cattell to decrease. And again, when thei are minished & brought lowe thowow oppression, thowow any plague or trouble: Though he suffer them to be awhile entreated thowow tirauntes and let them wandre out of the waie in the wilderness: Yet helpeth he the poore out of misery, and maketh him householdes like a flocke of shepe. The righteous will confesse this, & reioyse: & the mouth of al wickednes shall be stopped. Whoso is wise will ponder these thynges: and thei shall vnderstande the louyng kyndenes of the Lorde.

haue spoke against me with false tonges. Thei compassed me aboute also with wordes of hatred, and fought against me with out a cause. For the loue that I had vnto them lo, thei take now my contrary parte: but I geue me euill for good: and hatred for my good will * Set thou an vngodly mane to bee ruler ouer

When sentence is geuen vpon hym, let hym be condempned: and let his praiser bee turned into take his office. Let his children bee fatherles, & boundes, and begge their byerde: let theim seke it also out of desolate places.

Let the extortioner consume all that he hath and let the straungers spyle his labour. Let there bee no manne to pitie hym, nor to haue co passion vpon his fatherles children. Let his po sterite bee destroyed, and in the next generacion let his name bee cleane put out. Let the wicked vp for want of fatnes. I became also a rebuke vnto theim: * thei that looked vpon me, shaked their heedes. Helpe me (O Lorde my God) O saue me accordyng to thy mercy.

And thei shall knowe howe y this is thy hand and that thou Lorde hast dooen it. Though thei a straunger vpon earthe, O hide not thy commaundementes from me. My soule breaketh out for the very feruente desire that it hath a waie vnto thy iudgementes. Thou hast rebuked the proude, and cursed are thei that dooe erre from thy commaundementes.

O turne fro me shame & rebuke: for I haue kept thy testimonies. Princes also did sit and speake against me, but thy seruaunt is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my de-lite and my counsaillers. * My soule cleueth to the dust: O quicken thou me accordyng to thy worde. I haue knowlaged my waies and thou herdest me: O teache me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waie of thy commaundemētes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous wokes. My soule melteth a waie for very heuenes confort thou me accordyng vnto thy worde.

Take fro me y waie of lyng, and cause thou me to make muche of thy lawe. I haue chosen the waie of truthe: and thy iudgementes haue I lated before me. I haue stikken vnto thy testimonies, O Lord confounde me not. I will rūne the waie of thy commaundementes, when thou hast sette my hearte at liberty. Teache me, O CC liii. Lorde

Psalme. cxix.

Lord, I wase of thy statutes: and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Geue me vnderstandyng, and I shall kepe it with my whole heart. Make me to goo in the pathe of thy commaundementes: for therin is my desire. Encline my heart vnto thy testimonies, and not to coneteousnes. Turne a waie myne enemies, lest thei behold vanitie: and quicken thou me in thy wase.

I stablish the thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I maie feare the. Take a waie the rebuke that I am afraid of, for thy iudgements are good. Beholde, my delite is in thy commaundementes. Quicken me in thy righteousnes. Let thy louyng mercy come also vnto me, O Lord: euē thy saluacion accordyng vnto thy worde. So shall I make aunswere vnto my blasphemers: for my truste is in thy worde. Take not the worde of truthe vterly out of my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgements. So shall I alwaie kepe thy lawe: yea, for euer and euer. And I will walke at libertie, for I seke thy commaundementes. I will speake of thy testimonies also, euen befoze kynges, and will not bee ashamed. And my delite shall be in thy commaundementes whiche I haue loued.

My handes also will I lift vp vnto thy commaundementes whiche I haue loued: and my study shall be in thy statutes. O thynke vpon thy seruaunt, as concernyng thy worde, wher in thou haste caused me to put my trust. The same is my coforte in my trouble, for thy word hath quickened me. The proude haue had me exceedingly in derision: yet haue I not shynked from thy lawe. For I remembred thyne euerlasting iudgements, O Lord: and receiued coforte. I am horribly afraid for I vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue been my songes, in the house of my pilgrimage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lord, in the night season: and haue kepte thy lawe.

This I had, because I kept thy commaundementes: * Thou art my porcion, O Lord: I haue promised to kepe thy lawe. I made myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole heart, O be mercifull vnto me accordyng vnto thy worde. I call myne owne daies to remembrance, and turne my fete vnto thy testimonies. I made haste, and prolonged not to kepe thy commaundementes. The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotte thy lawe. At midnight will I rise, to geue thanks vnto the: because of thy righteous iudgements. I am a compaignon of all theim, that fear the: & kepe thy commaundementes. * The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy: O teache me thy statutes. O Lord, thou hast deale graciously with thy seruaunt accordyng vnto thy word. O learne me true vnderstandyng, & knowlage, for I haue beleued thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled I went wrong: but now haue I kepte thy worde. * Thou art good and gracious: O teache me thy statutes. The proude haue pynnynged a lie againste me, but I will kepe thy commaundementes with my whole heart. Their hearte is as far as braune, but my delite hath been in thy lawe. It is good for me that I haue been in trouble, that I maie learne thy statutes. The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me the thousandes of golde and siluer. * Thy handes haue made me and fashioned me: O geue me vnderstandyng, that I maie learne thy commaundementes. Thei that fear the will bee glad whē thei se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde.

I know, O Lord, that thy iudgements are righte, and that thou of very faithfulness hast caused me to bee troubled. O let thy mercifullkindnes be my cofort, accordyng to thy word vnto thy seruaunt. O let thy louyng mercies come vnto me, that I maie liue: for thy lawe is my delite. Let the proude bee cofounded, for thei go wickedly about to destroy me: but I will be occupied in thy commaundementes. Let such as feare the, & haue knowe thy testimonies be turned vnto me. O let myne heart bee sounde in thy statutes, & I bee not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacion: & I haue a good hope because of thy worde. Myne eyes long sooe for thy worde, sayng: O when wilt thou comforte me? For I am become like a bottle in the smoke: yet dooe I not forget thy statutes.

How many are the daies of thy seruaunt when wilt thou bee auenged of theim & persecute me? The proude haue digged pitres for me, whiche are not after thy lawe. Altho thy commaundementes are true, thei persecute me falsly: O be thou my help. Thei had almost made an ende of me vpon earth: But I forsoke not thy commaundementes. O quicken me after thy louyng kindness, and so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth. O Lord, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truthe also remaineth from one generation to another: thou haste laied the foundation of the earth: and it abideth. Thei continue this daie, accordyng to thyne ordinaunces: for all thinges serue the. If my delite had been in thy lawe, I should haue perished in my trouble. I will neuer forget thy commaundementes, for with theim thou haste quickened me. I am thyne, O haue me: for I haue sought thy commaundementes. The vngodly laied waite for me to destroye me: but I will confide thy testimonies. I se that all thynges come to an ende: but thy commaundementes are exceeding brode.

O Lord, what loue haue I vnto thy lawe! all the daie long is my study in it. Thou, O Lord, thy commaundementes hast made me wiser the myne enemies, for thei are euer w me. I haue moze vnderstandyng then my teachers: for thy testimonies are my studie. I am wiser then the aged: because I kept thy commaundementes. I haue refrained my fete from euery euill waie: that I maie kepe thy worde.

I haue not shynked from thy iudgements O for I teachest me. O how swete are thy wordes vnto my throte: yea, sweter the hony vnto my mouth. Thow thy commaundementes I get vnderstandyng, therfore I hate al wicked waies. * Thy word is a lāerne vnto my fete, & a light vnto unto my pathes. I haue sworn, and am stedfastly purposed to kepe thy ryghteous iudgements. I am troubled aboue measure: quicken me O Lord accordyng vnto thy worde. Let the free wyll offsprynges of my mouth please the Lord, and teache me thy iudgements.

* My soule is alwaye in my hand, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodly haue layde a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testimonies haue I clapped as my herptage for euer: and why? they are the very iope of myne hert. I haue appyled myne herte to fulfyll thy statutes alwaye euen vnto the ende. I hate them that ymagine euell thynges, but thy lawe doo I loue. Thou art my defence and thy lde, & my truste is in thy worde. Awaie from me ye wycked, I wyll kepe the commaundementes of my God. O stablish my accordyng vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disapoynted of my hope holde thou me vp, and I shal be safe: yea, my delpte shal euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagyne but disceyte.

Thou puttest a waye all the vngodly of the earth lyke dross: therfore I loue thy testimonies. My soule trembleth for feare of the: and I am afrayed of thy iudgements. I deale with the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: O gene me not ouer vnto myne opprellours. Make y thy seruaunte to delpte in that whiche is good: that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are wasted awaye with loking for thy healt he and for the worde of thy ryghteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruaunte accordyng vnto thy louyng mercy: and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunt, O graunt me vnderstandyng, that I maye knowe thy testimonies.

It is tyme for the Lord to lape to thyne hande for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundementes aboue gold and precious stone. Therfore hold I streight all thy commaundementes and al falle waies I vterly abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull: therfore doth my soule kepe them. When thy word goeth forth, it geueth lyghte and vnderstanding, euen vnto y symple. I opened my mouth and due in my breath, for my delite was in thy commaundementes. O lode thou vpon me, and be merciful vnto me as thou vbest to doo vnto those that loue thy name. O dre my steppes in thy worde: and shal no wyckednes haue dominyon ouer me. O deliuer me from y wronge full dealynges of men, and so shal I kepe thy commaundementes. Shewe the light of thy countenance vpon thy seruaunt, and teache me thy statutes. Myne eyes gulse oute with water, because minne kepe not thy lawe. Ryghteous art thou, O Lord: and true is thy iudgement.

The testimonies that thou haste commaunded, are exceedyng ryghteous and true. * My zeale hath eu consumed me, because myne enemies haue forgotten thy wordes. Thy word is tryed to the vttermooste: and thy seruaunte loneth it. I am smal, and of no reputacyon, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. Thy ryghteousnesse is an euerlastyng ryghteousnesse: and thy lawe is the truethe. Trouble and heupnesse haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my delpte in thy commaundementes. The ryghteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastyng. O graunt me vnderstandyng, and I shal lyue. I call with my whole hert, heare me, O Lord, I wyll kepe thy statutes. Yea, euen vpon the do I cal, helpe me: and I shal kepe thy testimonies. Carely in the moynyng do I crye vnto the: for in thy worde is my truste. Myne eyes preuent the nyght watches, that I myghte be occupped in thy wordes. Heare my voyce, O Lord, accordyng vnto thy louyng kyndnesse quicken me accordyng as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me: and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lord: for all thy commaundementes are true.

As concernyng thy testimonies, I haue knowen longe tyme, y thou haste grounded the for euer. O conspyde myne aduersyte, and delpter me: for I do not forget thy lawe. Avenge thou my cause, and delpter me: quychen me accordyng vnto thy worde. Healt he is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Create is thy mercy, O Lord: quychen me as thou art wont. Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me: yet doo I not swarue from thy testimonies. It greueth me, when I se the trangressours: because they kepe not thy lawe. Conspyde, O Lord, how I loue thy commaundementes. O quychen me accordyng to thy louyng kyndnesse. Thy worde is true fro euerlastyng: all the iudgements of thy ryghteousnesse endure for euer more.

Prynces haue persecuted me without cause: but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

* I am as glad of thy worde, as one that sheweth greate woopes. As for lyres, I hate and abhorre them: but thy lawe doo I loue. Seuen tymes a daye, doo I prayse the, because of thy ryghteous iudgements. Create is the peace y they haue whiche loue thy lawe, & they are not offended at it. Lord I haue looked for thy sayyng health and done after thy commaundementes. My soule hath kepte thy testimonies, and loued them exceedyngly. I haue kepte thy commaundementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are befoze the. Let my complaynt come befoze the, O Lord, gene me vnderstandyng, accordyng vnto thy worde. O let my supplicacyon come befoze the, delpter me accordyng to thy worde: My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, when thou hast taught me thy statutes. Yea, my tong shal syng of thy word: for al thy commaundementes are ryghteous.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes. I haue longed for thy sayyng health, O Lord, and in thy law is my delpte. O let my soule lyue, and it shal prayse the, and thy iudgements shal helpe me.

I haue gone astraye lyke a shepe that is lost O seke thy seruaunte, for I doo not forget thy commaundementes.

Yea, they shall syng in the wayes of the Lord, that great is the glorye of the Lord. * For though the Lord be hye, yet hath he respecte vnto the lowlye: as for the proude, he beholdeth hym a farre of. Though I walke in the myddest of trouble, yet shalt thou refresh me: thou shalt stretch forth thine hand vpon the furpousnes of myne enemies, and thy ryghte hande shall saue me. DOMINE PROBASTI.

I Lord, thou hast searched me out, & knowen me. Thou knowest my downe sytting and myne vprisyng & understandest my thoughtes long before. Thou arte aboute my path, and aboute my bedde: and spyest out all my wayes. For lo there is not a worde in my tonge, but thou O Lord knowest it all together. Thou hast falschponed me behynde and before, and layd thine hande vpon me. Suche knowlage is to wonderfull and excellent for me: I can not attayne vnto it. * Whither shall I goe then from thy spete or whither shall I go then fro thy presene? If I clyme vp into Heauen, thou arte there: If I go downe to hell, thou arte there also. If I take the wynges of the moynyng, and remayne in the vttermost partes of y sea. Euen thether also shall thy hande leade me: and thy ryghte hande shall holde me. If I say: parauenture the darknesse shall couer me, then shall my nyght be turned to daye. Yea, the darknes is no darknesse with the: but the nyght is as clare as the daye: the darknes and lyght (to the) are both a lyke. For my reynes are thynne, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe. I wyll geue thanks vnto the for I am fearfully & wonderously made: maruelous ar thy workes, & that my soule knoweth ryght well. My bones are not hys from the, though I be made secretly & falschponed beneth in the earthe. Thynne eyes byd se my substance, yet beyng vnperfect and in thy boke were all my membes wyrtten. Whiche daye by day were falschponed, when as yet there was none of them. Howe dere are thy counceils vnto me, O God? Howe greate is the summe of them? If I tel them, they are more in nombre then the sande: when I wake vp, I am presente with the. Wylt thou not slaye the wicked, O God? departe fro me ye bloudthyrstye men. For they speake vnrightheouslye agaynst the, and thine enemies take thy name in vayne. Do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate the? & am not I greued with those y ryle vp agaynst the? Yea, I hate them ryght sore, euene as though they were myne enemyes.

* Crye me, O God, and seke the grounde of myne hert: proue me, & examen my thoughtes. Loke well yf there be any waye of wyckednesse in me, & leade me in the waye euerslasting.

ERUPE ME.

Delyuer me, O Lord, from the cruel man, and preserve me from the wicked manne. Whiche ymagine myscheif in their hertes: & styre vp strife all the daye longe. They haue shapened their tonges lyke a serpent: * Adders yson is vnder theyr lippes. Sela. Hepe me, O Lord, from the handes of y vngodly: preserve me from the wycked men, whiche are purposed to ouerthrowe my goynges. The proude haue layde a snare for me: and spied a net abroad w coardes: yea, and set trappes in my way. Sela.

I sayde vnto the Lord: thou arte my God, & heare the voyce of my prayers, O Lord. O Lord God, thou strenght of my health, thou hast couered my head in the day of battayle. Let not the vngodly haue hys desyre, O Lord, let not his mischeuous ymaginacio prosper: least they be to proude. Sela. * Let the mischeif of theyr owne lippes fall vpon the head of them y compass me about. Let hote burnyng cooles fall vpon them: let them be cast into the fyre and into the pyt: that they neuer ryle vp agayne. A man full of wordes shall not prosper vpon the earth: euell shall hunte the wycked person, to ouerthrowe hym. Sure I am, that the Lord wyll auenge the pooze: and maynteyne the cause of the helplees. The righteous also shall geue thanks vnto thy name, and the iust shall continue in thy syght.

Lord, I call vpon the: hast thou vnto me, and consydre my voyce, when I crye vnto the. Let my prayer be set forth in thy sight, * as the incense, & let the lifyng vp of my handes bee an eneuynng sacrifice. * Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth and kepe the dooze of my lippes. O let not myne herte be inclined to any euell thyng, let me not bee occupied in vngodly workes, with y men y worke wyckednes, least I eate of such thynges as please them. Let the righteous rather smyte me frendlye & reprove me. But let not theyr precious balmes, breake myne head: yea, I wyll praye yet agaynst theyr wyckednes. Let theyr iudges be ouerthrowen in stony places, that they maye heare my wordes: for they are swete. Sure bones lye scattered before the pyt, lyke as when one breaketh & he weth wood vpon the earthe. But myne eyes loke vnto the, O Lord God: in thy is my trust. Oh caste not oute my soule. Hepe me from the snare whiche they haue layde for me, and from the trappes of the wycked doozes. Let the vngodlye fall into theyr owne nettes together: and

The Proverbes of Salomon.

The fyrst Chapter.

The praple of wysdome. We may not harken vnto the botupious prouocation and instygges of synners. Wysdome complayneth her to be despyed of all men, and prophesyeth destruccyon vnto her despyers.

The Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of David kynge of Israel: to learne wysdome, & to perceauie the instructiō and to perceauie the wordes of vnderstandyng: & thereby to receaue proudence, ryghteousnes iudgemēt and equitye. That the very symple myght haue ledge and true vnderstandyng. By hearyng, the wyle man shal come by more wysdome, and he that is endued wryth vnderstandyng, shal obtaine wytte to perceauie a parable, and þe interpretacion therof, the wordes of the wyle, and the darke speches of the same. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome. But folles despyse wyl dome and instructiō. My sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne: and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal bypnyge grace vnto thy heade, and shal be as a chayne aboute thy necke. My sonne, consent not vnto synners yf they entyle the, and saye: come wyth vs, we wyl lape wayte for bloude, and lurke preuileye for the innocēt without a cause: we shal swa-lowe them vp lyke the hell, and deuoure them and fill our houses wryth spoyles. Cast in thy lot are the wayes of all such as be couetous, they without, & putterth forth her voyce in þe stretes.

She calleth befoze the congregacion in the ope gates, and she wryth her wordes thowowe the cy-tie, sayenge: O ye chyldren, howe longe wyl ye loue chyldyshnes: howe longe wyl the skowern delyte in skowynge, and the vnwyle be enuie-es vnto knowledge: O turne you vnto my correccyon: lo I wyl expresse my mynde vnto you, & make you vnderstande my wordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande: and no man regarded it: but all my counsels haue ye despyled: and set my correccyon at naught. Therfore shal I also laugh in your de-struccyon, & moche you, when that thyng that ye feare to meth vpon you: euen when the thyng ye be afrayd of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, and youre myserye lyke a tempeste: yea, when trouble and heuynes cometh vpon you.

Then shal they call vpon me, but I wyl not heare: they shal seke me early, but they shal not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledge: and receaued not the feare of the Lorde: but abhozred my counsell, and despyled all my correccyon. Therfore shal they eat the frutes of theyr owne waye, & be fylled wryth theyr owne inuencionys, for the turnyng a waye of the vnwyle shal slepe them, & the prosperyte of foolis thes of the righteous. For the iust shal dwell in the lande, and thei that bee perfect shal remain in it: but the vngodly shal be roted out of þ land and the wicked dooers shal be roted out of it.

The. iii. Chapter.

The commaundementes of God muste bee diligently regarded and obserued.

In soone, & forget not thou my lawe but se þ thine hert kepe my comma-ndementes. For thei shal prolong the daies and yeares of thy life and brynge þ peace. Let mercy & faithfulness neuer go fro the: bynde theim aboute thy necke & write them in the tables of thine heart.
So shalt thou finde fauour & good vnderstanding in the sight of God & menne. Put thy trust in God with all thyne herte: & leane not vnto thyne owne wit. In all thy waies haue respect vnto hym: & he shal order thy goynges. * Bee not wise in thyne owne conceyte: but feare the Lord, & departe fro euill: so shal thy nauell be whole, & thy bones strong. * Honour the Lorde thy substance: & with the firstynges of all thyne increase, (Geue vnto the poore,) so shal thy barnes bee filled with plerousnes: and thy presses shall flowe ouer wth swete wine. My soonne despise not þ chastenynge of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom þ Lorde loueth, hym he chasteneth, & pet deliteth in hym, euen as a father in his owne soone. Wel is hym that fyndeth wisdom, and obtaieth vnderstandynge: for þ gettynge of it is better the any marchaundise of siluer, & the profite of it is better then golde. * Wisdom is more worthe the precious stones: & all the thynges that thou canst desire are not to bee compared vnto her.
Vpon her right hand is long life, and vpon her left hande is riches and honoure. Her waies are pleasaunt waies, and al her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of life to theim that laie hold vpon her, and blessed is he that kepeth her faste.
With wisdom hath the Lorde laied the foundacion of the earth: and thow vnderstanding hath he stablished the heauens. Thow his wisedom the deapthes bzeake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe þ dewe. My soonne, let not these thynges departe from thyne eyes: but kepe my lawe and my counsaill, that thou maist haue þ pleasure of long life and vnderstandynge: for thei shal bre life vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouthe. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waie: and thy fote shal not stumbe. * If thou sleepst, þ shalt not bee afraied: but shalt take thy reste, and slepe swetely. Thou nedest not to bee afraid of any sodein feare, neither for the violente rushynge in of the vngodly, when it commeth. For the Lorde shal stande by thy syde, & kepe thy fote, þ thou bet not taken. Withdrawe no good thyng from theim þ haue nede, so long as thyne hand is able to dooe it. Saie not vnto thy neighbour: go thy waie, and come again, to morrowe will I geue þ: where as thou hast now to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neighbour, seynge he dooeth dwell in rest by þ. Strive not lightly with any manne without a cause, where as he hath dooen the no harme. * Folow Prover. 1. 2.

not a wicked manne, & chole none of his waies: for the Lorde abhorreth the frowarde: but his counsaill is among the righteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellinges of the righteous. As for þ icornefull dooth not he laugh theim to scoorne: but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shal haue honoure in possession: but shame is the promocioun that fooles shal haue.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Wisdom and her frutes ought to bee searched.

Care, O ye children, the fatherly exhortacion, and take good hede, that ye maie learne wisdom. For I haue geuen you a good doctryne forsake not ye my lawe. For when I my self was my fathers dere soonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and laied vnto me. * Let thine heart receiue my wordes, kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalt liue. Get the wisdom: and get the vnderstandynge: forget not the wordes of my mouth, and shrinke not from theim. Forsake her not & she shal prelerue the: loue her & she shal kepe þ.

The chiefe pointe of wisdom is, that thou be willing to obtene wisdom: and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstandynge. * Make much of her and she shal promote the: Yea, if thou embrace her, she shal brynge the vnto ho-noure. She shal make the a gracious hede, and garnishe the with a crowne of glozy. Heare my soone, and receiue my wordes: and the peres of thy life shal be many. I haue shewed the, þ waie of wisdom, and led the into the right pathes.
So that if thou goeste there in, there shal no straitnes bynder the, and when thou runnest thou shalt not fall.

Take faste holde of doctryne, and let her not goo: kepe her, for she is thy life. * Come not in þ pathe of the vngodly, and walke not in þ waie of the wicked. Abhorre it, and go not therein: departe aside, and passe ouer by it. For thei cannot slepe, except thei haue first dooen some mischief: neither take thei any rest, except thei haue first dooen some harme. For thei cate the brede of wickednes, and drynke the wyne of robbery.
The path of the righteous shyneth as the light that is euer brighter and brighter vnto the per-fecte daie. But the waie of the vngodly is as þ darkenes, thei knowe not where thei fall.

* My soonne, marke my wordes, and encline thyne eare vnto my saynges. Let theim not departe from thyne eyes but kepe theim euen in þe myddeste of thyne hearte. For thei are life vnto all those that finde theim, and healtre vnto all their bodie. Kepe thyne heart with all diligēce for therupon hangeth life. Put a wale from the a frowarde mouth, and let the lippes of selau- dze bee farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde þe thyng that is right, and let thyne eiellides loke streight befoze. Wdye the pathe of thy fete, and let all thy waies bee ordred a right. Turne not aside, neither to the right hande, nor to the left:

but withholde thy fote from euill. (For the Lord knoweth the waies that are on the right hande. As for the waies that be on the left hande, thei bee frowarde. For he shall directe thy goyn- ges, and thy waies he shall guyde in peace.)

The. v. Chapter.

The warneth to eschue and fle whoredome: the forbiddeth prodigalite and wastfull spendyng. He willeth vs to liue of our owne laboures, wherby we may loue thei wiuues.

A soonne, geue hie vnto my wise- dome, and bow thyne eare vnto my pzudence: that thou maiest regarde good counsaill, and that thy lippes maie speake knowlage. (Apply not thou thy self to the discretelynes of a woman.) For the lippes of an harlot are a droppynge bonny combe, & her throte is more glistering then oyle. But at the laste she is as bitter as wormewood, & as her tongue as sharpe as a twoo edged swerde. Her fete go dowe vnto death, and her steeppes pearle thro- row vnto hell. Perchance, thou dwellyng with her, wilt pondre the pathe of lyfe so vnstedfaste are her waies that thou canst not know theim. Heare me now therfoze (O my soonne) and de- parte not from the wordes of my mouth.

Kepe thy waie farre from her, and come not nigh the doores of her house. That thou geue not thy strength vnto other, and thy eares to the cruell. That other mēne bee not filled with thy goodes, and that thy laboures come not in a straunge house. Yea, that thou mourne not at þe last (when þe hast spēt thy body and lusty grene youth) & then saie: Alas, why hated I nourtour? why did my heart despise correccio? Wherfoze was not I obediēte vnto the voyce of my tea- chers, and hearkened not vnto them that enfour med me? I am come almost into all misfortune in the myddest of the multitude & congregacion Drinke of the water, of thyne owne well, of the riuers that runne out of thyne owne spryn- ges. Let thy welles flowe out abrod, that there maie bee riuers of waters in the stretes, but let theim bee onely thyne owne, and not straungers with the. Let thy well bee blessed, and bee glad with the wife of thy youth. Louyng is þe hynde, and frendely is the roo: let her brestes alwale satisfie the, and holde the euer contente with her loue. My soonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace þe bosome of another woman? For every mannes waies are opē in the sight of þe Lord, and he pondereth all thei goyn- ges. The wickednes of the vngodly shall catche hymself, and with þe shares of his owne synne shall he bee trapped. He shall die without amendemente, and for his greate foolishnes he shall goo astrate.

The. vi. Chapter.

The slouthfull and sluggishe is pricked and stee- to worke. The scismatike is reprobous. A country ought to bee earnestly anoyded.

Nesone * if thou bee surety for thy neighbour, and hast fastened thine hand for another manne, thou art bounde with thyne owne wordes and take with thyne owne speche. Therfoze my soonne dooe this, and thou shalt bee discharged: When þe art come into thy neigh- boures daunger, go thy waies then sone, hum- ble thy self, & wth thy frendes intreat thy creditore let not thyne eyes slepe, nor thyne eiellides slombze. Saue thy self as a dowe fro the hande of the hunter, and as birde from the hand of the fowler. Goo to the emmet (thou slouggard) con- sider her waies, & learne to bee wise. She hath no guyde, nor ouerleat, nor ruler: yet in the som- mer she pzouderth her meate, and gathereth her fode together in the heruest. * How long wilt thou slepe thou slouggishman? When wilt thou arise out of thy slepe. Yea slepe on still a litle, & bze a litle, folde thyne hādes together yet a litle that thou maiest slepe: so shall pouerty come vnto the as one that trauailethe by the waie and necessite like a weaponed manne. (But if thou be not slouthfull, thy harueste shall come as a springing well, and pou- erte shall fle farre from the.)

And vngodly per sone, a wicked māne goeth with a frowarde mouthe, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fingers, he is euer imagenyng mischief and frowardnesse in his heart, and causeth discorde. Therfoze shall his destruccio come hastily vpon hym, sodeynlye shall he bee all to broken, & not bee healed. * These fixe thynges dooeth the Lord hate, & the seuenth he vterly abhorreth: A proude loke, a liyng tong, handes that shed innocent bloodde, an heart that goeth aboute with wicked immaginacions, * fete þe bersteth in runnyng to dooe mischiese, a false witnesse þe bryngeth vplies, and suche as soweth discorde among brethren.

My soonne, kepe thy fathers cōmaundement & forlake not þe lawe of thy mother. Put theim vp together in thyne heart, & binde them about thy necke. That thei maie lede the when þe goest preserue the when þe art a slepe, & that when thou awakest, þe maiest talke of theim. * For þe com- maundement is a lanterne, and þe lawe a light: yea chastenyng & nourtoure is the waie of life, þe thei maie kepe the from the euill woman, and from the flatterynge tongue of the harlot, that thou lust not after her bewty in thyne hearte, & lest þe be taken with her faire lokes. An harlot will make a man to begge his bzede, & a woman will hunte for þe pzecious life. Maie a man take fire in his bosome, & his clorbes not bee burnt?

Or can one go vpon hote cooles, and his fete not bee hurt? Euen so, whosoever gooeth into his neighbours wife & toucheth her, can not be vngyltie. * Whenne dooe vterly dispise a thet that that stealeth, to satisfie his soule when he is hū grie: but if he maie begotten, he restozeth again seuen tymes as muche, oz els he maketh recompence to all the good of his house. But whoso cō mitteth aduouty with a woman, he is a foole, and byngeth his life to destruccion. He getteth himself also shame and dishonour, suche as shal never bee put out. For the gelously and wraethe of the manne will not bee intreated: no, though thou wouldest offre hym greate giftes to make amendes, he will not receiue them.

The vii. Chapter.

God ought to be feared and honoured. His commaund-ementes ought to be kept: wanton appetites and desires ought to be shunned.

In soone kepe my wordes: and late up my commaundementes by the.
Kepe my commaundementes & my lawe, even as the apple of thyn eie & thou shalt liue. Bynde them vp on thy fyngers, and wryte them in the table of thyn harte. Saie vnto wisdom thou art my sister: and call vnderstandyng thy kinswoman that thei maie kepe the from the harlot which getteth swete wordes.

For out of the windowe of my house I looked thorow the lattes, and behelde the symple people: and among other simple folkes: I spied one younge foole, goynge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waie towarde the harlottes house in the twyllighte of the euenyng, when it began now to bee night and darke. And beholde, there met hym a womā with open tokens of an harlot, onely her heart was hidde. She was full of loude wordes, and redye to dallase: whose fete could not abide in þ house, now is she without, now in the stretes, and laiethe a bayte in euery corner. She caught the young man, kissed hym & was not ashamed sayng: I had a vow of peace offerings to paie, & this daie I perfourme it.

Therefoze came I forth to mete the, that I might seke thy face, and so haue I founde the. I haue deckte my bed with couerpynges & clothes of Egypt. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrr Aloes, & Cinamō. Come let vs lie together, and take our pleasure till it bee daie light: & we wil enioye the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of moneie with hym: and will returne at the apointed solempne feaste. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym, & with her flatterpyng lippes she entiled hym so-deily to foloe her: as it were an oxe led to the slaughter, and like as it wer a foole þ laugheth when he goeth to the stocks to bee punished so long till she had wounded his liuer with her darte like as if a birde fasted to the snare, not knowyng that the perill of his life lieth there vpon.

Hear me now therfoze, O my children, and marke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine heart wandze in her wales, and bee not thou de-ceiued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, and cast doone: yea, many a strong mañe hath been slain by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waie vnto hell: and bynng mene doone into the chambers of death.

The viii. Chapter.

The praise of the wisdom of God.

Do not wisdome crie: dooeth not vnderstandyng put forth the her voice: Standethe she not in þ high places in the stretes & waies: dooth she not crie before the whole citee & in the gates where menne goo out and in? It is you, O ye menne (saith she) whom I call. Unto (the children of men) dooe I lift vp my voice Take hede vnto knowlage O ye ignozant: be ye wyse in heart O ye fooles. Geue eare, for I will speake of greate matters, and open my lippes to tell thynges þ bee righte. For my throte shal be talkyng of þ truethe, & my lippes abhorre vngodlynes. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous there is no frowardenes noz falsed therin.

Thei are all plain to suche as will vnderstand and right to theim þ finde knowlage. Receiue my doctryne, and not siluer: and my knowlage more then fyne golde. * For wisdom is more worth then pzeious stones: yea, all thynges þ thou canst desire, maie not bee compared vnto it. I wisdom haue my dwellyng with know-lage, and prudent counsaill is myne owne. The feare of the Lorde abhorreth wickednes, pride, disdain, and the euill waie: and a mouth that speaketh wicked thynges, I vtterly abhorre. I can geue counsaill, & I conferre thynges: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strenght. * Thozow me, kynges raigne: thozow me, counsaillers make iust lawes. Thozow me, dooe princes bare rule and all iudges of the earthe execute iudgement

I am louyng vnto those that loue me: & thei that seke me early shal finde me. Richesse and honoure are with me: yea, excellent goodes and righteousnes. My frute is better then gold and pzeious stone, and myne encrease more worth then fyne siluer. I will guyde the in the waie of righteousnes, and in the strete of iudgemente.
That I may sende prosperite to those that loue me, and to encrease their treasure.

The Lord hym selfe had me in possession in the beginning of his waies, oz euer he beganne his woorkes afore tyme. * I haue bene ordyned from euerlastyng, and from the beginning oz euer the erth was made. When I was bozne there were nether dephtes noz sprynges of water. Before the foundations of the mountaines were layed: yea, before all bylles was I bozne.
The erth and all that is vpon the erth was not yet made, no, not the ground it selfe. * For whe he made the heauens, I was pzeasente, when he set vp the dephtes in ordze, when he hanged the cloudes aboue, when he fastened the springes of the depe.

When he shut the sea within certayne boundes, that the waters would not goo ouer their markes that he commaunded.

When he laied the foundations of the earth I was with him, ordyng all thynges: deli-ueryng, and reioysyng alway before hym.

As for the round compasse of this world I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be amonge the children of menne. Therefore barke vnto me O ye children, blessed are they that kepe my waies.

O geue eare vnto nourtour, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the manne that heareth me: wat-chyng daily at my gates, & geuing attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For whoso findeth me, findeth life: and shall obtain fauoure of the Lorde. But whoso offendeth against me, hurteth his owne soule. And they that hate me are the louers of death.

The ix. Chapter.

Wisdom moueth all menne to embrace her. The proprie of an whore.

Wisdom hath buyded her self an house, and heuen out seuen pillars she hath killed her vitayles, poured out her wyne, and prepared her table. She hath sente forth her mat-dens to crie vpon the highest place of the citee.

Whoso is ignorant, let hym come hether. And to the vnwise she saith: O come on your waie, eate my brede, and drynke my wyne whiche I haue poured out for you. For sake ignorance, and ye shall liue: and se that ye goo in the waie of vnderstandyng.

Whoso reproveth a scozefull persone, getteth hymself dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodly stainerh hymself. Reproue not a scozner, lest he owe the euill will: but rebuke a wise manne, and he will loue y. Geue a discrete manne but an occasiō and he will bee the wiser: teache a righteous manne, and he will encrease in knowlage.

Eccl. i. c.

* The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wisdom, and the knowlage of holy thynges, is vnderstandyng. For thowowe me thy daies shal be prolonged, & the yeris of thy lyfe shal be many. If thou be wise thy wysdome shal do thy selfe good: but if thou thinkest scozne ther-of, it shal be thyne owne harme. A foolysch retch lesse woman full of wordes, and suche a one as hath no knowlage, sytteth at the doore of her house, & in the hye places of the citee, to cal such as go by, and that walke streight in theyr way-es. Whoso is ignorant (saith she) let him come hether, & to the vnwise she saith: stolen waters are swete: & the bread that is pynely eatē, hath a good taste. And he doeth not consydre, y they are but deade whiche be there, and that her gestes are in the depe of hell.

For he that wyll be toynd vnto her, shall go downe to hell, but he that auoydeth from her, shal be saued.

The x. Chapter.

In this chapter and all that folowe vnto the thyrtye, the wise man exhorteth by diuers sentences, whiche he calleth parables, to folowe vertues, & fflye vices. And sheweth also what profite commeth of wysdom, & what hynderaunce proceedeth of foolysnes.

The Proverbs of Salomon.

Wise sonne maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is an heu-nelle vnto his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, profyte uereth from deathe. The Lorde wyll not let taketh a waie the rychesse of the vngodly. An rynge hande maketh ryche.

(Who so regardeth lesynges, sedeth the wynde: and doeth but lowe bydes that haue taken theyr flyghte.)

Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wise: but he that is sluggish in harvest, bringeth him self to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the head of the righteous, and the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. * The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good repozte: but y name of the vngodly shal synke. A wise man wyll receiue warnyng, but a pratyng fool shal be punysed. * He that leadeh an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goth a wrong way: shal be knowen. * He that winketh with his eye wyl do some harme: but he that hath a foolysch mouth, shal be eaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete.

Cupyl wyll styreth vp styffe: * but lone con-reth the myltitude of synnes. In the lypyes of hym that hath vnderstandyng a manne shal fynd wysdom, but the rod belongeth to y backe of the foolysch. Wylse men laye vp knowlage, but the mouth of the foolysch is nye destruccyon.
The ryche mans goodes are hys stronge holde, but thei owne pouertie feareth the poore. The righteous labourerh to do good, but the vngod-ly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourtoure, is the waie of lyfe but he that refuseth to be reformed, dis-cepueth hym selfe. * Wylsemblyng lypyes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh ane sclaundre, is a fool. Where muche babylage is, there must nedes be offence: and he that retoy-neth his lypyes, is wise. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodly is not hyng wrothe. The lypyes of the righteous fede a whole myltitud, but foolys shal dye in theyr owne folye. The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men * as for carefull traauyle it doth not hyng thereto. A fool doeth wyckedly, and maketh but a spozte of it: but wysdome ruleth the man that hath vnderstandyng. The thynges that the vngodly are afraid of, shal come vpon them, but the righteous shal haue theyr desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempeste commeth: but the righteous remaineth sure for ever. As wynegre is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euē so is a slou-gish person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeres of the vngodly shal be thynned.
The pacient abidyng of the righteous shal be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shal perishe. The waie of the Lorde geueth courage vnto y godly, but it is a feare for wycked doers. * The righteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shal not remain in the lande. * The mouth of the iust wyll be talking of wysdom, but y tong of the froward shal perishe. The lypyes of the righteous are occupped in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the woyle.

The xi. Chapter.

* False balauce is an abhomination vnto y^e Lord: but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pride is, ther is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlinesse, there is wyldome. The innocent dealing of the iuste shall leade them, but the wyckednes of such as dyssemble, shall be theyr owne destruccio. * Richesse helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death. The righteous-nesse of the innocent ozdretch his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wyckednesse.

The righteousness of the iust shall deliuer the, but the wycked shall be taken in theyr owne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confidence of rycheesse shall peryshe. The ryghteous shall be deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shall come in his steade.

Thow the mouth of the dissembler is his neighbour destroyed: but thow he knowlage shall the iust be deliuered. * When it goth well with the righteous, the cite is mery: and when the vngodly peryshe, there is gladnesse. When the iuste are in wealth, the cite prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth. A foole byngeth vpon a sclander of his neighbour but a wyse man wyl kepe it secrete. * A dys-sembling person wyl discover preuy thynges but he that is of a fapthfull herte wyl kepe cousyle. * Where no good counsyle is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsyle, there is wealth. * He that is lertie for a straunger hurteth hym self, and he that medleth not with suretyshyppe is sure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honestye, as for the wycked, they maytayne rycheesse. * He that is merciful, doth hym self a benefyte: but whoso hurteth his neyghboure, is a tyrante. The laboure of the vngodly prospereth not, but he y^e soweth ryghteousnesse, shall receyue a sure re-warde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euil byngeth drath. The Lord abhorreth them that be of a fained herte, but he hath pleasure in them y^e are of an unde-feyled conuersacion. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the seide of the ryghteous shall be preserved. A fawse woman with out discrete maners is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is in-dignacyon. * Some manne geueth oute bys goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygard (having ynough) wyl departe from nothinge, & yet is encreased in pouer ty. * He that is lyberall in geyng, shall haue plenty: & he that watereth shall be watered also hym self. * Who so boozdeth by his coyne, shall be cursyd among the people: but blessing shall lyght vpon his deed that geueth foode. He that laboureth for honestye, shall by his desyre: but who so seeketh after mys-chance, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his rycheesse, shall haue a fall: but y^e righteous shall flourish, as the grene leafe. Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his herpage, and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse. The frute of the righteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endeuoureth hym selfe to winne mens soules, is wyse. * Yf y^e p^ret. iii. a.

The. xii. Chapter.

Who so loueth wysdome wyl be content to bee reformed: but he y^e ha-teth to be reformed is a foole. * A good mā is acceptable vnto y^e lord but the wycked ymagynar wyl be condempned. A man can not endure in vngodly nesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shall not be moued. A housewifely woman is a crowne vnto her husbnde: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corrupcyon in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are ryghte: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly are dysceptful.
The talkyng of the vngodly is how they may lay wayte for blood, but the mouth of the righteous wyl deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked, and they stande not: B but the house of the ryghteous shall stande sted-faste. A man shall be commended for his wysdō, but a foole shall be despyed. * A symple manne whych labourereth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgeous and lacketh bread. A righteous mā regardeth the lyfe of his cattel, but y^e vngodly haue cruell hertes. * He that tyllteth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of byerd: but he that foloweth ydelnesse, is a verie foole.

Who so hath pleasure to contemne at the wyse, leaueh dysponesse in his owne dwellynge.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after myscheffe: but the roote of the ryghteous byngeth forth frute. The wycked fallteth into the snare, thow the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shall escape oute of all peryll. Euery man shall enioye good, accordyng to the frute of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded. Looke what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyl be counsyled. A foole vttereth bys wrath in all the haste: but a discrete man coue-reth wronge. A iuste man wyl tell the truthe, and shew the thyng that is ryght: but a false wynesse dysceynereth. A sclanderous persone pryketh lyke a sword, but a wyse mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouthe is euer constant: but a dissembling tonge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagynen euil in their mynd, wyl disceiue: but the counsayers of peace shall haue ioye folowynge them. There shall no misfortune happē vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be fylled with mysery. * The Lord abhorreth lying lippes: but they y^e labour for truthe please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doth hyde wisdome: but an vndiscrete hert telleth out his foolysnesse. A diligent hande shall brare rule: but the ydle shall be vnder tribute. * Heuinesse discoyageth y^e hert of mā: but a good woode ma-keth it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth

The Proverbs.

1. Tim. vi. b. *but the rycheſſe of the iuſt man is of great value. In the waye of righteouſneſſe there is lyfe and in the ſame waye there is no death.

The. xiii. Chapter.

A Wyle ſonne wyl herken to his fathers warnynge, but he þiſ ſcornefull, wyl not heare when he is reproved. A good manne ſhal enioye the frute of his mouthe, but he that hath a frowarde mynde, ſhal be ſpoyled. He that keepeth hys mouthe keepeth hys lyfe: but who ſo openeth hys lippes to euell, deſtroyeth hym ſelfe. The ſlogarde would ſayne haue, and can not gette his deſyre: but the ſoule of the diſlygente ſhall haue plentye. A ryghteous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodly ſhameth both other and hym ſelfe. Ryghteouſneſſe keepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlyneſſe doeth ouerthrowe the ſpyner. *Some men are ryche though they haue nothing: agayne ſome men are poore, hauynge greate rycheſſe. With gooddeſe euery man deliuereth his lyfe, and þiſ poore wyl not be reproved. The lyghte of the ryghteous maketh ioyfull, but *the candle of the vngodly ſhal be put out. Among the proude there is euer ſtryfe: but among thole that do all thynges with aduylement, there is wyſdome.

Waynelye gotten goodes are ſoone ſpente: but they that bee gathered together wyth the bande, ſhall encreaſe. Long tarpenge for a thing that is deferred, greueth the hert, but when the deſyre cometh, it is a tree of lyfe.

Who ſo deſpyſeth any thyng ſhal be hurte for the ſame: but he that feareth the commaundement, ſhall haue the rewarde.

(A diſcrepfull ſonne ſhall haue no good, but a diſcrete ſeruant ſhall do ſull well, and his waye ſhall proſpere.)

C The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto the wyſe, þiſ it may kepe hym from the ſnares of deathe.

Good vnderſtanding geueth fauour, but hard is the waye of the deſpyſers. A wyle manne doeth all thynges with diſcrepion: but a fool wyl declare hys follye. An vngodlye meſſenger falleth into miſchefe: but a faythful ambafadoure is whollſome. He that thynketh ſcorne to be reformed, cometh to pouertie and ſhame but who ſo regardeth correccyon, ſhall come to honoure. When a deſyre is broughte to paſſe, it deliuereth the ſoule: but fooler counte it a ſhominacion to departe from euell. He that goeth in the company of wyle men, ſhal be wyle: but whoſo is a companyon of fooler, ſhal be hurte.

Wyle ſchefe foloweth vpon ſpyners, but the ryghteous ſhall haue a good rewarde. He that is vertuous, leaueſh an heritaunce vnto his chyldren: *the rycheſſe of the ſpyner is layde vp for the iuſte. There is plenteouſneſſe of foode in þiſ felde of the poore but the felde not well ordred, is withoute frute. *He that ſpareth the rod hateth his ſonne: but whoſo loueth hym chaſteth him by tymes. *The righteous caſeth, and is ſatysfied: but the belly of the vngodlye hath neuer pnyghte.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

Wyle women vpholde theyr houſe: but a foolyſhe wyfe plucketh it downe. He that walketh in the ryghte path of the Lorde, feareth him: but he that turneth hym ſelfe from hys wayes, deſpyſeth hym. In the mouthe of the foolyſhe is the rodde of pryde: but the lippes of the wyſe wyl preſerue them. Where no oxen are, there the crye is emptye: but where the oxen labour, there is muche fruite. A faythfull wytnesſe wyl not diſſemble, but a falſe recorde wyl make a lye. A ſcornefull bodie ſeketh wyſdome, and ſyndeth it not: but *knowlage is eaſe to come by vnto hym that wyl vnderſtande.

He that thou medle not with a fooler in whiche thou perceyueſt to be no knowlage. The wyſdome of hym that hath vnderſtandynge, is to take hede vnto his waye: but the foolyſheſſe of the vnwyle diſcepereth. Fooler make but a ſpote of ſpyne, but there is a fauourable loue amonge the ryghteous. The herte ſeleth hys owne lyes by tternelle, neyther ſhal the ſtranger be partaker of his ioye. The houſe of the vngodly ſhal be ouerthrowen: but the tabernacle of the ryghteous ſhall ſtoode. *There is a waye whiche ſome men thynke to be right: but the ende thereof leadeth vnto deathe. The hert is ſorrowful euen in laughter, & the ende of myrth is heynneſſe. A backſlidyng herte ſhal be fylled with his owne wayes, but a good manne ſhall lyue of his frutes. An ignoraunte bodie beleueth all thynges: but who ſo hath vnderſtanding loketh well to his goynges.

A wyle man feareth, & departeth from euell but a furpous fooler goeth on preſumptuouſlye.

An vnſapient man dealeth fooliſhly: but he that is well aduyled, is hated of the fooler. The ignoraunt haue fooliſhneſſe in poſſeſſyon but wyle are crowned with knowlage. The rich ſhall bowe them ſelues befoze the good: and the vngodly ſhall wayte at the doores of the ryghteous: The poore is hated euell of his owne neyghbours, but the ryche hath many frendes. Whoſo deſpyſeth hys neyghboure doeth amyle, but *blyſſed is he that hath ppye of the poore.

Without doubte they erre that ymagyne wyckedneſſe, but they that muſe vpon good thynges, vnto ſuche ſhall happen merce and faythfulneſſe. In euery labour there is ſome proſpetye. But onelye wayne woordes, bynnege for the penurpe. Rycheſſe are as a crowne vnto the wyle, but the ignoraunce of fooler is a ry foolyſheſſe. A faythfull wytnesſe deliuereth ſoules, but a diſcrepfull wytnesſe bynnegeth for the lyes. The feare of the Lorde is a ſtrong hold, & his chyldren are vnder a ſure defence. The feare of þiſ Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde þiſ ſnares of deathe. The increaſe of wyle is the comynge of the kynges honoure, but þiſ decaye of the people, is the confulſion of the wyſe. He that is ſapient, hath muche vnderſtandynge, but he that is ſoone diſpleaſed,

The waye of life leadeth vnto heauen & a man shulde be ware of hell. The Lorde wyll breake downe the house of the proude, but he shal make faste the borders of the wyddowe. The Lord abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wyc-ked, but pure wordes of innocētes ar pleasaunt vnto hi. The couetous mā roteth by his owne house, but whoso hateth rewardes shal lyue.

The bert of þ righteous studieth his answer afore, but þ wycked mannes mouth spureth out myschefe. The Lorde is farre from þ vngodly, But he heareth the praier of þ righteous. Like as the clearenelle of the eyes reioyleth the herte so doeth a good name fede the bones. The eare that harkeneth to the reformatyon of lyfe, wal dwell amonge the wyle. He that refuseth to be refourmed, despylseth his owne soule: but he þ submitteth hym selfe to correccyon is wyle.

(The begynnynge of a good lyfe is to be righteousnesse; that is more accepted vnto God then to offere vp sacrifices.)

Better it is to haue a lytle thyng with rygh teousnesse. then greate rentes wrongfully got ten. * A man deupseth a waye in his herte, but it is the Lorde þat ordzeth hys goynges. When the prophece is in the lyppes of the kynge, his mouth shall not go wronge in iudgement. * A true measure & a true balaunce at þe Lordes iud gement, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a great abhominaciō, whē kinges are wicked, for a kin ges seate shulde be holden by wth ryghteousnes.

Righteous lppes are pleasaunte vnto kyn ued. The kynges dyspleasure is a messenger of death, but a wise man will pacifie him. The chereful countenaunce of þ̄ kyng is life: and his louyng fauoure, is as þ̄ euening dewe. * To eschue euell, & whoso loketh well to his wayes eth before destruccyon, and after a proude sto-Whoso is slouthful and slacke in his labour, is flyeth vnto it, & is in sauergarde. But the ryght mans goodes are hys stronge holde: yea, he taketh

After ppyde cometh destruction: & honoure after standynge. Liberalitie byngeth a man to ho-noure nour and woꝛthpypp, and letteth hym among great men. The righteous declareth his owne cause by hym selfe, yf hys neighbour come, he shall fynde hym. The lorde pacifyeth the varyaunce, and parteth the mighty a sonde. A bꝛother though he be greued with offence, yet is he more woꝛth then a very strong castel: and they deh a good wyfe, fyndeth a good thyng, & re-ceyvethe a whollome benefyte of the Lorde.

(He that putteth away a good woman, putteth away a good thyng but he that keepeth an harlot, is a foole and unwyse.)

The poore maketh supplicacion: and prayeth

A man that loueth his frendes wyll be compy-nable with them: and some frende stycketh faster to a man then his bꝛother.

The. xix. Chapter.

Better * is the poore that feareth godlye:
then the blasphemour that is but foole.
Where no dyscrecyon is, there the soule is enclined vnto the thyng that is not good, and is swyfte on fote, & offendeth. Foolishnes maketh a man to goo out of his waye, & then is his hert vnpacient against the Lorde. Riches maketh many frendes: but y poore is forsaken of his neyghboure. * A false wytnesse shal not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh lyman can put of dyspleasure: & it is hys honoure

* The kyngeys dysfaoure is lyke y roaryng uines of his father, & a bꝛawlyng wyfe is lyke pyng. House and rycheesse maye a man haue by dement, kepeth his owne soule: but he y regardeth not this waye, shall dye. He that hath pytie vpon the poore, lendeth vnto y Lorde: & loke what he layeth out, it shal be payd hym agayne.

Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope: but let not thy soule be moued to slaye hym.

A man of great wyath beareth a payne: and though y once delpyer hym, thou must agayne do as muche for hym. O geue eare vnto good counsell, & be content to be reformed, that y mayest be wyse in y latter dayes. * There are many deuyces in a mans hert: neuer thelesse, y counsell man then a dissembler. The feare of y Lorde bꝛingeth a man to lyfe: & he shal rest y hole night in

* A slouthful man putteth his handes into his bosome, as into the pot: & wyll not take payne to put it to his mouth. * If y synnest a scoꝛne-full persone, the ignoraunte shal take better hede: & yf thou repreneste one that hath vnderstandyng: he wyll be the wyser. He that burteth his father or putteth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnwoꝛthy sonne. My sonne

A false wytnes laugheth iudgement to scoꝛne:

fendeth agaynste his owne soule. It is a mans honour to kepe hym self from stryfe: but they y haue pleasure in bꝛawling are foolcs euery one.
A slouthfull body wyll not go to plowe for cold bert of man is lyke a water in the depe of y ert good doers: but wher shal one fynde a true faith-nocent lyfe: is ryghteous, & happy shal his children be whom he leueth behynde hym. A kynge that sytteth in the thꝛone of iudgemēt, & loketh can saye, my hert is cleane, I am innocent from synne: To vse two maner of weightes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhomynablc vnto the Lorde. A chyld is known by his

It is a snare for a man to deuoure that which is holy: and after þat he wyl turne to thyne owne vse, þat thing thou hast vowed. * A wise kyng destroyeth þat vngodly, and bringeth the whele ouer them. The lanterne of the Lorde is þat bryght of man, and goeth thowowe all the inward partes of the bodye.

* Mercye and faythfulnes preserue the kyng: and with lounge kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of pong me is their worship, and a graye heade is an honoure vnto þat aged. Woundes dyue a waye euell, and so do stripes the inward partes of the bodye.

C The xxi. Chapter.

He kynges herte is in the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither soeuer he wyl. Euerye man thynketh his owne waye to be ryght: but the Lord iudgeth the hertes. * To do righteousnes and iudgemente is moze acceptable to þe Lorde then sacrifice. A presumptuous lorde, a proude stomache: & the plowynge of the vngodlye, is synne. The deuices of one that is diligent bring plenteousnesse: but he that is vnaduyced cometh vnto pouertye. Whoso hoodeth vp ryches with the dysceitfulness of his tonge he is wayne and a foole, and lyke vnto them þat seke theyr owne death. The robberies of the vngodlye shalbe theyr owne destruction: for they wyl not do the thyng that is ryght. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge: but the wayes of hym that is cleane are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then in a bawdryng woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodly wytheth euell: and hath no pytie vpon his neygbboure. * When þat scozefull is punyshed, þat ignoraunt take þat better hede: & when he seith the wise men prosper, he wyl receyue the moze vnderstandynge.

The ryghteous man wyselye consydereth the house of the wicked: & for their wickednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. * Whoso stoppeth his eares at the cryng of the poore: he shal crye himselfe & not be heard. A peny reward pacifieth displeasure & a gift in þat bolome, stilleth furyousnes. The Just delyteth in doyng þat thyng that is ryght: but ouer the wayes of wyckednes hangeth destruction. The man that wandereth out of þat waye of wysdom, shal remayne in the congregacion of the dead. * He that hath pleasure in bankettes, shalbe a poore man.

Whoso delyteth in wyne & delycates, shal not be rygh. The vngodly shalbe geuen for þat ryghteous and the wycked for the iuste.

* It is better to dwell in the wyldernes then wyth a chydynge and an angry woman. In a wyle mannes house, there is a grate treasur: but a foolys body spendeth vp all. Whoso foloweth ryghteousnes and mercy, synneth both lyfe, ryghteousnes, and honoure. A wyle man wynneth the cytie of the mightie: & as for þat strength þat they trust in, he bringeth it downe. * Whoso kepeth his mouth and his tonge, the same kepeth his soule from troubles. He that is proude & presumptuous, is called a scozefull man which, in wyth dare worke maliciously.

The voluptuousnes of the slouthfull is his owne death: for his handes wyl not labour. He coueteth and desirith all the daye long, but the ryghteous is alwaye geuyng, and kepeth nothyng bakke.

The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominacion, howe much moze when they offere þat thing that is gotten with wickednes. * A false wytnes shal perishe: but he that is a true man boldly speaketh that he hath heard. An vngodlye man goth forth rashly: but the iuste reformeth his owne waye. * There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstanding, there is no counceyl against the Lorde. * The horse is prepared agaynst the day of battayl: but the Lorde geueth victorie.

C The xxii. Chapter.

Seed name is moze worth then a greate ryche, and lounge fauoure, is better then syluer and golde. The ryche and poore are together, the Lorde is the maker of them all. A wyle manne seeth the plage: and hydeth hym selfe, but the foolyshe goode on styll, and are punyshed. The ende of lowynes: and the feare of God is ryches, honoure, prosperitie and healthe.

Thornes and snares are in the waye of þat frowarde: but he that doth kepe his soule, wyl fle from suche. Teache a chyld in his yowth what waye he shulde go: for he shal not leaue it, wher he is olde. The ryche ruleth the poore: & the borrower is seruaunt to þat lender. He that soweth wycke dness shal reape sorowe: & the rodde of his crueltye shal perishe. * He that hath a lounge eye shalbe blessed: for he geueth of his breaude vnto the poore.

Caste out the scozefull man, & so shal strife go out with hym: pea, varpaunce & schlauder shal cease. Whoso delyteth to be of a cleue hart and of gracynous lippes, the kyng shalbe his frende. The eyes of the Lorde preserue knowlage, but as for the wordes of þat dyspitefull, he bringeth them to naughte. The slouthfull bodye sayeth there is a Lyon without, I myght be slayne in the strete. * The mouthe of an harlot is a deuyll, wherin he falleth that þat Lorde is angry wythall. A foolyshe wyl speke in þat herte of the ladde, and the rodde of correccion shal dyme it alwaye.

Et a day. Who so dret a pooze manne wronge to increase his owne riches, and geueth vnto riches to please hym, at the last cometh to pouer-tye hym selfe. My sonne, bowe downe thyne eare, & hearken vnto the wordes of wysdom, appliche thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for thou shalt be excellent yf thou kepe it in thyne hert, & precise it in thy mouth, that thou mayste put thy trust in the Lord. I haue thewed the this daye: the thyng that thou knowest. Haue not I warned the very oft with counsell & learning: that I might thewe the p^r truth, and that thou with the veryte myghtest answer the that sende vnto the? Se that thou robbe not p^r pooze, because he is weak, and oppresse not the symple in iud-gement: for p^r Lord hym self wyll defende their cause, and do violence vnto them that haue vsed violence. Make no frendshipp with an angry wyllfull man, & kepe no company with the surpous: lest thou learne his wayes, & receaue hurt in thy soule. * Be not thou one of them p^r hynde theyr bande vpon promyse, & are suretye for waigthy causes: for if thou hast nothyng to paye, they shall take a way thy bed from vnder the. * Thou shalt not remoue the lande marke whiche thy fooze elders haue sette. Seest thou not, that they whiche be dyligent in their busynes, stande before kynges, and not amonge the symple people?

The. xxiij. Chapter.

When thou syttest at the table to eat wth a Lord, order thy selfe manerly with the thynges that are set before the.

Measure thine appetite: & yf thou wylt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer greedy of his meate, for meate begyleth and disceineth * Take not ouer great trauaile & labour to be riche beware of suche a purpose. * Why wylt thou set thyne eye vpon the thyng, whiche so-denly vanissheth awaye? For riches make the felnes wynges, and take theyr flyghte lyke an Aegle into the ayre. Eate thou not with the enuyous, and despyze not his meate. For he doth as a man that prescribeth a measure to the in his herte. He sayeth vnto the: eate and drynke where as his hert is not with the. Yea, the mo-uels that thou hast eaten shalt thou perbake & lese those swete wordes. Tell nothing into the eares of a foole, for he wyll despyse the wysdom of thy wordes. * Remoue not y^e old land marke and come not within the felde of the fatherles.
For he that deliuered them, is myghty, euen he shall defende their cause against the.

Applye thine herte vnto correccyon, & thyne care to the wordes of knowlage.

* What holde not correccyon from the chylde, for if thou beatest hym with the rod, he shal not dye therof. Yf thou smyte hym with the rodde, thou shalt deliuer his soule from hel. My sonne yf thy hert receaue wysdome, my hert also shal reioyse: yea, my reynes shal be very glad: yf thy lyppes speake the thyng that is ryghte. * Lette not thyne hert be gelous to folow synners, but kepe the styl in the feare of the Lord all the day long: for the ende is not yet come, & thy patient abidynge shall not be in vayne. My sonne, geue care, and be wysle: and set strapte thyne herte in the waye of the Lord.

* Kepe not companie with wyne bybbers & rpotous eaters of flesh: for suche as be dyonkar-des and rpotours shall come to pouerty: and he that is geurn to muche sleape, shall go wyth a ragged coate. Geue care vnto thy father that begate the, and despyse not thy mother when she is olde. Labour for to get the trueth: sell it not awaye and so do by wysdome, nourter, and vnderstandinge: for a righteous father is mar-uelous glad of a wysle sonne, and he that begetteth a wise childe shall haue greate pleasure of hym. Dooe so that thy father and mother maye be glad of the, and that she that bare the may re-ioyse. My sonne geue me thine herte, and lette thyne eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. * For an whoze is a depe graue, and an harlot is a na-rowe pyt. She luraeth lyke a thefe, and byn-geth vnto her suche men as be full of vyce.

Why haty wor who hath sorowe? who hath stryfe? who hath byawlyng? & who hath woundes without cause? & who hath red eyes?
Euen they that bee euer at the wyne, & leke excesse. Looke not thou vpon the wyne, howe red it is, and what a coloure it geueth in the glasse.
It goth downe softly, but at the laste it biteth lyke a serpent, and styngeth lyke an adder. So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, & thyne herte shall muse vpon froward thynges: yea, & shalt be as though thou layest in p^r myd-dest of the see, or slepest vpon the top of p^r maist of a shyp. They wounded me (shalt thou saye) but it hath not hurte me: they haue all to broke me, but I felt it not. When I am well wake-ned, I wyll go to the drynke agayne.

The. xxiiij. Chapter.

Be not p^r gelouse ouer wycked men and desyre not to be amonge them.
For their hert imagineth to do hurt and their lippes talke of myschefe.
Thozow wysdom is an house builded and with vnderstanding is it set vp. Thozow discrecion shall the chambers be fylled with all costly & plesant riches. A wise man is euer strong: yea, a man of vnderstanding encreaseth of strenght. For with discrecyon mu^{lt} warres be taken in hand, and where as ar many that can geue counceyl, there is the victo^ry. Wisdome is to hie a thyng for a foole, for he dare not ope his mouth in the gate. He that ymagineth myschefe may well be called an vngacious person.

The thought of p^r foolish is synne, and p^r scoz-nfull is an abhominacyon vnto men. Yf thou be ouersene & negligent in tyme of nede, then is thy strenght but small, deliuer them that goe vnto death, & are led awaye to be slaine, & be not negligent therein: if thou be able to do them good Yf thou wylt saye: I knewe not of it. Thyne hest thou that he whiche made the hertes doeth not consydre it? And that he whiche regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shall not he recompence every man accordyng to his workes? My sonne cause it is good and swete in thy mouth. Euen so shall þy knowlage of wysdome be vnto thy soule as sone as thou haste gotten it. And thou shalt haue longe dayes: yea, thy hope shall not bee in vayne. Laye no preynt wayte (o wycked man) vpon the house of the ryghteous and dysquyet not his resting place. * For a iust man falleth seuen tymes, & riseth vp agayne: but the vngodlye fall into wyckednes. * Reioyse not thou at the fall of thine enemye, & let not thyne herte be glad when he strombleth. Lest the Lorde (when he seeth it) be angry, and turne his wyath from hym vnto the.

Let not thy wyath and gelousye moue the to folowe the wycked and vngodly. And why? the wycked shall haue no posteritye, & the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. * My sonne, feare thou the Lorde, and the kyng, and kepe no company with them that styde backe from hys feare: for they destruccyon shall come sodenly, and who knoweth the aduersyte þy maye come from the both. These are also þy saynges of the wysse. * It is not good, to haue respecte of anye personne in iudgement. He that sayth to the vngodly: thou art ryghteous, him shall the people curse: yea, the comynalte shall abhorre hym.

But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doeth God delyste, & a ryche blessing shall come vpon them. Euerie man shall kysse his lippes that geueth a good answer.

Make vp thy worke that is withoute and loke well vnto that which thou hast in the felde: & then buylde thyne house. Be not a false wytnesse agaynst thy neighbour and speake no falthode with thy lippes. Saye not: I will handle hym: euen as he hath dealt w me, & will rewarde euery man accordyng to his dedes. I went by the felde of the thoughtful, and by the vineyard of the foolyshe man. And lo, it was couered with nettels, and stode ful of thistles and the stone wall was broken downe. * This I sawe & consydered it well: I looked vpon it, & take it for a warnyng. See, slepe on styll: & a lytle, slomber a lytle, folde thy bandes together yet a lytle: so shall pouertie come vnto the as one that traualleth by þy waye, and necessitye lyke a wepened man.

The xxv. Chapter.
These are also parables of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezechiah kyng of Iuda copped oute.

It is the honoure of God to kepe a thyng secrete, but the kynges honoure is to seache oute a thyng. The drauen is hye, the earth is depe and the kynges hert is vnsearchable. Take the doosse from the spluer, & ther shall be a cleane vessel therof. Take a way vngodlynnesse from the kyng, and his seate shall be stablished with ryghteousnes. But not for thy selfe in the presence of the kyng, and presele not into the place of great men. * Better is it, that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hider, then thou to be put lower in þy presence of the prynces whos thou seest with thyne eyes. * Be not hasty to goe to the lawe, lest haply þy do some offence after the stryfe be ended, wherby thy neighbour put the to shame. Handle thy matter with thy neighbour hym selfe, and discouer not another mans secret, lest whē men heare therof, it turne to thy dyshonoure, & leaste thyne euell name do not cease. * (Grace and frendshyppe both deliuer, whiche thou kepe for thy selfe, lest thou be reproued.)

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a graued worke of syluer. The correccyon of the wysse is to an obedyent eare, a golde cheyne & a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the wynter colde in the haruest, so is a faithfull messenger to them that sende hym: for he refresheth hys masters mynde. Who so maketh great boasting and geueth nothing, is lyke cloudes and smoke withoute rayne. With patience is a pryncer pacified, and with a softe tonge is ryggousnes broken. If thou fyndest hony, eate so muche as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouerfull, & pryake it out agayne. Withdrowe thy foote fro thy neygbbours house: lest he be wery of the, & so abhorre the. Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynst his neygbboure, he is a verpe clubbe a swearde, and a sharpe arrowe. The hope that is put in a false man in tyme of neade, is lyke a rotten toth and a slippery fote. Who so taketh awaye a mans garmente in the colde wether, is lyke vyneser vpon chalke, or lyke hym that singeth songes to an heuy hert. * (Lyke as the mouth hurteth a garment: & a womme the tree: so doeth the bitynnes of a man hurt the soule.) * If thyne enemye hunger, fede hym: if he thyste, geue hym drinke: for so shalt thou haue cooles of fre vpon hys heade, and the Lorde shall rewarde the. The North wynde dryueth awaye the rayne, euen so doeth an eneneste sober countenance a backbeters tongue. * It is better to lytte in a corner vnder the rose then with a bawlyng woman in a wide house. A good reposte oute of a farre countree is lyke colde water to a thyrsyng soule. A ryghteous manne fallynge downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well, and a springe that is dystropt. Lyke as it is not good to eate to much hony, & euen so he that will search oute thynges, it shall be to heuy for hym. He that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a cyttie whiche is broken downe, and hath no walles.

The xxvi. Chapter.
Lyke as know is not mete in sommer, nor rayne in haruest, euen so is word withoute measure for a foole. Lyke as the byrde & the swalowe take theyr flyghte and fle here and there, so dothe curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lpyght vpon a man. * Vnto the horse belongeth a whip to the Asse a byddle, and a rodde to the foolys backe. Gene not the foole an answer after his foolysnes, leaste thou become lyke vnto hym, but make the foole an answer to his follye: least he be wysse in his owne conceite. He is lame of his fete, yea broncken is he in vayne, that comytteyth any message to a foole. Lyke as in a lame man his legges are not equal, euen so is a parable in a foolys mouth. He that setteth a foole in hye dygnite, that is euen as if a man a manne put a stone in a slynge. A parable in a fooles mounthe is lyke a thorne that pryketh a drunken man in the hande. (Great is he that hath for ward all synne, he rewardeth the fooles and recompenseth the trans-gressours.) A man of experyence discerneth al thyn-ges well: but he that putteth the foole to scy-lence endeth the stryfe. * Lyke as the dogge turneth agayn to his owne vomite, euen so a foole begynneth his foolysnes againe afresh.

If thou seest a man that is wise in his owne conceite, ther is moze hope in a foole the in him.
* The slouthfull sayth: there is a Lyon in þ waye, and a Lyon in the myddest of the stretes.
Lyke as the doze turneth aboute vpon the ben-ges, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hym self in his bed. * The slouthfull body thrusteth bys hande into his bosome, & it greueth hym to put it agayne to bys mounthe. The slogarde thyn-keth hym selfe wysse then seuen men that syt & teache. Who so goeth by and medleth w other mens stryfe: he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares. Lyke as a mad man that casteth fyre brandes, & shoteth deadely arrowes and dartes, euen so doth a dissembler with his neighbour.

And then sayeth he: (when he is taken) I dyd it but in sporte. Where no woode is, there the fire goeth out: Euen so where the tale betrayer is taken awaye, there the stryfe ceaseth. * Coles kyndle heate, and wood the fyre: euen so doth a bawlyng felowe steepe vpon vaucaunce.

A talebearers wordes are lyke men þ stryke with hammers, but they pearse the inward par-tes of the body. Vnenumous lippes and a wy-ked herte, are lyke a pot hard couered with syluer drosse. An enemy shal be knownen by his tal-kyng, & in the meane season he ymagineth myschefe, but when he speaketh fayre, beleue hym not: for there are seuen abhominacyons in bys herte. Who so kepeth euell wyll secretly to doo hurte, his malice shal be shewed before þ whole congregation. * Who so dyggeth vp a pyt, shal fall therein: and he that wylteth a stone, shal scumble vpon it hym selfe. A dissembling tong hateth one that rebuketh hym, & a flatterynge mouth worketh myschefe.

¶ The xxvii. Chapter.

Make not thy boaste of to morowe, * for thou knowest not what may happen to daye. Let another man praysse þ, & not thine owne mouth praise, other folkes lippes & not thine.
The stone is heuy, and the sand weightye: but a foolers wrath is heuyr then them both.

Wrath is a cruell thynge, and furyousnesse is a very tēpest: but who is able to abide eny?
An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.

Faythfull are the woundes of a louer, but þ kylles of an enemye are cruell. He that is full abhoreth an hony combe, but vnto him that is hungry, euery sowze thynge is swete.

He that oftymes slytteth, is lyke a byrde þ forsaketh her nest. Balme & swete incense make their best mery: so is the swete coucell of a mā frend that agreeth to his purpose. Thine owne frende & thy fathers frende se thou forsake not:

but goo not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of. Thy sonne, be wysse: and thou shalt make me a glad herte, so that I shal make an answer vnto my rebukers. A wysse man seynge the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for foolles they go on styll, and suffre harme.

* Take his garment that is suerty for a straun prouer. x. a ger, and take a pledge of hym for the unknowē mannes sake. He that is to hastye to praise his neighbour aboue measure, shal be take as one that geueth hym an euell repozte.

* A bawlyng woman and the rooffe of the prouer. xix. b house droppynge in a rapye daye: maye wel be compared together. He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynd, and holdeth the oyle fast in his hande. Like as one prou whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another. Who so kepeth his sygge tree, shal enioye the frutes ther-of: euen so, he that wylteth vpon his mapster, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there appere dyuerse faces, euen so dyuers men haue dyuerse hartes. Lyke as hell and destruccyon are neuer full, euen so * the eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed. Splner is tryed in þ moulde Eccle. i. a.
& golde in the forname, & so is a man, when he is Eccle. viii. a. openly praised to his face. (The best of a wicked man go-sleth after myschefe, but a true hert sleth for knowlage.)

Though thou shuldest braye a foole wyth a pestel in a mortar lyke spymenty corne, yet wyll not his foolysnes go from hym. He that thou knowe the nombre of thy catel thy selfe, & looke wel to thy flockes. For ryches abydeyth not al-waye and the crowne endureth not for euer.

The heyre groweth, the grasle cometh vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shal clothe the and for the goates thou shalte haue moneye to thy husbandye. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough to fede the, to vphold thy houshold, & to susteyne thy maidens

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a child of vnder tous menne, shameth his father. He that by v-

Where the prince is without vnderstanding, there is great oppresyon and wrong: but yf he be suche a one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raygne. * He that by violence shedeth any mannes bloude: shall be a renegate vnto hys graue, & no man shall be able to socoure hym. * Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent lyfe shall be saued, but he y goeth froward wayes shall once haue a fall.

* y is stiffe necked, and wyll not be reformed: shall sodenly be destroyed without any helpe. * When the ryghteous haue the ouer hande the people are in prosperite, but when y vngodly beareth rule, there y people mourne.

Who so loueth wysdome maketh his father a glad man: * But he that kepeth company with harlottes, spendeth awaye that he hath. With true iudgement the kynge setteth vp the lande, but yf he be a man that oppresseth the people w gatherynge he turneth it vpsyde downe.

Who so flattereth his neighbour, layeth a net for his feete. The synne of the wycked is hys owne snare, but the ryghteous doeth syng and reioyle. The ryghteous consydereth the cause of the poore: but the vngodly regardeth not vnderstandynge. Wycked people bypunge a cytie in decaye, but wyse men sette it vp agayne. y a wyse man go to lawe wth a foole (whether he deale with hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest. The bloudy byp hate the righteous, but the iuste seke hys soule. A foole powreth out his sprete altogether, but a wise man kepeth it in, tyll afterwarde. y a prince deylet in y es, all his seruantes are vngodly. The poore and the lender mete together, and the lord lygeth both they es. * The seate of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall continue sure for euermore. The rodde & correction minister wysdome, but yf a childe be not loked vnto, he bypgeth his mother to shame.

When y vngodly come vp, wickednes increaseth: but the righteous shall see they fall. Turne thy sonne with correction, and thou shalt be at rest: yea, he shall do the good at thine hert.

When the woorde of God is not preached, the people perishe: but well is hym that heareth the lawe. A seruante wyll not bee the better for wordes, for though he vnderstande: yet wyll he not regarde them. yf thou seest a man that is hasty to speake vnadvised, thou maist trust a foole more then hym. He that delicately bypgeth vpon his seruant from a chyld, shall make hym his master at length.

An angry man spyleth by strife, and he that beareth euell wyll in his mynde, doeth muche euell. After prynces cometh a falle, * but a lowely sprete bypgeth greate wysdome. Who so kepeth company with a thefe, hateth his owne soule: he beareth blasphemies, and telleth it not forth. He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his truste in the Lorde is without daunger. Many there be y seke the prynces fauoure, but euery mans iudgement cometh fro y Lorde. The righteous abhorreth y vngodly, but as for those that be in the ryghte waye the wycked hate them. * (A chyld that heareth the woorde, shall be without destruction.)

The purpasse of the woorde of God, and what he ought to requyre of God, with certayne wonderfull thynges that are in this woorde.

The wordes of Agur: the sonne of Iahkep, and the prophcy that the same man speake vnto Ithiel, euen vnto Ithiel, and Elchall. I am more foolyshe then any man, & haue no mannes vnderstandynge. I neuer learned wysdome nor had knowledge of booly thynges. Who hath climed vp into Heauen? Who hath come downe frome thence? Who hath holden the wynde faste in his hande? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hath sette all the endes of the worlde? What is hys name, or hys sonnes name? Canste thou tell? * al the wordes of God are pure and cleane, for he is a chyld vnto all them, that put they trust in hym. * Putte thou not thyng vnto his wordes, leaste he reprove the, and thou be founde a lyar. Two thynges haue I requyred of the, that thou wylte not denye me before I dye.

The wordes of kynge

Lamuel, and the lesson that hys mother taught hym.

My sonne (why do ye so) þy sone of my body: O my dere beloued sonne: geue not ouer thy strength & waies vnto wemen whiche are the destruction euen of kinges. O Lamuel, it is not for kinges, it is not (I say) for kynge to dypke wyne, nor princes strong drinke: (for there is no secret wher dronke-ness is) lest they beyng dronken, forget the lawe, and peruerete the iudgement of all poore mens chyldren. Geue stronge drinke vnto such as are condemned to death, & wine vnto those that mourne: that they may dypker it, and forget their misery & aduersyte. For thou an aduocate for the dowe and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be socourlesse in this transitory worlde. Open thy mouth, defende the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, and the cause of the poore and helpeles.

Who so findeth an honest faithfull woman, she is muche moze worthy then pearles. The hert of her husband may safely trust in her, so þe shal fal in no ponertie. She wil do him good and not euell al the dayes of her lyfe. She occu-pyeth wolle and flaxe, & laboureth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchauntes shyp, that byngeth her bytailes from a farre. She is vp in the nyght season: to prouyde meate for her household, and foode for her maidens. She considereth lande, and byeth it, & with the frute of her handes she planteth a vineparde.
She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, & courageth her armes. And yf she perceaue þe hous-wyfrye doeth good, her candle goeth not oute by nyght. She layeth her fyngers to þe synndle and her hande taketh holde of the distaffe. She openeth her hand to þe poore: yea, she stretcheth forth her handes to such as haue neede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurt her house, for all her household folkes are clothed w charlet. She maketh her selfe sayre ornamen-tes, her clothing is white sylke and purple. Her husband is much set by in þe gates, when he syt-teth amonge the rulers of the lande. She ma-keth clothe of sylke: and sellet it, & deliuereth gyrdels vnto þe marchaunt. Strengthe and ho-noure is her clothynge, and in the latter day she shal reioyse. She openeth her mouth w wysdō and in her tonge is the lawe of grace. She lo-keth well to the waies of her household: feareth not her bzade w ydelnes. Her chyldren shall arise, & call her blessed & her husband shall make much of her. Many daughters there be þe gather ryche: together: but thou goest aboute the all. As for fauoure, it is disceatfull, and beawtie is a vayne thyng: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she is worthy to be praysed: Geue her of the fruite of her handes, and let her owne wokes praysse her in the gates.

There be thre thynges to hye for me: & as for þe Agle in the ayre, the waye of a serpente ouer a of a man with a yong woman. Suche is þe way also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, whiche saith: As for me, I haue done no harme. Tho-rowe thre thynges the earth is dysquetyed, and the fourth she maye it not beare: Thowowe a ser-uaunt that beareth rule. Thowowe a foole that hath to muche bzade, thowowe a wyfe worthy hatred when she is maried, & thowowe a hand-maiden that is heye to her mapsters. These be foure thynges in the earth, the whiche are very emmetts are but weake people: yet gather they their meate together in the barnest. The cony-es ar but a feble folke, yet make theyr couches among the rockes. The grethoppers haue not a gyde, yet go they forth together by heapes.

The spyder laboureth with her handes, & is in whome no man aryseth vp.

¶ All that is in this worlde is but vanytie.

Eccle. xiii. c.

These are the woordes of the Preacher the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalem. * All is but inuolte vayne vanytie (sayeth the preacher) and all is moste vayne (I saye) and but playn vanytie. For what els hath a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder þe sonne: One generacion passeth awaye, another cometh: but the earth abyedeth still. The sunne aryseth, the sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, þe mowe there ryseth vp agayne. The wynde goeth toward þe south and turneth vnto þe north, fetcheth his compass, whyleth about, & goeth forth, and his circuyte returneth agayne to hym selfe. * All floudes runne into the sea, & yet is the sea it selfe not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne thence they come to flowe agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen that no man can expresse them. * The eye is not satisfied wth syghte the eare is not filled with hearing. * The thyng that hath bene, cometh to passe agayne: and the thyng that hath bene done, shal be done agayne.

Eccle. xiii. b.

¶ Eccle. iii. b.

There is no newe thyng vnder the sunne. Is there any thyng wherof it may be sayd lo this is newe: For it was longe ago in þe tymes that haue bene before vs. The thyng that is past is out of remembraunce: Euen so þe thynges that are for to come, shal nomore be thoughte vpon among them that come after. I my selfe þe preacher was kynge of Israel at Ierusalem, and dyd apply my mynde to seke out & search for knowlage of all thynges that are done vnder heauen. Such trauayl & labour hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercise the selues therin. Thus haue I considered al these thynges þe come to passe vnder the sunne: and lo, they are al but vanytie and veracion of mynde. The croked can not be made streyght, nor the thyng that is vnperfect, cannot be accepted with thynges that are perfect. I communed with myne owne herte, saying: lo, I am come to a greete estate, & haue gotten moze wysdome, then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. Yea, my herte had great experyence of wysdome & knowlege, for therunto I applyed my mynde, that I myght know what were wisdom and vnderstanding what were errour & foolysnesse: and I perceaued, that this was also but a veracion of mynde: for where much wysdome is, there is also great trauayl and dysquietnesse and the moze knowlage a man hath, the moze is his care.

The ii. Chapter.

Aboundaunce of rycheffe, and pleasure, and of buyldyng are vayne thynges,

Ben sayde I thus in my hert: Nowe go to, I wyll take myne ease, & haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanytie also: in so muche, that I sayde vnto the manne geuen to laughte: thou arte mad, and to misthe: what doest thou? So I thoughte in my hert, to geue my selfe vnto wyne, and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wisdom, and to comprehend foolysnesse vntill the tyme that (amongst al the thynges whiche are vnder the sunne) I myght se what were best for men to do, so long as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gozgers faire woorkes. I builded my houses, & planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardes of pleasure & planted trees in them of all maner frutes. * I made pooles of water, to water the grene & frutefull trees: all I boughte seruautes and maydens: and had a great housholde. I s for cattell and shepe, I had moze substance of them, the all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together euen a treasure of kyndes & lades. I prouided me syngers and women, which could playe on instrumentes, to make me mirth & pastyme. I gat me psalteries & songes of malycke. And I was greater, & in moze wysdome then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wyl dome remained with me: and loke what former myne eyes desired, I let them haue it: & therein so euer my hert deleyted or had anye pleasure, I with held it not fro it. Thus my hert reioyced in all that I did: & this was my porcion of al my trauayle. But when I considered all the woorkes that my handes had wroughte, and al þe labour that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanytie and veracion of mynde, & nothyng of anye valewe vnder the sunne.

¶ Then turned I me to consider wysdome, errour & foolysnesse (for what is he among me, þe might be compared to me the kynge in suche woorkes): & I sawe that wysdome excelleth foolysnesse, as farre as lyght dothe darkenesse. For a wyse man hath his eyes in his hed, but thefole goeth in the darkenesse: I perceiued also þe they both had one end. The thought I in my mind. If it happen vnto þe foole as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour any moze for wysdome? So I confessed wythin my hert, that this also was but vanytie. For þe wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as þe foolyshe, for the dayes shal come when all shal be forgoth: yea, the wyse man dyeth as well as the foole. Thus beganne I to be werpe of my lyfe, in so muche that I coulde away with nothyng that is done vnder þe sunne, for all was but vanytie and veracion of mynde: yea I was werpe of my labour, which I had takē vnder the sunne because I shoulde be sayne to leaue them vnto another mā that cometh after me: And who knoweth whether he shal be a wyse man or a foole: And yet shal he be lord of al my labour whiche I with suche wysdome haue taken vnder the sunne. This is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to refraine my mynde from all suche trauayl, as I toke vnder the sunne: for so muche as a man shoulde werpe hym selfe wth wysdome, with vnderstandyng and oportunitie and yet be faine to leaue his laboures vnto another, that neuer shal be for them. This is also a vayne a vayne thyng & great misery. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, & he taketh vnder the sunne, but heuy- nesse, sorowe, and disquietnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? Insomuche, that his hert can not reste in the nyghte: this is also a vayne thyng. * Is it not better the for a man to eate & drynke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? Yea, I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God.

For who wyl eate or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God geueth to y man that is good before hym, wysdome, vnderstand- yng and gladnesse: but vnto the ynnner he ge- ueth weyrynesse (and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thynges that af- terwarde shal be geuen vnto him, whom it plea- seth God. This is now a vayne thyng: yea a very disquietnesse and a vexacion of mynde.

then shal be the tyme and iudgement of al coun- sayles and workes. I commured with myne owne herte also, concernyng the chyldren of me- how God hath chosen them, and yet letteth the appare, as though they wer beastes: for it hap- peneth vnto men as it doeth vnto beastes: & as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of byeth: so that (in this) a man hath no preminence aboue a beaste but all are subdued vnto vanytie.

They go all vnto one place, for as they be al of dust, so shal they al turne vnto dust agayne.

* Who knoweth the spyte of man that goth vpyward, & the breath of y beaste y goth downe to the earth? Wherfore I perceyue that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour, for that is his porcion. But who wyl byrnyng hym to se the thing that shal come after hym?

¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ The misteryes of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The chylde that is poore and wyse. &c.

I turned me, and * consydered al the vyolente wronge that is doone vnder the sunne: and beholde, y tea- res of suche as were oppressed, and there was no man to confort them, or that wolde deliuer and defende the from the violence of theyr oppressours. Wherfore I iud- ged those that are deed, to be more happy then those that be alpye: yea, hym y is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they bothe, because he seeth not the myserable workes that are done vnder the sunne. Agayne, I sawe that all tra- uayle and dylgence of labour that every man taketh in hande, was done of enuy agaynst his neyghboure. This is also a vayne thyng, an a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his han- des together, and eateth vnto his owne fleshe.

One handeful (sayeth he) is better with rest then both the handes full with labour and tra- uayle of mynde. Moreover, I turned me, & be- holde yet another vanitie vnder the sunne.

There is one manne, no mo but hym selfe a- lone, haunyng neyther chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of hys carefull trauayle: hys eyes can not be satisfied wyth rycheesse, & yet doth he not remembre hym selfe, and saye: For whome dooe I take suche trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume a waye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thyng. Therfore two are better then one: for they maye well enioye the profyt of theyr labour. For yf one of theim fall, hys companion helpeth hym vp agayne: But woe is hym that is alone: for yf he fall, he hat not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne, whē two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a bodye be warme alone? One maye be o- uercome, but two maye make resystance.

A threfolde gable is not lyghtely broken. A poore chylde beyng wyse, is better then an olde kynge that docteth, and can not beware in tyme to come.

Very thing hath a tyme: yea, al that is vnder y heauen hath his conuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, & a tyme to die. There is a tyme to plant, and a tyme to plucke vp the thynges y is planted. A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather sto- nes together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refraine from embracyng. A tyme to wyne, & a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cut in peces, & a tyme to sow together. * A tyme to kepe scyence, and a tyme to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els (that doth any thyng) but we- rynesse and labour? For as touchyng the tra- uayle and carefullnesse, which God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exerceysed in it. All this hath he ordeyned mar- nelous goodlye, to every thyng his due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the hertes of men, that they shoulde not comprehend the grounde of his workes which he doth from the begynnyng to the ende. So I perceyued, that in those thynges there is nothyng better for a man, then to be merry and to do wel as long as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and dryn- keth: yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of al his labour, y same is a gyfte of God. I consydered also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth for ever. And that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, y men shulde feare hym. * The thynges that hath bene, is now: and the thynges that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God resto- reth agayne the thing that was paste. Moreo- ver, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgement, & iniquyte in stede of righ- teousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal seperate the ryghteous fro the vngodly, & kyngdome cometh vnto pouerty. And I perceyued that all men liuyng vnder the sunne, go with the seconde chylde, that shall stande vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that haue ben before him, and þe come after him, they are innumerable. And they that come after him shall not reioyse of hym. This is also a vayne thyng and vexacion of mynde. The. v. Chapter.

An admonicion to beware of rache communicacion. We oughte not to maruayle at the oppressyon of the poore. The couetous is not satysfied with his rychesse.

BE not hasty with thy mouthe, & let not thyne herte speake any thyng rashely before God. For God is in heauen, & thou vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where much carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: & where many wordes are, there men may heare foles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to perfourme it. As for foolish vowes he hath no pleasure in them: If thou promise any thyng, paye it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, then that þu shouldest promyse, and not paye. Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy fleshe for to synne, neyther say thou before the angel: that it is thy ignorance. For then God wyl be angry at thy voyce, & destroy all the workes of thine handes. And why? wher as ar many dreames & many wordes, there ar also diuers vanities: but looke þu feare God. * If thou seeest the poore to be oppressed, and wrongfully delt withall, so that equyte and ryghte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruayle not thou at suche a thyng, for one great man kepeth touch with another, and the inpyghte men are in auctorite ouer the poore. The increase of þe earth vpholdeth all thyng: yea the kyng him selfe is maynteyned by hys bandye. He þe loueth money wyl neuer be satysfied wth money: and whoso delytteth in rychesse shall haue no profyt therof. This is also a vayne thyng. Where as much rychesse is, there are many also that spede the awaye. And what pleasure moze hath he þe posselleth them, sayng that he may loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouryng man slepeth sweetely, whether it be lytle or much þe eateth but the aboundaunce of the rich, wyl not suffer hym to slepe. Yet is there a soze plage, which I haue sene vnder the sunne, (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perissh with his great myserie & trouble: and yf he haue a child, it getteth nothyng. * Lyke as he came naked out of hys mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne: & carryeth nothyng a waye with hym of all hys laboure. This is a miserable plage that he shall go a waye rue as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the wynde? All þe dayes of his lyfe also he dydeate in the darke, wth greate carefulnesse, sicknesse, & sorowe. * Ther fore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thing, a man to eate and drynke & to be refreshed of all his laboure, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe which God geueth hym, for this is his porciõ. For vnto whomsoever God geueth rychesse, goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porciõ, & to be refreshed of his laboure: this is the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not muche howe long he shall lyue, for as much as God wylleth his daye with gladnesse.

The. vi. Chapter.

The myserie of the ryche and couetous. The differens of a foole and a wyse manne.

Here is yet a plage vnder þe sunne, and it is a general thing among men, whẽ God geueth a man rychesse, goodes & honoure, so þe wanteth nothyng of all that his herte can desire, and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thyng & a miserable plage. If a man beget a hundred children, & liue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in number, yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buried, as for hym I saye: that vntimelye byrth is better then he. For he cometh to naught, & spendeth his tyme in darcknesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hath he moze rest then the other. Yea, though he luyed two thousand yeres yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place! All the labour that a man taketh is for hym self, and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse moze then the foole. What helpeth it the poore, þe knoweth to walke with foolcs before the lyuynge? The clere syght of the eyes is better then þe soule shoulde walke after desires of þe luff. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thing, & a disquietnes of mind. The thing that hath ben is named already, and knowen þe it is euen man hym selfe, neither may he go to lawe wth hym that is mightier then he. Many thynges there be þe encreaseth vanytie: and what hath a man elles? For who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is but a shadow. Or who wyl tell a man what shall happen after hym vnder the sunne.

The. vii. Chapter.

That whiche passeth our strengthes and wyttes, ought we not to seeke after.

Good name is moze worth, then pryce of any opyntment, & the daye of death is better then þe daye of birth. It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a banquettyng house. For there is the end of all men: and he that is liuyng, taketh it to herte: grauntis is better then to laughe: for when the countenance is heuy, the herte is reformed. The best of þe wyse is in þe mourning house, but þe best of the foolys is in the house of myrth. * It is better to geue eare to þe chastyng of a wyse man then to heare the song of foolcs. For the laughyng of foolcs is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thyng.

The wyle man hateth wrong dealing: & abhorreth the herte that coueteth rewardes. Better is it to colidre pende of a thyng then the begynnyng. The patient of spiryte is better then the hys mynde. We not hastily angre in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of foolery. Saye not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of y olde tyme were better then they that benow: for that were no wyle questyon. What dom with inheritaunce is good: yet better is it with them that without care maye behold the sunne. For wysdō defendeth as well as mony and the excellent knowlage & wysdome geueth lyfe vnto hym þ hath it in possession. Consydre the worke of God, howe þ no man can make þ thyng streyght whiche he maketh croked.

The well þ tyme of prosperitie, & remēbre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh þ one by the other, so þ a man can fynde nothing els. All thynges haue I consydrēd in þ tyme of my vanytie: that the iuste man perissheth for hys rightousnesse sake, & the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therefore, * be thou nether to rightous nor ouerwyle þ thou perissh not, be nether to vnyghteous also nor to foolissh, lest þ dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, and not to let þ go out of thy hand for he þ feareth God, cometh forth w them al.

Wysdō geueth more courage vnto the wyle, then ten myghty men of the cytie: * for there is not one iust vpon earth þ doeth good & synneth not. Take no hede vnto euery worde þ is spoken, lest thou heare thy sernaunt curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth that thou thy self al so hast oft tūmes spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued in wysdome: for I thoughte to be wyle: * but she wente farther from me then she was before: yea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mind vnto knowlage, & to seke & search out science, wysdom & vnderstanding: to know þ foolisshnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of dotting foolis. And I founde, that * a woman is bitterer then death, for she hath caste abzode her hert as a net that men fy she wyth: & her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shal escape fro her, but the synner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde (sayth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thyng must be consydrēd with an other, þ a man may come by knowlage: whiche as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman among all. Lo this only haue I found, þ * God made man iust and ryght, but they sought many inuencions.

The. viii. Chapter.

The thynges that comendement ought to be obeyed. Gladnesse is a good thyng vnder the sunne.

Who is wyle? who hath the knowlage to mak an answer? A mans wysdō maketh his face to shyne: but vnfamefastnes putteth it out of fauour. I must kepe the kynges cōmaundement, & the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of his sight, and se thou continue in no euell thyng, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym that doth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, hys commaundement is myghty: Euen so, * Who maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? * Whoso kepeth the cōmaundemente, shall fele no harme, but a wyle mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thyng wyll haue oportunitie & iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulnesse, and sozow. And why? a mā knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyll tell hym? Nether is there any man that hath power ouer the spyryte, to kepe styl the spiryte nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the batayle: nether maye vngodlynesse delouer the that medle wythall.

All these thynges haue I consydrēd, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke þ is vnder the sunne: how one man hath lordship vpon an other to his owne harme. For * I haue sene often the vngodly brought to they graues: & yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, which in þ cytye were growen out of memozy, as were those also þ lyued well. This is also a vayne thyng because now that euell workes are not hastily punyshed, the hert of man geueth hym self ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euell personne offende an hundred tymes, & God defer, geuyng hym longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go well with theim þ feare God, because they haue hym before their eyes. Againe, as for the vngodly, it shall not be wel with hym, nether shall he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a shadow: so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanytie vpon earth: There be iustmen, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly.

Agayne, there be vngodlye, with whome it goeth as though they had þ workes of þ ryghteous. This haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therefore I commende gladnes, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth hym vnder the sunne. And so I applyed my minde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the trauayle þ is in the worlde (and that of suche a fastyon, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, nether daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it not possible for a man to attayne vnto the workes þ are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them oute, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wyle man wolde vnder take to knowe theim, yet shall he not fynde them.

The. ix. Chapter

A man wotteth not by the ryghtousnesse of hys owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lye mery with his wyfe. A prayse of wysdome.

All these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke oute. The ryghteous and wise: yea, & they sernautes also are in þ hande of God: and there is no man man that knoweth eyther loue or hate, but all thinges are befoze the. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goth with the righteous as wyth the vngodly: * wyth the good and cleane as wyth the vncleane: wyth hym that offreth, as wyth hym that offreth not, lyke as it goeth with the verteous, so goeth it also with the synner. As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also, to hym that is afrayed to be forsworne. Among all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto al alpe. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and madde foolysheenesse is in theyr hertes, as long as they lyue, vntill they dye.

B And why: as longe as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (say they) is better then a deed Lyon: for they þe liuyng, knowe that they shal dye: but they that be deed, knowe nothyng: neyther deserue they any moze. For theyr memory all is forgotten, so þe they be neyther loued, hated nor enuyed: neyther haue they any moze parte in the world in all that is done vnder the sunne. So thou thy waye then, eate thy bread with ioye, & drynke thy wyne with a glad hert, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alway whyte, * and let thy heed lacke no opntement.

Math. vi. b.

Prov. x. b.

* Use thy selfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyse whom thou louest, all þe daies of thy lyfe which is but vayne, that God geueth the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanyte: for that is thy porcyon in this lyfe, of all thy labour & traualle that thou takest vnder þe sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do wyth all thy power, for in the graue that thou goest vnto, there is neyther worke, counsaile, knowledge, nor wysdome.

C So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder þe sunne, & I saw, þe in running it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayle it helpeth not to be strong to fedying, it helpeth not to be wyse: to rycheesse it helpeth not to be subtyl: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be connyng: but that all lyeth in time & fortune. For * a mā knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fyre are taken with the angle, & as the byrdes are caught with þe snare: Euen so are men taken in the peryllous tyme, when it cometh sodaynly vpon them.

Luke. xxi. b.

D This wysdome haue I seene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thyng. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men wyth in it: so there came a greate kyng & besyged it, & made greate bulworkes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was found a pooze mā (but he was wyse) whiche with his wysdome delpyered the cytie yet was there no body that had any respecte to such a simple man. Then sayd I: wisdom is better then strenght. Neuerthelesse, a simple mans wysdome is delpyled, and hys wordes are not hearde. A wyse mans counsaile that is folowed in seylence, is farre aboue the cryng of a capytayne amonge fooles. * For wysdome is better then harnesse: but one vnthyffte alone destryeth muche good.

Sap. vi. a.

1. Re. xvi. a.

11. Re. xvi. a.

A Deed fyre doeth corrupte swete opntment, & maketh it to synne. Euen so ofte tymes he that is made for wisdom and honour, is abhorred because of a little foolysheenesse. A wyse mans bert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles bert is vpon the left. A foole wyl the we hym self when he goeth by the waye: yet thynketh he that euery man doth as foolyschly as hym selfe. If a pynce shall spyrite be geuen the to beare rule, * be not negligent then in thine offyce: for he that can take cure of hym self, auoydeth great offences.

An other plage is there, whiche I haue seene vnder the sunne: namely, the ignorance that is commonly among pynces: in that a foole lyteth in great dignytie, & the ryche are set downe beneth: I haue seene seruantes ride vpon horses and pynces goyng vpon their fete as it were seruantes. * But he that dyggeth vpon a pyte shall fall therin hym selfe: & whoso breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shall bite hym. Whoso remoueth the stones, shall haue traualle withale: and he þe weth wood, shalbe hurte therwith.

When an yron is blunt, & the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, & that wyl myght. Euen so doth wisdom folow diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpente þe syngeth wythoute dyspyng. The wordes out of a wyse mans mouth, are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyl destroy hym selfe. The beginning of his talking is foolisshnes, & the last worde of his mouth is starke madness. A foole is full of wordes, & a man can not tel what shal come to passe, who wyl then warne hym of it that shal folowe after hym? The labour of þe foolyshe is greuous vnto them, while they knowe not how to go into þe cytie. Woe be vnto þe (þe lande) whose kyng is but a chylde, & whose pynces are early at theyr bankettes. But well is þe (þe land) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose pynces eate in due season, for necessitye not for luste. Thowowe slouthfulnesse the balles falle downe, & thowowe ydle handes it rainerhin at þe house. Meate maketh men to laugh, & wine maketh them mery: but vnto money are all thynges obedyent. Wyse the kyng no euill in thy thought, & speake no hurt of þe rich in thy pryue chambze: for a byrde of the ayre shal betray thy voyce, and wyth her fetters shal she bewraye thy wordes.

The .xi. Chapter.

Recheff ought to be dyspnted vnto the needy.

If thy breed vpon wete faces, and so shalt thou fynde after many dayes. Geue parte seuen dayes, and also vpon þe. For I knowest not what misery shal come vpon earth. When the cloudes are ful, they poure out raine vpon earth. And whē þe tree falleth (whether it be toward the South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, wynde, shall not sow and he þ hath no respecte vnto the cloudes, shal not reape. Now: lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the spyrite howe it entreteth into þ lytle body, beyng yet in þ mowthe wombe: Euen so þ knowest not the waye of God, which is the woꝝkemaister of all.

Ceasse not thou therfoze with thy handes to some thy sede, whether it be in the moynynge or in the euynge: for thou knowest not whether thys or that shall pꝛospere, & yf they both take it is þ better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaunt thing is it for the eyes to loke vpon the Sunne yf a man lyue many yeres, and be glad in them all, let hym remembre the dayes of darkenesse, which shalbe many, and that foloweth: al thynges shalbe but vanytie. Be glad then (O thou yong man) in thy youth, & let thy hert be mery in thy yonge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne herte, and the luste of thyne eyes but be þ sure, that God shall brynge the into iudgemente for all these thynges.

The. xii. Chapter.

From our youth ought we to conspyre, and regarde the goodnesse of God.

Rat a waye dyspleasure oute of thyne hert, and remoue euil from thy body: for childehode & youth is but vanytie. Remembre thy maker the sooner in thy youth, or euer þ dayes of aduersytie come, & or the yeres draw nye, wen þ shalt saye: I haue not pleasure in the, befoze the sunne, þ light, the mone & starres be darkened, and or the cloudes turne agayne after the rayne whē the keepers of the house shall tremble, & when the strong men shall bowe them selues, when þ milners stande still, because they be so fewe, and when þ sight of the windowes shall waxe dymme, when the doores in the stretes shalbe shut, & when þ voyce of þ mylner shalbe layd downe: when men shal crye vp at the voyce of the byrde, & when all the daughters of musike shalbe brought lowe: whē men shall feare in hye places, and be afrayed in the stretes, when the Almond tree shal flozpe, and be laden with the greshopper, and when al lust shall passe (because man goth to hys longe home, and the mourners go aboute the stretes) O: euer the syluer lace be taken away, & or the golden wel be broken: O: the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the chesterne. Then shall the duste bee turned agayne vnto earthe, from whence it came: & the spyrite shal retourne vnto God, whiche gaue it. * All is but vanytie (sayth the preacher) al is but plaine vanytie.

The preacher was yet moze wysse, & taught þ people knowlage: he gaue good hede, soughte out the grounde, and set forth many parables: his diligence was to fynd out acceptable woꝝdes, yfghte scripture, and the woꝝdes of trueth. For * the woꝝdes of the wysse are lyke pyckes and nayles, that go thozowe, where wylth the fluffe gathered is holden vp: for they are geuen of one shepherde onelye. Therfoze be ware (my sonne) of that doctryne that is besyde thys: for to make many bokes, it is an endeleffe woꝝke: and to loude crypunge werpeth the bodye.

Let vs heare the conclusyon of all thynges: Feare God, and kepe hys commaundementes: For that toucheth all men. For God shal iudge all woꝝkes and secret thynges, whether they be good or euell.

The.iii. Chapter.

How sayre art thou my loue, howe I sayre art thou: thou haste dones eyes, helpe that whiche lyeth byd wth in. * Thy herpe lockes are lyke the wolle of a flocke of goates that be shorne vpon mount Silead: Thy teeth are lyke shepe of y^e same big nesse, which went vpon from the washyng place: where euery one beareth two twinnes, and not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy lippes are lyke a rosecoloured ryband, thy wordes are lovely, thy chekes ar like a pece of a pomegranat wth in thine heeres. Thy necke is like y^e tower of Dauid buylded wth costly stones, lyng out on the sydes wherupon there hange a. x. shyl des: yea, al the weapōs of the giantes. * Thy two brestes are lyke two twinnes of younge Roes, whiche fede amonge roes. O that I myght go to the mountayne of myrr, & to the hyl of frankincense: till the daye breake, & tyl y^e shadowes be past awaye. Thou arte all sayre (O my loue) & no spot is there in the. Come to me fro Libanus (O my spouse) come to me fro Libanus, loke fro the top of Amanā, from the top of Sanir, and Hermō, from y^e Lyons dēnes, and fro the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wth loue bewitched my hert, O my syster my spouse: y^e hast bewitched my herte wth one of thyne eyes & wth one cheyne of thy necke.

O how sayre are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse: Thy brestes are more pleasant then wyne, & the smel of thyne oymentes passeth all spyes. Thy lippes, O my spouse, drop as the honny combe: yea mylke and honny is vnder thy tunge, and y^e smel of thy garmentes, is lyke the smel of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse: a gardē wel locked, and a sealed well. The frutes that are planted in the are lyke a very paradys of pōgranates, wth swete frutes: as Camphire, Rardus, and Saf fron, Calamus, Synamō, wth all swete smellynge trees: Myrr, Aloes, and all the best spyes: a well of gardens, a well of luyng waters whiche ranne downe from Libanus. Althou nozt wynde, come thou southwynd, and blow vpon my garden, that the smel therof maye be carped on euery syde: yea, that my beloued may come into his garden, and eate of the swete frutes that growe therein.

The.v. Chapter.

Im come into my gardē. O my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrr with my spye. I haue eatē honny wth my honny combe, I haue dronke my wine wth my milke. Eat, O ye frendes, drynke & be mery, O ye beloued As I am a slepe, and my herte is wakynge I heare y^e voyce of my beloued, whē he knocketh Open

Ope to me, O my syster, my loue, my doue, my derlyng, for my heade is full of dewe, & the loc-kes of my heare are full of the nyght droppes.
I haue put of my coote, howe can I doo it on a gaine? I haue washed my fete, howe shal I file them agayne? My loue put in his hande at the dole, & my herte was moued within me. I stode vp to open vnto my beloued, & my handes dropped with Myrr, & the Myrr rane downe my fingers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my be-loued, but he was departed and gone his way.
Howe when he spake, my herte was gone: I sought hym, but I could not fynde hym: I cry-ed vpo him, neuer theles, he gaue me no answer.
So the watchmen went about the cite: found me: smote me, & wounded me: Yea, they kepte the walles, toke away my kearchafe fro me.

I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, yf ye fynde my beloued, yf ye tell hym howe that I am sycke for loue. What maner of man is thy loue aboue other louers? O yf fairest among women: O what can thy loue do moze the other louers that y chargest vs so straitly?
As for my loue, he is whyte & redde coloured, a goodly person among ten thousand, his heed is as the mooste fyne golde, yf lockes of his heare are bushed, and blacke as a crow. His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brookes, as though they were washed with mylke, & are set lyke perles in golde. His chekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Apothecaries plant all maner of swete thynges.

His lippes are lyke roses that droppe swete smellynge Myrr. Hys handes are lyke golde-rynges, hauyng inclosed the precyous stone of Charlis. Hys bodye is as the pure puerp, decte ouer with Saphires: His legges are as yf pillers of Marbell, sette vpon sockettes of golde.
His face is as Libanus: and as the be wote of yf Cedre trees. The woordes of his mouthe are swete: yee, he is al together louelye. Suche one is my loue. O ye daughters of Jerusalem, such a one is my loue.

ther: and dere vnto her that bare her.

When the daughters sawe her, they sayd she was blessed. Yea: the Quenes and wyues praysed her. What is she this that loketh forth as the moonyng: saye as the moone, clere as the sunne, and fearfull as an armie of men w theyr banners. I went downe into the nut garden to see what grew by the brookes, and to loke yf yf vyneparde slopyshed, or yf the pomgranates were not forth. I knewe not that my soule had made me the charyot of yf people that be vnder trybute. Turne agayne turne agayne. O thou perfect one turne agayne, turne agayne & we wil loke vpon yf. What wyl ye se in yf Sulampte?
She is lyke men of warre singing in a cōpany.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

Howe pleasaunt ar thy tredynges wyt thy shes, thou Dynces daughter: Thy thynges are lyke a fat-er iewell, whiche is wroughte by a connyng workemaster. Thy navel is lyke a round goblet, whiche is neuer without drynke. Thy wombe is lyke a heape of wheate that is set about with roses.

* Thy two brestes are lyke two twines of ponge roes. Thy necke is as it were a Towre of puerp: thine eyes also are lyke the water poles that are in Belebion beside the porte of Bathzabbim, thy nose is lyke the towre of Liba-nus, whiche loketh towarde Damascus.

That heade that standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmell: and the heare of thy heade is lyke purple, and lyke a king going forth with his gard about hym. O howe saye and louely art thou my derlyng in pleasures: Thy stature is lyke a palme tree, and thy brestes lyke yf grapes. I sayde I wyl clyme vp into the Palme tree, and take holde of his hye bzaunches.

Thy brestes also shalbe as yf wyne clusters the smel of thy nostrilles lyke as the smel of ap-pels, & thy lawes lyke the best wyne.

Which goth straight vnto my beloued, & bzasteth forth by the lypes of the auncient elders There wyl I turne me vnto my loue, & he shal turne him vnto me. O come on my loue, we wil go forth into the felde, and take oure lodgyng in the byllages. In the moonyng wyl we go se the vynepard: we wyl se yf yf vine besprong forth, yf the grapes be growne, and yf the pomgranates be hot oute. There wyl I geue the my brestes: the Mandragoras geue their swete smel, and beside our dozes are all maner of pleasaunt frutes, both new and olde: whiche I haue kept for the, o my beloued.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

That I myght fynde the wpythoute, I kylle the, whom I loue as my bzo-ther whiche luct my mothers brestes: & that yf shal not be despyed, I wyl leade yf & bring yf into my mothers house: that yf mightest teache me, & yf I myght geue yf drynke of speed wyne, & of the swete sappe of my pomgranates. * Hys left hande shalbe vnder my heade, and his ryght hande shal embrace me.

¶ The. iiii. I char-

The Prophecye.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wake not up my loue, nor touch her, til she be content her selfe. What is the this, that cometh up from the wilderness: and leaucth vpon her loue? I wake the vp among f apple trees, where thy mother conceived the, where thy mother (Isay) brought the into the world. O let me as a seale vpon thine harte, and as a seale vpon thynne arme: for loue is myghtie as the death, and gelously as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so many waters are not able to quenche loue, neither maye the strenges drowne it.

Per, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde count it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes, what shal we do for our syster, when she shal be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal bulde a siluer bulworke ther vpon: yf she be an open doze, we shal fasten her with bozdes of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal Hamon, & this vineyard he deliuered he vnto the keepers: yf every one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousand peces of syluer.

My vineyard is in my syght: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the keepers two hundreth with the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardeyns. O let me heare thy voyce that my companions may hearken to the same. O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a Roo: or a ponge herte vpon the swete smelling mountaynes.

The boke of the Propheete Esaye.

The fyrste Chapter.

Esay prophesyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem, because of the synnes.

In the visyon of Esay f sonne of Amos, which he sawe vpon Iuda and Jerusalem: in f dayes of Uzzia, & Ioathan, Ahaz & Iehoziah kynges of Iuda. Heare: O heauen, and hearken o earth. For f Lorde hath spoken. I haue nourished & brought up chyldre, but they haue done wyckedly agaynst me. The ore hath knowen his owner, and the asse his masters cryb: but Israell hath receyued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this synful nacio, a people of great iniquite: a frowarde generacyon vnnaturall chyldzen. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue provoked the holpe one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone back warde. Whereby shulde ye be plagued anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The whole head is sycke and the herte is heuy. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole parte in all your bodye, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stripes which canne ther be helped, bounde up, molisped, no ease in anye ioyntmente.

Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are burnt up, your enemies deuoure your land, & ye must be faine to stand, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate as it were with enemyes in a battayle. Desolour, the daughter of Sion is left alone lyke a cotage in a vineyard, lyke a lodge in a garde of cucumbers, lyke a beseged cite. And except the Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe almyne, we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, & lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare the worde of f Lorde: ye Lorde of Sodoma: and hearken vnto the lawe of our God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offere ye so many sacrificys vnto me? I am full of f burnt offrynges of wethers, and of the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the blood of bullockes, lambes: & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyrezth you to treade within my porches? Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thyng vnto me. I maye not awaye with your newe Moones, your Sabothes and solempne dayes. Your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate your newe holpe dayes and fastynges, euen from my very herte. They make me wery, I can not abyde them. What pou hold out your handes, I wyl turne myue eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wyl I heare nothing at all, seing your handes are full of bloude.

Wathe you, make you cleane, put away your euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell. Learne to do ryght, applie youre selues to equite, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryght: let the wydowes complaynt come before you. Nowe go to (saith the Lorde) let vs talke together. Though your synnes be as red as scarlette, they shal be as white as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shal be as white as wol. Yf ye be louyng & obedient ye shal enioye the best thyng f groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate & rebellious, ye shal be deuoured wth the sword: for thus the Lorde hath promised wth his owne mouth.

Howe happeneth it then f the ryghteous cite (whiche was full of equyte) is become vnfaythfull as an whoze? Ryghteousnesse dwelt in it, but nowe murderers. Thy siluer is turned to dross, and thy wyne mixt with water. Thy prynces are wycked and companions of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewarde. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe hym not to his right, neyther wyl they let the widowes causes come before theim. Therefore saith the Lorde God of hostes, f mightie one of Israel: Ah, I must ease me of mine enemies, and auenge me of mine aduersaries. I shall lay my hand vpon the, & burne out thy dross from the finest and purest, & put out all thy tyme, and set thy iudges againe as they were sometime & thy Senatoures as they were from the beginning. Then shalte thou be called the righteous cite, the faithfull cite. Sion shal be redeemed with equitye, and they shal turne agayne vnto her in righteousnes. For the transgressours & vngodly, and such as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lorde must al together be vterly destroyed. And excepte ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherein ye haue so delited, & of the gardes that ye haue chosen, ye shalbe as an oke whose leaves are fallen awaye: & as a garden þat haue no moystnes. And as for the glory of these thin ges it shalbe turned to dyre strawe & he þat made it to a sparke. And they shal both turne together, so þat no man shalbe hable to quenche them.

The. ii. Chapter.

Of the commynge and death of Christe, and of the cal-lyng of the heathen.

This is the worde þat was opened vnto Clave the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It shalbe also in the laste daye, that the hyl wher the house of the Lorde is buylded, shalbe the chefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all lile hylles. And all nacions shal prech vnto hym, and the multitude of people shal go, speaking thus one to another: vp, let vs go to the hill of the Lorde and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and that we may walke in his pathes. For þat lawe shall come out of Syon, & the worde of þe Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentente among the heathen, & shal reforme the multitude of people: they shal breake their swerdes also in to mattocks, & their speares to make spithes.
And one people shal not lyfte vp a weapon a-gaynst another, neyther shal they learne to fghte from thence forth.

Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the light of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde they fathers in Sorceres (wher they haue as the Philistines had) & in straunge children they thinke the selues to haue ynough.
They lande is full of syluer and golde, neither is there any ende of they treasure: Their land is also full of horses, and no ende is ther of their charettes. Their land also is ful of wayne god-des, & before the worke of they owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen before þe thyng that they owne fyngers haue made.

There smyth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so þat thou canst not bynge hym awaye from thence.

And therfore get the into some rocke, & hyde the in the ground for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his maiesty: Which casteth downe the hygh lokes of presumptuous personnes, & byngeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde only shalbe exalted in that day. For the day of the Lorde of hostes shal go ouer all pryde & presumpcon vpon all them þat exalte them selues, and shal bring them all downe: vpon all hygh and stout Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon al the okes of Basan: vpon all hygh hylles, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all costly towers, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon al ship-pes of the sea, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunte to looke vpon.

And it shal bynge downe the pryde of man & and laye mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, & the Lorde shal onely haue the victorie in that daye. But the ydoles shal vterly be roted out.
Men shal crepe into holes of stone, & into caues of the earth, for feare of þe Lorde, & for the glory of his maiesty: what tyme as he shal wake him vp to condempne þe earth. Then shal man cast awaye his goddes of syluer, and his goddes of golde (whiche he neuer thelesse had made to ho-noure them) vnto Moles & Wattes. And they shal crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his maiesty, when he ryseth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then anye man whose byethe is in his nostrilles. For what is he of reputation?

The. iii. Chapter.

Of the propheth that at the commynge of Christ all strength and powre shalbe put forth of Iury.

Ro, þe Lorde God of Hostes doth take away from Jerusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meat and drynke, the captayne & the soudary, the iudge & the prophete, the wyle and the aged man, the pryncce of fifty yere olde, and the honorable: the Senatours & men of vnderstandynge: the maysters of craftes and orators. And I shal geue them children to be their prynces, & babes shal haue the rule of you.
The people also shalbe pylled & polled, and one shal euer be doinge violence & wronge to another. The boye shal presume agaynst the elder and the vyle personne agaynst the honorable.
Yee, one shal take a frende of his owne kynred by the holme, & say: thou hast clothinge: thou shalt be our heade, for thou mayste kepe vs fro this fall and parell.

Then shal he sweare & saye: I can not helpe you. Moreover, there is neyther meate nor clothyng in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda muste decaye because that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his maiesty vnto anger. The chaunging of they countenance bewrayeth the, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hide them not. Woe be vnto they sou-les, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them sel-ues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shal enioye the frutes of they studies. But woe be to the vngodly & vnyghteous, for they shalbe rewarded after they workes. Children are extorcyoners of my people: and women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceaue the, and depraue the waye of thy fote steppes. The Lorde is here to comen of the matter, and stan-deth to geue iudgement of þe people: The Lorde shal come forth to reason with the Senatours and prynces of his people. It is ye þat haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the poore is in your houses.
Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, & marre þe faces of the poore, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde: Seyng the daughters of Sion as become so proude, & come in with stretched out neckes, & with vaine wanton eyes: saying they come in tripping so nycely with theyr fete: Therfore shall the Lord haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shall discouer theyr shame. In that day shall the Lord take awaye the gorgeousnesse of theyr apparel and spanges cheynes, partelets, & colars, brace lettes, & boones, the goodly floured, wyde and brydged rayment, brooches, and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes & vales, kercheles and pyrmes, glasses & cyppesses, bonets, and taches.

And in stead of good smel, there shall be stinke amonge them. And for theyr girdles there shall be loose bandes. And for wel set beare there shall be baldnesse. In steade of a stomacher, a sake clothe, and for theyr bewtye wytherdnesse, and sunne burnyng. Pour hus bandes and myghtie men shall perishe with the swerde in battayle.

At that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall syt as desolate folke vpon the earth.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ If for wante of manne, seven women desyre to haue one man:

Then shall seven wyues take holde of one man: and saye, we wyll laye all oure meate and clothynge together in comen: only that we may be called thy wyues, and that thy shamefull reproche maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the braunche of the Lord be bewtyful and mighty, & the frute of the earth shall be faire and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall sprynge therof. Then shall the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: Namely al suche as are written among the liuing at Jerusalem: what time as the Lord shall washe awaye the fylthynesse of the daughters of Sion, & purge the bloud out from Jerusalem with the wynde of his iudge-ment, and with fyre. Moreover, vpon all the dwellynge of the hille of Syon & vpon theyr whole congregacyon, shall the Lord prouide a crosse & smoke by daye, & the shynynge of a flamme by nyghte for all theyr glory shall be preserved. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place & refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether and rayne.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ Of Christe and his vyneparde, with an exortacyon of contynensse and dyckennesse.

Iowe wyll I sing my beloued frend a songe of my frendes, because of his vyneparde. My beloued frende hath a vyneparde in a verpe frute-full plenteous grounde.

Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde a-boute, and planted it with goodlye grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therein: And afterwarde when he looked that it shoulde brynge hym grapes: it broughte forth thornes. Nowetherfore (O ye Citizens of Jerusalem & whole Juda:) Judge

I praye you betwixt me, and my vyneparde.
What more could haue ben done, for it hath not done: Wherefore then hath it giuen thornes: where I looked to haue had grapes of it.

Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I shall do with my vyneparde. I wyll take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wal that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be dygged nor cut but beare thornes and bryeres. I wyll also saye vnto the cloudes that they shall not raine vpon it. As for the vyneparde of the Lord of hostes: it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda is saye plantynge. Of these he looked for quy-ete, but se there is wyronge: for ryghteousnesse, lo it is but myserye.

Woe vnto them that saye one house to another, and brynge one lande to nyghe vnto another, that the pooze can get no more grounde: that ye maye dwel vpon the earth alone. Their thynges are in the eares of the Lord of hostes: shall not many greater & more gorgeous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwel in them?
And ten acres of vynes shall geue but a quart, & thirty bushels of sede shall geue but an Epha.

Woe be vnto them, that relye vpon early to fo-lowe dyckennesse, and to them that continue so vntyll nyghte, and tyll they be sette on fyre & wyne. In those companyes are harpes & lutes, tabzettes and pypes, and wyne. But they regard not the worke of the Lord & confidre not the operacion of his handes. Therfore cometh my folke also into captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glorie is famished with hunger, and their pryde is marred for thyr.
Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that their pryde, booyng, and welthe, with suche as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath a man a fall, and is brought lowe and the high loke of the proude shall be laid downe.

But the Lord of hostes shall be exalted in iud-gemente, and God that is holie, is prapled in ryghteousnesse. Then shall the shepe eate, in order, & the ryche mens landes shall be laied wast, shall straungers deuoure. Woe be vnto them, drawe wyckednes vnto the with cordes of va-nitie & synne, as it wer with a carte rope.

Which vnto I speake on this maner: let hym make haste now, and go forth with his worke, that we maye se it. Let the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, & drawe nye, that we maye knowe it. Woe be vnto them that call euell good: and good euell, whiche made darkenesse lyght, & light darkenesse, & make sowte swete, & swete sowte. Woe be vnto them that are wyse in theyr owne syghte, and thynke the selues to haue understanding. Woe be vnto them that are stronge to suppe out wyne, & expert men to set by dyck-ennesse. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewarde, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghteous. Therfore lyke as fyre lyketh vnto the strawe and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shall be as corrupcion and theyr blossom shall vanishe as a waye lyke dust.

dust: for they haue caste awaye the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blasphemed the worde of the holpe maker of Israel.

Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst his people, & he waketh his hande at them: yea, he hath imptten, so that the hilles dye tremble. And their carcasses dyd lye in the open stretes, lyke mier. And in all this p wrath of God hath not ceased, but his hande is stretched oute still. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and cal vnto them in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastily w spede. There shall not bee one faynte nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggish nor slepy per sonne. There shall not one of them put of p gy-de from his loynes, nor lowse the latched of his shoo. His arrowes are sharpe, and all his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke flint, & his cart wheles lyke a storme wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, & he roareth lyke Lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche vp the pray and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them.
In that daye they shall be so scarce vpon theim, as the sea. And if we loke vnto p lande, behold it shall be all darknesse & sorrow. If we looke toward heauen, beholde, it shall be darke.

The. vi. Chapter.

Elaye sawe the glory of the Lorde, and was sent to prophete the desolacion of Iurpe.

In the same yere that kynge Oziah died, I sawe the Lorde sittyng vpon an hygge and gloriouse seate, & his traine fylling the temple: And about hym stode Seraphins, wherof euery one had sixe winges. With twaine eache couered his face, with twayne his fete, & with twayne did he flye. They cried also echone to another on this maner: holy, holy, holy is p Lorde of hostes. The whole world is full of his glory yea, the greates and doze chekes moued at hys cryng and the house was full of smoke. Then I said, Woe is me: For I am lost: in as much as I am a man of vncleane lippes, and dwell amonge people that hath vncleane lippes also:
for mine eyes haue sene p king & Lorde of hostes.

Then stode one of the Seraphins vnto me haupng a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges and touched my mouth: and saide, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, and thyne vnryghteousnesse is taken away, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I heard Whom shall I sende, and who wyl be our messaunger? Then I sayde: here am I: sende me.

And he sayde: go, and tell this people: * ye shall beare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: yee shall plainly see and not perceyue. Harden the heart of this people, stoppe they eares, and shut they eyes: p they se not with they eyes, heare not with they eares, and vnderstand not with they hertes, and conuerte: and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, howe long? he answered: vntill p cities be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, til the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so p the lande shall lye wast a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, and the lande shall re-tourne and be layde waste. And as p Cerebint tree and oke in wynter caste they leaues, & yet haue they sappe in theim: so shall the holy sede continue in they substance.

The. vii. Chapter.

The Sirians moue battayle agaynst Jerusalem.
A virgyne shall beare a chylde.

It happened in the tyme of Ahas: p A sonne of Iotham, which was p sonne of Aziah kynge of Iuda: that * Ra-zin the kynge of Siria, and Bechab the sonne of Romeliah, kynge of Israel, went vp toward Jerusalem to belege it, but Razin was not able to winne it. Now when p house of dauid (that is Ahas) heard worde ther of, that Siria & Ephraim were confederate to gether his hert quaked (yea & the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Elay: go mete Ahas (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at p head of the ouerpole, in p fote parh by p fullers ground and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy self: and be styl, but feare not, neyther be faynte harted, for these two sayles: that is for these two smoking fyrebrandes the wrath and furyousnes of Ra-zin the Sirian, and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim, & Romelies sonne haue wyckedly conspyred agaynst the saynge: We wyl go vp agaynst Iuda, bere them, and bring them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel.

For thus saith the Lord God therto: It shall not so go forth: neither so come to passe, for the head cytie of the Sirians is Damascus, but p heade of Damascus is Razin. And after fyue and thre score yere, shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And the cytie of Ephraim is Samaria but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne.
If ye beleue not, it cometh of this: that ye ar vnfaithful to God. Whereouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahas sayng, requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be toward the depth beneth or toward the height aboue. The sayde Ahas: I wyl requyre none, neyther wyl I tempte the Lorde.

The Lorde answered: Then here to, ye of the house of Dauid: is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token: Beholde a virgyne shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and (thou his mother) shalt call his name Emanuel. Butter and honye shall be eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For or ener the chylde come to knowlage: to eschue the euell, & chose the good, the lande (that thou so abhorreste) shall be desolate of bothe her kynges. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda) tho-rowe the kynge of the Assirians. For at p same tyme

tyme shall the Lorde whysle for the flyes that are about the water of Egypte, & for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come & shall lyght all in the desolate valeys, in the holes of stones: vpon all thorny and bushy places.

D And the same tyme: shall the Lorde shawe the heare of the head & the fete and the beard cleane of, with the rasure that he shall hyer beyond the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cow, and two shepe. Then because of the abundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter and eat it. So that euery one whiche remaineth in the lande, shall eat butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousand vy- nes in one) and were solde for a thousand syluer lynes) shall be turned to beares and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arrows and bowes, so shall all the lande become beares and thornes. And as for all bylles that are betwen downe, there shall not come vpon the any feare of beares & thornes. But the cattel shall be diuyned thether, & the shepe shall fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the land by Emanuel. The stone of offence at whiche many shall stumble.

Dreouer, the Lorde saide vnto me Take the a great leafe, & wyte in it, as men doo with a penne, make hasty speede to robbe, & haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faith full wytnesse to recorde. Uriah the prest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that I went vnto the prophetisse, that had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue hym this name: a speedy robber: an hasty spoyler. For why, or euer the childe shall haue knowlage to crye father, and mother: shall the ryches of Damascus and the substance of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoyler, befoze the kynge of the Assirians.

B The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayng: for so much as this people refuseth the stil renning water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shall byrnyng mighty and great floudes of water vpon them namely, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power: which shall clyme vp vpon all his floudes, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowing and encreasynge in power, tyll he get hym by the necke. He shall fyl also the widnesse of thy land with his brode winges, Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye people of Assur) & ye shall be broken downe, heken to all ye of farre countrees.

C Muster you, & ye shall be broken downe, prepare you to battell & you shall be tozned in peces: take your counsel together, yet must your counsel come to naught, go in hand withal: yet shall it not prosper: for God is with vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the powze of his hande and warned me, sayng vnto me: that I shulde not walke in the waye of this people.

He sayde mozeouer, round with none of the whoso euer saye, ponder people are bounde together: feare the not, neyther be afrased of them but sanctify the Lorde of hostes, let hym be your feare and dread. For he shall be the holy place to flye to, and stone to stumbe at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stumbe, fall: and be broken vpon hym pee: they shall be snared and taken.

Now laye the wytnesses together and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus wyll I waite vpon the Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I wyll loke for hym. But lo, as for me: and the chyldren whiche the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsel at the Sothslayers, Wytyches, charmers, and conu- rers, then make them this answer. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God? Shulde men runne vnto the deade for the luynges? Yf any man wante lyght, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testymony, whether they speake not after this meanyng. Yf he doo not this, he stumblith & suffreth hun- ger. And yf he suffre hungr, he is oute of paye- ence, and blasphemeth his kynge and his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downewarde to the earth, & beholde, there is trouble & darknes veraypon is rounde about hym, and the cloude of erreure. And out of suche aduersyte shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabulon and the lande of Nephtaly (where thozowe the see way goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrste in lytle trouble: but afterwarde soze vered.

The prophecye of Chrystes natyuite and dominyon.

The people that walke in darkenesse haue sene a great lyght. As for they that dwell in the lande of shadow of death, vpon them hath the lyght shyned. Thou haste multiplied the people and not increased theyr toze. Theyr isoyles befoze the, euen as men make mery in har- uest, and as men that haue gotten the victo- ry, when they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthen: & shake of his shoulder and the rodde of his oppres- sion, as in the dayes of Hadrian.

And truly euery battayle the warrion accom- plisheth, is doone wyth confused noyse, and despyng the garments with bloodde. But this battayle shall be with burnyng & con- sumyng of fyze. For vnto vs a chylde is borne and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Upon his shoul- der doth the kynngdom lye, and he is called with his owne name wonderful. The geuer of coun- sell: the myghtie God, the euerglasyng father, the prince of peace, he shall make no end to encreas- the kynngdom and peace, and shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kynngdom, to set vp the same, and to stablysh it with equyte and right- teousnes, from henceforth for euermore. Thus shall shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes byng to passe. The Lorde sente a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And al the people of Ephraim shall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, that save wyth pryde and hys sto maches on this maner: The tyle worke is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it with squared stones. The molbery tymber is broken, but we shall set it up agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles the Lorde shall prepare Razyn & enemy against them, and so orde they: aduersaries, that the Syrians shall laye holde upon them before, & the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israel wyth open mouth.

After all thys is not the wrath of the Lorde ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastiseth them, neyther do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therfore hath the Lorde roted out of Israel both head and tayle, bzaunch and twyg in one day. By the head is vnderstande the Sena tour & honourable man, and by the tayl the prophete that preached lyes. For all they which en fourme the people: that they bee in a right case, inche be discepuers. Such as men thynke also to be perfect among these, are but casted waies.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in they: yonge men, neyther fauour they: fatherlesse and wyddowes. For they are all together hypocrites and wycked, and all they: mouthes spake follye. After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceased: but yet his hand is stretched out still. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the byers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood: or a rede bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of they: pryde. For because of the wrath of the Lorde of hostes, is the land full of darkness, & the people be consumed, as if were with fyre no man doeth spare his brother, but he robbeth on the ryght hande: and doeth samyke, he eateth on the left hand, & he shall not haue inough.

Euerie man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, & Ephraim Manasses, and they both shall eate Juda. After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still.

The .x. Chapter.

Of the chastenynge the oppressours of the poore, and prophesyng a newe Sennacherib.

Whe be vnto them & make vnrpyghteous lawes, and deuple thynge: whiche be to hard for to kepe wher thowowe the poore are oppressed on euerie spde, & the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgemente: that wyddowes maye be they: praye, and that they may robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitacion, & when destruccyon shall come fro farr. To whom wil ye runne for helpe: and to whom wyll ye geue poure honoure, that he may helpe: that when I withdraue my hande, ye come not amonge the pylsoners, or lye among the dead. After al this doth not the wrath of the Lorde cease, but yet is his hand stretched out still.

Woe be also vnto Assur, which is a staffe of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punishment. I shall sende hym amonge those hypocrytish people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dysfauoure shall I sende hym, that he may vterly robbe the, spoyle them, & tread them downe, lyke the myze in the strete. Howebeit his meanyng is not so, neyther thynketh his hert on thys fassyon. But he ymagineth on lye, howe he maye rote out and destrope muche people, for he sayth: are not my princes all kinges: Is not Calno as easye to wynde as Char chamis: Is it harder to conquer Hamath then Arphad: Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus, then Samaria: As who say: I were hable to wynde the kyngdome of the Idolaters and they: goddes: but not Jerusalem, and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem and they: ymages, as I did vnto Samaria & their ydols.

Wherfore the Lorde sayth: Astone as I haue perfourmed my hole worke vpon the hyl of Syon & Jerusalem, then wyll I vylet the noble & stout hert of the king of Assyria with his proude lokes. For he standeth thus in his owne conceit. Thys doo I thowowe the power of myne owne hande, and thowowe my wysdome. For I am wyle: I am he & remoueth the landes of the people, I robbe they: treasures: and (lyke one of the worthies) I drine them from they: hys seates. My hande hath founde out the strengthe of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges that were layed here & there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countreyes. And there is no man that dare be so holde, as to touche a feather that dare open his mouth, or ones whispe.

Shall the axe boost it selfe agaynst him that he weth therwith: or doth the sawe make anye braggyng agaynst hym that ruleth it: That were euen lyke, as if the roddid exalte it self agaynst hym that beareth it: or as though the staffe wuld magnifie it self, as who say: it were no wood. Therfore shall the Lorde of hostes sende hym amonge his satlynges, leanelesse, and burne vpon his glozy, as it were w a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shall be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shall be the flame, and it shall kyndle and burne vpon thornes and byers in one daye: yea, all the glozy of hys woodes and felde shall be consumed with body and soule. And they shall be as an hoste of men whose standerd beareth sayleth. The trees also of the felde which remaine, shall be of such a nombre, & a chylde may tell them.

After that daye shall the remnaunt of Israel and such as are escaped out of the house of Jacob seke no more comfote at hym that smote them but with saythfulnesse & trust shall they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remnant, euen the hypocrytie of Jacob shall conuerte vnto God & myghtie one. For though thy people (O Israel) be as the sande of the see, yet shall the remnant of them conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that sheweth in righte outnesse, and therfore the Lorde of hostes shall perfectly fyll the thynge that he hath determined in the myddest of the hole world. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Thou my

the Prophecye.

In my people, that dwellest in Syon, be not afrayed, for the kynge of the Assirians: he shall smite the wyth a rod, and shall wagge his staffe at þe as the Egyptians dyd some tyme: But soone after shall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfilled in the destruccyon of them.

Moreover, the Lord of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Madian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lyfte vp his rod over the see, as he dyd somtyme over the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulders, & his yoke from thy necke: yea, the same yoke shall be corrupt for verie fatnesse. He shall come to Aiah, and goo thowre towarde Bygion: at Michmas shall he lay vp his harnesse, and go over the foorde.

Gibeon shall be their resting place: Ramath shall be afrayed: Gibeon Saule shall flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallin) shall be heard vnto Lays and to Anothoth, which also shall be in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cytezins of Gabin are manly, yet shall he remayne at Rob þe daye. After that shall he lyfte vp his hande agaynst the mount of the daughter Syon, the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lord God of hostes shall take a waie the proude from thence with feare. He shall be we downe the proude, and fell þe mynded. The bushes also of the wode shall be roote oute wyth yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

The xi. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyurte of Chryste, and of his people: of the remnant of Israel, and of the fapth of the heathen & Gentyles.

And there shall come a rod forth of þe kynred of Iai, and a blossom shall flourish out of his rote. The spiryte of the Lord shall lyght vpon hym: the spiryte of wysdom and vnderstandyng, the spiryte of counsaile and strengthe, the spiryte of knowlage, and of the feare of the Lord, & shall make him feruent in þe feare of god. For he shall not geue sentence, after þe thyng that shall be brought befoze his eyes, neither reprove a matter at the fyrst hearing, but wth righteounesse shall he iudge the poore, and wth holynesse shall he resourme the simple of þe worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the rodde of his mouth, and wyth the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Righteounesse shall be the gyfte of his lynes: truth and fapthfulnesse, the gyfing vp of his raynes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe: and the Leopard shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, lyons and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chylde shall rule them.

The kowe & the beare shall fede together, & their yong ones shall lie together. The Lid shall eate strawe lyke the oxe or þe kowe. The chylde whyle he sucketh shall haue a desyre to the serpentys nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the cockatrice denne. No man shall do euil vnto another, no man shall destroy another, in all the hyll of my holynesse. For the earth shall be full of the knowlage of the Lord euil as the sea floweth ouer with water.

And in that day shall the Gentyles enquire after the roote of Jesse which shall be set vp for a token vnto the people, and his dwelling shall be glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lord take in hande agayne, to conquire þe remnant of his people (which shall be lefte aloue) from the Assirians, Egyptians, Arabians, Mooryns, Clamptes, Caldees, Antiochyans: and from the Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token among the Gentyles, and gather together the disperfed of Israel: yea, and the outcastes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also & enemyes of Iuda shall be cleane rote out. Ephraim shall beare none euill wyll to Iuda, & Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines toward þe west and spoyle them together that dwell toward þe East. The Idumytes and the Moabytes shall be obedient vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleane the tonges of þe Egyptians sea, and with a mighty wynd shall he lyfte vp his hande ouer Nilus, & shall smite his seven streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a way for his people that remaineth from the Assirians, lyke as it happed to the Israelites what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypte.

The xii. Chapter.

The songe of the church for the obteynynge of the victorie and ouercomynge of the worlde.

What then þe shalt saye: O Lord I will thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me: but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacyon in whome I wyl truste, & not be afrayed. For þe Lord God is my strength and my songe, he also is be come my saluacyon.

Therefore with ioye shall ye draw water out of the welles of the sauoure, and then shall ye saye: geue thanks vnto þe Lord, cal vpon his name, declare his counsailes amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng prayles vnto the Lord, for he hath done great thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye out, and syng thou þe dwellest in Syon: for great is the holy one of Israel in the myddest of the.

The xiii. Chapter.

The prophete of the destruccyon of Babylon, the captiuitie & comynge agayne of the people.

This is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which shall saye þe sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyfte vp the baner vpon the hye hyll, call vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the prynces maye go in at the doze. I haue sent for my deputies & my grauntes (sayth the Lord) which shall crye wach: I will call for suche as crye pompe in my gloire. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, rushing as though the kyngdomes of the earth came together. (And the Lord of hostes mustered) multeth bys arme to battayle.) They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde hym selfe wpth the mynsters of bys wrath, to destroye p hole lande. Mourne ye, for the day of the Lorde is at hande and shal come as a destroyer from the almighty. Therfore shal all handes be letten downe & all mens hartes shal melt away, they shal stand in feare carefullnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them and they shal haue payne, as a woman ptrauapled with chylde. One shal be abashed of an other, & they faces shal burne lyke the flame of fyre. Beholde, the daye of the Lorde shal come terribly, and full of indignacyon, furoure, and wrath to make the lande waste, & to roote oute the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heuen shal not geue theyr lpyght, & sunne shal be darkened in the rpyng, and the moone shal not shyne wpth his lpyght. And I wyl punyssh the wyckednesse of the worlde, and p synners of the vngodly, sayth the Lorde.

The byestomackes of the proude wyl I take away, and wyl laye downe the boastyng of tyrauntes. I wyl make a man dearer then syne golde, and a man to be more worth then a golden wedgc of Ophyr. Therfore I wyl shake the heauen, and the earth shal remoue out of her place: in the wrath of p Lorde of hostes, and in the day of his fearfull indignacyon. And Babylon shal be as an hunted or chaled doo, and as a shepe that no man taketh vp. Euery mā shal turne to his owne people, and sipe eche one into bys owne lande. Whoso is found alone, shal be shot thowowe. And whoso gather together shal be destroyed with the swerde.

* Theyr chyliden shal be slayne before their eyes, theyr houses spoyle, and theyr wyues raptured. For lo, I shal byynge vp the Medes agaynst them, which shal not regard spluer, nor be desirous of gold. With bowes shal they destroye the yonge chyliden, & haue no ppyt vpon women with chylde, & theyr faces shal not spare the chyliden. And Babylon (that glozy of kyngdomes and beautye of the Caldees honoure) shal be destroyed euen as God destroyed Sodde & Gomoz. It shal not endure for ever, neyther shal there be any more dwelling there, from generacyon to generacyon.

The Arabians shal pytche no tentes there neyther shal the shepherdes make theyr foldes there any more: but fearfull wylde bestes shal lye ther, & the houses shal be full of great owles. Estrypes shal dwel there, & apes shal daunce there, wylde cattles shal crye in the palaces, and dragons shal be in p pleasaunte houses. And as for Babylons time it is hande, & her dayes shal not be prolonged.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The returne of the people from captiuitie. The prosperitie of the people of God, and affliction of theyr enemies. The pynde of Babylon.

But the Lorde wyl be mercyfull vnto Jacob, and wyl yet chose Israell agayne, and set them in theyr owne lande. Straungers shal cleaue vnto them, & get them to p house of Jacob. The people shal take the & cary the dome to their owne lande. And make them to enherit the house of Israell in the lande of p Lorde, that they may be seruauntes & handmaydens of the Lorde. They shal take those pylsoners whose captiues they had ben afore and rule those that had opprelled them. When the Lorde now shal byynge the to reste fro the trauaile, scare, & hard bondage, that p wast laden wpthal, then shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: How happeneth it that p oppresour leaueth of? Is the golden trybute come to an end? The Lorde hath broken the sceptre of p vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which whē he is wroth smyteth the people wpth contynual strokes, & tyranously raygneth ouer p heathen whom he persecuted without compassyon. And therfore the whole worlde is now at rest and quyetnesse: and men syng for ioye.

Yea, euen the fyre trees & Cedres of Lybanus, reioyse at thy fall, sayng: Now that thou art layde downe, there come no mo vp to bewe downe vs. Hell also beneth trembleth to mete the at thy commyng, and for thy sake hath rayfed his deed, & all myghtye men and prynces of the earth. All kynges of the earth stand vp fro their seates, & they may al answer, and speake vnto the Arte thou become weake also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pynde is layd downe into the pyt, and so is p melody of thy instrumetes. Woymes be layd vnder the, & woymes be thy couerpyng.

Howe art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou sayre mozyng chylde: howe hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & art become weaker then the people? For thou saydeste in thynne heart: I wyl clyme vp into heauen, & exalt my thorne aboue, besyde the starres of God. I wyl lye also vpon the holy mount toward p North. I wyl clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wyl be lyke the hygheest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seke the shal narrowly loke vpon the & thinke in the selues, sayng: Is this the man p broughte all landes in feare, and made p kyngdomes a-fraped? Is this he p made the worlde in a manner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whiche let not his pylsoners go out?

The kynges of the nacous lye euerye one in bys owne house wpth worshyppe, and thou art caste out of the graue lyke a splthy abhominable braunche: lyke as deade mens raymente that are shot thowowe with the swerde and go downe to the stones of the depe: as a deed corse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried wth the. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande, & destroyed thy people. The generacion of the wycked shal be without honour for ever. Let there a way be sought to destroye their chyliden, that be in theyr fathers wyckednesse that they come not vp agayne to possesse the land, & fyll the worlde full of enemies.

I wyl stande vpagaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) & root out the name and remnaunte, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon, (sayth

The Prophecye.

(sayth the Lorde) and wyl geue it to the Dters, & wyl make water puddles of it. And I wyl swepe them out with the besome of destructyon, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oth sayng: It shal come to passe as I haue determyned, & shal be fulfilled as I haue deuyled. So that Assyria shal I destroie in my lande, & vpon my mountaynes wyl I treade hym vnder fote. Wherethowoe hys yoke shal come from them and his burthen shal be takē frō their shulders. This deuyse hath God taken thowoe the whole world, & this is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determynē a thyng: who is hable to dysanull it? And yf he stretcheth forth hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

E The same yere that kyng Ahas dyed, God threathened on thys maner: Keiole not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of hym that beateth the is broken: for oute of the serpentis rote there shal come an adder, & the frute shal be a fyre flyng worme. But the fyrst borne of the poore shal be fed, & the symple shal dwell in saftey. Thy roote also wyl I destroy wth hungre, and it shal slay thy remnant. Mournē & port, wepe thou cytie, for (O whole lande of Palesti-na) thou arte layed waste, for there shal come from the north a smoke & not one alone maye abyde in hys place. Who shal then answer the messengers of the Gentyles? For yf Lorde hath stablyshed Syon, and the poore of his people yf be therein, do put theyr truste in hym.

The. xv. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst Moab.

A This is y deuy burthen vpon Moab Ar of Moab was destroyed & ouerthrowē in y night season. I say also in Moab was destroyed, & perished in the nyght. They went vp to y p-dols houses eue to Dibon to y hie places to wepe for Rebo, & Moab did mournē for Medba: Al their hedes were balde, & all their berdes shauē In theyr stretes are they girded about with sackloth. In all the toppes of theyr houses and stretes shal be nothyng but mournyng and wepyng. Heshon and Eleale shal crye, that their voyce shal be herde vnto Jabbaz. The woorthies also of Moab shal bleate oute, and crye for very sorowe of theyr myndes: Woe shal my bert be for Moabs sake. They shal slye vnto the cy-tie of Zoar which is lyke a faire ponge bullocke of thye yere olde, for they shal al go vnto Luth wepyng. Euen so by the waye towarde Horo-naim they shal make lamentacyon for their vt-ter destruccyon. For y waters of Rimrim shal be dried vp, by reason wherof the grasse is wi-thred, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the resydue that he hath done, they are sorre. As for theyr substance, the enemyes haue carped thym to the brooke of the wyllo-wes. For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Ber Elvā was there nothing but mourning, because y waters of Dimō wer ful of bloud for yf Lorde shal send more bloud vpo Dimō, & Lys vpo y remnant of y land, & on them y are escaped from Moab.

The. xvi. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst Moab.

Ende the Lorde of the world a lande from the rocke that lyeth towarde the deserte, vnto the hyl of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shal be as a tremblng byde that is put out of haruest, for they shal carpe them vnto Arnon: Gather your counsaile, come together in iudgement, couer vs wth your shadow in the myddaye, as the nyght doth byde y cha-ced, and be wyse not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab be thou theyr refuge agaynst the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to naught, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the lande And in mercye shal the seate be prepared, & he shal syt vpon it in the truerth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgyng and sekynge iudgemente, and makynge haste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of y pryde of Moab, he is very prond presumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignacy-on and vayne are his lyes. Therefore shal Moab make lamentacyon because of y Moabites, (that shal be slayne) yea, they shal weyle all together. Because of the foundations of y cytie y is made of bycke, shal ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely beynde.

For the vines of Heshon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of y beathen haue broken downe her pynypall braunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, the y wente on wandrynge vnto the wylbernesse. Her goodlye braunches were throwen downe as they went ouer the sea. Therefore wyl I mournē for Jazer and for y vyne of Sibna. I wyl poure my tea-res vpon the, O Heshon and Eleale, for y crye of thyne enemies is fallen vpon thy somer fru-tes, and vpon thy haruest. The myrrh and chere is taken a waye out of y plentefull felde, and in the vyneyardes, there shal be no ioye nor glad-nesse. The treader shal treade oute no wyne in the presses, the longe of theyr merce chere haue I laid downe. Wherefore, my bowels shal rom-ble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and mine inwarde partes, for the cyties sake that is made of bycke. And it shal come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shal be made weyre of his hyl chapels, he shal come to his temple to pray but he shal not be hable. So then, thys is the sayng that the Lorde hath spoken concernyng Moab, syng that tyme. But now the Lorde hath spoken, sayng: In thye peres, which shal be as the peres of an hyed seruante, shal the glozy of Moab be turned into confusyon, tho-rowe oute all hys myltitude, whiche is very great. And that whiche remayneth, shal be very small and feble.

The. xvii. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst Damascus.

A This is the deuy burthe vpon Damascus: beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be nomore a cytie, but shal be a heape of broken stones. The waste cityes

cyties of Aroer shalbe foldes for cattell, which shal lye there, and there shalbe none to fraie the awaye. Ephraim also shal nomoze be strong, and Damascus shal no moze be a kyngdome, and the remaunt of Siria shalbe as the glozy of the chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lord of hostes. And in that daye it shal come to passe, that Jacob shalbe made very poore, and the fatnesse of his flesh shal waxe leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth vpon cozne in haruest, euen lyke hym whose earne reapeth the eares of cozne. He shalbe also lyke hym that gathereth eares of cozne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gathering in dede shal there be lefte in it, euen as in the shakynge of an Oleue tree, there remaine two or thre beryes in the top of the vttermoost bowe, and foure or fve in the brode fruteful braunches therof: sayth the Lord God of Israell.

Then shal man turne agayne to his maker and his eyes shal haue respect to the holy one of Israell. As for the alters whiche are his owne handeworke, he shal not regard them, and the thynges that his fyngers haue made (as groves and ymages) those shal he not cast his eye vnto. In that daye shal they strong cyties be as the forsaken shrubbes & braunches, whiche they left: because of the chyldren of Israell: and the land shalbe desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, & hast not ben myndful of thy strong rock: therfore shalt thou set pleasant plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of another mannes vine. In that daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe & early in the morning shalt thou make thy sede to flourish. The haruest shalbe gone in the day of enheritaunce and there shalbe sorow without hope of comforte.

Woe shalbe to the multitude of muche people, whiche shal make a sounde lyke the noyse of the sea. And the violence of the nacions, whiche shal rage lyke the rushing in of many waters: Ene lyke many waters shal the people rage. God shal rebuke hym, and he shal flye farre of. He shalbe chased awaye lyke as drie strawe vpon the mountaynes befoze the wynde: and lyke a thyng that turneth befoze the wynde. At euen behold, there is trouble: & ozeuer it be morning lo he is gone. This is the porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that robbe vs.

The. xviij. Chapter.

The prophete agaynst Egypte.

That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of winges, & lande whiche is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: Sendynge messengers by the sea, euen in vessels of rebes ouer the water. Gette you hence (ye spedye messengers) to a nacyon that is scatred abroad, and robbed of that they had, a fearfull people frome theyr begynnynge hitherto: a nacyon troden downe by litle & litle, whose land the floudes haue spoyled. All ye inhabitoures of the worlde and in dwellers of the earth, looke vpon when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and hearken when he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lord sayde vnto me: as for me, I wyll take my rest, & loke vpon the matter in my habitation, lyke a faire beate after the rayne: and like a cloude of dewe in the beate of harueste.

For afoze the haruest when the braunche is growen, there shal come ripe frute oute of the floure: and he shal cut downe the increase with sythes, and the braunches shal he take awaye with hookes: Thus shal they be lefte together vnto the foules of the mountaynes & to the bestes of the earth: for in Sommer the byrdes shal remaine vpon it, and euery beast of the land shal be vpon it in the winter. In that tyme shal there a present be brought vnto the Lord of hostes euen a people that is scatred abroad, and robbed of that they had, that same people whiche haue bene fearfull frome theyr begynnynge hitherto, a nacyon troden downe by litle and litle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: to the place of the name of the Lord of hostes, euen to the mounte Syon.

The. ix. Chapter.

The prophete agaynst Egypte.

Beholde the Lord rideth vpon a swift cloud & shal come into Egypt, & the ydols of Egypt shal treble at his presence of hym, and the bert of Egypt shal quake in the middell of her. And I wyll set the Egyptians one agaynst another, so that one brother shal fyght against another, and one neighbour agaynst another, cite agaynst cite: and realme agaynst realme. The mynde also of Egypt shalbe cleane wout counsaill within it self, and the deupce that they take wyll I destroy, so that they shal seke counsaill at ydols, & at sozcerers at workers with spyrites and at sothsayers. And the Egyptians wyll I geue ouer into the hande of a maruailous cruel lord, & a mighty kyng, shal haue dominyon ouer the, sayeth the Lord God of hostes, the waters of the sea shal fayle, and the ryuer shal decrease, and be dryed vp. The waters shalbe drawn out: the ryuers of Egypt shalbe emptyed and dryed vp, the reedes and flagges shalbe cut downe.

The grasse in the riuer & by the riuers banke and all that groweth by the riuer shal wither awaye, and be brought to nought. The fyshers also shal mourne, & all they that cast angle in to the water, shal make lamentacion, & they shal lye forth theyr net beside the waters shalbe rooted out. Mozeouer, they that worke in flax and make fyne workes, shalbe confounded: and so shal they that weue open workes. For theyr open workes shalbe euen destroyed, and all they that make pondes and stues for fysh shal come to noughte.

But ye foolyshe princes of zoan, ye wise counsaylers of Pharao, whose wit is turned to foolysheesse, how say ye vnto Pharao, I am come of wise men, and of auncient kynges: Where are nowe the wise men? Let the tel the (ye they can) what the Lord of hostes hath deuyled vpon Egypte.

The princes of zoan are become fooles, & princes of Noph are disceyued, they haue disceyued Egypt

The Prophecye.

Egypt, euen they that were taken for the cheefe kynred therof. In the myddest of it hath p Lord poured p spiryte of wickednesse: and they haue disceyued Egypt in euery worke therof, eue as a dronke man stakereth in his vomite. Nether shall the heed of taylor, the brauche of rede be able to do any worke in Egypt. In that day shall Egypt be lyke vnto women: It shall be afrayde and stande in feare at the mocion of the hand of the Lord of hostes, whiche he shaketh ouer it. And Egypt shall be afrayed of the land of Iuda so that euery one which maketh mencyon of it, shall be afrayed therat because of the counsayl of the Lord of hostes whiche he deuyled for it.

In that daye shall fyue cityes in the lande of Egypt speake p language of Canaan, & sweare by the Lord of hostes: the citye of desolacyon shall be called one of theim. In p day shall p aultare of p Lord be in the myddes of the lande of Egypt, and this tittle besyde it: VNTO THE LORD. And it shall be a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto the Lord, because of such a trouble them, and he shall sende them a sauoure, and a great man to deliuer them.

D And the Lord shall be known in Egypt, & the Egyptians shall know the Lord in p daye, and doo sacrifice and oblacyon: yea, they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and perfourme it. The Lord also shall smite Egypt soze, & heale them againe, and they shall be conuerted vnto p Lord, and he shall be intreated of theim, & shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye out of Egypt into Assyria, & Assyria shall come into Egypt: and Egypt into Assyria: so p the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serue p Lord together. In that daye shall the nacyon of Israell be the thyrde with Egypt and Assyria and they shall be blessed in the myddes of p land whiche lande the Lord of hostes hath blessed, sayng: blessed is my people of Egypt: Assur also is the worke of myne handes: and Israell is myne enherytaunce.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypt and Ethiopia.

A In the yere that Tharthan came vnto Aldod (when Sargon the kyng of Assyria had sente hym) and had fought agaynst Aldod, and taken it. At the same tyme spake p Lord by the hande of Elsaye the sonne of Amos, sayng: Go, and take of the sacke clothe from thy loynes, and put of thy shoe frō thy fote. And he dyd so, walkyng naked and barefote.

And the Lord sayd: like as my seruauent Elsaye hath walked naked & barefote for a sygne and wondze thre yeres vpon Egypte: and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kyng of Assyria take away out of Egypt & out of Ethiopia, chyldren and olde men, naked and barefote, wth their loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypt.

B They shall be broughte in feare also, and ashamed one of another: Ethioppe of Egypte & Egypt of Ethiopia, consydering what glozye they were in afore. And they that dwell in the same Ile, shall saye in that day: Behold, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we flie for helpe that we maye be deliuered from p kyng of Assyria? And howe shall we escape.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babylon, Iudum, and Arabia.

he burthen of the waste sea: Euen as the storme wether that passeth thowoe at the none daye, so come from p wyldernesse, from that horrible lande. A greuous visyō was shewed vnto me: Let one disceyfull offender come agaynst another, & one destroyer agaynst another. Up Elam, laye siege p of Media, all they: gronyng haue I layde downe. Therefore are my loynes fylled wth sorowe: heynesse hath taken holde vpon me as the panges of a woman that is tranaplyng: It made me stoupe when I herde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My hert panted, fearfulness came vpon me. The nyght of the volupitousnesse hath be turned agaynst me into feare. Whyle they garnished p table, the watchman looked: And while he was eatyng and drynkyn (it was sayde) vpon p cap taynes take you to your wyldes. For thus hath p Lord sayd vnto me: Go, & set a watchman, to tel what he seeth. And he sawe a charret which ii. horsemen sat vpon, wth the carpage of an asse and the carpage of a camel. So he looked & toke verypyligent hede. And the lyon cried, Lord, I stande wayting all the hole day, & am appoynted to kepe my watch euery nyght. And behold here cometh a charret of men, with two horsemen. And he answered, and sayd, Babylon is fallen: it is fallen: & all the ymages of her goddes hath he smitten downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must thershe, and thou belongest to my corne floore. Thys that I hearde of the Lord of hostes, the God of Israell haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchman what hast thou espyed by nyght? Watchman what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchman sayde: The morninge cometh, and so doeth the nyght. Wyl aske anye questyon, then aske it: returne, and come agayne.

The burthen concerning Arabia: In p plea saunt ground of Arabia shall ye tary all nyght euen in the stretes of Dedanim. The inhabytoures of the lande of Thema broughte fowte water to him that was thirsty, they preuented hym with theyr breade that was fed a waye. For because of sweardes are they become fugityue, euen for the drawn swerde, & for the bent bowe, and because of the greuousnesse of warre. For thus hath the Lord sayde vnto me. There is yet a yere accorpyng to the yeres of an hyred seruauent and all the glozye of Cedar shall fayle. And the nombze of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be minyshed by the mighty chyldren of Cedar: for so p Lord God of Israell hath spoken.

The. xxii. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst Ierusalem.

The burthen of the valley of bilspon.
 What haste thou to doo here, & thou climest vnto þ house toppes: Thou art full of occupypng, thou seducyous and proude cytie: thy slayne menne are neyther put to deathe wyth swearde: nor deade in battayle. All thy captaynes are fugityue together, the archers haue taken theim prysonniers.
 All they that are founde in the, are in captiuity together, because they fledde farre of. Therfore sayde I: let me alone, and * I wyl make la-mentacion. Pe shal not be hable to comfort me because of the destruccyon of þ doughter of my people. For this is a dape of trouble, of ruine, & of destruccyon that the Lord wyl bring to passe in the valley of bilspon, breakyng downe þ cy-tie, and cryng vnto the mountaines.

Elam beate þ quiner with a charet of fote me and of horsemen, the citie of By: shewed þ child open. Thy chese valley also was full of charettes, & the horsemen set they faces dyrectlye to-warde the gate. And in that day dyd the enemy take a waye the betwye of Iuda: and then dyd-dest thou loke toward the armoure of the house of the forest. Pe haue sene also þ broken places of the cytie of Dauid, howe that they are many & ye gathered together the waters of þ lower pool. As for þ houses of Ierusalem, ye haue no-bryd them, & the houses haue ye broken downe to make the wall stronge. A pytte also haue ye made betwene þ two walles, for þ waters of þ olde pool & haue not regarded þ maker therof neyther had respect vnto hym þ toke it in hande.

And in that day dyd the Lord God of hostes call men vnto weping and mournyng, to baldnesse and gnyng about with sackcloth. And beholde, they haue sope and gladnesse, slaynge oren & kylling theyr, eatyng flethe, and drynkyng wyne. * Let vs eate & drynke, for to mo-rowe we shal dye. And it came to the eares of þ Lord of hostes: This iniquity shal not be pour-ged from you tyll ye dye, sayeth the Lord God of hostes. Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: Go, get the into ponder treasurer, euen vnto Sebna, whiche is þ ruler of þ house. What hast thou to do here: and whom hast thou here: that thou shuldest here be we þ out a sepulchre as it were one that beweth hym out a sepulchre on hye, or that graueþ an habitacyon for hym selfe in an hard rocke.

Beholde, O thou man, the Lord shall cary the awaye into captiuytye, and shall surely couer the with confusyon. The Lord shall turne the ouer lyke a bal to his handes: & (and shal send the) into a farre countrie. There shalt thou die, and there (in steade of the charettes of thy pompe) shal þ house of thy Lord haue confusyon: I wil dryue the from thy place, & out of thy dwellyng shall be ouerthrowne the. And in that dape shall I call my seruant Eliahim the sonne of bel-ia. And with thy garmentes wyl I cloth him and with thy gyrdle wyl I strengthe hym: thy power also wyl I comyt into his hande, and he shalbe a father of such as dwel in Ierusalem, & in the house of Iuda.

* And the keye of the house of Dauid wyl I late vpon his shoulde, so that he shal open and no man shall shut: he shall shut, and no man shal open. And I wyl faste hym as a napele in a sure place, and he shalbe the gloriuous seate of his fathers house. Moreover, all generacions and posterities shal hange vpon hym all the glory of they fathers house, all vessels both greate & small, & all instrumentes of measure & masure.
 In that dape (sayeth the Lord of hostes) shall the napele that is fastened in the sure place, departe, be broken, and fall: and the burthen that was vpon it, shalbe plucte a way, for so þ Lord hath spoken.

The. xliij Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Tyre, and a promys that it shalbe restored agayne.

The burthen of * Tyre: Mourn ye whippes of Charlis, for ther cometh such destruccyon, þ ye shal not haue an house to etre into: Out of þ land of Citi haue they knowlage of this plage. Be still ye þ dwel in the yle, þ marchantes of zidon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made þ plenteous. The corne þ groweth by the great waters of Nilus, and the frutes of the ri-uer were her vitayles, so that it became a commen mart of the nacions. Be ashamed thou zidon, for the see (euen þ strengthe of the see) hath spoken, sayinge: I haue not trauayled nor brought forth chyldren, nor noyshed vp yonge men or brought vp virgyns.

When tidynges cometh to the Egyptians they shalbe sope for the rumoure that goeth of Tyre. Get you to Charlis, mourn ye þ dwell in the yle. Is not this that gloriuous Cite of yours, which hath bene of old antiquitye: her owne fete shal carpe her forth to be a sojourner into a farre countrie. Who hath deuised this a-gaynst Tyre (þ geneth garlandes vnto other ctytes) whose marchantes are princes: & whose captaynes are honourable in the worlde. Euen the Lord of hostes hath deuyled this, to put downe the pride of all such as be gloriuous, and to minishe all them þ be proude vpon earthe.
 Get the oute of the lande vnto the doughter of Charlis: seynge thou hast nomore strengthe.

He that smote the kingdomes together, holdeth out his hand ouer the see: euen þ Lord hym self hath geuen a commaundment agaynst the same comen place of marchandysse, that they shall utterly destroye the myghte therof. And he sayde: Make nomore thy bolte (O virgyn þ doughter zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: Up, get the ouer vnto Cism, where neuer the-lesse, thou shalt haue no rest. Beholde, this people come not of þ Caldees: but Assur made the strong to great shippes. They set vp þ stronge holdes therof, and destroyed his places: and he broughte it in decaye. Mourn, ye whippes of Charlis for your strengthis brought downe.

And in that day shall Tyre be forgotten seuenty peres (according to þ peres of one kyng) and after þ ende of the seuenty peres shal Tyre synge as doeth an harlot. Take an batte, and go about the citie (thou harlot that hast ben for gotten) make swete melodye, synge mo songes that thou mayst be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of the seuentye peares shal þe lord visyte Tyre and she shall conuerte vnto her rewarde, and shall commyt fornicacyon with all the kingdomes of the earth þe are in the world.

Their occupieng also and their reward shal be holy vnto the Lord. Their gaires shal not be layed vp nor kepte in store, but it shal be theirs that dwel before the lord, that they may eate ynough, and haue clothieng sufficient.

The. xliii. Chapter.

A prophacie of tribulacion to come vpon the world because of synne.

Behold, the Lord maketh þe earth wast and empye: he turneth it vpsyde downe, & scattereth abroade þe inhabitours there of. And þe preeste shal be as the people: and the master as the seruaunt: the maistresse like the mayde: þe seller like the bier. He that lendeth vpon vsurpe, like him þe borroweth vpon vsurpe: þe creditour as the detter. The world shal be clene wasted & vterly spoyled, for so the Lord hath spoken. The earth is sozpy, & cōsumeth away: þe world is feble & perissheth, the proud people of þe earth are come to naught. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitours therof, which haue trasgressed the lawes, chaunged the ordinaunce, broken the everlastyng couenaunte.

Therefore hath the curse consumed the earth, & they that dwell therein, are falle into trespass. Wherefore þe inhabitours of the earth are perished with brought, & few men are left behynde. The wine faileth: þe vine hath no myght, al they that haue bene mery of herte are come to mournyng. The myrth of tabrettes is layed downe, the noyse of such as haue made mery, is ceased: the ioye at the harpe is at an ende. They shall drinke no moze wine w mirth, stronge drinke shal be bitter to them that drinke it. The citie of vanitie is broken downe, every house is shut vp, that no man may come in. In the stretes is there a cryng because of wyne, all chere is vanisshed away, the myrth of the world is gone: in the citie is leste desolacion, and the gate is smitten with destruccion.

For in the middes of the world, even among the people, it shal come to passe, as at the shakynge of Olives: and as the grappes are when þe vineharuest is done. They shal lyft vp their voice, & make a mery noyse: and in magnifyng of the Lord, shal they crye out of þe west. Wherefore praise ye the Lord in the valleries, even the name of the Lord God of Israhel, in þe fles of þe see. And the vtermoost parte of the earth haue we herde praises & mirth, because of the righteous. And I saide: I knowe a thyng in secret: woe is me, the transgressours haue offended: þe transgressours haue greuouly offended. Fearefulness, the pit, and the snare are vpon the, & thou shal dwell on the erathe. It will come to passe, þe whosoever escapeth the fearful noyse, shal fall into the pit. And he that commeth out of the pit, shal be taken with the snare. For the windows from on hyge are open, & the foundations of the earth are moued.

The earth is vterly broken downe, she hath a soze ruine, the earth quaketh exceedingly. The earth shal relete to and fro, like a dronkerde: & shal be remoued lyke a tent (of onynge) and the iniquite therof shal be deuy vpon it. It shal fall, and not ryse vp againe. And in that daye shal the Lord visyte the hoost aboue that is on hye, & the kynges of þe world þe are vpon þe earthe. And they shal be gathered together, & they that be in prison: and they shal be shut vp in warde, & after many dayes shal they be visited. * The moone shal be abashed, & the sunne ashamed when the Lord of hostes shal ragyne in mount Sion & in Ierusalem w thowshippe, and in the syght of such as shal be of his counsell.

The. xlv. Chapter.

A thankesgeuyng to God for his goodnes.

Thou art the Lord my God, I will magnifie the, I will geue thankes vnto thy name. For þe hast brought wonderfull thynges to passe, accordyng to thine olde counsels truely & faithfully. * Thou hast made of a citie a heap of stones and brought a strong towne into decaye. The habitation of straungers hast þe made to be no citie, nether shal it be builded any more. Therefore shal the mightie people geue glory vnto þe, the citie of þe vale aynn heath shal hear the. For thou hast bene a strength vnto þe poore, & a succour for the needy in his trouble. A refuge against euell wether, a shadowe against the heate. For the blaste of ragynge men is lyke a storme that casteth downe the wall.

Like as þe bringest heat downe oute of a drye place: so shalt thou suppress þe noyse of al strifes. The heat is in þe shadowe of the cloude: þe shadowe of the mightie shal be brought lowe. And in this mountaine shal þe Lord of hostes make vnto al people a feast of plenteous & delicate thynges, euē of moost pleasur & deinite dīss. And in this mountaine shal þe Lord destroye the tower, & all people are wrapped in, & the bagyn that is spred vpon al nacions. * As for death he hath destroyed it for ever. * And the Lord God shal wipe away teares from all faces, and the rebuke of his people shal he take awaye out of all the earth. For so the Lord hath sayd.

And in þe daye it shal be said: Lo this is our god, we haue waityd for him, * and he shal save vs. This is þe Lord in who we haue hoped, he will be mery & reioyse in the saluacion þe cometh of him. For in this mountaine shal þe hādē of þe Lord cease & Noah shal be treshed vnder þe vine, & strawe is treshed vpon the grounde. And he shal stretch out his hādē in þe myddes of the sea, & swimmeth, casteth out his hādē to swimme, & w the strenght of his hādē shal he byrnyng downe their pryde. The strong holde also & defence of thy walles hath he ouerthrowen & cast downe, & brought them to the grounde, even vnto dust.

The. xlv. Chapter.

A songe of the despueratures of the people.

In that daye shal this song besonge in the land of Iuda. * We haue a strong citie. Saluacion shal God appoint in stede of walles and bulwarkes.

* Open ye the gates that the righteous people which kepeth the trueth maye entre in. There mind is set vpon þ because þ p̄serueste them * in peace: pee, euen in peace: because they put their trust in the. But ye pour trust alway in the Lord: for in the Lord God ther is strenght for euermore. * For he hath broughte downe þ hye mynded cytezens. As for the proude cytie he hath brought it low, euen vnto the grounde shal he cast it downe & bynging it vnto dust. The fote euen the fote of the poore, and the steps of suche as be in necessyte shal treade it downe.

The path of equyte wylt þ graunt vnto the iust, o thou moost righteous, * thou shalt order the path of him þ is righteous: Pee, in the waye of thy iudgementes, O Lord, haue we put oure trust in the. Thy name also & the remembraunce of the is the thyng that our soule longeth for.

* My soule hath longed for the all the night, & with my sprete (which is within me) wil I seke the early in the mornynge. For when thy iudgementes are in the erth, þ inhabitours of þ wolde shal learne ryghteousnes. Shal the vngodlye man be fauoured, which hath not learned righteounes but doth wyckedly in the erthe, where nothyng ought to be done, but that whyche is righteous: he shal not se the glozy of the Lord. For when thy hande is lyft vp to strike, they se it not: but they shal se it, and be confounded with the zeale of the people, & the fyer that consueth thyne enemyes shal deuoure them.

Lord vnto vs thou shalt prouide peace: * for thou also hast wrought all our workes in vs, O Lord our God, other lordes beside the haue subdued vs, but we wyl be myndful only of the and thy name: The dead wyl not lye: and they that be out of lyfe wil not rylse agayn, therfore hast thou visited & roted the out: & destroyed al þ memory of the. Thou haste increased the people (O Lord) thou haste increased the people, & thou art praised: thou hast sent the farre of, vnto all the coastes of the earth. * Lord in trouble haue they vslyted the: they powred oute theyr prayer when thy chastenynge was vpon them.

* Lyke as a woman w̄ childe that draweth n̄p̄e warde her trauppl, is soye & cryeth in her paynes, euen so haue we bene in thy syghte. O Lord. * We haue bene w̄ childe & suffered paine, as though we had broughte forth the winde. For there is no saluacion in the erth neither do the inhabitours of the worlde submit them selues.

* Thy dead men shal lyue, en̄ w̄ my body shal they rylse agayne. Awake and syng ye þ dwell in dust. For the dewe is euen as the dew of herbes, & the earth shal cast out the that be vnder her. Come my people, * entre thou into thy chāber, and shutte thy doores about the: * hyde thy selfe for a litle whyle, vntill the indignacion be ouer past. * For to the Lord is commynge out of his place, to visyte the wyckednesse of suche as dwell vpon earth. The earthe also shal dysclose her owne bloude, and shal nomoze hyde them that are slayne in her.

The xxvii. Chapter

A prophete of the comynge of Christ, and destruccyon of ydolatre.

In þ daye, the Lord w̄ his soze great & mighty swearde shal visyte, * Le. i. Cor. xii. 4. * Iusthan that croked serpent, en̄ Le. Apoc. xii. 4. Iusthan that croked serpente, and he shal slay the Dragon þ is in the see. In that day, se that ye syng of the congregacion whyche is the vyneyarde, þ bynggeth forth the best wyne. Euen þ Lord do kepe it. In due seasons shal I water it, & least the enemye do it any harme, I wyl both nyght and daye p̄serue it. There is no displeasure in me els (when the vineyarde bynggeth me forth the byers & thornes) I wolde go thowoe it by warre, & burne it vp together. Let it take hold of my strength, and it shal be at one with me, euen at one shal it be with me.

The dayes are comynge that Jacob shal take rote. Israell shal be grene and flozyshe, and the worlde shal be fylled with frute. Hath he smitten hym as soze as he dyd the other that smote him? Or is he slayne with so soze a slaughter as they had slewe him? In measure dothe he smite him, while he sendeth vnto him suche thynges, whereby he cometh to his mynde agayn. For in the daye that the east winde bloweth soze, it taketh awaye the frutes. Thus therfore shal þ iniquyte of Jacob be reconcyled, and here is all the fruite of the takynge awaye of þys synne, yf he make all the stones of the altare of Idols, as chalke stones that are beaten in sūder, that their groues and ymages rylse not vp agayne.

Els, shal the strong cytie be desolate, & the habitacion forsaken and left like a wylernes. There shal the calfe fede, and there shal he lye, & eate vp the grasses therof. When the braunches of it are dzye, they are broken of, & the women come, and set the on fyer. * For it is a people of no vnderstandynge, & therfore he þ made the, shal not fauour them, & he that created the shal geue them no grace. And in that daye shal the Lord make a trespynge from the middes of the ryuer Eufrates vnto the ryuer of Egypte, & ye childe of Israell shal be gathered together one to another. In þ daye shal the great trompe be blowne, so that they which were losse in the lande of Assiria: and they þ were banished into the lande of Egypt, shal come and worshyp the Lord in the holy mounte at Jerusalem.

The xxviii. Chapter

Agaynste the pryde of Ephraim, and agaynste fals preastes and preachers.

We bnto þ crowne of pryde en̄ to the dzyke people of Ephraim whose great pōpe is as a floure þ faderth awaye vpon þ head of the valleye of suche as be in welth, & are ouerlade with wyne. Beholde, * there cometh a vehement and soze day from the Lord like an vnmeasurable hayle and peryllous tempest, euen like the force of myghtye and horryble waters, It iii that that violently beareth downe al thynges. The crowne of the pride of the drunken Ephraimites shall be troden vnder foote: * so þ the flour of his fayrenes and bewtye, whiche is in the heade of the valleie of fatnes, shall feade a way, as doth an vntymelye rypp fyg afoze harueste. Which whā a man sppeketh, he loketh vpon it, & whyle it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In that daye shall the Lorde of hostes be the crowne of glory, & dyamonde of bewtie vnto þ residue of his people. He wyll be also a spiryte of perfite knowledge to him þ sytteth in iudgement, & strenght vnto the that turne away the battel to the gate of the enemies. But they are out of the way by reason of wyne: yee, farre out of the waye are they thozow strong dryncke.

Esay. xl. c

* The pæste also and the prophete are gone astray by the meanes of strong dryncke, they are drunken w wyne they go amisse thozowe strong dryncke, they faile in prophecying & stumbe in iudgemente. For tables are so full of vomite & fylthynes that no place is cleane. Whom then shall such one teach knowlege? And whō shall he make to vnderstande the thynges þ he heareth? For they are as iguozant as pong children, þ are taken from the mylke, and are weyned.

mat. xxi. a.

For they that be suche muste haue after one lesson, another lesson: * after one comaundement, another comaundement, after one rule another rule, after one instruccion, another instruccion: there a litle & there a lytle. For he that spaketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rude nesse of spech, and a straunge language. If any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest where with ye maye ease him that is werpe, this is þ refreshyng, they wyll not herken. * Therfore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpon lesson, comaundement vpon comaundement, rule vpon rule, instruccion vpon instruccion, there a lytle and there a lytle) shall be vnto them an occasion of stumbling that they may go on, & fall backward, be bzused, tangled and snared.

1. cor. xiii. e

Wherfore, heare the worde of the Lorde ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people, which is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue sayde, we haue made a couenaunt with deathe, and with hell are we at agrement. And though there go forth a soze plage, it shall not come vnto vs: For we haue made falshode our refuge, & vnder vanite are we byd: Therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, I lay in Sion for a foundacion a stone eue a tryed stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundacion. Whoso beleneth, let him not be to hastye. Iudgement also wyll I laye to the rule and ryghteousnes to the balaunce: so that the hayle shall take awaye your wayne confidence as a bzooome, & the prey place of poure refuge shall the waters renne ouer.

And thus the couenaunt that ye made with death, shall be dysanulled: and poure agremente that ye made with hell, shall not stande. Yee, whē the soze plage goth forth, ye shall be troden downe vnder it. From the time þ it goth forth, it shall take you awaye. For earlye in the morninge euer ye daye: yee, bothe daye and nyghte shall it go thozowe: & when the noyse thereof is perceaued, it shall gendze veracion. For the bed is narrowe, and not large: and the couerynge is small that a man can not wynde him selfe vnder it. * For the Lorde shall stande as in mounte * Parasim, and shall be wzathlyke as in the valley * Gibeon, that he maye do his worke, his straunge worke, and bynge to passe his acte, his straunge acte.

Nowe therfore se that ye be no mockers, lette þ pour punyshment increase: for I haue heard of þ Lorde of hostes, that there shall come a soze ende vpo the whole earth. Heare ye then, & drunken vnto my voyce, consydre and pondre my speche. Doth not the husbandmā plowe all the daye, & openeth and bzeke th the clottes of his grounde, þ he may sowe: when he hath made it playne, wyl he not spredde abzode the fytches, and sowe comin, and cast in whete by measure, and the appointed barley and rye in their place? God wyll instruct him to haue discrecion, euen his God wyll teach him. For fytches shall not be thzeshed with an harowe, nether shall a cart whele be bzoughte thozowe the comyn: but the fytches are beaten out with a flasse, and comin with a rod. But the se de that bzead is made of, is thzeshed, though it be not alway a thzeshing. And the cart whele must be bzoughte ouer it, lest he grinde it w his teth. This also cometh of the lord of hostes, which worketh w wonderfull wyldom, & byngeth excellent workes to passe.

The. xxix. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Jerusalem, and agaynst the wayne tradycions of men.

Unto the, O Ariel thou Citie þ David dwelt in. Go on frome year to year, & lette the labes be slaine. I wyl lay sege vnto Ariel, so that there shall be heuines & sozow in it, and it shall be vnto me euen an aulter of slaughter. I wyl besege the round about, & fygge agaynst the thozowe a bulwarcke, & wyl reare vpon dyches agaynst the. Thou shalt be bzought downe, & shalt speake out of the grounde, & thy speach shall go lowe out of the dust. Thy voice also shall come out of the grounde like þ voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shall whysper out of the dust. Moreover, the noyse of the strange enemies shall be like thinne dust, & the multitude of tirauntes shall be * as dze strawe þ cannot tary: enen sodenly & in hast shall their blasse go.

Thou shalt be visited of þ Lorde of hostes w thozowe earthquake, & w a great noyse w storme & tempest & with the flābe of a consuming fyre. And the multitude of al nacpōs that fygge agaynst Ariel, shall be as a dreame sene by night: * eue so shall al they be, þ make warre agaynst it, & strōge holdes to ouercome it, & that laye anye sege vnto it. In conclusiō, it shall be eue as whē an hongry man dreameth that he is eatyng, & when he awaketh, his soule is emptye. Or as when a thyzzy man dreameth that he is drynkyng: and when he awaketh, he is yet faynt: & his soule hath a petyte. Euen so shall the multitude of all nacpōs that fygge agaynst Sion Condre these thynges once in poure myndes, and wonder. * Blynded are they them selues, & the blynde gydes of other. They are dronken: but not wth wyne, they are vnkable but not thowth stronge dypnke. For the Lorde hath couered you wth a slomberynge sprete, and hath closed your eyes. Poure prophetes also & rulers shuld se, them hath he couered. * And the visioⁿ of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a boke that is sealed up, whych men deliuer to one that is learned, sayeng: Reade þ in it. And he sayeth: I caⁿ not, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto hym that is not learned, sayeng: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therfore thus hath the Lorde sayde: * For so muche as thys people, when they be in trouble, do honour me wth they^r mouth and wth they^r lippes: but they^r herte is far fro me, & the feare whych they haue vnto me, proceedeth of a commandemente þ is taught of men. Therfore wyll I do maruayls amonge thys people, euen maruelous thynges (I saye) and a wonder. * For the wysdome of they^r wplemeⁿ shal perishe, & the vnderstandyng of they^r wittie meⁿ shal hide it selfe. * Wo vnto them þ kepeth secret they^r thoughtes, to hyde they^r counsel from the Lorde and do they^r wo^rkes in darknesse, sayenge: * who seyth vs: & who knoweth vs? Doubtes, your destruction is (in my handes) in reputacion as the potter claye. And doth the wo^rke say of hym that made it, he made not me? And doth an earthe vessel say of him that fashioned it, he had no vnderstandyng? Is it not harde at hande, that Lybanus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shalbe taken as the wood? And in that daye shal deasse men heare the wordes of þ boke, and the eyes of the blynde shal se euen out of the cloude & out of darknes.

The meke spreted also shalbe mery in þ Lord, and the pooze amonge them that be lowly, shal reioyse in þ holpe one of Israel. For he that dyd vponenes, is brought to naught, and þ scornful man is consumed: and they roted oute that were hasty so sone to vnyghteousnes, makynge a maⁿ to synne in the word, & that toke hym in a snare whych reproued them in the opeⁿ place: and they that haue turned the cause of the ryghteous to naught. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde vnto þ house of Jacob, eue thus sayeth he that redeemed Abraham: * Jacob shal not now be confounded no^r his face pale. But when he seeth bys chyldre the wo^rke of my handes in the myddes of hym, they shal sanctify my name, and prayse the holy Lord of Jacob, & feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronpous sprete shal come to vnderstandyng, & they that haue bene scornfull, shal learne doctryne.

The xxx. Chapter.

¶ I sheweth them that forsake the counsell of God & cleue to the counsell of men. The prophete also threatneth the remnant of the people, that after the destruction of Ierusalem shal come into Egypte.

Las, for those dysobedyente chyldren, (sayth the Lord) * that they wil take couⁿsell wthoute me. Alas, þ they wyll take a secreet aduysor, and not oute of my sprete, and therfore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypte, and haue asked no questioⁿ at my mouth but seke strength in the myght of Pharaon, & truste in the shadowe of Egypte. Therfore shall the strength of Pharaon be your confusioⁿ, & the truste in the shadowe of Egypte your shame. For his captaynes were at zoan, & his ambassadours came vnto Hanes. * They were all ashamed of the people þ coulde do them no good, and that myght not helpe the, no^r shewe them any profyte, but were they^r confusioⁿ and rebuke.

The heuy burthen of the beastes of the south in a lande of trouble and angurthe, from whence shall come the ponge and olde Lyon, the vpper & frys serpent that speth agaynst them that vpon coltes beare they^r ryches, & vpon Camels they^r treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For wayne & nothyng worth shall the helpe of the Egyptyans be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Ierusalem. They shal haue strength ynough, yf they wyl sette they^r myndes in quietnes. * Now therfore, go thy waye, & wyte this before them in a table, & note it in a boke that it may fynally remayne and be kepte styll for euer.

For thys is an obstynat people: * and dyssembleng chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lorde.

For they saye vnto the seers: Se not, and to them þ be cleare of iudgemēt: loke not out right thynges for vs: but speake saye wordes vnto vs: loke out errours, get you out of thys waye, departe oute of thys path, & turne the holpe one of Israel from vs. Therfore thus sayth the holpe one of Israel: Because poure hertes ryse agaynst thys wo^rde, & because ye trust in wrong dealynge & peruerse iudgement, & put your confydence therein. Therfore shal ye haue thys myschefe for your destruction and fall, lyke as an hye wall þ falleth, because of some ryfte or blaste whose breakynge cometh sodenly. * And þ hure therof is lyke an earthen vessel, whych breaketh wthout helpe: so that in the burstynge of it, ther is not founde one sheuer to fetch fyre in, or to take water wththal out of the pyt.

For thus sayth the Lorde God, euen thy holy one of Israel: In repentance & in rest shall ye be safe: in quyetnes and sure confydence shalbe your strength. But ye haue had no lust therto, for ye haue sayde: No, but we wyll escape thowth we haue. (Therfore shall ye flye) and we wyll get vs vpon swyfte beastes. And therfore shall your persecutours be swyfter. * A thousande shall flye at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of fyue shal ye all flye, tyll ye be leste as a thyppe mast vpon the top of a mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hylle. * Therfore doth the Lord cause you to wayte that he maye haue mercy vpon you: to thyntent, that he maye haue the preminence, when he is gracious vnto you. For the Lorde is the God of iudgemente. Blesed are all they that hope in hym.

Yf the people remayne in Sion, and at Ierusalem, thou shalte not be in heynnes: but at the voyce of thy cōplaynt shal he haue mercy vpon þ

The Prophecye

And when he heareth it he shall geue the an-swere. And though the Lord geue you the bread of trouble, & the water of aduersyte, thy rayne shal be nomore so skante but thyne eyes shall se thy rayne. Yee, & thyne eare shall heare the tal-kyng of hym that doth speake bepynde the.

Deut. iii.

* This is the waye, walke ye in it. Turne not asyde, neyther to the ryght hande nor to the lyfte.
Ye shall destroye also the conerpyng of your syluer ymages, and the deckyng of your golden ydols. Euen as sylthynes shal ye put the away.
And thou shalt saye vnto it. Get the hence. The Lord shall geue rayne vnto thy seed, that shal sowe the grounde wythal, and breade of the increase of the earth, whych shal be fat & very plenteous. In that daye also, shal thy cattell be fed in large pastures. The oxen lyke wyse and the yong asses, that eate the grounde shall eate cleane prouender, whych is poureged wyth the wynde and the fanne.

1. Pet. iii. b

Finally, vpon euery hye mountayne & hyll shall there be riuers & streames of waters, * in the daye of the great slaughter, whē the towers fall. Moreover, the lyght of the moone shal be as the lyght of the sunne, and the sunne lyght shall be senen folde, and haue as muche hyne as in seuen dayes besyde, when the Lord byndeth vp his foze of his people, and healeth the stroke of theyr wounde. Beholde, the fame of the Lord cometh from farre, & his ptesence is so hote, that no man is able to abyde. His lyppes are full of indignacyon, and his tonge is as a consumpyng fyre.
His bryeth is as a vehement floud of water that reacheth vp to his necke. That he may syt away the heathe in the syue of vanity. And his bryeth is as a bydle of erreure in the chawes of his people.

6

And ye shall synge, lyke as in the nyght, whē the holpe solemnitye begynneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of herte, lyke as when one cometh wyth a pyper vnto the hyll of the Lord, and to the moost myghty one of Israel. And the Lord shall cause his glorpyous voyce to be herde, and shall declare his stretched out arme wyth a ter-ryble countenaunce & wyth the flame of a consumpyng fyre, with nopsome lyghtenynge, with a shower, & wyth hayle stones. For thowse the voyce of the Lord, shall * Assur be destroyed, whych smote other men wyth the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whytsoever he goeth the rodde shall cleaue vnto hym, whych the Lord shal laye vpon hym wyth tabrettes and harpes & wyth great warre shall he fyght agaynst his hoost. * For the fyre of payne is ordeyned from the begynnyng: yee, euen for kynge is it prepared. This hath the Lord set in the depe: and made it wyde: the burnynge wherof is fyre and much wood. The bryeth of the Lord, whych is a ryuer of byrmstone doth kyndle it.

The xxii. Chapter.

He entred them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

2

Whe vnto the that go downe into Egypt for helpe, & trust in horses, and put their confydence in charettes, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lusty and stronge. But they regarde not the holpe of Israel, and they aske no questyon at the Lord.

Where as he neuertheless (beyng wysest of all) plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from his worde, when he steppeth forth, and taketh by cotoz agaynst the houtholde of the frowarde, & agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, & not God, & theyr horses be and not spret. And as sone as the Lord stretcheth out his hand, then shall the helper fall, & he that shulde haue bene helped, and they shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: * Lyke as the Lyon of the whelpes roareth vpon his praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayde though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon hym neyther abashed for all the heape of them. So shall the Lord of hoostes come downe to fyght for mounte Syon and defend his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flote about theyr nestes, so shall the Lord of hoostes kepe saue, defende, and deliuer Jerusalem.

Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne a-gayne, from that infydelitie, wherin you doned your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out his ydols of syluer & his ydols of golde, whych he haue made with your owne hades vnto your synne. * Assur also shal be slayne wyth the swearde, not wyth a mans sweard, nether shal the swearde of any man deuoure hym.
And he shall fle fro the slaughter, & his seruantes shal be dyscomfyted in theyr hertes. He shall go for feare to his stronge holdes, & his pynners shall flee from his badde. Thys hath the Lord spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and by fyre in Jerusalem.

The xxiii. Chapter.

The condicions of good rulers and officers.

Behold, a kynge shall gouerne after the rule of ryghteousnes, and the princes shal rule, accordynge to the balace of equytye. And that man shal be vnto men as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempeste: lyke as a ryuer of water in a thyrste place, and the shadowe of a grete rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dym, and the eares of them that heare, shall take dyligent hede.

The hert of the vnywysse shal attayne to knowledge, & the vnywysse toge shal speake playndy and dyspunctly. Then shall the foolyshe nygarde be nomore called gentle, nor the churle lyberall.
But the nygarde wyl be nygardly mynded, and his herte wyl worke euell, and playe the p-crypte, and ymagyne abhomynacions agaynst God, to make the holyr leane, and to withholde drynke from the thyrst. These are the vnywysse weapons of the churlyshe, these by his shamefull counsels: that he may begyle the poore wyth scaatful wordes: yee, euen there as he shuld ge-sentence wyth the poore. * But the lyberall shal ymagyneth honeste thynges, and cometh by for lyberalltye vnto promocyon.

Up (ye ryche and ydell women) hearken to my voyce. Ye careless cyties, make my waye dy,

After yeares & dayes that ye be brought in fear, O ye carles cytyes. For haruest shall be late, and the grapegatherynge shall not come.
O ye cytyes that have no parel. Be abashed, you that live in aboundaunce, tremble you that have carelesse: caste of your raymente make your selues bare, put sackel on be aboute you. For as the infanten wepe when they mo-theres are dyed, so shall you wepe for your fayre felde and fruytful vyneyardes. My people shall be as thornes & thystles: and so shall be euen in euery house of voluptuousnes and in euery cytie that reioysseth. The places al shall be broken, and the greatly occupied cytyes desolate. The towres and bulwarckes shall become denues for euermore, the pleasure of mules shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spere be powred vpon vs frome aboue. Then shall the wyldernes be a fruytfull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wood. Then shall egypte dwell in the deserte and ryghteousnes in a fruytfull lande.

And the rewarde of ryghteousnes shall be peace, and her fruyte rest and quyetnes for euer.
And my people shall dwell in the innes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of con-forte. And when the bayle falleth, it shall fall in the wood, and the cite shall be set low in the valley. O howe happye shall ye be, when ye shall sa-felye see your sede besyde al waters, & vyue thether the feete of your oren and Alges.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Threatning agaynst the Assyrians. A descriptioun of them that shall see the Lorde.

Unto the that destroyest, whē thou wast not destroyed, thou breakest the legges, where as none hath broken it wth þ, for when thou shalt leane destroyinge, & thou thy selfe shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceaseest from breaking the legges, then shall they breake it to the. O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs, we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to such earlye and our health in tyme of trouble. At that con-fute wyse, the people fled, & at thynne exaltinge the heathē were scattered. And the spoyles shall be gathered whych shall be yours as are the ga-therynge of Bunches. And the multytude going to it shall be as locustes rummyng to and fro.

The Lorde is exalted, for it is he that dwel-eth in hye: he hath fylled Syon wth iudge-ment & ryghteousnes. And a sure stablyshynge of thy tymes shall be strength, health, wisdom and knowlege, and the very feare of the Lorde shall be the treasure of it. Beholde, the messengers shall crye wythout: & the ambassadours of peace shall wepe wytterly. The stretes are wast there walketh no man therein. God hath broke the appoyntment, the cyties are caste awaye, & men are nothing regarded, the desolate earth is in heumes. Libanus is shamed: & hewen downe Saron is lyke a wildernes: Balan and Char-mel are spoyled of theyr fruytes, and therefore saith the Lorde, I wyl by nowe, nowe wyl I be advanced, nowe wyl I be exalted as a myghty

God. * Ye shall conceaue trouble, & beare strawe and your spere shall be the spere, that it may co-sume you and the people shall be burnt lyke lymie and as the thornes burne that are betwen of, and cast in the fyre. Nowe berke to ye that are farre of, howe I haue done, and consyder my power, ye that be at hande.

The sinners at Sion are afrayed, a soden fearfulness is come vpon the ppoctites, what is he amonge vs, saye they, that shall dwell by the co-sumynge fyre: whych of vs maye abyde that euerslastynge brate? * He that leadeth a godlye lyfe saye I, and speaketh the truth. He that ab-horreth gaynes wonne by violence and disceat he that kepeth hys hande that he touche no re-warde: whiche stoppeth his eares, that he heare no counsell agaynst the innocent bloude: which holdeth downe hys eyes that he se none euil. He it is that shall dwell on hye: whose sauagard shall be in a bulwarke of rockes, to hym shall be gene meate, and hys waters shall not faile. Thynne eyes shall se the kynge in hys gloire: euen the kynge of the farre countreyes shall they se: thynne hart studied for feare thynching thus. * What shall then become of the Scribe: of the receauer of our monye: what of hym that tared our say-rest houses: There shall thou not se people of a straunge tonge to haue so dyffused a languag þ it maye not be vnderstande, nether so straung a speech, but it shall be perceaued. There shall on be sene þ head cytye of oure solempne feastes There shall thynne eyes se Jerusalem that glorious habitation: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue: whose naples shall neuer be taken oute: woylde without ende: whose cordes euerychone shall neuer corrupte, for the glorious maiesty of the Lorde shall there be presente amonge vs: as a place, where saye brode riuers and streames are, thowwe the whych shall nether galpe rowe nor great shyp sayle. * For þ Lorde is our iudge the Lorde is our lawe geuer. The Lorde is our kynge, and he hym selfe shall be oure Sauoure There are the cordes so layde abrod, that they cannot be better. And therfore they haue not fired theyr masse, nor sprede abrode theyr sayle.
Then there is dealed great spoyles: pee, lame mē runne after the prape. There lyeth no man that sayeth: I am sycke: but all euil is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The xxxiiii. Chapter.

The last destruction of the Synagoge: in whiche the kingdome and priesthode of that people was translated to the church and congregacion of Christ

Al the starres of heauen shall wast, & the heathē thed in heauen, and shall immediatly come downe in iudgement vpon Idumea, and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

25 And the Lordes sword shall be ful of bloud, & be rusty with the fatnes & bloud of lambes and goates, with the fatnes with the kidneis of the sheeps. For the Lord shall kyll a great offering in Bozra, & a great slaughter in the land of Idumea. There shall the Unicornez sal with them & the bulles with the giauntes, & their lande shall be thowowly soaked with bloude, & theyr grounde corrupte with fatnes. Unto the also, O Sion shall come the dape of my vengeance of God and the yere when thyne owne iudgementes shall be recompensed. And hys floudes shall be turned to pyttch, & hys earth to byrmstone: & therewith shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched dape nor nyghte: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye wast. And no man shall go thowow it for euer. But pellicanes, storkes, great oules & rauenys shall haue it in possellion, & dwel therein.

26 For God shall sprede out the lyne of desolacyon vpon it, and wepe it with the stones of emptines. When kyngeys are called vpon, there shall be none & al prynces shall be away. Thornes shall growe in their places, nettles & thistles in their stronge holdes: & the Dragons may haue their pleasure therein, & that they maye be a court for estryches. There shall straunge bysures & monstous beastes mete one another, and the wyld beeste com panie together. There shall the Lamia lye, and haue her lodgyng. There shall the oule make her nest, buylde: be there at home and bypunge for the bys pongons. There shall the kytes come together, eche one to hys lyke.

Seke thowowe the scrpyture of the Lord and read it. There shall none of these thynges be left out, there shall not one nor such lyke, sayle. For what hys mouth comaunde th, that same doth his spyt gather together, or fulfilleth. He hath cast the lot for them, and to those beastes hath he his handes deuided the lyne: therfore those shall possesse the enherytaunce frome generacyon to generacyon, and dwel therein for euer.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Of the tyme and kyngedome of Christ.

At the deserte & wyldernes shall reioyce: the wast ground shall be glad and flozpysh as the lylly. She shall flozpysh pleasauntly and be ioyfull, and euer be geuyng thanckes more and more. For the glozpy of Lybanus, the bewtpe of Charmell, & Saron shall be geuen her. These shall knowe the honour of the Lord, and my maiesty of oure God. * And therefore strengthe the weake handes, and comfort the feble knees.

2 Saye vnto them that are of a fearfull herte, be of good chere, and fear not. * Beholde, poure God commeth to take vengeance: and you shall see the rewarde that God geneth. God commeth hys owne selfe, and wyl deliuer you. * The eyes of the blynde be lychtened, and the eares of the deaffe opened. Then shall the lame ma leape as an hert and the * dome mans tong shall geue thanckes. * In the wyldernes also there shall welis spring, and floudes of water in the desert

The dype grounde shall turne to riuers, and the thyrstie to springes of water: Where as dragons dwelt afore: there shall growe sherte flowers and grene rushes. There shall be forte paces & comen stretes, this shall be called the holy way. No vncleane personne shall go thowowe it, for the Lord him selfe shall go with them, that way and the wayfarer, nor ignorant shall not erre. There shall be no lye, and no rauynyng brokes shall come therein, nor be there, but men redeemed shall go there free and safe. And I redeemed of the Lord, I saye: shall conuerte and come to Sion with thanksgyng. Euerlastyng ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnes shall be among them. And as for all sorowe and heynnes, it shall vanyshe away.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is besieged by Sennacherib in the tyme of kynge Hezekias.

In the xliii. yere of kynge Hezekias came Sennacherib king of the Assyrians downe, to laye sege vnto all the stronge cities of Iuda, to conquire the same. And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabshakeh from Lachis towarde Jerusalem against king Hezekias, with an excedyng host whiche led hym by the condyte of the ouerpole in the waye that goeth thowow the fullers land. And so there came forth vnto him Elakim Helkias sonne of president Sobia the scribe, & Ioah Asaphs sonne, the secretozpe.

And Rabshakeh sayde vnto them: Tel Hezekias, that the great kynge of Assyria sayth thus vnto him: what presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto? I sayd: Surely thou trustest in bayne wordes, when counsell and strength are necessary to the battel, or els wherto trustest thou that thou castest thy selfe off? * loo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reede (I meane Egypte) whiche be that leaneth vpon, it goeth into hys hande and butteth hym thowowe. Euen so is Pharaon the kynge of Egypte, vnto all them that trust in hym. But yf thou woldest saye to me: We trust in the Lord oure God. A goodly God in dede: whose hye places and altars Hezekias toke downe and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem to worshyp onely before the altar. Howe therfore deliuer hostages that thou rebel nomore agaynst my Lord the kynge of Assyrians. And I wyl geue the. ii. w. hoyses: yf thou be able to let men vpon them. Howe da rest thou relyst the power of the smallest prync that my Lord hath: howe da rest thou truste in the charettes and hoysen of Egypte? Moreouer thoukest thou that I am come up hether to destroye thys lande withoute the Lordes wyl? The Lord sayde vnto me: go vp into the lande that thou mayest destroy it. Then sayde Elakim, Sobia & Ioah vnto Rabshakeh: Speake to vs thy seruantes we praye the in the Assyrians language, for we vnderstande it well.

And spake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, lest the folke heare whych I praye vpon the wal. The answered Rabshakeh: thynke ye that the kynge sent me to speake this only vnto the Lord and the

And Rablaketh stode stille, and cried w a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and saide: now take hede, howe the greate kynge of the Assyrians, cometh þou warnynge. Thus sayeth the kynge: Let not hezekias dysceyne þou: for he shal not be able to deliuer þou. Moreouer, let not Heze-kias comferte þou in the Lorde, when he sayth the Lorde wythoute doubte, shall defende vs, & shal not geue ouer this cytie into the handes of the kynge of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth the kynge of Assyria: obtain my fa-uoure, enclpne to me, so maye euery man enioy water of his cysterne, vnto the time I come my owne, wherein is wheate & wyne, which is both sowen with sede, & planted wyth vyneyardes.

Let not hezekias dysceyne þou when he sayth vnto þou: the Lorde shal deliuer vs. * Nighte the gods of þe Gentyles kepe enery mans lande from the power of the kynge of the Assyrians.
Where is þe God of Hemath? Arphad? Where is þe god of Sepharai? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the goddes of these landes hath deliuered they? countre oute of my power: is the Lorde indeede able to deliuer Jerusalem from my had vnto this hezekias messengers helde they? toges, & answered not one word, for þe king had charged the þe they shuld geue hym no answer.
So came Eliakim helias sonne the presidēt Sobna the Scribe, and Ioab Asphas sonne þe secretarye, vnto hezekias wyth rent clothes, & tolde hym the wordes of Rablaketh.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Hezekias humbleth hym selfe before the Lorde. The armye of Sennacherib is slaine of the Angell of the Lorde: and he hymself is helpe of his owne foules.

When hezekias heard that, he rente hys clothes, & put on a sackclothe and went into þe temple of þe Lorde but he sent heliakim the presydēt Sobna the Scribe, wyth the eldest prestes clothed in sackcloth vnto the prophet Elay the sonne of Amos, & they sayd vnto hym: Thus sayeth hezekias: this is the day of trouble, of plage and blasphemye: for the chyldren are come to the place of byrth: but there is no power to bringe them forth. The Lorde thy God (no doubte) hath well consydered the wor-des of Rablaketh, whom hys Lorde þe kynge of the Assyrians hath sente to despye and blaspheme the linyng God, with suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde ryghte well. And therefore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that are left. So the seruantes of þe kynge Hezekias came to Elaye.

And Elaye gaue them thus answer. Say thou vnto þoure Lorde: thus sayeth the Lorde Benot afrayed of the wordes that thou haste hearde wherewith the kynge of þe Assyrians ser-uantes haue blasphemed me. Behold, I wyl cause a winde to go ouer hym allone as he beareth the rumoure, he shal go again into his coutrie, there wyl I destroy him with þe sword in his owne land. * Now when Rablaketh returned, he found þe kynge of Assyria layng sege to Libnas, for he had vnderstande þe he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumoure þe Tharkes king of Ethiopia was come forth to warre against hym. And when the king of Assiria heard þe, he sent other messengers to kynge hezekias with this comaundement: Say thus to hezekias king of Iuda. Let not thy God disceiue the, in whom þe hopest, and sayest: Jerusalem shal not be geuen into the handes of þe king of Assyria. For loo, thou knowest wel how the kynge of Assyria haue handled al the landes þe they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape?

Where the people of þe Gentiles (whom my progenytours conquered) deliuered at any tyme thorow their Gods? * As namely, Gozan, Ha-ran, Rezeph, and the chyldren of Eden, which were at Chalassar. Where is þe king of Hemah and the kynge of Arphad, & the kynge of the cyty Sepharaim, Eua and Ana? Now when hezekias had receyued the letter of þe messengers and read it: he went vp into the house of þe Lorde and opened the letter before the Lorde: and hezekias prayed before the Lorde on this maner.
O Lorde of hostes thou God of Israell, which dwellest vpon * Cherubin. Thou art the God, that only is God of all kyngdomes of þe world for thou onely hast created heauen and earth, enclpne thyne eare Lorde and consyder, open thyne eyes, O Lorde, and se, and ponder all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, whiche hath sent his embassage to blaspheme the linyng God.
It is true O Lorde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered al kyngdomes and landes, and caste they? goddes in the fyre. Not wythstan-dynge those were no gods, but the workes of mens handes, of wood, or stone, therefore haue they destroyed the. Deliuer vs then, O Lorde oure God, from þe handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earthe maye knowe, that thou only arte the Lorde. Then Elay þe sonne of Amos sent vnto hezekias, sayng: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell. Where as þe hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchyng Sennacherib the kynge of Assyria, this is the answer that the Lorde hath geuen, concernynge hym.
Dispyled art thou, & mocked (O daughter Sy-on) he hath shakē his head at the, O daughter Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib: whome hast thou despyed & blasphemed: Agaynst who hast thou lyfted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proud lokes: euen against the holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruantes hast blasphemed the Lorde, and thus holdest þe of thy selfe. I wyl couer the hye mountaynes and sydes of Lyba-nus wyth my horsemen. And there wyl I cut downe the hye Cedre trees & the fayrest fygtrees, I wyl by into the byrth of it, & into the cheffeste of hys tymer woodes. If there be no water, I wyl graue and dryncke. And as for waters of defence, I shall drye them vp, with þe

And thys shall the gelousye of the Lorde of hostes bynne to passe. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians. He shall not come into this cytie: and shal shote no arrowe into it, there shal no shield hurt it, neyther shall they cast dyches aboute it. The xxxviii. Chapter.

Hezekia is sycke vnto deathe: but is yet reueryed by the Lorde, and lyueth syfstone yeres after, for whiche benefices he geueth thanks.

111. Re. xx. a.
11. pa. xxxiii. s.

At longe afoze thys was Hezekia sicke vnto the deathe, * and the prophet Elsaye the sonne of Amoz, came vnto hym, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Sette thynne house in orde, for thou muste dye, and shalte not escape. Then Hezekias turned his face toward the walle, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembre (O Lorde) that I haue walked befoze the in trueth, and a stedfast hert and haue done the thyng that is pleasaunte to the. And Hezekia wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Elsaye: Goode and speake vnto Hezekia: The Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this worde: I haue hearde thy prayer, and consydered thy teares, * beholde, I wyll put tene yeres mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer the cytie also, from the hand of the kynge of Assyria, for I wyll defende the cytie: * And take the thys token of the Lorde, that he wyll do it, as he hath spoken: Beholde I wyll retorne the shadowe of Ahaz diall, that now is layde out with p sunne & bynne it ten degrees backward. * So the sunne turned ten degrees backwarde, the whiche he was descended afoze.

Ca thanks geuyng, whiche Hezekia kynge of Iuda wrote when he had bene sycke and was recovered.

I thoughte I shoulde haue gone to the gates of hell, when myne age was shortened, and haue wanted the resydue of myne yeres. I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer see the Lorde (the Lorde I saye) in thys lyfe. I shall neuer se manne amonge dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is folden vp together, and taken away from me, lyke a shepherds cottage I haue beuen of my lyfe by my synnes: lyke as a weauer cutteth of his webbe. He wyll with bynne synnesh make an ende of me: pee, he wyll make an ende of me in one daye. * I thoughte, I wolde haue lyued vnto the morow, but he bynne my bones lyke a p on, and in one day thou wyllt make an ende of me.

Then chatered I lyke a swalowe, and lyke a Crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyft vp mine eyes into the height: O Lord (said) I my synnes kepeth me down: raise thou me. What shal I saye? The Lorde hath made a promysse to me. Pee, & he hym self hath performed it. I shall therfore so longe as I lyue remember this bitternes of my life. O Lord men may lyue beyond their yeres: and I wil declare to al men, p euen in those yeres I haue a ioyful life & that it was p that causedest me to slepe agayne thou hast geue life to me. Behold bitter as gal was my pensifnesse, so soze longed I for healeth. And it was thy pleasure to deliuer my lyf fro the fylthye ppyt, for thou it is (O Lorde) p hast cast all my synnes behynde thy backe.

* For heil prayseth not the, deathe doeth not magnifye the thy p go downe into the graue, prayse not p truth: but the liuyng: pee, p liuyng knowlage the, lyke as I do this daye.

The father telleth his chyldre of thy faithfulnes. * To heale me is the Lordes worke, and he wyll syng my songes in thy house, al p dayes of our life. And Elsaye said: take a plaster of figges & lay it vpon the soze, so shal it be whole. Then sayd Hezekia o what a great myracle is this? I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Hezekia is reproued of Elsaye, because he shewed his treasure vnto the embassadors of Babilon.

* At the same tyme, Merodach Baladanus sone, kynge of Babilon, sent letters & presented to Hezekia. For he understod that he had bene sicke, & was recovered.

nered agayne. And hezekia was glad therof, and shewed them the commodities of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spices and rootes of precious oyles, all that was in his cubburdes & treasure houses. There was not one thyng in hezekias house, and so thowout all his king dome but he let them se it.

Then came Elaye the Propheete to kyng hezekia, and sayde vnto hym: What haue the men sayde & from whence came they vnto the? hezekia answered, they came oute of a farre countrie vnto me oute of Babylon: Elay sayd what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? hezekia answered: All that is in mine house haue they sene: and there is nothyng in my treasure but I shewed it them.

Then said Elay vnto hezekia: Understand the worde of the Lorde of Hostes. * Beholde, the tyne wyl come that euery thyng whiche is in thine house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in store vntill this daye shalbe carped to Babylon, and nothyng lesse behynd. Thus sayeth the Lorde: yea & parte of thy sonnes, that come of the, and whom thou shalt get shalbe carped hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons courte.

Then sayde hezekia to Elay. Now God prosper his owne counsaile whiche thou hast tolde me. he sayd mozeouer. So y there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

Comforte my people (O ye prophetes) comfort my people, sayth your God, comfort Ierusalem at the verte and tell her: that her trauayle is at an end that her offence is pardoned that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correccion for all her synnes. * A voyce cryeth in wyldernesse: Prepare the waye of the Lorde in the wyldernesse, make streygthe the path for our God in the desert. Let all valleys be exalted, and euery mountayne & hyll be layd lowe: what so is croked, let it be made streight and let the rough, be made playne felde. * For the glory of the Lorde shal appere, and all flesh shal at once se it, for why? y mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake. Nowe crye. And the propheete answered: what shall I crye? that al leue is grasse, and that all the godlynesse therof is as the floure of the felde: The grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye: Euen so is the people as grasse, when the brette of the Lorde bloweth vpon them. Neuertheles whether the grasse wither, or the floure fade awaye: * Yet the word of our God endureth for ever. y^e despyled Israel: for I wyl helpe the, sayth the Lorde, & the holy one of Israel thine aduenger.
Beholde, I wyl make the a treading cart and a newe flayle, that thou maist threthe & grynde the mountaynes, and byng the hylls to poulder. Thou shalt fane them, & the wynde shal car-rye them awaye, & the whirle wynde shal scatere them. But thou shalt reioyce in the Lorde, and shalt delyte in prayng the holy one of Israel.
* When the thirky & pooze seeke water & fynde none, & when their tong is drye of thirst, I geue it them sayth the Lorde: I the God of Israel for saue the not. * I byng forth founteynes in the hil-les, & welles in the plaine felde: I turne y^e wyldernes to ryuers, & the drye land to coastes of water. I plant in the waste ground trees of cedre, boxe, myrr, and olyues. And in the drye, I set fyre trees, elmes & basythornes together.
All this do I, that they al together, may se and marke, perceaue wth they^e hertes & confesse that y^e hande of the Lord maketh these thinges & that the holpe one of Israel byngeth the to passe stande at your cause (sayth the Lord) & byng forth your strongest grounde, sayth the kyng of Jacob. Let the byng forth they^e god-des, & let they^e gods tell vs what shal chaunge hereafter: yee, let the shewe vs y^e thynges y^e are past, what they be: let them declare the vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, & knowe the hereafter. Either shewe vs thinges for to come, & tell vs what shal be done hereafter: so shal we know, y^e your gods, do some thyng ether good or bad: so wyl we both knowlege y^e same, & tell it out. Beholde, ye are gods of naught, & your makynge is of naught: yee, abhominable is the mā y^e hath chose you. Neuertheles * I haue waked vp one fro the north, & he shal come. And another from y^e east, whych shal cal vpon my name, & shal treade vpon princes as vpon claye: & as y^e potter treadeth downe y^e myrr. Who declared this from the begynnyng, & we wyl knowe hym. O y^e from y^e olde tymes, & we wyl confesse & saue y^e he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth anye thyng: there is none also y^e heareth your wordes. The fyrst is that shal say to Sio. Beholde, beholde, they are present: & to Jerusalem it selfe wyl I geue an Euangeliste. But when I consyder, there is not a man among the nor any that can geue counsell nor when I examyne them y^e can answer one worde. Loo, wycked are they, and vayne wth the thynges also that they take in hand, yee, they^e ymages are but wynde and vayne thynges

The .xlii. Chapter.

Of the comynge of Christ: and his Baptisme.

BEholde * this is my seruaunt vpon whome I leane, my electe in whom my soule is pacified, I haue geuen hym my sprete, that he maye shewe forth iudgemente, and equyte among the Gentyles. He shal not be an outcryer, nor lyfte vp his voyce. His voyce shal not be heard in the streets. And a brysed rede shal be not bryke: & the smoking flax shal be not quench: but sayth fully & truly shal he geue iudgement, not be penitue nor careful: y^e he maye restore righteousnes vnto the earth, & the Gentiles also shal hepe his lawes. * For thus sayeth God y^e Lorde vnto hym (euen he that made the heuens & spred them abode, & set forth the earth wth her increase: which geueth breath vnto y^e people y^e is in it, & spyteth them y^e dwel therein) I y^e Lord haue called the in ryghteousnes, and led the by the hand. * Therfore wyl I also defend the, & geue the for a counsaunt of y^e people, & to be y^e light of y^e Gentiles That y^e mayest open the eyes of the blind, & let out y^e prisoners from their bondes: & them y^e sit in darchnes, out of y^e donge ou house. For I am y^e Lord & this is my name: * And my glory wyl I geue to none other, nether min honoure to graue ymages. Behold, olde thinges are come to passe & newe thinges do I declare. And ouer they come, I tel you of them. Sing vnto y^e Lorde, a newe songe of thankesgeyng, blowe out y^e pipe maye from the ende of the world. They that be vpon the see, and all that is therein praye hym the Ihesus & all they þ dwell in them. Let the wyldernes with the cities lyfte vp their voyce, the counes also þ they of Eder dwell in. Let them be glad þ sit vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from þ hye mountaynes ascribing glorie vnto the Lorde, & magnify hym among the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a Giant & take a stomacke vnto him like a free man of warre. He shall roze and crye, & ouer-come his enemies. I haue longe holden my peace (sayeth the Lorde) I haue bene still and refray-ned my selfe, but nowe I wyl crye lyke a traue-lynge woman, and at once wyl I destroy and denoure, I wyl make wast both mountayne & delle, & drye vpon every grene thing that groweth theron. I wyl drye vpon the floudes of water, & drynke vpon the ryuers. I wyl byng the blynde into a strete, that they know not, & lede them in to a fote path þ they are ignorant in. I shall mak darkenes lyght before them, and the light that is croked to be straight. These thinges haue I done vnto them, and not for sake them. * They are fallen backe: yee, & let them be ashamed carnestly, that hope in ydolles, and saye to fashioned ymages: ye are our gods. Heare, O ye deafe men, & sharpen your sightes to se (O ye blind) Who is blynde but my seruaunt? O so deafe as my messenger, whome I sente vnto them: For who is the ruler so blynde (saye they) as þ perfect man & so blynde as the Lordes seruaunt Thou vnderstandest much, & kepest nothing, þ eares are open, & no man heareth. The Lorde is merciful vnto them for his ryghteousnes sake þ his worde might be magnified, and praysed: But the people them selues is robbed & troden vnder þ fote, chayned in dongeons, & they al (I saye) be shut into prysen houses. * They are carped awayne captiue, & no man dothe lose them They be troden vnder fote, & nomā doth labour to bring the agayn. * But who is he amōg you that pondreth this, that consydreth it, & taketh it for a warnyng in tyme to come?

* Who suffered Jacob to be troden vnder fote, & Israel to be spoiled? Wyd not the Lorde?
Because we haue sinned against him, and haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, nether be obedient vnto his lawe: Therefore he hath poured vpon hym his wrathful displeasure, & strong battel, which fyreth hym on euery syde yet wyl he not vnderstand. He burneth hym vp, yet sinneth it not into his herte.

from the West. I wyl say to the North: let go. *
And to the southe, kepe not backe: but bynge ted, fashyoned, and made for myne honoure.

* Byng forth þ people, whiche is blynde & yet thinges, & to tel vs what is to come? Let them bynge they: wytnes so that they be fre, els, let them beare, & saye: it is truth. You are my witnesses (sayth the Lorde) & my seruaunt, whom I ful credence, & consider * I am he, before whom there was neuer any God, and þ ther shall be no besyde me there is no sauour. I gaue warning I made whole, I taughte you, when there was

I am God. And euen he am I from the begyn-nyng, and * there is none þ can take any thyng one of Israel poure redeemer: * for your sake I haue sent to Babylon, and brought downe the strongest of them. All they are fugitiue with þ Chaldees that host them of they: Chippes: Eue I the Lorde your holy one which haue made Israel, and am your kyng. Thus saith the Lorde (* Euen he that maketh a waye in þ see, and a fote path in þ mighty waters) * which bygeth forth the charettes and hozes, the host & the power of warre, that they maye fall & neuer ryle, and be extincte, lyke as towne is quenched.

Remember not thynges of olde, and regard nothyng that is past: Beholde, I shall make a newe thyng, and shortly shall it apere, and shall you not knowe it? I wyl make stretes in the desert, and riuers of water in the wilderness: The wylde beastes shall worshyppe me: þ Dragons and the young Estriches. * For I shall geue water in the wilderness, and streames in the desert

This people haue I made for my selfe: and they dest not call vpon me, but þ haddest an vnluste nour me w thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no dere sprece with thy mony, neyther pouredst the fatte of thy sacrifices vpon me. * Howe be-

¶ The deliuerance of the people by Cyrus. The coming of Christe and callings of the gentyles.

Thus

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto Cyrus his anointed, whom I haue taken by the ryght hand, to subdue nations before him. * I will loose y gyrdle of bynges and I wyl open the gates before his face, & not to shut their doores. I wil go before the, & make the croked streyght, I shall bryake the brasse doore, & burst the yron barres, I shall geue the that which thou mayst knowe y I am the Lord God of Israel which haue called y by thy name and that for Jacob my scruauntes sake, & for Israel my chosen. For I called the by name & dayned the or euer thou knewest me. * Euen I the Lord before whome there is no other: for without me ther is no God. * I haue prepared y or euer thou knewest me, y I might be knowne fro the rylpyng of the sonne to the gopng downe of the same, y all is nothyng without me. For I am the Lord, & ther is els none, It is I that created the lyght & darckenes. * I make peace and trouble: yee, euen I y Lord do all these thynges. Ye heauens from aboue droppe downe, & let the cloudes raine righteousnes. The erth openeth it self, & bringeth forth healeth, y therby righteousnes maye flozpe. Euen I the Lord doynge it to passe. * Woe be vnto him that stryeth with his maker, the potsherd with the potter. Saith the clay to the potter: What makest y: or thy worcke serueth for nothyng. Woe be vnto him that saith to his father. Why begettest thou? And to his mother, Why barest thou? Thus sayeth the Lord, euen the holy one & maker of Israel. Aske me of thynges for to come concernyng my sonnes: and put me in remembrance as touchyng the worckes of my handes. I haue made the erth, & created man vpon it: With myne handes haue I spread forth heauen, and geuen a commaundement for all the host thereof. I shall spake him vp with ryghteousnes, and orde all his wayes.

* He shall buylde my citie, and let out my pyloners, and that nether for gyfte nor rewardes sayeth the Lord of hostes: Thus sayth the lord the occupiers of Egypt. The marchauntes of the Morians and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shall be thyne: they shall folow the, and go with cheynes vpon their sete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplication vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with the. * Howe profounde art thou O God, thou God and Saviour of Israel: Confounded are they all, and put to dishonour: they are gone hence together with shame, euen the makers of Images. But Israel shall be saued in the Lord: whiche is the enclasyng saluacion. Ye shall not come to shame nor confusyon worlde wythoute ende. For thus sayeth the Lord, * euen y created heauen the God y made the erth, that fashioned it, and let it forth. He dyd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited. Euen I the Lord without whome there is none other. * I haue not spoken secretly in darcke places of y erth. It is not for naught, y I said vnto the sede of Jacob seke me

I am the Lord whiche when I speake, declare the thyng y is righteous and true, gather you and come together, draw nye hether, you y are escaped of y people. * Haue they any vnderstan dyng, y set vp the stockes of their Idoles, and pray vnto a god, y can not helpe the: draw nye come hether, & let them aske coucel one at another, & shewe forth: What is he y tolde this before: or who spake of it euer sence y begynnynge? Haue not I the Lord doone it: * without whome there is none other God y true God & saviour, & there is els none but I. * And therfore turne you vnto me (al ye endes of the earth) y ye may be saued: for I am God, and there is els none, I sweare by my selfe, out of my mouth commeth the word of ryghteousnes, & that no man may turne: * but all knees shall bowe vnto me, & all tonges shall sweare by my name, sayng: Woe is it, in the Lord is my ryghteousnes & strength. To him shall me come, but al they that thincke scoyne of hym, shall be confounded. And y whole sede of Israel shall be iustified, and make they boast in the Lord.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Idolatre is reprobued, The health that cometh by Christ is prophesied.

Bel is fallen. Babel is broke downe whose Images were a burthen for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make the very. They are sonke downe, & fallen together for they may not ease the of their burthen, therfore must they go in captiuitie.

Herken vnto me O house of Jacob, and al ye y remayne yet of the housholde of Israel who I haue bozne frome your mothers wombe: and broughte you vp from your byrth, tyl ye were growen. I, I, whiche shall beare you vnto your laste age. I haue made you: I wyl also nozpe you, beare you, and saue you. * Whome wyl ye make me like, or to whome wyl ye make me equall or compare me that I shulde be like him, in fashyon or Image, that I maye be like him. * Ye soles (no doubt) wyl take out siluer & gold oute of your purses, and weye yt, & byze a goldsmith to make a God of it, that men may knele downe and worshyppe it. * Yet must he be take on mennes sholders, and bozne and sette in his place that he maye stande, and not moue out of his place. Alas that men shulde crye vnto him whiche geueth no answer: and delpyer not the man that calleth vpon him from his trouble.

Consyder this well, and be ashamed. Go in to your owne selues (O ye runnagates) Remembre the thynges which are past, synce the begynnynge of the worlde, that I am God, and y there is els no God: yee, and there is nothyng like vnto me, in the begynnynge of a thyng I shewe the ende therof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. My deuice standeth stand fastly stablished, and I fulfil al my pleasure. * I call a byrde out of the east, & the man by whom my councel shall be fulfilled out of far costries as sone as I thyncke to deuyse a thyng. I do it.

The worde of the Lorde against Babilon.

BUt as for the (O daughter: thou virgin Babilon) syt thou downe in the dust, syt vpon the ground, and not in a throue. (O thou maide of Caldea) Thou shalt nomoze be called tendre and pleasaunt. Bypnyng forth the querne: and grynde mele, vntill thy brodered heare, put of thy shooes, make bare thy knees, and wade thow the water riuers, * Thy shame shalbe discovered and thy priuities shalbe sene. For I wyll aduenge me of the, & wyll shew no mercye to the as I do to other men, sayeth oure redeemer: which is called the Lorde of hostes the holy one of Israel.

Syt still, holde thy tongue, and get the into some darcke cozner, (O daughter Caldea) for thou shalt nomoze be called lady of kingdomes. I was so wraethe with my people, that I punyshed myne inheritaunce, and gaue them into thy power. * Neuerthelesse, I shewdest them no mercye, but euen the very aged men of them dydest thou oppresse ryght soze with thy yoke, & thou thoughtest thus: I shalbe ladye for euer.

And besyde all þ, thou hast not regarded these thinges, nethe remembred what was the ende of þ citie Jerusalem. Hear now the therfore, thou wyful, þ syttest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thyne herte: * I am alone and without me is there none: I shal neuer be wyddowe noz desolate againe.

And yet both these thinges shal come to þ vpon a day in the twynckling of an eye: * Namely, wyddowheade and desolaciõ. They shal mightely fall vpon the, for the multitude of witches, and for the great heape of thy couniurers. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednes and hast said: * No man seeth me. Thyne owne wysdome and cunnyng hath disceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpon the and thou shalt not know from whence it shal aryse. Myschefe shal fall vpon the, which þ shalt not be able to put out. A sodayne vtter destruction shal come vpon the or euer þ beware.

Nowe go to thine consurers, and to the multitude of thy witches (with whome thou hast weryed thy selfe from thy youth) yf they maye helpe the or strength þ. Thou hast heretofore had many counsels of them: so let the heauẽ galers and the beholders of starres, and moone prophe-tes come on now and deliuer the: yee, and lette them shewe when these thynges shal come vpon the. Behold, they shalbe lyke strawe, which yf it be kyndled with fyre no man maye ryd it for the vehemence of the flame. And yet it geneth no sinders to warme a mā by, noz cleare fyre to syt by. Thus are they with whõ thou hast weryed thy selfe: and thus are thy marchauntes that haue bene with the from thy youth: Every one hath taken his owne waye and none of the shal defende the.

The .xlviij. Chapter

The hypocryse of the Jewes is reposed. The Lord alone wyll be worshipped, whiche hath chosen vs out which socereth vs for his owne sake.

HEare this, O thou house of Jacob, I ye that are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one stocke with Iuda: Which swaie by the name of the Lorde, and beare witness by the God of Israell (but not with truth and right) which are called * fre men of the holy cy-tie, are grouded vpon þ God of Israel, * whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thynges that I shewed you euer sence the begynnyng haue I not broughte them to passe immediatly as they came out of my mouth and declared them: & they are come: Howebeit, I knowe that thou arte obstinate, and that thy necke hath an yron wayne, and that thy browe is brasse, neuer thelesse I haue euer sence the begynnyng shewed þ of thynges for to come, and declared the vnto þ, or euer they came to passe: that þ shuldest not saye, myne ydoll hath done it, my carued or molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou herdest it before and beholde, it is come to passe & whether can ye prophecy of thynges to come? But as for me I tolde the before at þ beginning, newe and secrete thinges that thou knowest not of. * And some done nowe, not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer heardest, before they were brought to passe: þ thou canst not say Beholde I knewe of them: * Howeouer, there be some wherof þ hast nethe heard noz knowe, ne ther haue they bene opened vnto thine eares afore time. For I knewe that thou wouldest maliciously offende, therfore haue I called þ a trait-gressoure, eue fro thy mothers wombe. Neuertheles, for myne names sake, I wyll withdraue my wraath, and it shalbe for mine honours sake yf I paciently forbeare the & rote the not oute. Beholde, I haue purged the, yet not as silver. * I haue chosen the in the fire of affliction, and þ only for myne owne sake: yee, * eue for myne owne sake wyll I doo this, or els what dyshonoure wolde they do to my name? Herken vnto me, O Jacob and Israel whom I haue called, I am euen he that is, I am the fyrst and þ last.

My hande hath layde þ foundation of the earth and my right hande hath spanned ouer the heuens. As sone as I cal them they are there. Gather you altogether and herken: whiche of yonder goddes hath declared this? The Lord hath a loue vnto him, and he shal perfourme his will against Babel, and declare his power against the Chaldees. I my selfe alone, eue I haue told you this before: yee, I dyd call him: and bypnyng him forth: and he shal make his wayes glorious, Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken anye thyng darckelye, sence the begynnyng? When a thyng begynneth I am ther. Wherfore the Lorde God & his spyete hath sente me. And thus sayth the Lord God thy redeemer, the holy one of Israel. I am the Lorde thy God: which teache the * profitable thynges, and leade the

His name shulde not be rooted oute: nor destroyed befoze me. * So a way from Babilō, fye fro the Caldees, with a mery voyce speake of this, declare it abrode, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, saye ye: The Lord hath redemed his seruaut Jacob, that they suffered no thurste, he ledde them thowow the wyl dernes, & caused the waters to flow out vnto them from out of the rocke. * He claue the rocke a sonder, & the water gushed out. * As for þ vngodly, they haue no peace, sayth the Lord: ¶ The. xlix. Chapter.

¶ Christ shall gather together all nacpous be they neuer so farre of.

V Alex, herken vnto me, & take hede ye people fro farre. The Lord hath called me from my byrthe, and made mencio of my name from my mothers wombe: he * hath made my mouthe lyke a sharpe swerde vnder the shadow of his hande hath he defended me, and hidde me in his guyner as a good arrowe, and sayde vnto me. Thou arte my seruaut Israel, * I wyll be honoured in the. Then answered I: I haue lost my labour, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

¶ Reuerthelesse I wil comit my cause and my worke vnto the Lord my God. And now sayth the Lord, euen he that fasthyoned me from my mothers wombe to be his seruante, that I maye bypnyng Jacob agayn vnto him: howbeit, Israel wil not be gathered vnto him again. In whose syght I am great, whiche also is my Lord, my God & my strenght. And he said: it is but a smal thyng that thou arte my seruaut, to set vp the hyndredes of Jacob, & to restore the destructio of Israel. * For I haue made the þ lyght of the Gentiles, that thou maist be my helth vnto the ende of the worlde.

¶ Moreover, thus sayth the Lord the redeemer & holp one of Israel: bycause of the abhorryng & despyng among the Gentiles, concernyng the seruaut of all the that beare rule: Kynges and princes shal se, and arysle and worshyp, by cause of the Lord that is faithful: and bycause of the holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the. And thus sayth the Lord: * In the tyme accepted haue I herde the, & in the dape of saluacpon haue I helped the. * I wyll pzeserue the, & make the to be the attonemet of the people, that thou mayst helpe vp the earth agayne: and possesse agayne the desolate herytages. * That thou mayst saye to the pylsoners: go forth, and to them that are in darcknes, come into the lyght, they shal fede in the hye wapes, and gette their pasture in all hye places.

* They shal neyther hunger nor thirst, deate nor sunne shal not hurt the. For he þ fauoureth the shal leade the, & giue the drinke of þ spryng of weis. I wil make waies vpo al my mountai-nes, & my foote pathes shal be exalted. And behold they shal come from farre: lo, some from the north & west, some fro the lande of Syngs, which is in the south. * Reioyce ye heauens: and D syng prayles, thou earth. Take of ioye ye by- les, for God hath comforted his people, & wyll haue mercye vpon his that be in trouble.

¶ But Sio said, * God hath forsake, & my lord hath forgottē me. Wil a wife forget þ childe of her wombe, & not pitie the sonne who she hath bozne? And though she do forget, yet wil I not forget the. Behold, I haue written the vp vpo my handes, thy walles are euer i my sight. They make hast to builde the vp again. As for those þ ouerthwe the, & made the wast, they shal de parte from the. * Lyfte vp thine eyes, & looke about the: al these gather the together & come to the. As truly as I liue (saith the Lord) þ shalte put them al vpon the: as an apperel, and gyde the to þ as a bypde doth her Jewels. As for thy lande þ lieth desolat, wasted & destroyed, it shal be to narrowe for the þ shal dwel in it. And they þ wolde deuoure the, they shal be farre awaye. Then þ child who þ bare shal bring forth vnto the, shal saye in thine eare: this place is to narrowe, geue place that I may haue rouse. The shal t þ thinke by thy self: Who hath begotten me these: syng I am bare alone, a captiue & an outcast: And who hath nourished the vp for me? I am desolat & alone, but fro whence come these

And therfore thus saith þ Lord God: Behold I wyll strecthe out myne hande to the Gentiles and let vp my token to the people. They shal bypnyng the thy sonnes in their lappes: and carpe thy doughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shal be thy nursyng fathers, & Que nes shal be thy nursyng mothers. They shal sal befoze the with their faces flat vpo the earth: & lycke vp the dust of thy feete: that thou mayest know how that I am the Lord. * And whoso putteth his trust in me shal not be confounded. Who spoyled the gyaunt of his pray: or who taketh the prisoner from the myghtye? And therfore thus saith the Lord: The prisoners shal be taken from the gyaunt: and the spoyles delync- red from the violent, for I wyll maintayne thy cause against thyne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wyll fede thyne enemies with their owne fleshe, & make them drinke of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all fleshe shal knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lord, thy sa- upour, thy noble redeemer.

¶ The Jewes are reproued, and also called.

Thus sayth the Lord: * Where is the byl of I your mothers deuozcemēt þ I sent her a way: or who is the vsurer to who I solde you? * Beholde, for your owne offences are ye solde, & bycause of your transgression, is poure mother forsake. For why wold no man receiue me when I came? & when I called, no mā gaue me aunswere. * Is my hande shortened, that it myght not helpe? or haue I no power to delp- uer: lo at a word I drinke vp the see, * & of wa- ter floudes I make drye lande: so that for want of water of water the fythe corrupte and dye for thyselfe. * As for heauen, I clothe with darcknes, & put as it were a sacke vpon it.

B The Lord God hath geuen me a wel learned tonge, * so that I can comfort them whiche are troubled: yee, and that in due season, he wakeneth me vpon by times in the moorning, by times in the moorning, I say: he wyl wake myne eare & I myght herke as to the scole masters. * The Lord God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not save name: nor withdawe my selfe: * but

I offer my backe vnto the smiters, and my chekes to the nippers. * I turne not my face from shame and spyttyng: and the Lord God shall helpe me therfore shall I not be confounded I haue herdened my face lyke a synthe stone, for I am sure that I shall not come to confusyon. He is at hande that iustified me, who wyl then go with me to lawe: Let vs stande one against another: if there be any that wil reason with me let him come here forth to me. * Behold, & Lord God standeth by me, what is he then that can condemne: loo, * they shalbe lyke as an olde clothe, the moth shall eat them vp.

Therfore, whoso feareth the Lord amonge you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruaunte. Whoso walketh in darcknes, and no light shyneth vpon him, let him put his trust in the name of the Lord, & holde him by his God. But take hede, ye al kynde a fyre of the wrath of God, & feare vpon the cooles, walke on in the glistering of your owne fyre, & in the cooles that ye haue kyndled. This cometh vnto you from my hand namely that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

The li. Chapter

¶ Consolacion and comforte is promysed vnto the faythfull.

I Erken vnto me, ye & holde of ryghteousnes, and ye that seke the Lord Take hede vnto the stone, wherout ye are hewen, and to the graue wherout ye are digged. Consider. * Abraham pour father and Sara that bare you: how & I called him alone, and blessed him, & encreased him. Therfore shal the Lord comforte Syon, and repayre all her decaye, making her desert as a paradyce: & her wylernes as the garden of the Lord. Myrrh and ioye shalbe founde there thansguyng & the voyce of prayse.

Haue respecte vnto me then, O my people both hygh and lowe and laye thyn eare to me: for a lawe & ordynance shal go forth fro me, to lpygh ten the Gentiles. It is heard I say that my health

B and my ryghteousnes shall go forth & the people shalbe ordyed with myne arme. The landes that be in the Gentiles, shall boope in me, & put their trust in myne arme. Lpyte vpon your eyes to warde heauen, and loke vpon the earth beneth.

* For & heauens shal vanysh away like smoke and the earth shal ware old lyke a clothe, and they that dwell therein shal peryshe in lyke manner. But my saluacion shall endure for euer, & my ryghteousnes shall not cease. Herken vnto me ye that haue pleasure in ryghteousnes, thou people that bearest my lawe in thyn herte.

* Here not the curse of men: be not afrayed of their blasphemys, and reuylnges * for they shall eat them vpon lyke cloth & woll. But my ryghteousnes shall endure for euer and my sayunge health from generacion to generacion. Make vp, wake vp, and be strong. O thou arme of & Lord, wake vp: lyke as in time past euer and lence the worlde beganne.

* Art thou not the same arme, that hast wounded the proude Egypte, & between the Dragon in peccs: Art not thou euen he which hast dyed vpon the depe of the see, whiche hast made playne the see grounde & the delpyered myght go the way? Therfore the redemer of the Lord shal turne a gayne, & come with ioye vnto Sion, ther to endure for euer. * That mirth and gladnes might be with them, that sorow and wo might be fro them. * Yee, I, I am euen he, & in all thynges geth you consolaciō. What art thou then, that fearest a mortal man: the childe of man, which goeth away as doth the flower: And forgetteth the Lord that made the, that spred out the heauens, and layde the foundations of the earth.

But thou arte euer afrayed for the syghte of thyn oppressoure, which is readye to do harme. What is the wrath of & oppressour? The tyme cometh on fast when the prisoner shalbe loosed, and he shall not dye in the dongeon, nor yet be consumed by famishment. * I am thy Lord thy God (that make & see to be thy, & to rage:) whose name is the Lord of hostes: I haue put my wordes in thy mouth, & haue defended the in the shadow of my hande: that I may plante the heauens, and laye the foundation of & earth and save vnto Sion: thou art my people.

Awake awake, and stande vp. O Jerusalem, thou that from the hande of the Lord hast drunken out * the cup of his wrath: thou that hast supped of, and sucked out the dregges of his deadly cuppe to the bottome. For among al the sonnes whom he hath begotten, there is not one & maye holde it vp, and not one to leade it by the hande of all the sonnes that he hath noyshed. Both these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sorowe for it? Yee, destruction: walling, hunger & swearde, but who wyl comforte the? Thy sonnes lye comfortlesse at the head of euery strete lyke a taken venyson, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lord, and punishment of thy God. And therfore, thou miserable & dyken (howbeit not with wine,) hear this: Thus sayth the Lord: thy Lord, & God & defender of his people: Beholde: I wyl take the dregging cuppe out of thy hande, euē the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath: that fro henceforth, thou shalt neuer drinke it moze, but I wil put it into their hande that trouble the: which haue spoken to thy soule, troupe downe, that we may go ouer the, and thou laydest thy bodye euen vpon the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

25 Behold, I gaue him for a witnes among the Lo thou shalt cal an vnknown people, & a people that had no knowlege of the shal runne vn-so shal he be merciful vnto him, and to our god for he is verye redye to forgiue.

E For thus sayth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not your thoughtes, & your wayes are not my and my thoughtes yours. * And like as the rain

And so shall ye go forth with ioye, and be led with you for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shall clappe their handes. For thornes ther shall grow fig trees: and the Myrre tree in the ste se of the Lorde, and for an everlastyng token shall not be taken awaye.

Shepherdes that deuoure theyr flocke.

Thus sayth the Lorde: * kepe equitie that doth this and the mans chyldre wysheth kepeth the same. * He that taketh heede, that he vnderstande not the Saboth (that is) he that kepeth him selfe that he do none euil. Then shall not Alas the Lorde hath put me cleane out fro his people. Neither shall the gelded man saye: loe, I am a drye tree. For thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the gelded that kepeth my Sabboth. Namelye that holdeth greatly of the thing that pleasech me, and kepeth my couenaunt: Vnto them wyl I geue in my household, & within my walles, a better heritage & name then yf they had bene called sonnes & daughters. * I wyl geue them an euerclastyng name, that shall not perishe. Againe the straungers that sticke to the Lord, to serue hym, and to loue his name: * and to be by his covenantes. And all they which kepe the seiers, they vnderstande not the Saboth namelye, that they fulfill my couenaunt. Then wyl I bring to my holy mountayne, & make the ioyful in my house of prayer. Their burnt offerings & sacrifici-ces shall be accepted vpon mine altare. * For my house shall be called a house of prayer for all people.

Thus sayeth the Lord God whiche gathereth together & scattereth of Israel: I wyl bring yet another congregacion to him. Come all ye be-astes of the felde, that ye may deuour all the be-astes of the wood. * For his watchmen are all blind they haue altogether no vnderstandyng, they are all dome dogges, not being able to bark: they are sleppe dogges they are they, and yet slee-pyng: they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer haue no vnderstandyng, * but euery man know-

The *righteous periſheth, & no man regardeth it in his hert. Good godly people are taken away, and no man conſidereth it. Namely, that ſcoundrelous is conueyed away fro the wicked.

He commeth into peace, and godly men reſt in their chaumbres, and befoze the godly man goeth peace. Come hither therfoze ye charmers chyliden, *ye ſonnes of the aduouterer, and the whore: wherein take ye your pleaſure: vpon who gaue ye with your mouth, and bleare out your tongue: Are ye not chyliden of aduoutre? And a ſeed of diſſimulation? *Ye make your fyze vnder the okes, and vnder all grene trees, and ye offer chyliden in the valleies and denes of ſtone. Thy parte ſhalbe with the ſtony rockes by the riuer. Yea, euen theſe ſhalbe thy parte. For ther thou haſt poured meate and drink offering vnto them. Shoulde I delyte in that? Thou haſte made thy bed vpon hye mountaines, thou wenteſt vp thy ther, and there thou haſt ſlaine ſacrifices. *Behynde the doores and poſtes haſt thou ſet by thy remembraunce.

When thou haddeſt diſcouered thy ſelfe to another then me, when I wenteſt vp, & made thy bed wider, & with thoſe ydoles haſt thou made a cōenaūt, & loueſt their couches, where thou ſaweſt them. Thou wenteſt ſtreight to kinges with *oyle & diuers opyntmentes (that is) thou haſt ſent thy meſſenges farre of, & yet arte thou fallen into the pitte therby. Thou art wery for the multitude of thine owne waies, yet ſaideſt thou neuer, I wil leaue of. *Thou haſt had the life that thy handes wrought, & therfoze I arte careleſſe. For when wylt thou be a baſhed or feare ſeing thou haſt broken thy promiſe, and remembreſt not me, neither haſt me in thine hert? Thinkeſt thou, that I alſo wil holde my peace (as afore ſaid), that thou feareſt me not? Yea, verely I wyl declare thy goodneſſe & thy workes, but they ſhall not proſp̄te the: when thou crepeſt, let thy choſen hope deliuer the. But the winde ſhal blowe them forth, and vanitie ſhal take them al away. *Reuert theſe, they put their truſt in me, ſhall enherite the lande: and haue my holy hill in poſſeſſion.

And therfoze thus he ſayth: *Make playne, make playne: & clenſe the ſtreet, take vpon thy ſhulder blockes oute of the way & leadeſt to my people. For thus ſayeth the hye and excellent, euen he I dwell in euerlaſtingneſſe, whole name is the holy one: *I dwell hye aboue: and in the Sanctuary, and with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſp̄rite do I dwell: that I may heale a troubled mynde, & a contrite hert. For I chide not euer, and am not wroth with ont ende. But the blaſtyng goeth from me: and is included in the body, and I made the breath: I am wroth with him for his couetouſneſſe. I ſmyte him, I hyde me, & am angry, whil he turneth him ſelfe, and foloweth the bywaye of his owne herte. I haue ſene his wayes, and I heale him: I leade him, and reſtoze to hym comfort, and to thoſe that were ſoye with him. I make the frutes of thankſguyng, that he may ſay: Peace, peace: vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nygbe, ſayeth the Lord, and I make him whole. But the wycked are like the ragyng ſea, that can not reſte, whole water ſo-meth with the myze and grauell. *Euen ſo the wycked haue no peace, ſayth God.

The. lviii. Chapter.

The Lord (by the mouth of the prophet) reprimandeth the people for theyr ſayyng, whych were full of hypocryſie.

Come *nowe as loude as thou canſt, I leaue not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, & ſhewe my people theyr offences, & the houſe of Jacob theyr ſinnes. For they ſeke me dayly, and wyl know my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd right, & had not forſaken the ſtatutes of theyr God. They argue with me concernyng ryght iudgement, and wyl be nye vnto God. *Wherfoze ſaith we (ſaye they) and thou ſeeſt it not: we put our lyues to ſtrayntneſſe, and thou regardeſt it not.

*Behold, when ye faſt, your luſt remaineth ſtyl, for ye do no leſſe violence to your detters: lo ye faſt to ſtryfe & debate, & to ſmyte wth ſpytt of wyckedneſſe. Nowe ye ſhall not faſte thus that you maye make your voyce be heard aboue.

*Thinke ye this ſaith pleaſeth me, & a mā ſhuld chaſte him ſelfe for a day, & to wythe his heed aboute lyke a hoke, & to lye vpon ſearth in an heare cloth? Shoulde that be called faſtyng, or a daye that pleaſeth the Lord? Doeth not this faſtyng rather pleaſe me, & thou *looſe him oute of bondage, that is in thy daunger: that I breake the othe of wicked bargaines: that thou let the oppreſſed go free, & take from the all maner of burthens: *to deale thy breed to the hungry, and bypunge the poore wandryng, home into thynne houſe: when thou ſeeſt I naked that thou couer hym, & hyde not thy face from thy neygbboure, (and deſpyſe not thynne owne fleſh.)

*Then ſhal thy light breake forth as the moyning, & thy health ſhall right ſhortly, thy rightouſneſſe ſhall go befoze the, and the glory of I Lord ſhal embrace the. *The yf thou calleſt, I Lord ſhal anſwere the: yf thou crieſt, he ſhall ſaye: here I am. Yea, yf thou layeſt away fro the thy burthens, and holdeſt thy ſpyngers, *ceaeſt fro blaſphemous talkyng, yf thou haſte compaſſion vpon the hungry, and reſtreſteſt the troubled ſoule: Then ſhall the lyght ſpyng oute in the darkeneſſe, & the darkeneſſe ſhalbe as the none day. The Lord ſhal euer be thy guide, & ſatify I deſire of thine hert in ſp̄tyme of drought & ſpl thy bones w mary. Thou ſhalt be like a freſhe watered garde: lyke ſountaine of water ſh ne-uer leaueſt runnyng. Then the places ſh haue euer ben waſte ſhalbe builded of the: there ſhalt thou lay a ſolidacion for many hyndreds. Thou ſhalt be called the maker vpon of hedges, and the buylder agayne of the waye of the Saboth.

Behold, * the Lordes hande is not so shortened, & it cannot helpe, nether is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But * your misdeedes haue sepe rated you from your God, & your sinnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. For your handes are defyled with bloude, and your fyngers with vnrightheousnesse. Your lippes speake leasynge, and your tongue setteth out wyckednes: No man regardeth rightheousnesse, and no man iudgeth truly, Euerie man hopeth in vaine thynges, and ymagineth disceate. * conccaueth we arenes, & bringeth forth euil. They brede Cockatrice egges, and weaue the spiders webbe: Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them: ther cometh vpon a serpente. They webbe maketh no clothe, and they maye not couer them with their laboures. Their dedes are the dedes of wyckednesse, and the worck of robbery is in their handes. * Their secte runne to euil, and they make haste to shed innocent bloude, their counsels are wicked counsels, harme * and destruccyn are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goynges is no equite: their wayes are so croked, & whosoever goeth therein: knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause that equite is so far from vs, and that rightheousnes commeth not nigh vs. * We loke for lighte, loo, it is darcknes, for the moorning shyneth: se, we walke in darcke.

* We grope lyke the blynde vpon the wal, we grope euen as one that hath none eyes. We stobbe at y none day as though it were toward nyght in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe deade. We rooze all lyke Beares, and mourne styl lyke dones. We loke for equite, but there is none: for health, but it is farre fro vs. For oure offences are manye before the, and oure synnes testifie against vs: Yee, we must confesse that we offende, and knowlege that we do amysse: Namely, transgresse and dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall a waye frome oure God vponge presumptuous and trayterous ymaginacions, and casting false matters into our hertes. And therfore is equite gone aside, and rightheousnes standerth farre of, * truthe is fallen downe in the strete, and the thing that is plaine & open, may not be shewed. Yee the truthe is taken a waye, & he that refrayneth him selfe from euil, muste be spoyled. When the Lorde sawe this, it dyspleased him sore, that there was no equite. He sawe also, that there was no man rightheous, and he wondered that there was no man to helpe hym. Wherefore he helde hym by hys owne power, and he sustayneth him by his owne rightheousnes. He * put rightheousnes vpon hym for a breast plate, he set the helmet of health vpon his head. He put on wrath in steade of clorhing, and take gelousye aboute hym for a cloke: (like as when a man goeth forth wrathfully to recourence his enemies, and to be auenged of his aduersaries). Namely, that he myght recompence & reward the Ilandes, wher thowow y name of the Lorde myghte be feared from the rylsng of the sunne and his maiestie, vnto the goyng downe of the same. For he shal come as a violet water streame which the winde of the Lorde hath moued.

* But vnto Sion there shal come a redeemer, and vnto them in Jacob that turne fro wyckednes sayth the Lorde. I wyl make this couenant with them (sayth the Lorde) My spyt shall be vpon the, and the wordes whiche I haue put in thy mouth shall neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy chyldres chyldren, from this tyme forth for euermore world with oute ende, sayth the Lorde.

The .lx. Chapter.

A consolacion and comferte to Jerusalem.

Come vpon the by tymes, be byghthe I (Jerusalem) for thy * lyghte cometh, and the glozpe of the Lorde is ryls vpon vpon the. For loo, while y darcknesse and cloude couereth the earthe & the people, the Lorde shal shewe the lyght and hys glozpe shal be sene in the. * The Gentyles shal come to thy lyghte, & kynges to the brightnes that shyneth forth vpon the. * Lyfte vpon thyne eyes, & looke rounde about the. All these gather them selues: and come to the, thy sonnes shal come vnto the from farre, & thy daughters shal gather them selues to the on euery syde. Then thou shalt se this: and be glorious, thou shalt maruayle exceedynge, and thine herte shal be opened, when the aboundance of the sea shal be couerted vnto y (that is) wher the riches of the Gentyles shal come vnto the, The multitudes of Camels, shal couer the, the Dromedaries of Madian and Cyba, * All they of Saba shal come, bringyng golde and incense, & theye shall inge the prayse of the Lorde. * All catell of Cedar shal be gathered vnto the, & frames of Sabaioth shal serue the, to be offered acceptable vpon the aulter, * whiche I haue chosen: & in the house of my glozpe whiche I haue garnysed. But what are these that shal be here like y clowdes, and as the dones flyng to the, wyndowes?

The Iles also shal wayte for me, and speccially the shippes of Charys, & they may bring thy sonnes from farre, and their siluer and their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto y holy one of Israell, that hath glorified the: * Strangers shal buyde vpon thy walles, and the kynges shal do the seruyce. For wher I was angry, I smote the: and of my mercye, I pardoned the: thy gates shal stande open styl both day and nyght, and neuer be shut, that the hooft of the Gentiles may come, and that their kynges may be brought vnto y. For euery people & kyngedome that serueth not the, shall shal perysh and be destroyed with utter destrucyon. The glory of Libanus shal come vnto y the fyre trees, Boxes & Cedres together, to garnyssh the place of my Sanctuary for I wyl glorifye the place of my fete.

Moreover, those shal come knelynge vnto the, that haue vexed the: and all they that despised the, shal fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cytie of the Lorde Syon the cytie of the holy one of Israell. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated: so that no man wente thorow the: I wyl make the glorious for ever and to full thowout all posterities. * Thou shalt sucke the mylke of the Gentyles, and kinges brestes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde am thy sauoure and redemer the mighty one of Jacob. For brasle wyl I geue the golde, and for yron syluer: for wood brasle, and for stones yron. I wyl turne thine oppression into peace, and thine exactions into ryghteousnes. Violence & robbery shal neuer be heard of in thy lande, neyther harine and destruccyon within thy borders. Thy walles shal be called helthe, and thy gates the prayse of God. * The sunne shal neuer be thy daylyght: and the lyght of the mone shal neuer shyne vnto the: but the Lorde hym selfe shal be thine euerlasting light and thy God shal be thy glorie.

* The sunne shal neuer goo downe, and the mone shal not be hyd: for y Lorde hym selfe shal be thine euerlasting lyghte, and thy sorowfull dayes shal be ended. Thy people shal be al righteous & possesse thy land euer, the flower of my plantynge: the worke of my handes, wherof I wyl reioyce. The poungest and least shal grow into a thousand, and the symplest into a strong people: I the Lorde shal shortly bynge this thyng to passe in this tyme.

The. lxi Chapter.

A propheseth that Christe shalbe anoynted & sent to preache.

Ihe spirit of the Lorde God is vpon me, for the Lorde hath anoynted me, and sent me to preache good thynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde vnto the wounded hertes: that I myght preache deliuerance to the captiue, & open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable yere of the Lorde, and the daye of vengeance of our God: * that I myght com-forte all them that ar in heuynes, that I might geue vnto them that mourne in Syon, that I myght geue I sape bewty in steade of ashes, ioy full oynement for syghing, pleasaunt raiment for an heuy mynde. That they myght be called trees of ryghteousnes, a plantynge of the Lorde for hym to reioyce in.

They shal buylde the longe roughe wildernes, & set vp the wild desert, they shal repaire y wast places, & such as haue bene voide thorow onte many generacions. Strangers shal stand and fede poure catell, and the Aleantes shal be your plowmen & dyers of your vines. * But ye shal be named y prestes of y Lorde, & men shal call you the seruautes of our God. Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentyles, & tryumphe in theyr substaunce. For your greete reproche you shal haue double ioye, and for shame shal they haue ioye of theyr porcyon. For they shal haue double posseltyon in theyr lande, & euerlastyng ioye shal be with them. For I the Lorde which loue ryght & hate robbery (though it were offer-red me) shal make theyr workes full of fayth-fulnesse and make an euerlastyng couchaunte with them.

Their sede also: and theyr generacyon shal be knowne amonge the Gentyles, and among the people. All they that see them, shal knowe that they are the bygd blessed sede of the Lorde.
And therefore * I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and Luke. ii. v. my soule reioyceth in my God. * For ye haue psal. cxxxii. a put vpon me the garment of saluacion: and co-uered me w the mantell of ryghteousnesse.

* He shal decke me lyke a bydegrome & as a byde that hathe her apparell vpon her. For lyke as the grounde byngeth forth frute, and as the garden sheweth forth sede: so shal y Lorde God cause ryghteousnes, and prayse to flozthe forth before all the heathen.

The. lxii Chapter.

A propheseth of the coming of Christe.

In Sions sake therefore wyl I not holde my tonge and for Jerusalem sake: I wyl not cease vntill they ryghteousnesse breake forth as the shynning lyghte, and theyr saluacyon as a burnyng lampe. Then shal y Gentiles see thy rightousnes, and all kynges thy glorie.
Thou shalt be named w a newe name, which John. i. a. the mouth of y Lorde shal shew. Thou shalt be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, & a glorious garland in the hand of thy God. Fro this tyme forth thou shalt neuer be called the forsaken, & thy lande shal be nomore called the wylterne but thou shalt be called my pleasure is in her: & thy land shal be called y marped woman, for the Lorde loueth the and thy lande shal be ioynd in marpage. * And lyke as a ponge man taketh a doughter to mariage, so shal thy sonne be maryed vnto the. And as a bydegrome is glad of his byde, so shal thy God reioyse ouer the.

I haue set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Jerusalem) whiche shal neyther cease day nor nyghte to preache the Lorde. And ye also that remembre the Lorde, ye shal not kepe hym close nor leaue to speake of hym vntill Jerusalem be set vp, & made the prayse of y world. The Lorde hath sworn by his ryght hand & by his strong arme, that fro henceforth he wyl not geue thy corne to be meat for thine enemies, nor thy vine (wherein thou hast laboured) to be drynke for the strangers. But they that haue gathered in the corne shal eat it, and geue thanks vnto y Lorde and they y haue bozne in the wyne, shal drynke it in the courte of my Sanctuarie.

So you, go you thorow y gates make cleane the way for y people, make plaine, make plaine the fote path, and take awaye the stones out of it, and set out a token for the people.

Beholde, the Lorde preclaymeth vnto the

The. lxxiii. Chapter.

¶ Of the redemption promyſed to the people.

What is he this, that commeth from Edon, with red colered clothes of Boſra: (which is ſo coſtlye cloth) and commeth in ſo myghtely with all his ſtrengthe. I am he that teacheth ryghteouſnes, and am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothynge red, & thy raiment lyke his that treadeth in the wine preſſe? I haue troden the preſſe my ſelfe alone, and of all people there is not one with me.

Thus wyll I treade downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and ſet my fete vpon them in my indignacion. And they? bloude ſhalbe ſprunge my clothes, and ſo wyll I ſtayne al my raiment.

*For the daye of vengeance is aſſygued in my herte, and the yere when my people ſhalbe deliuered is come. I looked aboute me, and there was no man to ſhew me any helpe: I marueled that no man helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my ſeruenteſſe ſuſtained me. And thus wyll I treade downe the people in my wrath, and bath them in my dyspleaſure, & vpon þe earth wyll I laye theyr ſtrength.

*I wyll declare the goodnes of the Lorde, yet, and the prayſe of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the great good that he hath done for Iſraell: whiche he hath geuen them of his owne fauour, and accordyng to the multitude of his loupnge kyndneſſe. For he ſayde: Theſe no doubt are my people, and no ſhrinking chyl dren, & ſo he was theyr ſauour. In theyr troubles, *he was alſo troubled with them, and the aungell that went forth from his preſence deliuered them: Of very loue and kyndnes that he had vnto the, he redeemed the. He hath bozne them and carped them vp, euer ſence the world began. But after they prouoked him to wrath and vered his holy mynde, he was theyr enemy and fought agaynſt the hymſelf. Yet remembred Iſraell the olde tyme of Moſes and his people ſaying: Where is he that broughte them from the water of the ſee? with them þe fede his ſhepe.

Where is he that bathe geuen his holy ſpyte amonge them: he led them by the ryght hande of Moſes with his gloriouſ arme: demyng the water before them (whereby he gat hym ſelf an euerlaſting name) he led them in the depe, as an hoyle is led in the playn, þe they ſhulde not ſtumble as a tame beaſte goeth in the felde: and the byeth geuen of God, geueth hym reſt.

Thus (O God) haſte thou led thy people, to make thy ſelf a gloriouſ name withal. *Loke downe then from heauen, and beholde the dwellinge place of thy Sanctuarie, and thy glorie. Howe is it that thy gelouſye, thy ſtrengthe, the multitude of thy mercyes, and thy louing kindnes wyll not be entreated of vs? Yet arte þe our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neither is Iſraell acquainted wyth vs. But þe Lorde art oure father and redemer, and thy name is euerlaſtyng. O Lorde, *Wherefore haſt thou led vs oute of thy waye: Wherefore haſt thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare þe not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy ſeruantes ſake, & for the generacion of thyne heritage. Thy people haue had but a lytle of thy ſactuary in poſſeſſion for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holye place. And we were thyne from the begynnyng when thou waſt not theyr? Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

¶ The prophete conſider the perſon of the Jewes) betwixt theyr exyle and baniſhment. Whannes ryghteouſnes is lyke a cloth beſpiled with the floures of a woman.

What thou woldeſt cleane the heauen in ſondre, and come downe: that the mountaines myght melt awayne at thy preſence, lyke as an whote ſperr: and that the malicyous myght boyle as the water doeth vpon the fyre.

Whereby thy name might be knowen among thyne enemyes, and that the Gentyles myght tremble before the. When thou wroughteſt wonders ſtraunge worckes, we looked not for them. Thou cameſt downe, and the hylles melted at thy preſence. For ſence þe begynnyng *of þe world it hath not bene heard or perceiued, neither hath any eie ſene another god beſide þe which doeſt ſo much for them þe put theyr truſt in the.

Thou helpeſt hym that doeth ryghte wyth chearfulneſſe and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But loo: thou haſt bene angrey, for we offended, and haue bene euer in synne, though þe wolde haue cleaued to them *yet ſhal we be ſaued. We are all as an vncleane thyng & all our ryghteouſnes are as the clothes ſpained wth floures of a woman, we fall euerychone as the leafe for our ſynnes carpe vs a waye lyke þe wynde.

There is no man that called vpon thy name that ſtandeth vp to take hold by the. Therefore hideth thou thy face from vs, and conſumeſt vs becauſe of our ſynnes. But now, O Lorde, thou father of ours: *we are thy clape, and þe art our potter, & we all are the worke of thy handes.

*Be not ſo ſore diſpleaſed (O Lorde) & hepe not oure offences to longe in thy remembrance but conſider that we are all thy people. All these men when I am angry, shalbe tur-

Behold, it is wrytten before my face, & shal not them into theyr bosome: I meane your milde-(sayth þ Lord) which haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaines, and blasphemed me vpon sayth the Lord: * lyke as when one wolde ganot of, for it is holy: & euen so wyl I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I wyl not destroye

My chosen shal possesse these thynges & my ser-

* But as for you, ye are they þ haue forsake the an alter vnto Iuppiter, and geuen riche drink offrynges vnto the planetes. Therfore wyl I nombze you with the sword, that ye shalbe destroyed all together. For when I called, noman but ye shal crye for sorowe of hert: & complain for veraciō of mid. Your name ye shal leaue accursed amonge my chosen, for God the Lord shal slaye you, and call his seruauntes by another name. * Whoso reioyleth vpon earth, shal reioyle in the true God. And whoso sweareth vpon þ earth shal sweare in the true God. For the olde enemye shalbe forgotten, and taken awaye out of my syghte: * For so, I shal make a newe heauen and a newe earth. And as for the olde they shal neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in mynd: but the Lord sayth: be glad and euermore reioyle, for the thynges þ I shal do.

For why? Beholde, I shal make a ioyfull Jerusalem, and his people ioyful: yee, I my selfe wyl reioyle with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people. * And the voyce of wepyng & waylyng shal not be heard in her from thence forth.
There shal neither be chyld, nor olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chyld commeth to an. C. yere olde it shal dye. And yf he that is an. C. yere of age do wyng he shalbe curled. * They shal buylde houses and dwell in them. For so. them they shal plant vineyardes, and eate the frute of them: They shal not buylde and another possesse: they shal not plant, & another eate.

* But the lyfe of my people shalbe lyke a tree, and so shal the worke of theyr handes.

My chosen shal lyne longe, they shal not laboure in vayne, nor beget with trouble: for they are the bygh blessed seide of the Lord, and theyr frutes with cheyn. And it shalbe, that ouer they call, I shal answere them.

Whyle they are yet but thynkynge how to speake, I shal heare them. * The wolfe and the lambe shal fede together, and the Lyon shal eat haye lyke the bullocke. * But earth shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal no man hurte nor slay another, in al my holy hyl, saith the Lord.

The. lvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hande. He despiseth sacrifices done withoute mercy and sayth. God cōsoleteth them that are troubled for his sake, amonge the Chrysten: the Saboth is continuall.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * Heauen is I my seate, and the earthe is my footestole, where shal nowe þ house stand that ye wyl buylde vnto me? And where shalbe the place that I wyl dwel in. As for these thynges my hande hath made them all and they are all created, sayeth the Lord.

* Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is pooze & of a lowlye troubled sprete and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me doth me so greate dysbonour as he that killeth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me, knetcheþ a dogge. He that byn-geth me meatoffrynges, offereth swynes bloude.
Whoso maketh me a memoriaill of incence, prayseth the thyng that is vnryghte. Yet take they such thynges in hande, and theyr soule de-lyteth in these abhominacyons.

* Therfore wyl I also haue pleasure in laugh-yng them to scozne, and þ thyng that they feare wyl I byyng vpon them. * For when I called no man gaue answer: when I spake they wold not heare: But did wickednesse before mine eyes and chose the thynges that displease me. Heare the worde of the Lord all that feare the thyng whiche he speaketh. Your brythren þ hate you and cast you oute for my names sake, say: The Lord is greuous agaynst vs: but you shal see hym in ioye when they shalbe confounded.

* Then shalbe heard a great noyse from the cytye and the temple, the voyce of the Lord, that wyl reward, and recompence his enemies, lyke as whē a wyfe byngeth forth a man child o-uer she suffre the payne of the byrth, and an guyth of the trauell. Who euer hearde o- sa we suche thynges: doth þ ground beare in one day, o- are the people bozne at once, as they traueled in chyld byrth & bare her sonnes: For thus sayeth the Lord.

* Am I he that maketh o-ther to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh barren: sayeth thy God? Reioyle with Jerusalem, & be glad with her, all ye that loue her: * Be ioyful with her, al ye þ mourned

The Prophecie.

The booke of the Pro phete Jeremie.

The fyrste Chapter.

In the stocke of Jeremie, & in what tyme he prophesied. He receiued hymselfe and wolde refuse the office of a prophete: because he is ponge & vnexspect. He is taught of the Lorde, and becometh to be God openeth vnto hym, that the destruction of the Jewes by the Babylonians is at hande. Jeremie is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes without feare.

These are the sermons of Jeremie the sonne of helkiah the priest one of them that dwelt at Bethanathoth in the lande of Benjamin when the Lorde had by hym spoken wth hym in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Ammon:

kinge of Iuda, in the thirtieth yere of his reigne: and so during vnto the tyme of Jeboakym the sonne of Josiah kinge of Iuda, and vntyll the xi. yere of zedeiah the sonne of Josiah kinge of Iuda were ended, when Jerusalem was taken, euen in the fyfte moneth.

The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me, before I fashioned hym in my mothers wombe. I dyd know the. And ozeuer thou wast borne I sanctified the, & ordeined the to be a prophete vnto the people. Then sayd I: * Oh Lorde God I cannot speake, for I am yet but ponge. And the Lorde answered me thus. Saye not so I am ponge. * For thou shalt go to all that I shall sende the vnto: & what soeuer I comaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of the faces. For I am wth the, to deliuer the saith the Lorde.

* And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & the same Lorde sayde vnto me: Beholde, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde: this daye doo I see the ouer the people & kyngdomes that thou mayest roote out, breake of, destroy and make waste: that thou mayest buylde vp and planee. After this the Lorde spake vnto me, sayng: Jeremie what seest thou? And I sayde: I see a rod of an almonde tree. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou hast sene ryght, for I wyl make hast wthely vpon my worde, to perfourme it.

It happened afterward that the Lorde spake to me agayn, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I do see a sethyng * pot lokyng frome the North.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, * I wyl call all the kyngreds of the kyngdomes of the North (sayeth the Lorde). And they shall come, and euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, in the walles rounde aboute, and in all the cyties of Iuda: And they shall thew them that I declare my iudgement vpon all the wyckednes of those men that haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto strange goddes, and worshipped the images of theyr owne handes.

* And therfore gyde by thy loyned aryle tell them all, that I geue the in comaundement: Feare them not, lest I destroye the before them. * For behold, this daye do I make the a strong defended for her. For ye shall sucke comforte oute of her brestes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, and haue delyte in the plenteousnesse of her power. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl let peace into her lyke a water founte and the mightie of the heathen lyke a flowyng streame. Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be bozne vpon her sides, and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chyld is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you and ye shall be comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shall reioyse, * and your bones shall flourish lyke an herbe.

Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge his seruantes, and his indignacyon amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre, & his charret shall be lyke a whyle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeance in his wyath, and his indignacyon with the flamme of fyre. For the Lorde shall Iudge all fleshe wth the fyre, and wth his sword, and there shall be a great nombre slaine of the Lorde. Such as haue made the selues holy and cleane in gardens, and those that haue eaten swynes flesh, myce, and other abhominacions, these shall come and see my glorie. Vnto them shall I geue a token and sende a certayn of the (that be deliuered) amonge the Gentiles: into Cilicia, Africa, and Lybia, where men can handle bowes into Italie, and also Grekelande.

* The Ides farre of, that haue not heard speake of me, and haue not sene my glorie, shall preache my praise amonge the Gentiles and shall bring al your brethren for an offering vnto the Lorde out of all people, vpon horses: charettes, horse lytters, vpon mules, and cartes to Jerusalem my holy hyl (sayeth the Lorde) lyke as the children of Israel, bring the offering in cleane vessels to the house of the Lorde.

* And I shall take oute certayne of them for to be prestes and Leuytes sayeth the Lorde.

For lyke as the newe heauen, and the newe earth whiche I wyl make, shall be faste stablished by me (sayeth the Lorde): So shall your sedyng and your name contynue, and there shall be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabbath for the other, and all fleshe shall come to worshippe before me (sayeth the Lorde). And they shall go forth, and loke vpon the carions of them that haue transgressed agaynst me. * For theyr womens shall not dye, neyther shall their fyre be quenched, and all fleshe shall abhorre them.

defenced towne, an yron pyller & a brassen wall agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynge and mightye men of Iuda, agaynst the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyghte agaynst y, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am wyth the to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

God reuerſeth bys benefytes downe vnto the Jewes agaynst the prestes and prophetes, or preachers that contemne and despise God. The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsake God, and because they ranne a wysechumpnyng after pools.

Wherefore, the word of y Lord came vnto me, sayng: So thy way, crye in the eares of Ierusalem, and saye thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre the, for the kynndesse of thy pouthe and because of thy steadfast loue, at the tyme of thy desponsyng, in that thou folowest me thow the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Israel was an halowed thyng vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrste frutes. * All they that beuoure Israel shall offende: my fortune shall fall vpon them, sayth the Lorde. Wherefore the word of the Lorde. O thou house of Iacob, and all the generacions of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde.

What vnfaithfulness founde your fathers in me, that they went so farre away fro me, falsyng to lyghtnesse, and beyng so vaine: They thought not in theyr hertes: Where haue we left the Lorde y brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte: that led vs thow y wildernesse, thow a desert and rough lande thow a drye and a deadly lande: yea a lande y no man had gone thow, and wherein no man had dwelt.

* And when I had broughte you into a pleasaunte wel buylde lande, that ye myght enioy the frutes and all the commodities of the same ye went forth and defyled my lande & brought myne herptage to abhominacyon.

The prestes them selues saide not: Where is the Lorde: They that had the law in theyr handes knowe me not: The shepherdes offended agaynst me. The prophetes dyd seruyce vnto Baal, and folowed suche thynges as shal bring them to profyte.

Wherefore, I am constrained (sayeth the Lorde) to make my coplaynt vpon you, & vpon your chyldres chyldren: Go into the ples of Cethym, and loke well: sende vnto Cedar, take dylygent hede: & se whether suche thynges be done there, whether the Gentyles the selues deale so falsely and vntrewly with theyr goddes (which yet ar no goddes in dede.) But my people haue geuen ouer theyr hye honour for a thyng that maye not helpe them.

Be astonysht, (O ye heauens) be afrayed & ashamed at suche a thyng, sayth the Lorde. For my people haue done, ii. euyles. They haue forsaken me the well of y water of lyfe, and dygged them pyttes: yea hyle and broken pyttes, y can holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruant of one of the household?

Why the is he so spoiled: Why do they roze & cry then vpon hym as a yon: They haue made his land wast. * His cities are so brent vp, that there is no man dwelling in the. Yee, the chyldre of Moab and Taphnes haue despyled thy necke.

* Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, ever sence he led the by the waye: And what haste thou now to do in the strete of Egypt: to drinke the water of Nilus: Eether what makest thou in the waye of Assyria: To drinke water of y floude

* Thyne owne wyckednes shall reprove the, and thy turnynge a waye shall condempne the, that thou mayst knowe and vnderstande, how euell and hurtfull a thyng it is, that thou haste forsaken the Lorde thy God, & not feared hym, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. * I haue euer broken thy poke of olde, and burst thy bondes: yet sayest thou: * I wyll nomore offende, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all drye hylles, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the a noble vine and a good roote whole seide is all faythfull. * Howe arte thou turned then into a bytter vnfruteful & strange grape: Yee, and that so sore: that though thou was the with Nyrus, and make thy selfe to sauoure with that swete smelling herbe of Boreth: yet in my syght thou art stained with thy wyckednes, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not now, I am not vncleane, and I haue not folowed Baal. * Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woodes, valleyes, and denes, so shalt thou knowe, what thou hast done. Thou art lyke a swifte dyomedary, that goeth easely his waye, and thy wantonnes is lyke a wyld ass, that vseth the wildernesse, and that snoffeth & bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the: All they that seke the shall not saye, but fynde the in thyne owne vncleannes. Kepe thou thy selfe from nakednesse, and thy throte frome thyssle, and wythoute shame thou answereste. No, for I haue loued straungers and them wyl I folowe.

Lyke as the thefe that is taken with the dede cometh to shame, even so is the house of Israel come to confusyon: the comen people, theyr kynges and rulers, theyr prestes and prophetes.

* For they saie to a stocke, thou art my father: and to a stone, thou hast begotten me, * yee: they haue turned theyr backe vpon me, and not theyr face. * But in the tyme of theyr trouble when they saie stande vp, and helpe vs: I shall answer them. Where are now thy gods, that thou hast made y: let them stand vp & helpe the in the tyme of nede (yf they be able). * For loke howe many cities thou hast (O Iuda) so many gods haste thou also.

Wherefore then wyl ye gooe to lawe with me, sayng ye all are synners agaynst me sayeth the Lorde: It is but losse labour, that I smyte your chyldren, for they receiue not my correccion.

* Your owne swerde destroyed your prophetes lyke a deuourynge Lyon. O ye people: looke vpon the worde of the Lorde. Am I then become a wyldernes vnto the people of Israel: or a lande that hath no lyght: Wherefore saith my my people then: we are Lordes, we wyll come no moze vnto the: Doeth a mayden forget her rayment, or a byrde her stomacher? But as for my people, they haue forgotten my dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so highlye (to optayne fauoure there thowowe) when thou haste yet stayned them with blasphemyes and teachest thyne owne wayes?

* Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of pooze and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all these places. Yet darest thou say: I am innocent (without synne and) guiltlesse. Thus his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condemne the in Judgemente because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to & fro to chaunge thy waies? For thou shalt be confounded as wel of Egypt, as of the Assyrians: yee, thou shalt go thy waye from them: and smite thyne handes together vpon thyne head. Because thou doth abhorre that confidence and hope of thine and thou shalt not prosper withall.

The.iii. Chapter.

God beyng mercifull calleth vnto repentaunce his people, whiche he had forsaken for theyr whoredome with ydols. He exhorteth Israell vnto repentaunce promysynge them shephardes that shulde haue the true knowlage of God. The returne of Israell vnto God: confessynge theyr offence.

Menly, * When a man putteth a waye his wyfe, and she goeth from hym, and marryeth wyth an other: then the questyon is: shuld he resorte vnto her anye moze after that? Is not this felde then despyled and vnclean? * But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with manye louers: yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lord. Lyfte vp thyne eyes vnto thyne alters and loke yf thou be not despyled with whoredome. Thou hast wayted for them in the stretes, and as a murdher in the wyldernes. Thowowe thy whoredome and shamefull blasphemyes, is the lande despyled.

iii. Re. xvi. a.

* This is the cause that the rayne and ennyng dewe hath ceased. Thou haste gotten the an whores forbeade and wylte not be ashamed. Elles woldest thou say vnto me: O my father thou art he that hast brought me vp, and leade me fro my yowthe: wilt thou the put me away, and cast me of for ever? O wylte thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane from me? Neuerthelesse, thou speakest suche wordes, but thou art euer doynge worse and worse.

* The Lord saide also vnto me: in the tyme of Josaph the kynge haste thou sene what the rebellon of Israell hath done: howe she hath runne vp vpon the hylls, and amonge all the thyck trees, and there played the harlot, hast thou sene also (when she had done all this) howe I saide vnto her: that she shulde turne again vnto me, and yet she is not returned?

Eze. xvi. b.

* Juda that vnfaithfull syster of hers also saue this: namelye, that after I had well sene the aduoutry of the whynckynge harlot Israell: I put her away, & gaue her a byll of deuozement. For all this, her vnfaithfull syster Juda

iii. Re. xvi. a.

was not ashamed, but went backe, and played the whore also: yea, and the nypse of her whoredome hath despyled the whole lande. For she hath comytted fornicacyon with stones & stockes.

Neuerthelesse, her vnfaithfull syster Juda, is not turned vnto me agayn with her whole herte, but fapnedly: sayeth the Lord. And the Lord sayd vnto me: * The baklyder Israell is moze ryghteous then the vnfaithfull Juda & therfore go preache these wordes toward the North: and saye: Thou dylobedpent Israell, turne agayn (sayth the Lord) & I wyl not let my wrath fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (sayth the Lord) and I wyl not alway beare displeasure agayn the: but this I wyl, that thou knowe the greates blasphemyes. Namely, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lord thy God & haste made thy selfe partaker of straunge goddes: vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wyl to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lord.

* O ye disobedient chyldren, turne agayne: sayeth the Lord, and I wyl be married with you. For I wyl take one of you & two out of one generacion from amonge you & byrnyng you into syon: & wyl geue you herdmē after mine owne mynde, which shall fede you w learning & wisdom. Moreover, when ye be increased and multiplied in the lande, then (sayth the Lord) there shall no moze boaste be made of the Arke of the Lordes testament, and no man shall thincke vpon it, nether shall any man make mencion of it for fro thence it shall nether be visyted nor honored with gyftes. * Then shall Ierusalem be called the Lordes seat, & all heathen shall be gathered vnto it: for the name of the Lordes sake, which shall be set vp at Ierusalem. And from that tyme forth they shall folow no moze the pynagynon of theyr owne froward herte.

Then those that be of the house of Juda shall go vnto the house of Israell & they shall come together out of the North, into the same lande that I haue geuen your fathers. I haue thewed also, how I toke the vp beyng but a chyldre and gaue the a pleasaunte lande for thyne heritage yea, and a goodlye hoste of the heathen, & howe I comaunded the, that thou shuldest cal me thyther onely, and not to synneke fro me.

But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully faileth her husbände, so are ye vnfaithful vnto me (O ye house of Israell) sayeth the Lord.

* And therfore the voice of the chyldren of Israell was heard on hye, wepyng and waylynge: for they haue despyled theyr waye, and forgotte God the Lord.

O ye dylobedpent chyldren, turne agayne (saynge, lo we are thyne: for thou arte the Lord our God:) And so shall I heale your backturnynges. Cruelly, vainevely trusteth ye for helpe that loketh for it in the hylls, and in vayne sought in the multytud of mountaynes: but the helth of Israell standeth only vpon God our Lord. * Confusyon hath deuozed our fathers labour from our yowthe yea, theyr wyues bullockes, their sonnes & daughters. So do we also alfofpe in oure confuſion, and ſhame couereth vs, for we and oure fathers from oure youthe vnto this day haue ſynned againſt þe Lorde our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde of our God.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The true repentance of returning to God. He ſhorteth to the circumſon of the heart. The deſtruction of Jeruſalem is prophesied, for the malice of theſe heretics.

Iſrael, if thou wilt turne the, then turne vnto me, ſayth the Lorde. And if thou wilt put away thyne abhominacyons oute of my ſyghte, thou ſhalte not bee moued: * And ſhalte ſwear. The Lorde lieth in truth, in equitie & righteouſneſſe: & all people ſhal be fortunable & ioyful in hym. For thus ſayth þe Lorde to al Iuda and Jeruſalem: plow your lande & ſowe not amonge the thornes. * Be circumſyſed in the Lorde & cut away the foreſyn of poure heretics, all ye of Iuda and all the indwellers of Jeruſalem: that my indignacyon breake not out lyke fyre and kyndle, ſo þe noman may quench it, becauſe of þe wyckedneſſe of your ymaginacions.

* Preache in Iuda and Jeruſalem, crye out and ſpake: blowe the trompettes in the lande, crye that euery man maye heare, gather together, and ſaye: Gather you together, and we will goo into ſtronge cyties. Set vp the token in Syon, ſpede you, & make no taryng. * For I will bynge a greate plage, & a great deſtruction from the North. For the ſpoiler of þe Gentyles is broke vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that I maye make thy lande waſt and deſtroye the cyties ſo þe noman may dwell therein. Wherefore, gird your ſelues about with ſacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the fearfull wrath of the Lorde is not withdrawne from vs.

At the ſame time (ſayeth the Lorde) þe herite of the kynge and of the princes ſhal be gone, the preſtes ſhal be aſtorryſhed, and the Prophetes ſhal be ſore aſeard. Then ſayd I O Lorde God, haſte thou then dyſceyned this people and Jeruſalem, ſaying: * Ye ſhal haue peace, and now þe ſweard goeth thowowe theyr lyues. Then ſhal it be ſayde to the people and to Jeruſalem: * a ſtronge wynde in the hye places of the wylverneſſe cometh thowowe the waye of my people but neyther to ſan, nor to clenſe.

After that, ſhall there come vnto me a ſtrong wynde from thoſe places, and then will I alſo geue ſentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh vp lyke as a cloude, & his charetes are lyke a ſtozmye wynd. * His horſemen are ſwyfter then the Agyle. Woe vnto vs, for we are deſtroyed. O Jeruſalem, waſte thine heart fro wyckedneſſe that thou mayſt be helped. Howe long ſhal thy noyſome thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyl of Ephraim ſpeaketh out, & telleth of a deſtruction Remembre the be then, & geue Jeruſalem warning, and preach vnto her that watchers ouer her are comyng from ſarri countreys. They haue crept oute agaynſte the cyties of Iuda, and they haue belet ther aboute in euery place lyke as the watchmen in the felde: * For they haue prouoked me to wrath, ſaith the Lorde.

* Thy wayes & thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, ſuche is thyne owne wyckedneſſe and dylobedpence, and becauſe it is a bytter thyng, it hath ſtryken the to the herte. Ah my helpe, ah my helpe (ſhalte thou crye) howe is my herte ſo loze: my herte pantereth wpythin me I can not be ſtill, for I haue hearde the cryeng of the trompettes, and peales of warre. They crye: murder vpon murder, the hole lande ſhall periſhe. Immedpatly, my tentes were deſtroyed, and my hanginges in the twynkeling of an eye. Howe longe ſhall I ſee the tokens of warre, and heare the noyſe of the trompettes?

Neuertheleſſe, this ſhall come vpon them, * becauſe my people is become foolyſhe, and hath not knowen me. * They are the chyldren of foolyſhenelle, and withoute any diſcrepon. Todeuell, they haue wpt ynoughe: but to do wel, they haue no wyſdom. I haue looked vpon the earthe, and ſee: it was waſte & voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no ſpyne. I beheld the mountaynes: and lo, they trembled and all the hylles were in feare. I looked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waſte: yea, all theyr cytyes wer broken downe at the preſence of the Lorde, and indignacyon of his wrath.

For thus hath þe Lorde ſaid: The hole lande ſhal be deſolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therfore ſhall the earthe mourne, and the heauen be ſory aboute: for the thyng that I haue ſpoken (to the prophetes) and taken vpon me to do, ſhall not repent me, & I will not go from it. The hole land ſhal ſye, for þe noyſe of þe horſemen and bowmen: they ſhal runne into denues, into woodes, and clim vp the ſtony rockes: All the cities ſhal be void, & noman dwellig therein

What wilt þe now do, thou being deſtroied? * For though thou clotheſt thy ſelfe with ſcarlet, and deckeſt the with golde: * though thou paynteſt thy face with coloures, yet ſhalt thou trym thy ſelfe in vayne. For thoſe þe hytherto haue bene thy great ſauourers, ſhall abhorre þe and go about to ſlaye the. For I beare a noyſe lyke as it were of a womā traneling or one labouryng of her fyſt chyld: Euen the voyce of the daughter Sio, ſaſteth out her armes, and ſouneth, ſaying: Ah, woe is me, howe ſore vexed and ſaine is my hert: for feare of þe murderers.

The. v. Chapter.

In Jeruſalem there no ryghteous or faithfull man founde, yether amongſt the people or the rulers, for whoſe ſake the Lorde ſhould ſpare the cytie. Wherefore Jeruſalem is deſtroyed of the Affryans.

In the thowowe Jeruſalem, beholde: I and ſee, ſeke thowowe her ſtretes alſo wpythin, if ye can fynde one man þe doeth equal and ryghte, or ſekeh for the trueth, and I ſhall ſpare that cytie (ſayeth the Lorde). * For though they can ſaye: þe Lorde lytheth yet do they ſwear to diſceyne.

Whereas thou (O Lorde) lokeſt onelye vpon faith and trueth.

Thou

dement, but they refused thy correction. They made theyr faces harder then a stone, and wold not amende.

Deute. xxi. d. B Therefore I thought in my self: peradventure they are so simple and foolyshe, & they understand nothing of þe Lordes way & iudgementes of oure God. * Therefore wyll I go vnto theyr bedes and rulers, and talke with them, if they know the way of þe Lord and the iudgementes of our God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the pike, and burst the bondes in sondre.

Deu. xxxii. d. * Therefore, a lyon oute of the woode hathe stroye them. The Leopard doeth lyke lurkynge and theyr departing awaye is encreased Sophon. i. a. Shoulde I then for all this haue mercye vpon by them that are no goddes. And albeit, that I fedde them to the ful, yet they fall to aduourtyng, people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neyther understandest what they saye.

Theyr arrowes are todayne deathe: yea, they shall eate vp thy frute and thy meate: yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters, thy done with you, sayth the Lord. But if they say wherefore doth þe Lord our God al this vnto vs Deu. xxi. c. Then answer them: * because that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge god-des in poure owne lande, euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande. Preache, Juda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou foolyshe and vndiscrete people) * ye haue eyes, but ye see not: eares haue ye but ye heare not. * Feare ye not me, sayth the Lord: Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? * which bynd þe see with the sande, so that it can not passe his bondes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothyng, & though the waues therof do swel, yet maye they not go harte: they are departed and gone away from me They thinke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the Lord our God, that geueth vs raine early and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth eny still the harvest for vs verely.

* Neuerthelesse, your misdeedes haue turned these from you, and youre synnes haue robbed you hereof. For amonge my people are founde wycked perfonies, that pryncipally laie snares and wayte for men, to take them and destroy them.
And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are theyr houses full of that which they haue gotten with falschep and disceyte. Herof cometh their great substaunce and rychesse, herof are they fat and welthy, & are moze myscheuous then any other

* They minystre not the lawe: they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause: yea, and they pro-pore: yet they iudge not þe poore accordyng to equyte. * Shuld I not punyssh these thynges, sayth the Lord? Shuld I not be auenged of all such people as these be? Horryble and greuous thynges are done in the lande. The Prophetes teache falsely, and the preastes receiue gyftes, and my people * hathe pleasure therein. What wyll come therof at the laste?

The. vi. Chapter.

The synnes for whiche Jerusalem is afflict. Vnclenly syn-nes. Couetousnes, Disceyte. The Lord reiecteth the sacrificces of the Jewes. The comynge of the Babylonians is prophesied agayne.

Come oute of Jerusalem, ye stronge chyldren of Ben Jamin blow vp the trompettes ye * Ecyptes, let vp a token vnto Bethcaran, for a plage and a greate mysterie appereth oute frome the North. I wyll lyken the daughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shal come the shepherders with theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shall they pitch rounde about her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande.
Make battayle agaynst her (shall they saye) Arise, let vs go vp, while it is yet daye. Alas, the day goeth away, & the nyght shadowes fal downe. Arise, let vs go vp by nyght, & destroy her strong holdes, for thus hath þe Lord of hostes commaunded. Hewe downe her trees, & let vp bulwarkes agaynst Jerusalem, for þe tyme is come that this cite must be punysshed: for in her is all malicounesse. Lyke as a conyete spouteth out waters, so she spouteth oute her wyckednesse. Robbery & vnrightheousnesse is herde in her, for oth and woundes are euer there in my syghte. Amende the (O Jerusalem) lest I withdraue my hert fro the, & make þe desolate and thy land also, & no man dwel in it. For thus sayeth

sayth the Lord of hostes. The residue of Israel shall be gathered, as the remnaunte of grapes. And therfore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shal I speake, whom shal I warne that they maye take hede? * Their eares are so uncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, * they take the worde of God but for a scoone, & haue no lust therto. And therfore I am so ful of thine indignaciō, (O Lord) that I may suffer no lenger, but shed it out vpon the children of Israel without and vpon al ponge men. yee, the man muste be taken prisoner with the wife, and the aged with the crepell. Their houses with their lādes, & wiues shalbe turned vnto strangers when I stretch out myne hand vpon the inhabyters of this lande, saith the Lord. * For from the lest vnto the most, they hang al vpon couetousnes, & from the prophet vnto the priest: they go al aboute with falshe and lies. * And belyde that, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayng: peace, peace whēther is no peace at al. Were they ashamed when they had comytted abhominaciō? Truly say they be past shame. * And therfore they shal fall among the slayne & in the houre whē I shal vset them, they shalbe broughte downe saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord: go into the stretes, consyder and make inquisicion for the olde waye, and yf it be the good & ryghte way, then go therein, that ye may fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye we wil not walke therein, & I wyl set watchmen ouer you, and therfore take hede vnto the voyce of the troyet. But they say we wyl not take hede. Heare therfore ye gentiles, & thou congregacyon shalte know, what I haue deuyd for them. Heare thou erth also, be holde, I wyl cause * a plage to come vpon this people, euen the frute of their owne ymaginacions. For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes & to my law, but abhorred them. Wherfore * bypnyng ye me incense from Saba, & swete smellyng Calamus fro farre countreyes: Your burnt offerings displease me, & I reioice not in your sacrifices. And therfore thus saith the Lord beholde, I wyl make this people fall, & therfore shal fall among them the father with the child, one neyghbour shal persue the with another.

The vii. Chapter

¶ Jeremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, whiche trusteth in the outward service of the temple. The euels that shall happen to the Jewes for the dyspyngne of the prophetes. Sacrifices doth not the Lord chiefly requyre: of the Jewes, but that they shulde obeye his worde.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremye, sayng: * Stand vnder the gate of the Lordes hous and crie oute these wordes there, with a loude voyce and saye: Heare the word of the Lord all ye of Iuda, & go in at this doore to worshipp the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel. * Amende your wayes & your counsels, & I wil let you dwel in this place. Truste not in false lyng wordes, sayng: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord.

But rather in dede amende your wayes and counsels, * and iudge ryghte betwixt a man & his neyghboure, oppresse not the stranger, the fatherlesse, and the wyddow: shed not innocent bloude in this place, cleane not to strange gods des to your owne destrucciō, then wyl I let you dwel in this place: yee, in the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for ever. But take hede: ye trust in lyng tales, that begyle you and do you no good: For when ye haue stolen, murdered, comytted aduoutry, and perjury: When ye haue offered vnto Baal, folowynge strange and vknownen gods shal ye be vnpunished: Yet then come ye and stand before me in this house (* whiche hath my name geuen vnto it) & say: Cuse, we are absolved quite, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

* What: thyncke you this house that heareth my name, is a den of theues? * And yet I se what you thyncke, sayth the Lord. Go to my place in Sylo, * wher vnto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke wel: what I dyd to the same place for the wickednes of my people of Israel. And now though ye haue done al these dedes (sayth the Lord) and I my selfe rose vpon you by tymes to warne you and to comen with you, yet wold ye not heare me. * I called, ye wold not answer. And therfore eue as I haue done vnto Sylo, so wyl I do to this house, that my name is geuen vnto (* that you put your trust in) yee, vnto the place that I haue geuen to you: and your fathers. And I shal trust you out of my syght * as I haue cast out al your brethren the whole sede of Ephraim.

* Therefore, thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thanks, nor byde prayer.

Thus sayth the Lord, * Beholde there shall come a people from the North, and a great people shal arysse fro the endes of the earth, whowes and with dartes shal they be weaponed. It is a rough & scarce people, & an vmerciful people, their voyce roareth lyke the see, they ride vpon horses wel appointed to the battel against the daughter Syon. The crye of them haue we hearde. Our armes are feble, heuyenes & sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with chylde: Let no man go forth into the felde let no man come vpon the hye strete: for the swerde and feare of the enemyes is on euery syde. Wherfore gyde a sacke cloth aboute the daughter of my people (sprinkle thy selfe with ashes: * mourne & wepe bytterly as vpon thyne onely beloued sonne. For the destroyer shal

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: heape vp your burnt offerpnges wyth your sacrifices, and eate the fleshe. * For when I brought your fathers out of Egypt I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerings and sacrifices: but thys I commaunded them, sayng * hearken & obeye my voyce, and I shalbe your God, and ye shalbe my people: so that ye walke in al y^e wayes whych I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prosper. * But they were not obedient, they inclined not their eares therunto, but went after they^r owne ymagynacions, & after the mocions of their owne wycked herte, and so turned them selues away, and couerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, fro the tyme y^e your fathers came out of Egypt, vnto this day

* Neuerthelesse, I sente vnto you, all my ser-uautes the prophetes. I rose vp early and sente you worde: yet wolde they not hearken, nor offer me they^r eares, but were obstinate, & worse the they^r fathers. And thou shalt nowe speake all these wordes vnto the, but they shall not heare the, thou shalt cry vnto them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalt thou say vnto the thys is y^e people, that nether heareth the voyce of the Lord they^r God, nor receauerh y^e sco^rreccyon. * I saythfulnes & truthe is cleane rooted out of they^r mouth.

* Wherfore cut of thyne heare, O Jerusalem and cast it away, take vp a complaynt on hye, for the Lord hath cast away, and scatered the people that he is dyspleased wyth all. For the chyliden of Juda haue done euil in my syghte, saith the Lord. * They haue set vp their abho-minacions in the house that hath my name, and haue defiled it. They haue also buyded an aulter at * Topbeth, whiche is in the valleie of the chyliden of Hennom, y^e they might burne they^r sonnes and daughters in fyre, whych I neuer comaunded the nether came it euer in my thought And therfore beholde, the dayes shal come (sayeth the Lord) that it shal no moze be called To-peth, or the valley of the chyliden of Hennom, but y^e valley of slaughter. * For i Topbeth, they shalbe buryed, because they shall elles haue no rowme. * Yee, the deade bodies of this people shalbe eaten vp of the foules of the aire: & wilde beastes of the earth, and no man shal fray them awaye. * And as for the voyce of mirth & glad-nesse of the Cytycs of Juda, and Jerusalem the voyce of y^e bydegrome, and of the bride, I wyl make them cease: for the lande shalbe desolate.

The. viii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes. The Lord moueth the people to amendement, rekenyng vpon they^r synnes. & reprehendeth the lyng doctrine of the prophetes and preastes.

The same tyme sayeth the Lord, I the bones of the kynges of Juda, y^e bones of his prynces, the boones of the preastes and prophetes: yee and the bones of the cytyzens of Jerusalem shalbe brought oute of their graues & layd against * the sunne the mone, & all the beaunty-full: whom they loued, whom they serued: wh^o they ranne after, whome they sought and wo^r-shipped. They shal nether be gathered together nor buried, but shal lye as dong vpon the earth to they^r shame and despylyng.

* And all they that remayne of this wycked generacion, shal desire rather to dye the to lyue wheresoeuer they remayne and wher as I sca-ter them, sayth the Lord of hostes. Thus shalt thou saye vnto them also, thus sayth the Lord Women fall so, that they aryle not vp againe: O y^e Israel repent, wil not God turne againe to the? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre backe that they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer the moze obstinate, and wyl not be conuerted.

* For I haue looked & consydered, but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for his synne y^e wyl so muche as saye: wherfore, haue I doone this? But euerye man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth syl, like a wyld horse in a battel: The Stork in the ayre knoweth his apointed time, the Turtle doue: the Swallowe and the Crane, consider the time of their travel * but my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punysshment of the Lord. How dare ye saye then, we are wyle, we haue the law of the Lord amonge vs?

Truly in dayne hath he prepared his penne and vayne haue y^e wyters written it, therfore shal the wyle be confounded, they shalbe afraid and taken: for lo, * they haue caste out the word of the Lord: what wysdome can the be among them? Wherfore I wyl geue their wyues vnto aleauntes, and they^r feldes to destroyers.

* For frome the loweste to the hyeste: they so-lowe all fylthy lucre, from the prophet vnto the preast, they deale all with lyes. * Neuertheles they heale the hurt of my people very frendly, sayng: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all. I ye for shame, howe abhominable thin-ges do they: & yet they be not ashamed: yee, they knowe of no shame. * Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the dead bodies, and be ouerthrowne sayeth the Lord.

Moreouer I wyl consume them in dede (sayeth y^e Lord) so that there shal not be one grape vpon the vine, nether one fygge vpon the fygtre and the leaues shalbe pluked of. And the thyng that I haue geuen them shalbe taken from the why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather oure selues

¶ I felues together, and go into the stronge Cytte, there shal we be in rest. For the Lord our God hath put vs to scilence & geuen vs water myrte with gall to dryncke, because we haue sinned against him. * We looked for peace, and we fare not the better, we wayted for the time of health and lo, here is nothynge but trouble.

The noyse of his hozes is hearde from Dan the whole lande is afrayed at the neyng of his strong hozes, for they are come in, and haue deuoured the lande, with al that is in it: the cities and those that dwel therein. * Moreouer I wyl sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you, (which wyl not be charmed) and they shal byte you sayth the Lord.

I wolde haue had comforte againste sorowe but sorowe is come vpon me, and heauines vnto my herte, for loo, the voyce of the cryng of my people is hearde for feare of them, that come from a farre countrie. Is not the Lord in Syon? Is not the king in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shal I Lord saye) with theyr ymages and foolyshe straunge fashyons of a forgyne God? The heruest is gone, & Somer hath an ende, and we are not helped, I am sore vexed because of the hurte of my people, I am heuy & abashed, is there no triacle at Giliad? Is there no phisicion there? Why then is not the health of my people recovered

¶ The ix. Chapter.

¶ The complaints & bewayling of the prophet for the malice of the people. In the knowlege of God ought we only to reioyce. The vncircumcysion of the herte.

¶ Who * wyl geue my heade water ynough, & a well of teares for myne eyes, that I maye wepe nyghte and daye for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cottage some where farre from folke, that I might leaue my people, and go from them, for they be all aduocaters and a shrinkynge sort. They bende their tungen like bowes to shote out lies. They were strong vpon earth. As for the truth, they maye nothyng a waye with all in the worlde. For they go frome one wyckednesse to another, and wyl not knowe me, sayth the Lord.

* Pee, one must kepe him selfe from another no mā may safely trust his owne brother, & for one brother vndermyndeth another, one neyghbour begyleth another. Pee, one dissembleth with another, and they deale with no truthe. * They haue practised theyr tongues to lye, and taken greate paynes to do myschefe: Thou syttest in the myddes of a disceatfull people, whiche for theyr dyssemblyng falschod, wyl not knowe me sayth the Lord.

¶ Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, beholde, I wyl melt them, & trye them: for what shuld I els do to my people? Theyr tungen are lyke sharpe arowes, to speake dysceat. Wylth their mouth they speake peaciably to their neyghbours, but pynely they laye wayte for him.

* Shulde I not punyssh the for these thynges, sayth the Lord? * Shulde I not be aduenged of any such people as this? Upon the mountaynes wyl I take vp a lamentacion & a sorowful crie, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wilderness. Namely how they are so bzett vp: that no man gothe there anye more. Pee a man shal not heare one beast crye there.

Birdes & catell are gone fro thence, * I wyl make Ierusalem also an heape of stones, & a den of venimous wormes. And I wil make the Cities of Iuda so wast, & no man shal dwel there in. What mā is so wyle, as to vnderstande this? Or to whome hath the Lord spoken by mouth & he maye shew this & saye: O thou lande, why perystest thou so? Wherfore arte thou so bzett vp, & lyke a wilderness, & no man goeth thowow Pee, the Lord him selfe tolde the same vnto the that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thyng that he gaue them in comaundement, neyther lyued thereafter: * but folowed the wickednes of their owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as theyr fathers taughte them.

¶ Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wil fede this people with wormewood, & geue them gal to dryncke: * I wyl scatre them also amonge the heathen, who nether they nor their fathers haue knowen and I wyl sende a swerd among them, to persecute them, vntyll I bzynge them to naughte. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lord of hostes, beware of the vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and call for mournynge wyues, & sende for wyle women that they come shortly, & synge a mournynge songe of you, that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that our eye lyddes maye geue the oute of water.

¶ For there is a lamentable noyse heard of Syon. How are we so sore destroyed? How are we so peteously confounded? We must forsake oure owne natural countrey, and we are shutte out of our owne lodgynges. Yet heare I worde of I Lord (O ye weime) & let your eares regard the wordes of my mouth, & ye may learne your doughtersto mourne, & & every one may teach her neyghbours to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is clymyng vp in at our windowes he is come into oure houses, to destroye & chylde before the doore, and the yonge man in the strete. But tell thou playnlye, thus sayeth the Lord.

* The deade bodies of men shal lye vpon the ground, as the dong vpon the felde and as the hepe after the mower, and ther shal be no mā to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lord. Let not the wylseman reioyce in his wylsedome: nor the strong man in his strength: nether the ryche mā in his ryches. * But who so wyl reioyce let him reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for I am the Lord whopeche do mercede, equitie, & righteousnes vpon the earth. * Therefore haue I pleasure in suche thynges, sayth the Lord. Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord) that I wyl viset all them, whose foze-skyne is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Jewes, the Edomites, & Ammonites, the Moabites, * and the Hauen Madianites & dwell in the wilderness. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcised in flesh, but al the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

The Prophecie.

The .x. Chapter

The constellacions of the starres are not to be feared, Of the weaknes of ydols, and of the power of God. Of euell curates.

Heare the worde of the Lord that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord * Ye shal not lerne after the maner of the heathen, and ye shal not be afrayed, for the tokens of heauē: for the heathen are afrayde of such: yea, all the custonies: and lawes of the Gentiles are nothing but vanite * They hewe downe a tree in the woode, with þ handes of the worckeman, and fasten it with the axe, they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles & hammers, that it moue not It standeth as stiffe as the palme tree, it can neither speake nor go one foote, but muste be borne. * Be not ye afrayd of suche, for they can do neither good nor euell. But there is none like vnto the, O Lord, * & great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? O kynge of the Gentils, for thine is the dominion.

For among al the wise men of the Gentils, in al their kyngdoms, there is none þ maye be likened vnto the. They are altogether vnlearn-ed and vnwyle in this one thyng. Al their conyng is but vanite: namely wode, syluer: which is brought out of Charis, and beate to plates: and golde from Ophir, * a worke that is made with the hand of the craftesman, & the catter clothed it with yelowe sylcke & scarlett, euen so is the worke of their wise men altogether. But þ Lord is a true God, a luyng God, & an euer-lastyng kyng. * If he be wroth, the earthe shaketh: all the Gentiles maye not abyde his in-dignacion.

As for their gods thus shal you saye to them: they are goddes, that made neither heauen nor earth, therefore shal they perishe from the earth, and from all thinges vnder heauē. But (as for our God) * He made the earth with his power, & with his wisdom doth he order the whole co-passe of þ world, & his discrecyon hath he spred oute the heauens. At his voyce the waters gather together in þ ayre, * he draweth vp þ cloudes fro the uttermost partes of þ earth: he turneth lyghtnyng to rayne, and bynggeth the forth the wyndes out of their treasures. His wisdom maketh all men fooles: And confounded be ca-sters of ymages, for þ they caste, is but a vaine thyng, and hath no lyfe. * The vayne craftes-men with their workes, þ they in theyr vanitie haue made, shal perishe one w an other in tyme of visitacion. Neuerthelesse Jacobs porcion is none suche: but it is he that hath made all thin-ges, & Israel is the rod of his enderitance. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the lande thou that art in the strong place. For thus sayth the Lord. Behold, I wil now thowde as with a stone synge the inhabitours of this lande at this once, & wyll byngge trouble vps them that they shal proue true the worde, that I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, howe am I hurt? Alas howe paynfull are my scourges vnto me? For I consydre this forowde by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My ta-bernacl is destroyed, & all my coardes are broken. My chyldre are gone from me, & can no wher be founde. Nowe haue I none to spede out my tent, and to set vp my hanginges. For the herde me haue done folpshy, & they haue not sought the Lord. Therefore haue they dealte vnwylely with their cattell: and are scatered abrode. Be-holde the noise is hearde at hande and great sedition out of the north: to make the cities of Juda a wilderness, and a dwelling place for dragons. * Now I knowe (O Lord) that it is not in mans power to orde bys owne wayes, or to rule his owne steps and goinges. Therefore chasten þ vs, O Lord, but with fauour: not in thy wroth, byng vs not vtterly to naught. * Pour out thine indignacyon rather vpon the Gentyles, that know the not, and vpo the people that cal not on thy name. * And þ because they haue consumed, deuoured, and destroyed Jacob: and haue made his habitacion wast.

The .xi. Chapter.

A curse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes promisse. The people of Iuda folowing the steppes of their fathers, worshippeth straunge goddes. The Lord sayth that he wyll not heare the Jewes, and forbydeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

This is another sermon, whyche the Lord commaunded Jeremye for to preach, sayng: Heare þ wordes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto the men of Iuda, and to al them þ dwel at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: * Cursed be eu-ry one þ is not obediēt vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypt, fro þ yron fornaice, sayng: * Be obediēt vnto my voyce, & do accordyng to al þ I coma-unde you so shall ye be my people, and I wyll be your God, and wyll kepe my promise, * that I haue woone vnto your fathers. Namely that I wolde geue them a lande whyche floweth with milke and honye, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I and said: Amē Let it be euen so Lord as thou sayest.

Then the Lord sayd vnto me againe: Preach this in the cyties of Iuda & rounde about Ieru-salem, & say heare the wordes of this couenaunt that ye maye kepe them, for I haue diligently exhortet your fathers euer sence the tyme that I brought the out of the lande of Egypt vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, saying: Herke vnto my voyce. * Neuertheles they wolde not obey me, nor encline their eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymaginacions of their owne hertes. And therefore, I haue accused them as trasgressours of al the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe which they (notwithstandyng) haue not kept.

And the Lord sayd vnto me: It is found out þ whole Israel & all the cytyzens of Ierusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of theyr forefathers, which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lyke wyse haue these also folowed straunge Goddes, and C Therefore thus sayth the Lorde. Beholde, I will sende a plague vpon them, which they shal not be able to escape, and though they crie vnto me, I wyl not heare them. * Then shal the townes of Iuda and the citezynes of Ierusalem go, and call vpon their gods vnto whom they made their oblacions, but they shal not be able to helpe the in time of their trouble. * For as many cities as thou hast O Iuda, so many goddes hast thou had also. And loke how many streets there be in the, (O Ierusalem) so many shame-full alters haue ye set vp, alters I say to offere vpon them vnto Baall. * Therefore praye not thou for this people, vnd nether praise nor prayer for the, for though they cry vnto me in theyr trouble, yet wyl I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my house seinge he hath woeked abhominacyon, scrupnyng many Goddes: * The holy flethe offerynge in the temple are gone fro the O Iuda, and thou when thou hast done euell makest thy boost of it.

* The Lorde called for a grene Olive tre, a faire one, a frutful one, a goodly one: but with great clamor hath the enemye set fyre vpon it and the braunches of it are destroyed. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath deuyled a plague for the (O thou house of Israel & Iuda) for the euill that ye haue donetop, pouke him to wrath in that ye dyd scrupce vnto Baall.

D This (O Lorde) haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it, for thou hast shewed me their ymagynacions. * But I am as a meke lambe andret that is caried awaye to be slaine, not knowying, that they had deuyled suche a counsell against me, sayng: * We wyl destroy his meat with wodde, and dyspue hym out of the lande: of fpyng: that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therefore, * I wyl beseeche the nowe (O Lorde of hostes) thou righteous Judge, thou that triest the reynes & the hertes: let me se the aduienged of them: for vnto the haue I commytted my cause. The Lorde therfore spake thus of the citezins of Anathoth: that soughte to slaye me, sayng. * Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or els thou shalt dye of oure han-des. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde of hostes.
Beholde, I wyl visite you. Poure yonge men shall perishe with the sword, your sonnes and poure daughters shal utterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remaine: For vpon the citezins of Anathoth wyl I bringe a plague: euen the yeare of their visitacion.

The. xii. Chapter.

The prophete maruelly greatly at the prosperite of the wicked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speacheth agaynst Lurates, and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde sheweth destruction vnto the nations that bored vpon Iure: which troubled and vexed it.

Lorde, thou arte moare ryghteous, then I shoulde dyspute with. Re-uert thelesse, lette me talke with the in thinges reasonable. * Howe happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? & that it goeth so well with them which (without anye shame) offended & liue in wickednesse? Thou plantest them they take roote, they grow, & bring forth frute They boost much of the, yet art thou farre from their rapnes. But thou Lorde (to whome I am wel knowe) thou that hast sent and proued my bert * take them away, like as a flocke is caried to the slaughter house, and point them for day of slaughter. Howe longe shal the land mourne * and all the herbes of the felde perishe, for the wyckednes of them that dwel therein.

The catell and the byrdes are gone: yet saye they thus. * God wil not destroye vs utterly Singe thou arte werpe in runnyng with the fotemen, howe wylt thou then runne with hoses? in a peaceable sure land thou mayst be safe But howe wylt thou do in the furious pyrde of Iordane? For thy brethren & thy kynred haue altogether despised the: and cried out vpon the in thine absence. * Belene the not, though they speake faire wordes to the. As for me (I saye) I haue forsaken myne owne dwelling place, and leste mine heritage. My lyfe also that I loue so well haue I geuen into the handes of mine ene-myes. * Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lye in the wod, It crieth out vpon me, there fore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a burde of diuerse coloures is vpon it. Come & gather ye together all beastes of the felde, Come that ye maye eat it vp * Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my vineparde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wyldeness and desert. They haue layde it wast: and now it is wast, it sygeth vnto me. Yee, I whole lye lieth wast, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery way, for the sweard of the Lorde doth consume from the one end of the land to the other, & no flethe hath rest. They haue sowne wheate, & reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in possession, but it doeth them no good. And the prophets were ashamed of poure frutes, because of the great wraoth of the Lorde

Thus sayth the Lorde vpon all myne euill neighboures, that laye hande vpon myne heritage, which I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyl plucke them (namelye Israel) out of their lande, and put out the house of Iuda from among them. * And when I haue rooted them out, I wyl be at one with them a-gayne: and I wyl haue mercy vpon them: and bringe them agayne, euerie man to his owne heritage, & into his lande. And yf they (namelye that trouble my people) wyl learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be rekeued among my people. But yf they wyl not obeye, then wyl I rote out the same folke, and destroye the sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto me: goo thy waye: & get me a lynnyn breeche & gyde it about thy loines, and let it not be wet. The I got me a breech accordyng to the commaundement of the Lord and put it about my loynes. After this the seconde tyme, the Lord spake vnto me againe. Take the breech that thou hast prepared and put aboute the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates & hyde it in an hole of y^e rocke. So went I, and hyd it at Euphrates, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, y^e the Lord spake vnto me. Up and get the to Euphrates, & fet the breech fro thence: which I commaunded the to hide there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, & toke the breeche from the place wher I hyd it, and beholde, the breeche was corrupte, so that it was profytable for nothyng.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lord. Euen so wyll I corrupte the pryde of Iuda & the hye mynd of Ierusalem. This people is a wicked people, * they wil not heare my worde, they folowe the wycked ymaginacions of their owne hert, and hang vpon straunge goddes, them they serue & worshyp: & therfore they shal be as this breech, that serueth for nothyng.

For as straitly as a breech lyeth vpon a mannes loines, so straightlye dyd I bynd the whole house of Israel, & the whole hous of Iuda vnto me saith the Lord: * that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name that they myght be in honoure, but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore laye this ridle befoze the & say. Thus sayth y^e Lord God of Israel. Euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shal say thynckeste thou we knowe not, that euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto them. Thus saith y^e Lord. Beholde I shal fyl all the inhabitours of this lande with dzonkennes, the kinges y^e spt vpon Dauides stole, y^e prestes & prophetes, with all that dwel at Ierusalem. And I wil set them one against another yee, y^e father against the sonnes, saith the Lord.

I wyll not pardon them, I wil not spare them nor haue pitie vpon them, but destroye the. Be obedient, geue eare: take not dysdayne at it, for it is the Lord him selfe that speaketh. Honoure the Lord your God here in, or he take his lyght from you, & or euer your fete stamble in darckenes at the hil, least when you loke for the lighte he turne it vnto the shadowe and darckenes of death. But yf ye wyll not heare me, y^e geue you secret warnyng, I wil mourne from my whole herte for your stubbernes * Witeouslye wyll I wepe, & the teares shal gush out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shalbe carped a waye captiue. Tell the kyng & the quene humble your selues, spt you downe lowe, for your dygnytie shalbe thowen downe, and the crowne of your glozpe shall fall from your heade.

The cyties towarde the south shalbe shut vp & no man shal open them. All Iuda shalbe caried a waye captiue, so that none shall remayne.

Lyfte vp your eyes, and beholde them that come fro the north, where is the flocke (O thou land) that was giue the: And where are thy fat an rich shepe? To whom wilt thou make thy mone when the enemye shal come vpon the: for thou hast taught them thy self, and made them masters ouer y^e. Shal not sorrow come vpo the as on a woman trauayplyng wth chyld? And yf thou woldest then saye in thine hert. Wherfore come these thinges vpo me? * Euen for y^e multitude of thy blasphemies, shal thy byndes partes and thy feet be discovered.

Way a man of. Inde chaunge his skyn, & the cat of y^e mountaine her spottes: no more maye ye that be exercised in euyl, do good. Therfore wyll I scattre them, lyke as the stubble that is take a way with the south winde. This shalbe your porcion, and the porcyd of your measure, wherewith ye shalbe rewarded of me, sayth the Lord: because ye haue forgotten me, & put youre trust in disceytful thynges? * Therfore shal I turne thy clothes ouer thy heed, & discover thy thynges, that thy priuities maye be sene, thy aduoutrie, thy deedly malice, thy beastlynesse, and thy shameful whordome. For vpon the felde and hylls I haue sene thyne abhominacions. Woe be vnto the (O Ierusalem) when wilt thoueuer be cleansed any more?

The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the death that shoulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people ashyng mercye of the Lord. The vnfaithfull people are not here. Of prayer, fastyng, and of false prophetes that seduce the people.

The worde of the Lorde shewed vnto I Jeremy, concernyng the death of the frutes. Iuda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: they are brought to beuinele euen vnto the grounde, & they crye of Ierusalem goeth vp. The lordes sente their seruantes to fecch water, & when they came to the wellles, they did finde no water, but caried their vesselles home emptye. They be ashamed and confounded, and couer theyr heedes. * For the grounde is dyed vp, bycause ther cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, and couer their heedes. The bynde also forsoke the yonge fawne, that he brought forth in the felde, bycause there was no grasse. The wyld asses dyd stande in the bygge places, and drew in theyr wynde lyke the dragons, theyr eyes dydde faple, for wante of grasse.

Doutlesse our owne wickednesse doth reward vs. But Lord do thou accordyng to thy name, though our transgressions & synnes be many, & against the haue we synned. * For thou art the comfort & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble: Why wilt thou be as a straunger in the land, & as one y^e goeth ouer the felde, & cometh in onely to remaine for a nyght: Why wilt thou make thy self a coward, & as it were a ghaist that yet may not helpe? For y^e (O Lord) art in y^e myddest of vs: & thy name is called vpo vs, for sake vs not. Thus hath the Lord said vnto this people seipng they haue had such lust to wandre a brode, & haue not refrained their feet, & therfore displeased the Lord: but he wyll nowe byngre agayne to remembraunce all their mynnynges & punynges.

Lorde vnto me: * Thou shalt not praye to do this people good: For though they fast, I will not heare their prayers, and though they offer burnt offerynges and sacrifices: yet will not I accept them. For I wil destroye them with the sword, hunger and pestilence. Then aunswere I: O Lorde God, * the prophetes saie vnto them: Tylke ye shall nedde to feare no swerde and no hunger shall come vpon you, but the lord shall geue you contynnall rest in this place:

And the Lorde sayd vnto me: The prophetes preache lies in my name, where as I haue not sente the, nether gaue I the any charge, nether dyd speake vnto the, yet they preache vnto you falle visions, charmynges, vanite, and disceat-fulness of their owne hert. Therefore thus saith the lord: As for those prophetes þe preach in my name (whom I neuertheless haue not sente) and þe saie: Tylke there shall no swerde nor hunger be in this land: * With swerde and with hunger shall those prophetes perithe, & þe people to who they preach shall be cast out of Ierusalem, dye of hunger & be slaine with þe swerde: * (þe shall be no man to burye the) both they & their wyues their sonnes and their daughters: For thus wil I powre their wickednes vpon the. This shall I say also vnto them. * Mine eyes shall wepe w out ceasinge daye and nyghte. For my people shall be destroyed with great harme: and shall perishe with a great plague. For yf I go into the felde: loo, it lieth al ful of slayne men. Yf I come into the cite: loo, they be all famished of hunger.
Pee, their prophetes also & preastes shall be led into an vknownen lande. Hast thou then viter-ly forsaken Iuda: Doest thou abhorre Spon: Dy hast thou so plagued vs, þe we can be healed no more: * We looked for peace, & there cometh no good: for the tyme of helth: & loo, here is no thinge but trouble. We knowlege (O lorde) all our misdoedes, and the synnes of our fathers that we haue offeded the. Be not displeased, O Lorde for thy names sake: * forget not thy louing kindnes. Remembre the throne of thine honour breake not the couenaunt that thou hast made w vs: * Are there anye amonge the gods of the Gentiles, that sende rayne or geue the showres of heuen: Or maye the heauens drop rayne without thy commaundement: Doest not thou it, O Lorde oure God in whom we trust: Pee, Lorde thou doest all these thinges.

The xv. Chapter.

The Lorde will not heare Doyles or Aaron yf they praye for the people: but will wype them in many miseries. The cause of suche greute miseries.

Then spake the Lorde vnto me. * Though Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Wyue the awaye that they maye go out of my sight: And if they saie vnto the, whether shall we go: The tell them: The Lorde geueth you this aunswere * Some vnto death: some to þe swerde, some to hunger, some into captiuite. For I will bryng my plagues vpon them saith þe Lorde. The swerd shall slay them: þe dogges shall tear the in peaces

* the foules of þe ayre, & beastes of þe earth shall eate the vp, & destroye them. I wil scatter them about also in all kingdōs & lādes to be plagued: because of * Manasses þe sonne of Hezekia king of Iuda, for þe thinges that he dyde in Ierusalem.

Who shall then haue pitie vpon the, O Jerusalem: Who shall be sorowful for the: Or who shall make intercession, to obtayne peace for the: sepyng thou goeste from me, & turnest backwarde, saith the Lorde: Therefore, I will stretch oute myne hande agaynst the to destroye the, and I haue ben sorowful for þe so longe þe I am wery. I haue scattered them abroad with the fanne on euerie syde of the lande. * I haue wasted my people & destroyed them. Yet they haue had no luste to turne for me thei owne waies. I haue made their wydowes mo in nombre, then the sandes of the see. Vpon the mothers of their children dyd I bryng a destroyer in the none day. * So denly and vnwares dyde I sende a feare vpon their cities. She that hath borne seuen children hath none, her herte is full of sorowe

* The Sunne doth faile her in the cleare day, she is confounded and fainte for very heynenes As for those that remaine, I will deliuer them vnto the swerde before their enemyes layeth the Lorde: * O mother, alas that euer thou dyd-dest beare me, a brawler & rebuker of the whole lande: Though I neuer sente nor receaued vpon vsurpe, yet all men speke euell vpon me.

And the Lorde answered me: Celerlye thy remnaunte shall haue welthe: Come not I to the, when thou art in trouble & helpe the, when thine enemy oppressed the: Doeth one yron hurte an other: or one metall that cometh from þe north, another: * As for thy ryches & treasure, I will geue them out into a praye, not for anye monie, but because of al thy synnes: that thou hast done in all coastes, * And I will bryng þe with thine enemies into a lande that thou knowest not for the fire that is kyndled in my indignacion, shall burne you vp.

O Lorde, thou knowest, therefore remember me, & viset me, deliuer me from my persecuters.
Take me not from this life in the tyme of long paciencie, thou knowest, that for thy sake I suffer rebuke. * When I had founde thy wordes. I dyd eate them vp greedely: they haue made my hert ioyful & glad. For thy name was called vpon me, O Lorde God of hostes. I dwel not among þe scoyners: nether is my delite therein: but I dwel onely in the feare of thy hande, for thou hast fylled me with bitternes. Shall my heauynes endure for euer: At my plagues the so great that they maye neuer be healed: Wylte thou be as one that is false: and as a water that falleth and cannot contynue: Vpon these wordes, thus saide the Lorde vnto me. Yf thou wilt turne & gayne, I shall set the in my seruice: and yf thou wylte take oute the thynges that are precyous from the vile, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. * They shall conuerthe vnto the, but turne not thou vnto the: and so shall I make the a not p̄uaile. For I my selfe will be with the, to helpe the and deliuer the, sayeth the Lord. And I wyl ryd the out of the handes of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the handes of t̄p̄aunters.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The prophesie the myserye of the Jewes, he sheweth that the worshyppe of Idoles & the contempt of Goddes lawe is cause of theyr miserie. He prophesie the captiuitie of Babylon, and theyr deliuerance from thence agayne. The callinge of the Gentyles.

Thus sayde the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, nor beget children in this place. For of the children that are borne in this place & of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers that haue begotten the in this land, thus sayth the Lord. They shall dye an horrible death: no man shall wepe for the nor bury them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall perishe thowowe the swarde and hunger, and their bodies shall be meat for the foules of the aire, and bestes of the earth. For thus saith the Lord, Go not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne & wepe for them: for I haue taken my peace fro this people (sayth the Lord) yee, my fauoure and my mercye. And in thys lande shall they dye, olde and younge, and shall not be buried, no man shall be wepe them, no man shall clyppe or haue him selfe for them.

There shall not one v̄set another, to mourne with them for their deade, or to confor̄te them. One shall not offer another the cup of cōsolaciō to forget their heuynesse for father and mother. Thou shalt not go into their feast houses, to sit downe, to eat and drinke with them: for thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell. Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place the voyce of myrth & gladnes, the voyce of the bridegrome & of the byrde, yee, and that in your dayes, that ye maye see it.

Nowe when thou shewest this people al these wordes & they saye vnto the: * Wherefore hath the Lord deuised all this greates plague for vs? O what is the offence & synne that we haue done against the Lord oure God? Then make thou the this answer: * Because your fathers haue forsaken me: sayeth the Lord and haue walked after straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped, but me they haue forsaken and haue not kept my law. * And ye with your shameful blasphemies: haue exceded the wickednes of your fathers. For every one of you hath folowed the frowarde and euell ymaginaciō of his owne herte: and is not obedyente vnto me. * Therefore wyl I cast you oute of this lande into a land that ye and your fathers know not and there shall ye serue straunge goddes day and night, there wyl I shewe you no fauoure. * Beholde, therefore (sayth the Lord) the dayes are come that it shall no more be sayde: The Lord liueth which brought the children of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But it shall be sayd: the Lord liueth that brought the children of Israell from the north, and from all landes wher he had scattered the: For I wyl bring the agayne into the lande that I gaue vnto theyr fathers.

Beholde (sayth the Lord) * I wyl sende out many spyers to take them, and after that wyl I sende out hunters to hunte them out from all mountaines and hylles, and out of the caues of stone. For myne eyes beholde al their wayes, & they can not be hid from my face, nether can their wycked dedes be kepte close oute of my sight. But fyrst wyl I sufficientely rewarde theyr shameful blasphemies & synnes, because they haue despyled my lande, namely with their synnyng ydoles and with the carions of theyr abominacions, wherwith they haue filled myne heretage. * O Lord, my strength, my power & refuge, in tyme of trouble. The gentiles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the world, and say, Verely our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes their ydoles are but vayne and vnp̄ofitable. How can a man make those his gods? whiche are not able to be gods? And therefore I wyl once teach them, sayth the Lord: I wyl shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lord.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The frowardnes of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put theyr confydence in man, & those blessed that trust to God whans hert is wycked. God is the strength of the herte. The spyng waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commaunded.

Voure synne (O ye of the trybe of Iuda) is wyrtten in the table of your hertes and grauen so v̄p̄ the hedges of your altars with a penne of ȳs and with an Adamante clawe, that as the fathers thynke vpon theyr children, so thynke you also vpon your altars, woddes thynke trees, hylles, mountaines and felde. * Wherefore, I wil make my mounte that standeth in the felde al your substance and treasure to be spoyled, for the greates synne that ye haue doone vpon your hylle places thowowe oute all the coastes of your land, ye shall be cast out also from the heritage that I gaue you. And I wyl subdue you vnder the heauye bondage of your enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue ministered fyre to myne indignaciō, which shall burne enermoare. Thus sayth the Lord: * Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, and that taketh helpe for his arme, and whose herte departeth from the Lord, he shall be lyke the brathe, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thyng, that is for to come he shall not se it: but dwell in a drye place of the wilderness, in a salte and vnoccupied lande. * O blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lord, and whose hope is the Lord him selfe. * For he shall be as a tre that is planted by the waters syde: whiche spreadeth out the roote vnto mynstnesse, whome the heate cannot harme: when it cometh, but his leaf shall be grene. And though there grow but lytle fruyte, because of drouth: yet is he not carful, but he neuer leaueth of to bring forth the fruite. Amonge all thynges man hath the most disceitful & stubborne herte. Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lord searche oute the grounde of the herte, and trye reward every man according to his wayes & accordyng to the frute of his woorkes.

* The parturche maketh a nest of egges, whiche she layde not. he commeth by ryebeffe, but not ryghteously. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynd hym, and at the last he shal be a verie foole. But thou (O Lord) whose throne is mooste glazious, excellent, and of mooste antiquyte, which dwellest in the place of our holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israel. All they that forsake the, shal be confounded: all they that departe from the, shal be written in earth: * for they haue forsaken the Lord the very conducter of the waters of lyfe.

Deale me, O Lord, and I shal be whole: saue thou me and I shal be saued: for þart my praise Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the word of the Lord? (Let it come nowe.) Where as I neuer thelesse, obedyntlye folowed the as a shepherde, and haue not vncalled taken this of fice vpon me, this knowest thou well. My wo-rdes also were ryghte before the. Be not nowe terryble vnto me, O Lord, * for thou arte he in whome I hope. When I am in perill. Let my persecuters be confounded: but not me: let them be affrayd, and not me. Thou shalt bypnyng vpon them the time of theyr plage, and shalt destroy them ryghte soze.

Thus hath the Lord sayde vnto me: * Go & stande vnder the gate where thozowe þ people and the kynges of Iuda go oute and in: yea, vnder all the gates of Ierusalem & saye vnto them heare the worde of the Lord, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Iuda and all the cyti-zens of Ierusalem, that go thozowe this gate Thus the Lord comaundeth: * Take hede for your lyues, that ye carpe no burthen vpon you in the Saboth to bypnyng it thozowe the gates of Ierusalem: ye shal beare no burthen also out of your houses in the Saboth. Ye shall do no laboure therein, but halowe the Saboth, * as I commaunded your fathers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neyther harkened they vnto me but were obstinat and stubborne, & neyther obeyed me, nor receiued my correccio. Neuer theles ye wyll heare me (sayth the Lord) & beare no burthen into þ cytie thozowe this gate vpo the Saboth ye wyll halowe the Saboth, so ye do no worke therein: then shal there go thozowe the gates of this cytie kynges and prynces, þ shall lpe vpon the throne of Dauid: They shal be caried vpon charettes, & ryde vpon horses bothe they & theyr prynces. Yea whole Iuda & the cyzens of Ierusalem shal go here thozow: & this cytie shal euer be the moze & moze inhabited.

There shall come men also from the cyties of Iuda, from aboute Ierusalem and from the lande of Ben Jamin, from the playne feldest, from the mountaynes, and from the wylernes whiche shal bypnyng burnt offrynges, sacrifices oblacpous, and incence, and offe vþ thankesgeuyng in the house of the Lord. But if ye wyll not be obedynte vnto me, to halowe the Sabbath, so that ye wyll beare your burthens tho-rowe the gates of Ierusalem vpon þ Sabboth

Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem and it shall burne vþ the houses of Ierusalem and no man shal be hable to quench the.

The. xviii. Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potters: that it is in his power to destroye the despyers of his worde: and to helpe them a-gayn when they amende. The conspiracy of the Iewes agaynst Jeremy. His prayer agaynst his aduersaries.

Ihs is another communicacyon that God had with Jeremy, sayng: Arise & and go downe into the potters house and there shall I tell the moze of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house. I founde hym makynge his worke vpon a whele. The whele þ the potters made of claye, brake amonge his handes. So he began a new and made another vessel according to his mynd Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: * Waxe not I doo wyth you as this potters doeth, O ye house of Irael, sayeth the Lord: Beholde ye house of Irael, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the potters hande.

* When I take in hande to roote oute, to de-stroye, or to wasse awaye anye people or kyng-domes. * If the people (agaynst whome I haue thus deuiled) conuert from theyr wickednes: I repent of the plage, & I deuylde to bypnyng vpon them. * Agayn, when I take in hande to builde or to plant a people or a kingdom, if þ same people do euell before me, and heare not my voice I repent of that good þ I deuylde to do for them.

Speake now therfore vnto whole Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayeth þ Lord: Behold, I am deuylig a plage for you and am takynge a thpyng in hande agaynst you.

* Therfore, let euery manne turne from his euell waye, take vpon you the thpyng that is good & do right. But they said. Nomore of this
* we wyll folowe our owne ymagynacions, and do eueri man accordyng to the wilfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayeth þ Lord: Aske among the heathen, yf any man haue hearde suche hor-ryble thpynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shal not the snow (that melteth vpon þ stony rockes of Lybanus) moysten the feldest?
Or maye the spynges of waters be so grauen away, that they runne nomore, geue moystnes nor make fruteful? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifices vnto vayne gods. And theyr prophetes make them fall in theyr wayes from the auneynt pathes, and to go into a fote way not vled to be troden of iust men. Where thozowe they haue brought theyr lande into an euerlastyng wylernes and scorne. * So that whosoever traualleth therby shal be abashed, and wag their heades.

With an East wynde wyll I scattre them before theyr enemy. And when their destruccio cometh, I wyll turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then saide they: come let vs yma-gyne some thpyng agaynst this Jeremye: for the preastes shal no be despytute of counsell, nor the prophetes destitute of þ worde of God.
Come and let vs smite hym with þ tongue and with þ hand.

The Prophecie.

let vs marke all hys wordes, consyder me: O Lord, & heare the voyce of myne enemies: Whal they recompence euell for good: for they haue dygged a pyt for my soule. Remembze that I stode before the, to speake good for them and to turne a waye thy wrath from them.

* Therfore, let theyr chyldren dye of hunger and let them be oppressed with the sword. Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr chyldren & become wyddowes: let their husbendes be slayne let theyr yonge men be kyled with the sword in the felde. Let noyle be heard out of theyr houses, wchē I murderer cometh sodenly vpon the.

* For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, and layde snares for my fete. Pet Lord I knowest all theyr counsel, that they haue deuised to slay me. Forgiue not theyr wickednes: and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syghte, but let the be iudged before the as the gyltye. This shalte thou do vnto them in tyme of thy indignacion.

The .xix. Chapter.

The prophecie the destruction of Ierusalem: for the contempte and despising of the worde of God.

Thus sayde the Lord: So thy waye and bye the an earthen pytcher, and bring forth I Senatours & chiefe prestes vnto the valley of the chyldren of hemon, whychel yeth before the dore that is made of bypcke: and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the: and saye thus vnto them. Hear the worde of the Lord ye kynges of Iuda and ye cytezens of Ierusalem.

* Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Irael: Behold, I wyll bypnyng suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnbalowed this place and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther they, theyr fathers, nor the kynges of Iuda haue knowen. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes.

* For they haue set vpan an alter vnto Baal, to burne their chyldren for a buente offerynge vnto Baal, whiche I nether commaunded nor charged the nether thought once there vpon.

Behold therfore the tyme cometh (sayth the Lord) that this place shal nomore be called Copheth, nor the valley of the chyldren of hemon, but the valleie of slaughter. For in this place wyll I slaye the Senatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe w the sword.

In the syght of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues. And theyr dead carcases wyll I geue to be meat for the foules of the ayre, and the bestes of the felde. And I wyll make this cytie so desolate & despyled, * that who soeuer goeth therby, shalbe abashed and iest vpon her because of all her plages.

* I wyll fede them also wyth the fleshe of theyr sonnes and their daughters. Pea, euery one shallete vpon an other, in the bespygnyng and strayntnesse, wherwith theyr enemyes (that seke theyr lyues) shal kepe them in. And the pitcher shalte thou breake in the syght of the men that shalbe wyth the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes.

* Euen so wyll I destroye thys people and cytie, as a man breaketh an earthen vessel that cannot be made whole agayne. In Copheth shal they be buryed, for they shal haue none other place. Thus wyll I do vnto this place also sayeth the Lord: and to them that dwel therein: I wyll do to this cytie as vnto Copheth (for the houses of Ierusalem, and the houses of the kynges of Iuda shalbe despyled, lyke as Copheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlours they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hostes of heauen, and powzed drynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremye came from Copheth, where the Lord had sent hym to prophete and stode in the courte of the Lord, and spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Irael: Behold, I wyll bypnyng vpon this cytie & vpon euerye towne about it: all the plages I haue deuysed against them: * For they haue bene obstynate, & wolde not obey my warnynges.

The .xx. Chapter.

Jeremye is smytten and cast into pyson for preaching of the worde of God. He prophecieth the captiuitie of Babylon. He plaineth that he is a mocking stocke for the worde of God. He is compelled by the sperte to preache the worde.

When Bhashur the preest, the sonne of Emer, chiefe of the house of the Lord heard Jeremy preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremy, and put him in the stocks that are by the byre gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lord.

The nexte daye folowynge Bhashur broughte Jeremye oute of the stocks agayn. Then sayd Jeremy vnto hym: The Lord shal call the nomore Bhashur (his excellent and increasynge) but Magor (his fearful & afraide) euerywhere. For thus saierh the Lord, behold, I wyll make the afraide euen thy ielfe, and all that fauoure the whych shal perper with the sword of theyr enemyes: euen before thy face.

And I wyll geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon, whiche shal carpe some vnto Babylon prysoners, & slaye some w the sword. Moreouer, all the substance of this lande, all theyr precious & gorgeous wythes, all costlynnes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Iuda, wyll I geue into the handes of their enemyes whiche shal spoylle them, and carpe the vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Bhashur) shalte be carped vnto Babylon with all thyne household, & to Babylon shalt thou come, wher thou shalt dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy fauourers to whome thou hast preached lyes.

O Lord: Pf I am disceyued, then haste thou disceued me: thou haste delte strongly, and haste preuayled, and makest me stronge agayn. Al the day long am I dispised & laughed to scoorne of euery manne, because I haue nowe preached longe agaynst the malycious tyrannye and shewed them of destruccion. For the which cause they cast the worde of the Lord in my teth and take me euer to the worst.

Wherfore I thought fro henceforth, not to speake of hym, nor to preache any more in his name.

But the worde of þe Lorde was a very burning fyre in my herte, and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stopped: I might not. For why?

I * hearde so many derisyonys and blasphemys on euery syde of me, complain vpon hym saye they: and we wpll tell his tale: yea, euen of myne owne companions, & suche as were consourant with me, went about to murder me: saynge: vpon hym, we shall one waye or other begyle hym, and pzeuayle against hym: and be aduenged of hym.

But the Lorde stode by me lyke a myghtye graunt, therfore my persecuters fell, and could do nothinge. They shalbe sore confounded, for they haue done vnto wylfully, they shall haue an euellastynge shame: * And now: O Lorde of hostes thou righteous sercher, (whiche knowest þe raynes, and the very hertes) let me se them punished, for vnto the, I comyt my cause.

Þyng vnto the Lorde, and prayse hym: for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed from the hande of the vyolente: * Cursed be the daye wherein I was borne: vnhappy be the daye when in my mother brought me forth. Cursed by the man that brought me my father the tydynges to make hym glad, saynge: þu hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties which þe Lord turned vpside downe. Let hym here cryng in the moynynge, & at none day lamentable howlyng. Why sleepest thou not me as lone as I came out of my mothers wombe? Of my mother had bene my graue her self, that the byrthmyght not haue come out, but remayned still in her. * Wherefore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experyence of labour & sorrowe, and to leade my lyfe with shame?

¶ He propheseth that zedekias shalbe taken, & the cytie burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie * what tyme as kyng zedekias sent vnto hym Dabiahur the sonne of Aelchias, and Sothonias the sonne of Maasias praye saynge: The counsell at the Lorde (we pray þe) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor þe kyng of Babylon belegeth vs, yf the Lorde (peradventure) wyl dreale with vs, according to his maruelous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremie: Geue zedekias thys answer. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel beholde, I wll turne backe the weapons þe haue in your handes, wherwpe fyght agaynst the kyng of Babilon and the Chaldees whiche belege you rounde about the walles: and I wll byng them together in the myddest of this cytie, and I my self wll fyght agaynst you with an outstretched hande and with a myghtye arme, in greate dyspleasure and terribyle wraethe and wll smyte them þu dwell in this cytie: yea, both men & catell shal dye of great pestilence.

* And after this (sayth the Lorde) I shall deliuer zedekias þe kyng of Iuda, & his seruantes his people, and suche as are escaped in the cytie from the pestilence, swearde and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon: yea, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that folowe vpon theyr lyues whiche shall smyte them with the swearde, they shall not ppytie them: they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * behold, I lay befoze you the waye of lyfe and deathe. * Whoso abydeth in this cytie, shall perishe: either with the swearde with hunger, or pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that belegeth it, he shall saue his lyfe, & shall wyne his soule for a praye. * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the kyng of Babylon, & be brent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kyng of Iuda I say thus: Heare þe word of the Lord (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayeth the Lord: * Mine stre ryghteousnesse, and that sone: deliuer the oppressed from vyolent power, & ouer my terryble wraethe breake out lyke a fyre and burne, so that no manne maye quench it, because of the wyckednesse of your pynaginations. * Behold (sayeth the Lorde) I wll come vpon you that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and felde, & say: * Cuth, who wyl make vs afraid? or who wyl come into oure houses? For I wll vylset you (sayeth the Lorde) because of the wyckednes of your inuencionys, & wll kyndle suche a fyre in your wood, as shal consume all þis about you.

¶ The. xxii. Chapter.

¶ He exhorteth the kyngs of Iuda to iudgement and ryghteousnesse: why Ierusalem is brought into captiuitie. The death of Salm the sonne of Josua is prophesied.

Thus saide the Lorde: Go downe into the house of the kyng of Iuda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde, thou kyng of Iuda, that sittest in the kynglye seat of Dauid: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth: * kepe equitye and ryghteousnesse, deliuer the oppressed from þe power of the vyolente: doo not greue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the wydow & shed no innocent blood in this place.

And kepe these thynges fastfully, then shal there come in at the doze of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauids seate: they shalbe carted in charrettes, and ryde vpon horses bothe they and theyr seruantes, and theyr people. But yf ye wll not be obedyente vnto these commaundementes: * I sweare by myne owne selfe (sayeth the Lorde) thys house shalbe waste. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vpon þe kynges house of Iuda. Thou Gilead art vnto me þe head of Lybanus. Shall I not make the so waste (and thy cyties also) þu noman shal dwell therein? I wll prepare a destroyer with hys weapons for the to he we downe thy especyall Cedre trees, & to cast them in the fyre. And all the people þu go by this cite shal speak one to another. * Wherefore hath þe Lord done thus vnto this noble cytie?

Then shal it be answered: because they haue broken the couenaunt of the Lorde they? God, and woꝝshypped & serued straunge goddes.

* Moꝛne not ouer the dead: and be not woꝛe foꝛ them, but be soꝛye foꝛ hym that departeth a way: foꝛ he commeth not agayne, and seeth his natyue countrey no moꝛe. Foꝛ thus sayeth the Lorde: as touchyng * Selu the sonne of Josyas kynge of Iuda: whiche raygned after his father, and is carped oute of this place, he shall neuer come hether agayne, foꝛ he shal dye in the place, wheranto he is led captiue, and shall see this lande no moꝛe. * Woe woꝛth hym ꝑ buyldeth his house with vnryghteousnesse, and his parlours with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenceth his neyghbours labour, noꝛ payeth hym his hyꝛe: he thinketh in hym self, I wyl builde me a wyde house and goꝛgeous parlours. He causeth windowes to be hewen therein, and ꝑ selynges and ioystes maketh he of Cedze, and painteth the with Sinauer: Thynkest thou to raygne nowe, ꝑ thou pꝛouokest me to wꝛath w thꝑ Cedar trees?

D Wyl not thy father eate and dꝛinke, and pꝛoꝛpere well, as long as he delte with equitye, and ryghteousnes? Pee, when he helped the oppressed and pooꝛe to theyꝛ ryghte, then prospered he wel. From whence came this, but only because he had me befoꝛe his eyes, sayeth the Lorde: Reuertheles, as foꝛ thꝑne eyes and thine hert, they loke vpon couetousnes, to shed innocent blood to do wꝛonges & violence. * And therfoꝛe thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Jeoakim, the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda. They shal not mourne foꝛ hym (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster. Nether shall they saue vnto hym. Alas sꝑꝛ, alas foꝛ that noble hyꝛnce. But as an asse shall he be buryed, coꝛrupt, and be cast without the gates of Ierusalem.

E Clyme vꝑ the hyll of Lybanus (O ꝑ doughter Syon) lyfte vꝑ thy voyce vpon Balan, cry from all partes: foꝛ all thy iouers are destroyed. I gaue the warnyng, whyle thou wast yet in prosperitie. But thou saydest: I wyl not heare. And this maner hast thou vled from thy youth that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmen shal be dꝛiuen wꝛith the wynd: and thy derlinges shal be caried a way into captiuite. Then shalt thou be brought to shame & confusyon because of all thy wickednes, thou ꝑ dwellest vpon Lybanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedze trees. * O how lytle shalt thou be regarded when thy soꝛowes & panges do come on the as a woman traueylng wꝛith chyld.

* As truly as I liue (saith the Lorde) Though Conanias the sonne of Jeoakim, kynge of Iuda were the sygnet of my ryght hande, yet wyl I plucke hym of. And I wyl geue the into ꝑ power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the ꝑ power of the that thou fearest, into ꝑ power of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of ꝑ Chaldees. Moꝛeouer, I wyl sende the & thy mother ꝑ bare ꝑ into a straunge lande where ye were not boꝛne, and there shall ye dye. But as foꝛ the lande that ye wyl despyze to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it againe. This man Conanias shal be like an ymage robbed and toꝛne in peces, whiche pleaseth no man foꝛ all his apparell. Wherfoꝛe, both he and his seide shal be sent a way, and caste out into a land that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the woꝛde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: Wꝛite this man amonge the outlawes, foꝛ no prosperitie shall this man haue all his lyfe longe. Nether shall any of hys seide be so happie, as to sꝑꝛ vꝑ the seate of Dauid: & to beare rule in Iuda.

The xxiii. Chapter.

¶ He speaketh agaynst euell ciuities that make haue of the boke of the Lorde. Of the conuersion of the remnant of the iues to the sayth. The comyng of the true shepheard Christ is pꝛoꝛphesied. Agaynst false prophetes when a prophet preacheth the woꝛd of God God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetes that preach lyes vnder the name of God. The miracles of false prophetes.

W De be * vnto the shepherdes, that destroye and scatter my flocke, sayeth the Lorde: Wherfoꝛe, this is the comaundemente of the Lorde God of Israel: vnto the shepherdes that fede my people. Ye scatter and thꝛuste oute my flocke and loke not vpon them. Therfoꝛe nowe wyl I vylet the wyckednes of your ymaginacions, sayeth the Lorde: And wyl I gather together the remnaunte of my flocke frome all landes that I had dꝛyuen them vnto, & wyl I bring them agayne to theyꝛ pastures, that they maye growe and encrease. I wyl set shepherdes also ouer them, whiche shall fede them. They shall no moꝛe feare & dꝛede, oꝛ there shal none of them be losse, sayeth the Lorde.

* Behold the tyme cometh saith the Lorde that I wyl rase vꝑ the righteous brannche of Dauid: whiche kynge shall beare rule, & he shall pꝛospere with wisdom, and shal set vꝑ equitye and ryghteousnes agayn in earthe.

In his tyme shall Iuda be saued, and * Israel shal dwel without feare. And this is ꝑ name that they shal cal hym: * euen ꝑ Lorde our ryghteousnes. * And therfoꝛe beholde, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, ꝑ it shal be no moꝛe sayd the Lorde lyueth, whiche brought the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypt. But ꝑ Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel out of the Northlande and from all countries where I haue scattered them: & they shall dwel in their owne lande againe.

My herte breaketh in my bodꝑe, because of the false prophetes, al my bones shake. I am become lyke a dꝛonken man (that by ꝑ reason of wyne canne take no reste) foꝛ verꝑe feare of the Lorde and his holꝑe woꝛdes: because the lande is full of aduouterers, and thꝑoꝛowe sweetyng, it mourneth, * and the pleasant pastures of the deserte are dꝛyed vꝑ. Pee, the waye ꝑ men take is wycked, and theyꝛ gouernaunce is nothyng lyke the holꝑe woꝛde of the Lorde.

Foꝛ the prophetes & the prestes theim selues are poluted wꝛith pꝛoꝛpꝛetes & their wyckednes haue I founde in my house, saith the Lorde. Wherfoꝛe theyꝛ way shal be slippy in the darkenes wher in wherein they maye flacker and fall. For I wyl brynge a plage vpon them, euen the pere of their vilfayson, sayeth the Lorde. I haue sene folpe amonge the prophetes of Samary, & preached for Baal, and discepued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutre, and presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, flaterynge them: so that they can not returne from theyr wyckednes. All these wyl they crite as vnto me as Sodome, and as the in-habytours of Gomoz.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes concernynge the prophetes. * Behold, I wyl fede them with worme wood, and make them drinke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is ypocresy come into all the lande.

And therefore the Lorde of hostes geueth you this warnynge. * Heare not the wordes of the prophetes that preache vnto you, and discepu you: truely they preache you vanyte, for they speake the meaning of their owne hert, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde.

* They saye vnto them that despise me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prospere right wel. And vnto all them that walke after the luste of theyr owne herte: they saye: Tush there shal no misfortune happen you. For who hath sitten in the counsayl of the Lorde that he hath heard and vnderstande, what he is about to do? Who hath marked his deuyse, and heard it? * Beholde, the storme whether of the Lorde (that is hys indignacyon) shall go forth, and a violent wynde wynde shal fall downe vpon the head of the vngodlye.

And the wrath of the Lorde shal not turne again, vntil he persourme & fulfyll the thought of his herte. * And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I haue not sent these prophetes (sayeth the Lorde) & yet they ranne, & I haue not spoken to them, & yet they preached. But yf they had continued in my counsell, they had opened to my people my wordes, and they had turned my people from theyr euell wayes and wycked ymagynacyons: * Am I then God & sleeth but the thyng whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farre of: sayeth the Lorde. * May any man hide hym selfe so, that I shal not se hym, sayth the Lorde. * Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth, sayth the Lorde I haue heard wel ynough, what the prophetes saye, that preache lies in my name, sayynge: I haue dreamed: I haue dreamed.

Howe longe wyl this contynue in the prophetes herte to tell lies, & to preach the crafty inbelly of theyr owne hert? Whose purpose is (with the dreames & euery one tel) to make my people forget my name, as their forefathers did when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame let him tell it: and he & vnderstandeth my word, let hym shewe it saythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together sayth the Lorde? Is not my word lyke a fyre, sayth the Lorde: and lyke an hammer: & breaketh the hard stone? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl vpon the prophetes that steale my word preuely from euery man: Beholde here am I (sayeth the Lorde) against the prophetes & make tungen tendre to speake and to saye: The Lorde hath sayde it. Beholde here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst those prophetes that dare prophete lyng dreames, and myracles, whome I neuer sente nor commaunded the. They shal do this people greate harme sayeth the Lorde.

Yf this people, either any prophet or preaste aske the, and saye, what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto them: what burthen? Therefore wyl I caste you frome (sayeth the Lorde) because ye pour selues are: * (a burthen) And the prophete, preast, or people that vseth this tearme (the burthen of our Lord) hym wyl I vylet: and his house also.

But this shall ye saye euery one to another, & and euery man to his brother. What answer hath the Lorde geuen? What is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lorde: ye shall speake nomore of it, for euery mannes owne word is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuing God, the Lorde of hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answer hath the Lorde geuen the?
Or what sayth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde. For so muche as ye haue vled thys terme the burthen of the Lorde where as I notwithstandynge sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Behold therefore, I wyl repute you as a burthen, & wil cast you out of my presen: yee, & the citty also & I gaue you a kyng and youre fathers: and wyl brynge you to an euerlastynge confusyon: and into such a shame as shal neuer be forgotte

The visyon of the payners of fygges. The first visyon signifeth that parte of the people shulde be brought agayne from cap-

The Lorde shewed me a visyon. Behold, there stode two maundes of fygafter that * Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon had led awaye captiue Jechonias the sonne of Jeohakym: kyng of Iuda, the mighges, euen lyke as those that be fyfter type. In the other maunde were verpe noughtye fygges whiche might not be eaten, they were so euell.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seest thou Jeremye? I sayde: * fygges whereof some be very good, and some so euell that no man maye eate them.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me & after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde & God of Israel, lyke as I knowest the good fygges, so shal I knowe the men led awaye whom I haue sent out of this place, into the lande of the Chal-

Then tooke I the cuppe from the Lordes hand yf they wyl not receiue the cuppe of thine hand

I wyl leaue you unpunished: Ye shall not go quite, for why? I cal for a fweard vpon al p ¶ Therfore

Therefore, tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: * The Lorde shall crye from aboue and let his voice be heard from his holy habita-cyon. With a great noyse shall he crye from his court regall: he shall geue a greates voyce, (lyke the grapegatherers) & the sounde therof shall be heard vnto the endes of y^e worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and will holde his court of iustyce with all fleshe, & punyssh the vngodly: sayeth the Lorde.

6 For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: * Behold a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another, and a great storme water shall arysse from all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the Lorde hym selfe slaie them, from one end of y^e erth to another. Ther shall no mone be made for any of the, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon y^e grounde.

Mourne (O ye shepherdes) & crye, spynkle your selues with ashes, O ye rāmes of y^e flocke for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slay one another, & ye shall be scatred and ye shall fall lyke vessels newly made.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flye and the rāmes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horryblye, and the rāmes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed they^r pasture, and they^r best felde lyke dead, because of y^e horrible wyath of the Lorde. They haue forsaken they^r foldes lyke as a lyon. For their land is waste, because of his furuous crueltie, and for hys fearfull indignacyon.

C The. xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremye moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the prophetes and preefes: & brought to iudgement. Aziah the prophet is hpylled of Jehochim contrary to the wyll of God.

In the begynnynge of the raygne of Jehokim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came this worde from the Lorde, sayng: Thus saith the Lord * Stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (oute of the cyties of Juda) come, to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, all the wordes y^e commaund the to say. * Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peradventure) they wyl herken, and turne eue-ry man from his wycked waye, * that I maye also repente of the plage whych I haue deter-mynd to byynge vpon them, because of they^r wycked inuencyons.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord: yf ye wyl not obey me to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you: to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophetes whome I sent vnto you, & spynge vpon tyme, and still sendynge: yf ye wyl not folowe them (I saye) then wyl I do to this house as I dyd vnto Sylo, and wyl make this cytye to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preefes, the prophetes, and all the people hearde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Now when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lorde comaunded hym to preache vnto the people: then the preefes, the prophetes, and all the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd vnto Sylo: and this cytye shall be so waste, y^e no man shall dwel therein.

And when all y^e people were gathered about Jeremye, in the house of the Lorde, y^e pynces of Juda heard of this rumour, and they came sone oute of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde, and sat theim downe before the * newe doze of the Lorde. Then spake the preefes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people these wordes: * This man is worthy to dye for he hath preached agaynst this cytye, as ye your selues haue heard with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all y^e people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytye all the wordes that ye haue heard. Therefore amēd your wayes, and your aduysmentes: and be obedyent vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God so shall the Lorde repente of the plage, that he hath deuysed agaynst you. Howe as for me: I am in your handes, do with me as ye thinke expedient and good. But this shall you knowe, yf ye put me to deathe: * ye shall make your selues, this cytye, and all the inhabytoures therof gilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a truth that y^e Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the preefes and prophetes: This man may not be condempned vnto deathe, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lord our God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Micah, the Mozaitehite * whiche was a prophete vnder Ezechiah kyng of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Upon shall be plowed lyke a feld, Jerusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shall be turned to an hye woode. Dyd Ezechiah the kyng of Juda and the people of Juda put hym to deathe for this: No verely: * but rather feare the Lorde, & made they^r praiser vnto hym. For the which cause also y^e Lorde repented of y^e plage, that he had deuysed agaynst theim. Shulde we then do suche a shamefull dede agaynst our soules: There was a prophet also y^e preached truly in the name of the Lorde, called Aziah sonne of Semiah, of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytye, and agaynst this lande accordyng to all as Jeremye sayth. Now when * Jehoakim the kyng with all y^e estates & pynces, had heard his wordes, y^e kyng went about to slay hym. * When Aziah perceyued that, he was afrayed & fled, and departed into Egypte.

Then Jehoakim y^e kyng sent his seruauntes into the lande of Egypte: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achboz: & certayne men with hym into Egypt, which fetched Aziah out of Egypt and brought hym vnto kyng Jehoakim, that slue hym with the sword, and cast his deed bo-dye into y^e comen peoples graue. But Ahicam the

In the begynnynge of the raygne of Jehoahim sonne of Josiah king of Iuda, came this word vnto Jeremi from the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me. Make the bondes & chaynes and put them aboute thy necke, and sende them to the kynge of Edom, to the kynge of Moab, to the kynge of Ammon, to the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto zedechiah the kynge of Iuda, and bydde them say vnto the sayd masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he, & made the earth, the men, and the cattel that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power, and outstretched arme: and haue geue it vnto who it pleased me: * And now wyl I deliuer al these lades into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon: my seruaunt. For they preache you lyg: to bring you farre from your lande, and that I myght caste you out, and destroye you. All these thynges tolde I zedekia the kynge of Iuda, and sayd: * But your neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym and his people, that ye maye lyue. I speake to the prestes also and to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Heare not the wordes of those prophetes that preache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, * the vessels of the Lordes house shall shortly be broughte hyther agayne from Babylon: For they prophce lyg vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon: that ye maye lyue. * Therfore wyl I make this cite to be destroyed: But yf they be true prophetes in verie dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be comytted vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of Hostes that the remnant of the ornamentes (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Iuda, and at Jerusalem) be not carped to Babylon also. For thus hath the Lorde of Hostes spoken, concernynge the pylers, the lauer, the seate: and the resydue of the ornamentes that yet remaine in this cite, which Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon toke not, * when he carped awaye Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoahim kynge of Iuda with all the power of Iuda and Jerusalem vnto Babylon captiue.

Yea, thus hath the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchynge the resydue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Iudaes house, and of Jerusalem: * They shall be carped vnto Babylon, & there they shall remayne vntyl I visyt them, sayth the Lorde. * Then wyl I bringe them hyther agayne. And this was done in the same yere, euen in the begynnynge of the raygne of zedechiah kynge of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ The false prophce of Hananiah: the prophet Jerem. sheweth that the prophce of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other prophetes. He beyng inspired of the Lorde, reprooueth Hananiah, & prophcinge his death.

In the fourth yere of the raygne of zedechiah kynge of Iuda, in the fyfthe moneth it happened that Hananiah the sonne of Ailur the prophete of Gibeon, spake to me in the house of the Lorde in the presence of the prestes and of all the people, & sayde: Thus saith the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, * and after two yere wyl I bringe agayne into this place al the ornamentes of the Lordes house, & Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon carped awaye from this place, vnto Babylon. Yea, I wyl bringe agayne Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoahim the kynge of Iuda hym selfe, with all the pyloners of Iuda (that are carped vnto Babylon) euen into this place, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyl breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the prophet Jerem. gaue answer vnto the prophet Hananiah befoze the prestes, and befoze all the people that were presente in the house of the Lorde. * And the prophete Jerem. sayde: Amen, the Lorde do that, and graunte the thyng which thou hast prophced: that he may bringe agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the pyloners from Babylon into this place. Neuerthelesse,arken thou also what I wyl saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme past, which prophced of war or trouble trouble, or pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nacions and great kyngdomes, were proued by this (yf god had sent them in very dede) whē the thyng came to passe, whych the p̄phete tolde before. And Hananiah the p̄phete toke the chayne from the p̄phete Jeremies necke, & broke it, and with that sayd Hananiah, that al the people mighte heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyl I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilō, from the necke of all nacions: yee, and that within this two yere. And so p̄phete Jeremy went his way After that Hananiah the p̄phete had taken the chayne from the p̄phete Jeremies necke and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the p̄phete Jeremy, saying: Go, and tell Hananiah these wordes. Thus sayth the Lorde.

Thou haste broken the cheyne of wodde: but in steade of wodde thou shalt mak cheynes of yron.
For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I wyl put a yoke of yron vpon y^e neck of al this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon: yee, and so shal they do. And I wyl geue him the beastes in the felde. Then said the p̄phete Jeremie vnto the p̄phete Hananiah: * hear me Hananiah The Lorde hath not sent p̄ but p̄ bringest this people into a false belefe. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde, beholde: I wyl sende the out of the land and within a yere thou shalt die, because p̄ hast falslye spokē against the Lorde. So Hananiah the p̄phete died the same yere in p̄. vii. moneth.

The xxix. Chapter.

The p̄phete of Jeremye sent vnto them that were in cap-tivitye in Babylon. He prophacieth they shal retorne from the captivitye after lxx. yeres. He prophacieth the destruccyon of the kyng and of the people that remaine in Jerusalem.
He threteneth the two p̄phetes that seduce the people. The death of Semeiah the Rehelamite is prophced.

These are p̄ wordes of p̄ booke that Jeremy the p̄phete sente from Jerusalem vnto the prisoners, p̄ senatours p̄restes, p̄phetes, & all the people whom Nabuchodonozor had led fro Jerusalem vnto Babylon: after the tyme that kyng Gehoniah & his quene, his chamberlains the princes of Iuda and Jerusalem, the worche maisters of Jerusalem were departed thither.
Whiche booke Elasah the sonne of Saphan & Gomaryah p̄ sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, who zedekiah the kyng of Iuda sent vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilō, these were the wordes of Jeremies booke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken vnto al the prisoners, that were led from Jerusalem vnto Babilō, * buyld you houses to dwel therein, plant you gardens: that ye may enioye the frutes therof, * take you wy-ues, to beare you sonnes & daughters, prouyd wyues for your sonnes, & husbundes for your daughters that they may get sonnes & doughters and that ye maye multiplie there. Labour not to be serued but seke after peace and prosperi-te of the ctyte wherein ye be prisoners, * and pray vnto the Lorde for it. For in p̄ peace therof shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes p̄ God of Israel, * Let not these p̄ophe-tes and sothslayers that be among you disceane you & beleue not youre owne dremes. For why * they preach you lyes in my name, And I haue not sent them, saith the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: * When ye haue fulfyllid lxx. yeres at Babylon, I wyl byp̄nge you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wil ca-rye you byther agayne into this place. For I knowe what I haue denyed for you sayth the Lorde: My thoughtes are to geue you peace, & not trouble (whyche I geue you already) & that ye myght haue hope agayne. * Ye shal crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, & I will heare you, * Ye shall seke me & fynd me. Yee, yf so be p̄ ye seke with youre whole herte: I wil be found of you saith the Lorde, & I wyl deliuer you out of prison: and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherin I haue scatered you, saith the Lorde, & wyl byp̄nge you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried awaye captiue. But where as ye say, that God hath raied you vpon p̄phetes at Babilō: thus hath the Lorde spoken to the kyng that sitteth in the throne of Dauid, & to all the people that dwell in this ctyte, your brethzen * that are not gone wyth you into captiuite: Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hostes beholde, * I wyl sende a swerde: hunger, & pestilence vpon them and wil make them like vntymely figges, that maye not be eaten for bitterness. And I wil persecute them wth swerd, with hunger, & pestilence.

I wil deliuer them vp to be vexed of al kyng domes to be cursed, abhored, laughed to scozne and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whome I haue scatered them: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my comaun-dementes: saith the Lorde whyche I sent vnto them by my seruantes the p̄phetes. * I stode vpon earthe, and sente vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayth the Lorde. Heare therefore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prisoners, whome I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babylon. Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ahab the sonne of Colaiab, and of zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, which prophacie lyeth vnto you in my name. Beholde I wyl deliuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before your eyes. And all the prisoners of Iuda, that are in Babylon, shall take by this terme of cursynge and laye. Nowe God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto zedekiah and Ahab, whome the kyng of Ba-bilon rosted in p̄ fyre, because they sinned ham-fully in Israel. For they haue not only despyled theyr neyghbours wyues, but also preached lying wordes in my name, whyche I haue not commaunded them.

This I testifie: and assure, saith the Lorde But as for Semeiah p̄ Rehelamite, thou shalt speake vnto him. Thus saith the Lorde of hostes p̄ God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto al the people that ar at Jerusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the p̄est: yee, and sente them to al the Preastes: wherein thou writest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeyned the to be a preast in stead of * Jehoiada a preast that thou shouldest be the chefe in the house of the Lord, aboue all prophetes and preachers, and that thou myghtest set them vpon the pyllyr, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou haste not reposed Jeremy of Anathoth, whych neuer leaueth of his prophesying? And besydes all this, he hath sent vs worde * vnto Babilon, & tolde vs playnely: that oure captiuitie shal long endure: that we shulde buyde vs houses to dwell therein: and to plante vs gardens, that we may enioye the frutes therof. Which letter Sophtanah the prest rede, & let Jeremye the prophete heare it. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy sayng: sende word to all them that be in captiuite: on this maner: Thus hath the Lord spoken concernyng Semiah the Nethe- lamite * because that Semiah hath prophesied vnto you without my comission & broughte you into a false hope, therfore thus saith the Lord doth certifie you: Behold, I wyl viset Semiah the Nethe lamite, & his seed: so that none of his shal remaine amonge this people, and none of them shal see the good that I wil do for this people, saith the Lord. For he hath preached falsely of the Lord

Hese are the wordes, that the Lord sheweth vnto Jeremy sayng. Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently al the wordes that I haue spoke vnto the, in a booke For loo, the time cometh, saith the Lord that I wyl byng agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel, and Iuda, sayth the Lord. For I wil restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shal haue it in possession Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord, concernyng Israel and Iuda: Thus sayth the Lord We haue hearde a terrible cry, feare and disquietnes, For what elles doth this sygnifye, that Ise? Namely that all stronge men smyt, euerye man his hand vpon his loines * as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer saw a man trauaile with chylde: Enquyre there after, and se. Per, all they faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dredeful that none maye be lykened vnto it, and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, for the whych he shal yet be deliuered. For in the daye sayth the Lord of hostes I wyl take his pocke fro of thy neke and breake thy bondes: And straungers shal no more serue hym, but they shal do seruyce vnto God they? Lord, and * to Dauid they? kynge, whome I wyl caple vp vnto the. * And as for the, O my seruauant Jacob, feare not sayth the Lord, and be not afrayed, O Israel. For loo, I wyl helpe the also from sacre, and they sede fro the lande of they? captiuitie. And Jacob shal turne agayne, he shal be in reste, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shal make him afrayd

For I am with the to helpe the saith the Lord. * And though I shall destroye all the people among whom I haue scatered the, yet wil I not destroye the, but correct the, * & that with discreacion: For I know that thou arte in no wise * without faute. Therfore thus saith the Lord Thy bysnynges are parlous: and thy woundes redy to cast the into sickness. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to laye plaster vpon or to bynde vp the wounded there maye no man helpe the. All thy louers haue forgotten the, & care nothyng for the. For I haue geuen a cruel stroke, and chastened the roughly: & that for the multitude of thy misdeades: for thy synnes haue had the ouerhand. Why makest thou mane for thyne harme? in dede, thou art sore wounded and in seoparde, but for the multitude of thy mysdoes & synnes: I haue done this vnto the

* And therfore all they that deuour the, shal be deuoured, and al thine enemies shal be led in to captiuite. All they that make the wast, shal be wasted them selues, and al those that rob the wyl I make also to be robbed. For I wyl geue the thy helth agayne & make thy woundes whole saith the Lord, because they reuiled the, as one cast away & dispised. Sio (said they) is the whō no man regardeth. For thus saith the Lord. Beholde: * I wyl bynge agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs tetes & defende his dwelling place. The citie shal be builded in her olde estate, & the houses shal haue their right foundaciō. And out of them shal go thankeguyng: & the voyce of ioye.

I wyl multiplie them, and they shal not be fewe: I shall endue them with honoure, and no man shal subdue them. They? children shal be as afore time, and they? congregaciō shal continue in my syght. And al those that were them wil I viset * A captaine also shal come of them and a prince shal spryng out from the middest of them, him wyl I challenge to my selfe and he shal come vnto me * For what is he that gyueth ouer his herte to come vnto me sayth the Lord. * Ye shal be my people also, and I wyl be your God. Beholde: on the other syde shal I wathe of the Lord breake out as a flood my water as a myghtye whylle wynde, and shal fall vpon the heades of the vngodlye.

The terryble dyspleasure of the Lord shal not leaue of, vntyl he haue done, & perfourmed the intente of his hert, * which in the latter dayes ye shal vnderstande: At the same tyme sayeth the Lord, shal I be the God of al generations of Israel, and they shal be my people.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

The propheseth that the people of Israel shal be restored agayne vnto the prosperite. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The birch of Christ is prophesied. All the wicked shal dye in their wickednes. The newe Testament & covenante is prophesied. The Chrestyan are taught & instructed of the Lord. Oure synnes shal be so remitted, that they shal not once be thought on God promyseth that he wil cast of the Jewes. The bysnyng agayne of Jerusalem.

Thus sayth the Lord * the people of Israel, whych escaped in the wyldernes fro the swearde, founde grace to come into they? rest. Euen so shal the Lord nowe al so appere vnto me from sacre and save, I loue

* I loue the wyth an everlastynge loue, therfore by my mercye I haue drawen the to me. I wyll repayre the agayne, O thou doughter of Israel that thou mayest be faste and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrets agayne, and go forth wyth the that leade the daunce. Thou shalt plant vynges agayn vpon the hylls of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plant, and commenlye eate of it.

For the dayes shall come when the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, a-crye, * let vs go vpon the mount to our Lord God for thus sayth the Lord: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentyles: speake out, synge and saye: O Lord saue thy people, the remnaunte of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I wyll bypunge them a-gayne from oute of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the world, with þe blynde and lame that are amonge them, wyth the we-men that be greates wyth chylde, and suche as be also deluynered: and the companie of them that come agayne, shall be greates.

They shall come weppynge and wyth mercyfull pte wyll I bypunge them byther agayne, I wyll lead the to þe ryuers of water in a straght waye, where they shall not stumble. * For I am Israel's father, & Ephraim is my fyrst borne.

Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye Gentyles, preache in the ples, that I ye farre of, and saye he that scatered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, and shall kepe hym, as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and cryd hym from the hande of the vpolent, and they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyl of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes which þe Lord shall geue them. Namely: wheat vayne: oyle, ponge shepe and calues. And they conscience shall be as a welwatered garden, for they shall nomore be hungry.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce ye, bothe ponge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne they? sorowe into gladnesse, and wyl com-forte them from they? sorowes: and make them ioyfull. I wyl powze plenteousnesse vpon þe her-tes of the prestes, and my people shall be satisfy-ed with my goodnesse sayth the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * the voyce of heuy-nesse, weppynge and lamentacyon was herde on the euen of Rachel mournynge for her children & wold not be comforted, because they were away.

But now sayth the Lord, leaue of from we-ppynge and cryenge, wythholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayth þe Lord. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of they? enemyes: yee, euen thy posteritie shall haue consolacyon in this, sayth the Lord, that thy chylde shall come agayne into they? owne lande. Moreouer, I heard Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne on this maner. * O Lord, thou hast correct me and thy chastynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe.
* Conuerter thou me, and I shall be conuerted: for thou art my Lord God: yee, as sone as thou tur-nest me, I shall reforme my selfe, and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thigh. For verely I haue comytted shameful thynges. For I haue borne þe reproche & confusyon of my yowth.

Vpon this complayne, I thoughte thus by my selfe, * is not Ephraim my dere sonne? Is he not the chylde, wyth whome I haue had all my myght and pastyme? For sens the tyme that I fyrste comened with hym, I haue him euer in re-membraunce: therfore, my verpe herte dyspueth me vnto hym, gladly and lounyngly wyl I haue mercye vpon him sayth the Lord: Set þe watchmen, proude teachers for the: set thine hert vpon the ryght waye, that thou shouldest walke, and turne agayne, O thou doughter of Israel, turne agayne to the cyties of thyne. Howe longe wylt thou go astraye, O thou synnyng doughter?
For the Lord wyl worke a newe thyng vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. It wyl come therto, that whē I haue brought Iuda out of captiuyte, these wordes shall be hearde in the lande and in his cyties. The Lord which is the sayre * bydegrome, or rygh-teousnesse, make the frutefull, O thou holy hyl.
And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cyties, þe shepherdes, and husbandmen. For I * shall fede the hungry soule, and refreche all faynt hertes.
When I herd this, I came agayne to my selfe. I mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete sleepe. Beholde, sayth the Lord, the dayes come that I wyl sowe the house of Israel, & the house of Iuda, with men and with catell.

* Yee, it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them oute, to scater them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chaste them: Euen so wyl I also go dyligently aboute, to buyde them vpon agayne, & to plante them, sayth the Lord. * Then shall it nomore be sayd: the fathers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the chyldezens teth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for his owne misdeed: so that who so eateth a sowre grape, his teth shall be set on edge. * Behold, the dayes come, sayth þe Lord that I wyl make a newe couenaunt with þe house of Israel, and wyth the house of Iuda, not after the couenaunt that I made with they? fathers, when I toke them by the hand and led them out of the lande of Egypte: whych couenaunt they broke: yee, euen when I as an husbunde had rule ouer them, sayth the Lord. * But this shall be the couenaunt that I wyl make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayth the Lord. * I wyl plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in they? hertes, * and wyl be they? God, and they shall be my people.

And from thence forth, shall no man teache his neyghboure or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lord. But they shall al knowe me from the lowest vnto the hyest, sayth the Lord. For I wyl forgeue they? mysdedes, and wyl neuer remembere they? synnes any more. Thus sayeth the Lord, whiche gaue the * sunne to be a lyght for the day, and the mone and starres to shyne in the nyght: which moueth the see, so that the floudes therof waxe farse: his name is the Lord of take out of my spght, sayth the Lorde. So shall the side of Israel neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

E Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, and as þe foundacions of the earth beneth maye not be sought oute. * So wyll I also not caste oute the whole side of Israel, for that they haue comytted: sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lorde: that the cytie of the Lorde shalbe enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner walle. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Gareb, and shall come aboute Gaath and the whole valley of the deade carkasses, and of the ashes, and al the felde vnto the broke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the horsgate toward the East, where as the sanctuarie of the Lorde also shalbe set. And when it is now buylded, and set vp of thys fashyon, it shal neuer be broken nor cast downe any moze.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Jeremye is cast into pylson, because he prophesied that þe cytie shulde be taken of the kynges of Bablon. By the felde that Jeremye bought at the commandement of the Lorde, is signified, that the people shulde come agayne to thys owne possession. The people of God are hys seruantes, and he is thys Lorde. To feare God is Goddes gyfte, to the intent that synners may be eschewed.

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremye, in þe tenth yere of zedekiah kyng of Iuda: whyche was the eyghten yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hooste layde spege vnto Ierusalem: But Jeremye the Prophet laye bounde in the courte of the pylson, which was in the kyng of Judas house: where zedekiah the kyng of Iuda caused hym to be layde, because he had prophesied of thys maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: * Beholde, I wyll deliuer thys cytie into the handes of the kyng of Bablon, whiche shall take it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Bablon which shal speake with him mouth to mouth and one of them shall loke another in the face. And zedekiah shalbe carped vnto Bablon, & there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vylt him, sayth þe Lorde. But yf thou takest in hande to fyghte agaynst the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremye sayd: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me. Beholde, Hananeel, the sonne of Selum thyn vnckles sonne, shall come vnto the and requyre the to redeme the lande that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of kynred it is thy ryght to redeme it, and bye it out.

And Hananeel, myne vnckles sonne came to me in the courte of the pylson, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande, I praye the: that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Ben Iamin: for by heritage þe haste ryght to lose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued that this was the comaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, mine vnckles sonne and wayed hym there the money: euen seven sy-cles, and ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make a wytyng, and to seale it: and called recozde therby, and weped hym there the money vpon the weyghtes. So I toke the eydence with the coppe when it was orderly sealed & red it ouer, and I gaue the eydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah in þe spght of Hananeel, my cosyn and in the ptesence of the wytnesses, that benamed in the eydence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the pylson.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying. The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this sealed eydence with the coppe: and to laye it in an erthen vessel, that it may longe contynue. For the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined that houses felde, and vyneyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande. Now when I had deliuered the eydence vnto Baruch þe sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lorde, saying: O Lorde God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hye arme, and there is nothing hyd fro the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thou- sandes, thou recompenseth the wyckednes of the fathers, into þe bosome of the chyldren that come after them. Thou art the great & myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: great in counsell, and excellent in worke. Thyn eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to rewarde euery one after his waye: and accordyng to the frutes of his inuencions.

Thou hast done great tokens and wonders * in the lande of Egypt, as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel, & vpon those men, to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders with a myghty hand, with a stretched out arme and with greates terryblenesse: and hast gyuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promised vnto theyr fathers. Namely, that thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye. * Now when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, & walked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done, & therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwokes made nowe agaynst the cyty to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Chaldees that besyge it with swerde, with hunger, & death: and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, al thynges are present vnto the. Pet (sayst thou vnto me O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, & take wytnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lorde God of all flesh is there any thyng then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: * Behold, I shall deliuer this cytie into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor, the kyng kyng of Babylon, they shall take it.

For the Chaldees shall come and wyne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlors they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred dꝑnke offeringes vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seynge the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Iuda haue wrought wyckednes befoze me euer from theyr yowth vpon what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of theyr owne handes, sayth the Lord.

O what hath this cytye ben els but a prouoking of my wrath, euer sence the day that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherein I cast it out of my syght, bycause of the great blasphemys of the chyldren of Israel and Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, their kynges, theyr prynces, theyr preastes, theyr prophetes, the men of Iuda, & the cytezens of Ierusalem.

* When I stode vpearly, and taught them & instructed them, they turned their backs to me and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed & correct, & but set theyr ydols in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to despyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to voue theyr sonnes & doughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer comaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought to make Iuda synne with such abhominacyon. And now therfoze, thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which (as ye your selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the hande of the kyng of Babylon when it is wonne with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence. * Beholde, I will gather them togyther from all landes, wherein I haue scatted them in my wrath in my fearfull & great displeasure, & I will bring them agayn vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, & I will be theyr God.

* And I will gyue them one hert & one way, that they may feare me al the dayes of their life that they & theyr chyldren after them may prosper. * And I will set vpon an euerlastyng covenant with them. Namely, that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their hartes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me. * Yee, I will haue a lust, and pleasure to do them good, & saythfully to plant them in this lande with my whole herte, & with all my soule. For thus sayth the Lord: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so will I also bring vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande: whereof ye saye now, that it shall neuer be inhabited of the people, nor of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shall be bought for money, and euidences made therevpon, & sealed befoze wytnesses in the countrey of Ben Iamin, and rounde about Ierusalem, in the cyties of Iuda, in y cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, & in theyr that lye beneth: yee, and in y cyties that are in y south. For I will bring theyr prisoners hyther agayne, sayth the Lord.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The prophete is moued of the Lord to praye for the deliuerance of the people, whiche the Lord promysed: God for geth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the birth of Christe. The kyngdome of Christe in church shall neuer be ended.

Mouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye on this maner, * when he was yet bounde in the Courte of the prysen. Thus sayeth the Lord, whych fulfilleth the thyng that he speaketh: the Lord whiche perfourmeth the thyng that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lord. * crye vnto me and I will answere, and shew y greute and hye thynges, whych were vnknotone vnto the. Thus (I saye) spake the Lord God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this cytye and the houses of the kyng of Iuda, & they are broke thowowe the ordynauce & the swerde: Because the inhabytters of this cytye are come to syghte agaynst y Chaldees, and they are fylled with the deade karkases of men whome I haue slayne in my wrath and dyspleasure: when I turned my face from this cytye, because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde sayth the Lord, I will repayre and heale theyr woundes, and make them whole I will open them the large treasure of peace and truth. And will returne the captiuite of Iuda and Israel: and will set them vpon agayn as they were afore. * From all misdedes, wherein they haue offended agaynst me, I will clense them.

And all theyr blasphemys whych they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I will forgene them. And this shall get me a name a prayse, and honour amonge all the people of y earth, whiche shall heare all the good that I will shewe vnto them: yee, they shall be as a fardye: and ascribed at all the good dedes and benefytes y I will do for them. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: * In this place where of ye saye that it shall be a wyldernes, wherein nether people nor catell shall dwell: in lyke maner in the cyties of Iuda and wythoute Ierusalem (whych also shall be so voyde, that neyther people nor catell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladnesse be heard agayne, the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, & voyce of them that shall syng: * Praise the Lord of hostes, for he is longynge: and his mercye endureth for ever, and the voyce of them that shall offer vpon gistes in the house of y Lord. For I will restore the captiuite of this land, as it was afore: sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, It shall come yet therto, that in this lande, which is voyde from men and catell and in all the cyties of the lande, there shall be set vpon shepheardes cotages: in the cyties vpon the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the south.

In the lande of Ben Iamin, in the felde of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hande of hym, that telleth them, sayth the Lord: * Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lord: that I will perfourme that good thyng, whiche I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel, and to the house of Iuda.

The Prophecye

In those dayes and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, the braunche, of ryghteousnesse, and he shall do equytie and ryghteousnesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Iuda be helped, and Ierusalem shall dwel safe, and he that shall call her, is euen God our ryghteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promyseth * Dauid shall neuer want one to syt vpon the throne of his house of Israel: * neyther shall the prestes and Leuytes want one to offer alwaye before me burnt-offerings, to kindle the meate-offerings, and to prepare the sacryfices.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie after this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde: Make the couenaunt which I haue made with daye and nyght be broken, that there shulde not be day and nyght in due season: Then make my couenaunt also be broken, whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunt, & so he not to haue a sonne to raygne in his throne, & so shall also the prestes and Leuytes neuer faile, but serue me. * For lyke as the starres of heauen may not be nombred neyther the sande of the see measured: so will I multiplye the sede of Dauid my seruante, and the Leuytes, my mynisters.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, sayinge: Consydereste thou no what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (say they) hath the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue despyed my people, and they reputed them as though they were no people. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: Of I haue made no couenaunt with daye and nyght, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: the will I also caste awaye the sede of Iacob & Dauid my seruaunt, so that I will take no pynce out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abraham Isaac and Iacob. But yet I will turne agayne theyr captiuitie, and be mercifull vnto them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The thirtieth that the cytie, & the kyng zedekiah also shall be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Babylon. He rebuketh them that broughte suche of theyr brethren into captiuitie, as were parsoned to go at theyr libertie.

These are the wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie * what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon & all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people foughte agaynst Ierusalem, and all the cyties ther of. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Go, and speake to zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, and tell hym: The Lord sendeth this word vnto thee. Beholde, * I will deliuer this cytie into his hand of the kyng of Babylon: he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, and deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babylon in the face and he shall speake with the mouth to mouth: & then shalt thou goo to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah, kyng of Iuda: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto thee. Thou shalt not be slayne with the swerde, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenytours were hent: so shalt thou be hent also, & in thy mournyng they shall say: Oh Lord

For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde.

Then sayd Jeremie the prophete all these wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kyng of Babilons host besieged Ierusalem, & the remnant of the cyties: Namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remained of the * stronge fenced cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all his people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed * a libertie, so that every man shulde let his seruaunt & handmayde go fre: Hebrue, and Hebruelle, and no Iewe holde his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto this agreement, & every man shulde let at libertie his bonde seruaunt, & bond woman, & no longer to holde them bonde, euen so they were obedyent, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruantes and handmaydens, whom they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie from the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel. * I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypt, (that they shulde nomore be bondmen) saying: When sent peres are out, every man shall let his bought seruaunt an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym seue peres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned, and dyd ryght before me in that ye proclaimed, every man to let his neyghbour go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in my temple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, & blasphemed my name. In this, & every man hath requyred his seruaunt and handmayden agayne, whom ye haue let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, & to be your bondmen, and bondwomen. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, every man to proclaim freedom vnto his brother and neyghbour: wherefore I will call you vnto a fredome, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the swerde, to the pestilence & to hunger, and will make you to be plagued in all the kingdomes of the earth. See, those men that haue broken my couenaunt, & not kept the wordes of the appoyntment which they made before me, when they bewed a calfe in two, & when there went thowow the two halves therof: the princes of Iuda, the princes of Ierusalem, the gelded men, the prestes, and all the people of the lande, whiche went thowowe the two sydes of the calfe. Those men will I geue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that followe vpon theyr lyues.

* And theyr dead bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda and his princes, I will deliuer them into the power of theyr enemyes, and of them that deliue to slay them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babilons host, which * now is departed from you: But thowowe my commaundement (sayth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cypre, they shall fyght agaynst it: wyne it, and burne it: Moreover, I wyll lape the cypres of Iuda so wastle, that no man shall dwell therein.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabites, & ther by confoundeth the pyde of the Iwes. The commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threatneth punishment vnto the rebellious Iewes. He promyseth prosperite into the Rechabites, for thei obedience.

In the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, in the raygne of Jehoahim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda are these: Go vnto the house of the Rechabites, & call them out, and bynge them to the house of the Lorde into some commodious place, & gyue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniab, the sonne of Jeremye the sonne of habazimiah, & his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole householde of the Rechabites: and brought them into the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the chyliden of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God, whiche was by the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whiche is the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cuppes, and sayd vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaunded vs, saying: Pee and your sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, * buylde no houses, sowe no seede: plant no vynges, pee: ye shall haue no vyngardes but for all your tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye may lye long in the lande wherin ye be strangers. Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all ye hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we nor our wyues our sonnes & our doughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs neyther vyngardes, nor corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordyng vnto all ye Ionadab our father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon came vnto the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we may escape the host of the Chaldees and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Iuda and the inhabitants of Ierusalem: Wyl ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayth the Lorde? The wordes whiche Ionadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shuld drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey theyr fathers commaundement. But as for me, I haue stande vnto early, I haue spoken vnto you, & gyue you earnest warnyng: and yet haue ye not ben obedient vnto me. Pee, I haue sent my seruantes all ye prophetes vnto you, I rose vnto early, & sent you word, saying: Turne you now every man from his wycked way: amende your lynes, and go not after straunge goddes to worshipp them:

that ye may contynue in the lande wyche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, nor folowe me.

The chyliden of Ionadab Rechabs sonne, haue steadfastly kepte theyr fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll bynge vpon Iuda, and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuyled agaynst them. * For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuerthelesse, they wolde geue me no answer: Jeremye spake also to the householde of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab your father, and kepte all his preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all ye he hath bydden you: Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stande alwaye before me.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wryteth, as Jeremye endycteth the boke of the curses agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent wryth the boke, vnto the people and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers and readeth it before them also. The rulers shew vnto the kyng the wordes of the boke. Jerubai taketh the boke and readeth a litle of it, and casteth it in the fyre. There is another wryte at the commaundement of the Lorde.

In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah the kyng of Iuda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge. * Take a boke, and wryte therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to ye agaynst Israel, agaynst Iuda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, whych I haue deuyled for them they maye peradventure, turne every man from his wycked waye: that I maye forgeue theyr offences and synnes. Then dyd Jeremye cal Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * and Baruch wryte in the boke at the mouth of Jeremye all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had spoken vnto hym.

And Jeremye commaunded Baruch saying: I am in pryson, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therefore go thou thyther and reade the boke that I haue wrytten at my mouth. Namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade the in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng day, & the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come oute of the cypres may heare. Peradventure, they wyl pray mykely before the face of the Lorde, & turne every one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrath and dyspleasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd accordyng vnto all that Jeremye the prophet commaunded him, readinge the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfte yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, in the ix. moneth, when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shulde faste before the Lorde & they also were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

II iii. Chrit

The Prophecie

C Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremie oute of the booke wythin the house of the Lord: oute of the tresury of Samariah þ sonne of Saphan the scribe, whiche is besyde the hyer losse of the * newe doze of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Micah þ sonne of Samariah, the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of the Lord oute of þ booke he wente downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chambers, for ther all the princes were set. Elisama the Scribe, Dalaiab the sonne of Semet, Elnathan the sonne of Achboz, Samariah the sonne of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, wyth all the princes. And Micah tolde them all the wordes þ he hearde Baruch reade oute of the booke before the people.

D Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thynne hande the booke, where oute thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah, toke the booke in hys hande, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto hym: Sytte downe and reade the booke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare. Nowe when they had hearde al the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certyfy the kyng of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs howe ydeste thou wytte all these wordes out of hys mouth. Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me w hys mouth, and I wrote them in the booke.

E Then sayde the princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, hyde the with Jeremie, so that noman knowe where ye be: And they went into þ kyng to the courte. But they kepte the booke in the chambze of Elisama the Scribe, and tolde the kyng all the wordes, that he myght heare. So þ kyng sent Jehudi to fet hym the booke whiche he broughte out of Elisama the scribes chambze. And Jehudi red in it that the kyng and all the princes whiche were aboute hym myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ix. moneth, and ther was a fyze before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leues thereof, he cut the booke in peces w a penknife and cast it into the fyze vpon the hARTH vntill þ booke was all bzent in the fyze vpon the hARTH.

F Yet noman was abashed thereof, or rente hys clothes: neyther the kyng hym selfe, nor his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse, Elnathan, Dalaiab, and Samariah besoughte the kyng that he wolde not burne the booke: not withstandyng the kyng wold not heare the, but commaunded Jerahmael the sonne of Amelech: Baraiab the sonne of Ezrell, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe, & vpon Jeremie the prophet: but þ Lord kepte them out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had bzent the booke and þ sermons which Baruch wrote at þ mouth of Jeremie. The worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take an other booke and wytte in it all the fore sayde sermons, that were wyrtten in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda hath bzent.

And tell Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda: thus sayth the Lord: thou hast bzent the booke, and thoughtest wythin thy selfe: Why hast þ wyrtten therein, that þ kyng of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste: so þ he shall make bothe people and catell to be out of it. Therefore thus the Lord sayth of Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda. * There shall none of his generacyon sit vpon þ throne of Dauid. His dead corse shall be cast out, that the heate of the daye, & the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I wyll visyte the wyckednes of hym, of his sede, & of his seruantes. Moreouer, all the euyl that I haue promysed them (though they hearde me not) wyll I bypnyng vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Ierusalem, & vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremie another booke, & gaue it Baruch þ scribe the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremie, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

zedekiah succeeded cononia. He seneth vnto Jeremie to praye for hym. Jeremie goynge into the lande of Beniamin is taken. He is beaten and put in prysen. He is deliuered by kyng zedekiah.

B Edekiah the sonne of Josiah * whiche I was made kyng thowowe Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the lande of Iuda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoahym. But neyther he nor his seruantes, nor the people in the lande wolde obey the wordes of the Lord, whiche he spake by the prophete Jeremie. * Neuerthelesse, zedekiah þ kyng sent Jehucal the sonne of Sele-miah, & Sophoniah þ sonne of Maasiah þ meet to the prophete Jeremie, sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Jeremie walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prysen as yet. * Pharaos host also was come out of Egypt: whiche when the Chaldees that besyged Ierusalem perceyued, they departed from thence. Then came þ worde of the Lord vnto the prophet Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayth þ Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye gyue to the kyng of Iuda that sent you vnto me for counsaile. * Behold, Pharaos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayn and fyght agaynst this cytye, wyne it, & set fyze vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: disceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: Cusch, þ Chaldees gonow they waye fro vs. No, they shall not go they waye. For though ye had slayne the whole host of the Chaldees that besyge you, and runn one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shoulde they stande vp and set fyze vpon this cytye.

Nowe when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken by from Ierusalem, for feare of þ Egyp-cians armye: Jeremie went out of Ierusalem, towarde the lande of Beniamin, to gette hym from amonge the people.

And

And when he came vnder Beniamyns porte there was a porter, called Jerpab, the sonne of Selemiab the sonne of * Hananiah, whiche fell vpon hym, and toke hym, sayinge: thy mynde is to come to the Chaldees. Then sayde Jeremye: It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. Neuertheles, Jerpab wolde not beleue hym: but brought Jeremye bound before the prynces. Wherefore the prynces were angry wth Jeremye, & smote hym and layde hym in pylson in the house of Jonathan the scribe. For he was the ruler of the pylson. Thus was Jeremye put into the dongron & pylson, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Chanachab the kynge sent for hym, and called him and asked hym quyetly in hys owne house, sayinge: thynkest thou this busynesse (that nowe is in hande) cometh of the Lorde? Jeremye answered, yea, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Whereouer Jeremye sayde vnto kynge zedekiah: What haue I offended against the, against thy seruantes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue put me in pylson? * Where ar your prophets which haue prophced vnto you, and sayd: that the kynge of Babylon shulde not come agaynst you and this lande? And therfore heare nowe O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me no more into the house of Jonathan the scribe, & I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kynge commaunded to put Jeremye in the fore entre of the pylson, and dayly to be geuen hym a kake of breade oute of the bakers treate vntyll all the breade in the ctyte was eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entre in the pylson.

By the mocyon of rulers Jeremye is put into a dongron. At the request of Abemelech the chamberlaine: the kynge commaunded Jeremye to be brought forth of the dongron. Jeremye sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

Sachabab the sonne of Nathan, Godoliah the sonne of Shaphan, Iucal & sonne of Semeliah, and Shaphan the sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremye had spoken vnto all the people: namelye in this maner. Thus sayeth the Lorde. * Who so remayneth in this ctyte, shall perishe, eether wth the swerde, wth hunger or wth pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Chaldees, shall escape, mynnyng hys soule for a praye, and shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: This ctyte (no doubte) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he shall wyne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kynge: Why we beleue you let this man be put to death, for thus he belozageth the handes of the louders that be in this ctyte, and the handes of all the people w^{ch} he speaketh such wordes vnto them. This man breueth labourer not for peace of the people but myschefe. zedekiah the kynge answered & sayde: loo, he is in youre handes; for the kynge maye denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremye, and cast hym into the dongron of Melchiah the sonne of Amelch that dwelte in the fore entre of the pylson. And they let downe Jeremye wth coardest into the dongron, where there was no water but myze. So Jeremye stakke fast in the myze. Nowe when Abemelech & Mozyan, being a chamberlaine in the kynges court, vnderstod that they had cast Jeremye into the dongron, he wente oute of the kynges house and spake to the kynge, (whych then sat vnder the porte of Beniamyn) these wordes: my Lorde the kyng, where as these men medie wth Jeremye the prophete, & they do hym wronge. Namely in that they haue put him in pylson, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more breade in the ctyte. Then the kynge commaunded Abemelech the Mozyan and sayd: Take from hence xxx. men whom thou wylte, & drawe vp Jeremye the prophete out of the dongron before he dye. So Abemelech tooke the men wth hym, and went to the house of the kynge: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges and woone cloutes, and let them down by a coarde into the dongron to Jeremye.

And Abemelech the Mozyan sayde vnto the prophete Jeremye: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyn arme holes, betwyte them and the coardest: and Jeremye dyd so. So they drew vp Jeremye wth coardest, and toke hym out of the dongron, and he remayned in the fore entre of the pylson. Then zedekiah the kynge sent, and caused Jeremye the prophete to be called vnto hym, into the chydre entre that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremye: I wyl aske the somwhat, but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremye answered zedekiah: If I be plagued vnto the, thou wylte cause me to suffre death: If I gyue the counsayl, thou wylte not folowe me. So the kynge swore an oth secretly vnto Jeremye, sayinge: As trulpe as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto zedekiah: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * If case be, that thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this ctyte shall not be brent: yea, bothe thou and thy household shall escape wth youre lyues. But if thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons prynces, then shall this ctyte be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremye: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremye answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) which I speake vnto the so shalt thou be wel and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me this playnly. Beholde, all the women that are left in the kyng of Judahs house, shall be led forth out to the kynge of Babylons prynces. And they shall saye, that thou art disceyued: and the men in whome thou dydest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, and let thy feet fast in the myze, and gone theyr way from the. Therefore all thy wyues w^{ch} thou chylde shall they lede forth vnto the Chaldees and thou shalt not escape they: hādes, but shalt be the kynge of Babylons prysoner: and thys cypre shalt thou cause to be bzent. Then sayd zedekyah vnto Jerempe: loke that nobody knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue that I haue talked wth y and comme vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the: hyde it not from vs, and we wyl not put the to death. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kynge to y: Se thou geue the thys answer: I haue humbly besought the king that he wyl let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not ther. Then came al the prynces vnto Jerempe, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge hadde hym. Then they helde they: peace and let hym alone: for they perceaued nothyng. So Jerempe abode still in the foorze entyre of the pryslon, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

Jer. xxxix.

The xxxix. Chapter

Abuchodonozor the king of Babel took Jerusalem, and zedekyah king of Judah was taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne, his eyes are thrust out, Jerempe is prouided for. Abimelech is deliuered fro captiuite, because of the confidence that he had in God.

Jer. xxxix. a
iii. re. xxv. b

Mowe when the cypre of Jerusalem was taken (for in the ix. year of zedekyah kynge of Iuda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon and all his host, and beleged Jerusalem, and fought agaynst it, And in the xi. year of zedekyah in the iiii. moneth, the ix. daye of the moneth, he brake into the cypre) Then all the prynces of the kynge of Babylon came in, and latte them downe vnder the porte Neregel, Sarezzer, Sangarnebo, Sarachachym, Rablarys, Neregell, Sarezzer, Rabmag wth all the other prynces of the kynge of Babylon. And when zedekyah the kynge of Iuda wth his souldyers saw them, they fled, and departed out of the cypre by nyght, thorow the kynges garden, and thorow the port that is betwene the two walles, and in they went toward the wyldernes.

se. xxxix. a.

But the Chaldees host folowed faste after them, and toke zedekyah in the felde of Jerycho, and brought hym prysoner to Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the land of Hemah, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kynge of Babylon caused y chylde of zedekyah and al y nobles of Iuda to be slayne before his face at Reblath. And made zedekyahs eyes to be put out, and bounde hym w two chaynes, and sent hym to Babylon.

C Moreover, the Chaldees bzente vp the kynges palace, wth the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remuaunte of the people that were in the cite: and such as wer come to helpe them (what soeuer was lefte of the comun sorte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried them to Babylon. But Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne let the rascall people, and those that had nothyng dwell still in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vyneyardes and cornfeldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonozor also the kynge of Babylon gaue

Jer. xxxix. d

Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge concerning Jerempe, sayinge: take, and charye hym and make much of hym, for thou do him no harme but intreate hym after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabuzabban Rablarys, Neregal, Sarezzer, Rabmag and all the kynge of Babylons Lordes sente for Jerempe, and caused hym to be set oute of the foorze entyre of the pryslon, and compyted hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Shaphan: that he shulde carpe hym home: and so he dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jerempe laye yet bounde in the foorze entyre of the pryslon, the worde of the Lorde came vnto hym sayinge: Go and tel Abimelech the Mozyan. Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deuyfed for thys cypre, wyl I bring vpon them that thou shalt se it, but I wyl deliuer the (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in y bandes of those men whom thou fearest. For doubtles, I wyl saue the, so that thou shalt not perishe wth the swearde: but thy lyfe shalt be saued and that because thou hast put thy truste in me: sayeth the Lorde.

The xl. Chapter.

Jerempe hath licence to go whether he will. He dwelleth with the people that remayne at Jerusalem. Dure whom Godoliah ruleth Iohanan propheth death vnto Godoliah.

This is the word that y Lorde spake vnto Jerempe, when Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had let hym go fre from Ramath, whether he had led hym bounde amonge all the prynces that were caried from Jerusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chefe captayne called for Jerempe and sayde vnto hym. The Lorde thy God spake myghtely befoze, of the mysery vpon thys place. Nowe the Lorde hath sent it, and perfourmed it, as he hath promysed. For ye haue sinned agaynst the Lorde: and haue not bene obedyent vnto his voyce, therefore cometh thys plage vpon you. Beholde, I loke the bandes from thy handes thys daye: yf thou wylte nowe go wth me vnto Babylon, vp then: for I wyl le to the and prouyde for the. But yf thou wylte not go wth me vnto Babylon, then remayne here. Beholde, al the land is at the wyl, loke where thou thynkest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwel: For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Godoliah, therefore he sayde to hym: go backe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Shaphan: whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernour ouer the cypres of Iuda, and dwell wth hym amonge the people that remayne wheresoeuer it please the. So the chefe captayne gaue hym his expences wth a rewarde and let hym go. Then went Jerempe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, to Wyssa, and dwelte there wth hym amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the host of Iuda (whiche wth they: felowes were scattered abroad on euery syde in the lande) vnderstoode, that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the land: and that man that man, wyfe, and chylde, yee, and the poore men in flande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) shulde be vnder hys iurysdyctyon: They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah Johanan, and Jonathan the sonnes of Eriah, Sareah the sonne of Chaboneth: the sonnes of Ophai, the Netophathite: Jelanah the sonne of Maachath, wyth theyr companyons, And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan were vnto them and theyr felowes in this maner. * Be not afrayde to serue the Chaldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babylon serupce, so shal ye prosper. Beholde, I dwel at Mizpa to be an offpcer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to saytpe suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne, & oyle, and kepe them in youre ware houses, and dwell in youre cytyes that ye haue in keepynge.

¶ Yee, all the Jewes also that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonytes in Idumea and in all the countreyes when they hearde that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan gouernoure, vpon them that were lefte in Iuda. All the Jewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreover Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste that were scatered on euery syde in the lande, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, and saye vnto hym: Knowest thou not that Baallis the kynge of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slay the? But Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam beleued the not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa these wordes secretly Let me go I praye the and I wyll slep Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Therfore wyll he kyll the, that all the Jewes whych resorte vnto the, myghte be scatered, and the remnaunt in Iuda perishe. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam sayde vnto Johanan the sonne of Careah. Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyers, that thou sayest of Ismael.

The xli. Chapter.

¶ Ismael killeth Godoliah secretly, and many other wyth hym. Johanan foloweth after Ismael.

IN the seventh moneth it happened, * that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloud) came wyth the that were greatest aboute the kyng and ten men that were swozne wyth hym: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, & they dyd eate to gether. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wyth those tenne men that were swozne to hym, sterte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan wyth the sword and slewe hym, who the kynge of Babylon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew all the Jewes that were wyth Godoliah at Mizpa & all the Chaldees that he founde there waytynge vpon hym & those that were able to fyght be slewe wyth hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknewen) & there came certayne men from Sychem, from Syloah and Samaria, to the nombze of lxxx. whych had shauen theyr beardes, rente theyr clothes, & were all heauye, byngynge meate offerynge and incense in theyr handes to offre it in the house of the Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mizpa wepyng, to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came into the myddest of the cytye, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (wyth the that were swozne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddest of the cytye. Among these foure score men there were ten that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh, slep vs not for we haue yet great a treasur in the feld of wheat, barley, oyle, and honye.

So he spared them, and slewe them not wyth theyr brethren. Nowe the cytye wherein Ismael dyd cast the deade bodys of the men (whome he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Azaan sed to be made for feare of Baaza the kyng of Israel, & the same pte dyd Ismael kyll wyth slayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kynges daughters and all the people that were yet selfe at Mizpa vpon whom Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had madde Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah carped them awaye prysoners towarde the Ammonytes. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all they whych had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoost wyth him, herde of al wyckednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done, * they toke theyr companions, & went out for to fyght wyth Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the great waters that are in Sybeon. Nowe when all the people who Ismael led captiue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the host, they were glad. So all the people the Ismael had carped away fro Mizpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, fled from Johanan wyth viii. of hys swozne companyons, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah & all the captaynes of the hooste, that were w him toke all the remnaunt of the people: whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led awaye. (When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had reserued frome hym: fyghtynge men, women and chylzen, and Eldred men, whom they brought agayne from Sybeon & went from thence and sat them downe at Geruth Canaan whych lyeth besyde Bethlem, * that they myght go into Egypte for fere of the Chaldees: of whome they were afrayd, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahicams sonne: whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernour in the lande.

Jer. xlii. a

¶ All the captaynes, and Johanan the sonne of Careah: Jazaniah the sonne of Osiab, came with al the people fro the lest vnto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremy the prophet. * Hear our praye, that I mayest pray for vs, vnto the Lord thy God, namely, for al the remnaunte whereof there be very fewe of vs left of many, as thou seest vs, the Lord thy God thewe vs awaye to go in, and tell vs what we shulde do. Then Jeremy the prophet sayde vnto them, I haue heard you. Beholde, I will pray vnto God your Lord as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answer the Lord geueth you, I shall certify you therof and kepe nothyng backe frome you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy, * The Lord of truth and faythfulnes be our recorde, that we will do all that the Lord thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euil. We will hearken vnto the voyce of the Lord God, to whom we sende the that we maye prospere, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lord oure God.

¶ And after tenne dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the people from the lest to the most, and sayde vnto them, Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel vnto whome ye sente me to lape for the poure prayers befoze hym: * If ye will dwell in thys land, I shall buyde you vp, and not breake you downe: I shall plante you, and not roote you out: For I repente, as concernynge the trouble that I haue done vnto you: feare not the kyng of Babilon of whome ye stande in awe: O, be not afrayde of hym sayth the Lord: For I will be with you, to healepe you, and deliuer you frome hys hande: I will pardon you I will haue mercede vpon you, and cause hym to ptepe you, and byngge you agayne into poure owne lande.

Jerem. xli. c

¶ Neuerthelesse, if ye purpose not to dwell in thys lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lord poure God, but will say thus: we will not dwell here but go into Egypte, where we shall nether be warre, heare the noyse of the tropet, nor suffer hunger, there will we dwell. Wherefoze, heare now the worde of the Lord: O ye remnaunte of Juda: * Thus sayth the Lord, of hostes the God of Israel: If ye be wholye purposed to go into Egypte, and to dwell there as straungers: * The sweard that ye feared, shall ouertake you in Egypte, and the hunger wherof ye be heare a frayde: shall hange vpon you: and folowe you in to Egypte, and there shall ye dye, And all they that of set purpose vndertake to go into Egypt to sojourne there, shall perishe with the sweard with hunger and pestylence, not one of the shall remayne there shall none escape the plage, that I will byngge vpon them.

¶ For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, lyke as my wrath and indygnacyon is moued agaynst the inhabytours of Ierusalem: so shall my displeasure be kyndled agaynst you also, if ye go into Egypte, and there ye shall be reupled, abhorred: broughte to shame and confusion: as for thys place ye shall neuer se it moze,

The Lord forbyddeth you (O ye remnaunte of Juda) that ye shall not go into Egypte,

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly thys daye, for ye haue dyssembled with me: * For ye sent me vnto the Lord poure God and sayde: O praye thou the Lord oure God for vs: and loke what answer the Lord oure God geueth the, that byngge vs agayne and we shall do thereafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord poure God, for the whych cause he hath sent me vnto you.

¶ Nowe therefore, * If ye will not folowe it, be sure that ye shall perishe with the sweard, with hunger and pestylence: euen in the same place where your lust is to go and dwell.

The. xliii. Chapter

¶ Johanan carieth the remnaunt of the people into Egypte contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremy prophesyeth the destruction of Egypte.

¶ And when Jeremy had ended al the wordes of the Lord hys God vnto the people whych to declare the Lord they: God had sent him to them (cut all these wordes, I saye) Azarab the sonne of Osiab & Johanan the sonne of Careah with all the stubbourne persons, sayde vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest, The Lord oure God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shuld not go into Egypte, and dwell there. But Baruch the sonne of Neryah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myghte byngge vs into the captiuitie of the Caldees, that they myghte slaye vs, and carry vs awaye prysoners vnto Babilon.

¶ So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the host, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord: Name lyke, to dwell in the lande of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the host, carped awaye all the remnaunte in Juda, * that were come to gether agayne frome all the heathen (among whom they had bene scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda, Men, women, chyl dren, the kynges daughters: all those that Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne had left with Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan. They carped awaye also the prophet Jeremy. Baruch the sonne of Neryah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedyente vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

¶ And in Taphnis the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take greates stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the byrche wall, vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Taphnis that all the men of Juda maye se and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I will sende & call for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon my seruant and will set hys seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shall sprede hys tente ouer them.

¶ And when he cometh, he shall smyte the land of Egypte: some with slaughter, some with prysonnement: and some with the sweard. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians Gods des, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Moreouer, he shall arape hym selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a Shepheard putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte, shall be breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egypti- and goddes.

The xliiii. Chapter.

He reprooueth the people for their idolatry. They that sit by the threatening of the Lorde are chastened. The destruction of Egypte and the Jewes therein is prophesied.

Ihs is the worde that was shewed to Jeremie concerning al the Jewes: whych dwell in Egypt: at Migdol at Taphnis, at Moph, & in the land of Paturs. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene al the misery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, & vpon the cyties of Juda: so that this daye they are desolate, and noman dwellynge therein: and that because of the greates blasphemyes whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and worship vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowen. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes al the prophetes. * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. O do no suche abhominable thinges & thynges I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor hearken to turne from theyr wickednes, and to do nomore sacrifices vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indignation and wrath was kindled, and it went vnto the cyties of Juda, the feldest with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: how happeneth it, that ye do so great euill vnto your owne soules: thus to destroye the men & women: children and babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your own handes: When ye offer vnto straunge Goddes in the lande of Egypte where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myghte bitterly perishe, and that ye myghte be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacions. O haue ye now forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kynges of Juda and their wiues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the lande of Juda, in the cite, & in the stretes of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sorry vnto this daye, ye feare not, nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commandementes, that I haue geuen vnto you & your forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determined to punyssh you, and to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purposely went into Egypte, there to dwell, I will take them, * and they shall al be destroyed. In the land of Egypte shall they perishe, beinge consumed with the swerde and with hunger. For from the least vnto the moste, they shall perishe with the swerde and with hunger. More-ouer, they shall be reuiled, abhorred shamed, and confounded: For I will vset them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue vsyted Jerusalem, with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence. So that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whych are gone to dwell in Egypte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Juda although they thynke to come thither agayne, & to dwell there. For noone shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

Then all the men whyche knewe that theyr wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greatesorte of wyues that stode there, yee, and all the people that dwelt there in Egypte in the cite of Paturs, answered Jeremie, and sayde: As for the wordes I thou hast spoke vnto vs: in the name of the Lorde, we will in no wyse heare them, but what soeuer goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that we will doo. We will do sacrifice and offer oblacions vnto the quene of heauen. * lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure kynges and oure heades haue done in the cyties of Juda, and in the stretes and feeldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of bytapes then were we in prosperite and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

* But sence we left to burne incense: and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thynges, and perishe with swerde, and hunger. Laste of all: when we women dyd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and powder vnto her drynckofferynges, euen to that ymage dyd we sacrifice and serupce, without oure husbandes wylls.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto all the peole to the men to the women, and to al the folke which had geuen hym that answer: Did not the Lorde remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers: your kynges and rulers, which al the people, haue offred in the cyties of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem: and hath he not considered this in hys mynde? In so much that the Lorde myght no longer suffre the wickednes of your inuencions, & the abhominable thynges whyche ye dyd: * Is not your land desolate and voyde: yee, abhorred and accursed: so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye.

* Dyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydolles, and synned agaynst the Lorde: * Ye haue not folowed hys voyce, to walke in hys lawe, in hys ordynances and statutes.

Yea, this is the cause that al mysfortune happened vnto you: as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer Jeremie spake vnto all the people & to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lorde al Juda: ye that be in the land of Egypt. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye and your wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, that thyng I ye haue fulfilled in dede.

* Yee, thus haue ye sayde: We will not sayle but perfourme the voves that we haue vowed we will do sacrifice & powre out dryncke offerin-

In so much as thou thoughtest thus: when thou wast wyrtynge: Wo is me, the Lorde hath geuen me sorowe vpon sorowe. I haue weryed my selfe wylth syghinge and haue founde no rest.

Make redye buckeler and shylde, and go

But alas how happeneth it, that ye you so afrayde wylth syncke ye backe: theyr wordes are slayne. Yee, they runne so fast awaye that none of them loketh behynd hym: fearfulness is fallen vpon euerye one of them, sayeth þe Lorde. The lyghtest of foote shall not fle away and the worthyes shall not escape.

Towarde the North by the water of Euphrates, they dyd stumbe and fal. But what is þe thys, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, rynge and ragynge lyke the streames of water: It is Egypt that ryleth vpon lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters wylth so great noyse.

And he sayde: I wyl go vp, and wyl conuerthe the earth. I wyl destroy the city with them that are therein, set ye vpon horses, role forth ye charrettes comme forth worthyes, ye Hopyans, ye Libyans with your buckelers, ye Lydeans with your bowes. But in wayne shalte thou go to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The heathen haue heard of thy shame, and the lande is ful of thy confusion, for one stronge man dyd stumbe vpon another, and they are fallen both together.

* These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremie concernynge the comynge of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, whych was sent to destroye the lande of Egypte. Preach out thowowe the lande of Egypte and cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Roph and Capnis & say: Stand styll make the reb for the swearde shall consume the rounde about howe happeneth it, that thy mighty worthyes are fallen: whyt stode they not faste: Euen because the Lorde thrust the downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer styll vpon another. One cryed vpon another. Up, let vs go agayne to our owne people, and to our owne naturall contrye from the cruel swearde.

They dyd crye euen there, O Pharaon, kynge of Egypt thou troublous kynge, the tyme wyl byynge sedicion. As true as I lyue sayeth the kynge, * whose name is the Lorde of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Caboz, and as Libanus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypt make redye thy geare to flitte. For Roph shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The land of Egypt is like a good lie faire calfe, but destruction shall come oute of the north I saye it cometh. Her waged sounders that be with her are like fatte calves, they also shall fle away together, and not abyde: for the day of their slaughter, and the tyme of their visitacion shall come vpon them.

The crye

The crye of them shall make a noyse, as the blast of a trumpet. For they shall entre in with theyr hooftes, and come wyth axes, as it were to cutt doune of wodd. And they shall cutt doune the wodd, saith the Lord: They shall be innumerable, for they shall be more in nombre the þ gref poppers, so that no man shall be able to tell the. The daughter of Egypt is confounded, and delivered into the handes of the people of þ North.

Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wyl byset the restless people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egypte: per, both theyr goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharao, and all them þ put theyr trust in hym. Yee, I wyl deliuer them into the handes of those, that seke after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon and into the power of his seruantes. And after all these thynges it shall be inhabited as aforetyme: sayeth the Lord.

But bee not thou afrayed (O myseruaunte Jacob) feare not thou O Israel. For lo, I wyl helpe the from farre, and thy seide from þ lande of theyr captiuite. Jacob also shall come again and be in reste: he shall prosper & no man shall do hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruante) sayeth the Lord for I am with the: and wyl destroye all nacions, among whom I haue scattered the. Neuertheles, I wyl not consume the: but chasten the and correcte the: per, & that with discrecyon, neyther wyl I spare the as one that were faulteles.

¶ The. xlviii. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lord agaynst the Philistynes.

These are þ wordes, þ the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, agaynst the Philistines, befoze that Pharao smote the cytie of Azah. Thus saith the Lord. Beholde, there shall waters ryse out of the North: and shall growe to a great floud runnyng ouer & conerpyng the lande, the cyties and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they þ dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stampyng of theyr stronge barbed hoxses, at the charyng of theyr charrettes and at the rumbling of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to theyr chyldren, so feble & wery shall theyr handes be at þ same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of þ Philistines. He shall make waste both Tyzus, Sydon, and all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lord wyl destroye the Philistynes the remnaunt of þ yle of Caphtoz. Waldnes is come vpon Azah, A scalon wyth other valleys shall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wylt thou slepe, O thou sword of the Lord? When wylt thou cease? Turne again into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But how canst cease, when the Lord hym selfe hath geuen hym a charge agaynst A scalon and rayled it vpon agaynst the cyties of the see coastes?

¶ The. xlviii. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lord agaynst the Moabites

Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes: the God of Israel agaynst Moab: woe be to the cytie of Hebo: for it is layd wast, brought to confusion: and the richiari taken. Misgab is brought to shame & afrayed: Moab can boast nomore of Heleb for they haue deuised agaynst it. Come shall they say, let vs rote the out, that they may be nomore amonge the nombre of the Gentiles and that the madmen may nomore be thought vpon: and the sword shall persecute þ. A voice shall crye from Hozanaim: with great wastynge and destruccyon is Moab made desolate.

Chyldren coulde tel of the crye therof. For at the goyng vpon vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentacyon and mourning, and downe toward Hozanaim, they heard a cruel and deadly crye. Get you awaye, saue your lyues, & be lyke vnto the death in þ wylernes. For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne workes and treasure, shalt be taken. Chamos with his preastes and prynces shall go awaye into captiuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cyties: none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed and the feldes shall be layde waste, lyke as the Lord hath spoken.

Geue wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cyties shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein.

Cursed be he that doth þ worke of the Lord negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth back his sword from sheddyng of bloude.

Moab hath encreased ben riche and careles from her youth vpon, she hath sitten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessel into another (þ is) she neuer went awaye into captiuite, therfore her cause remaineth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh sayth the Lord, that I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vpon, which shall remoue her from her dwelling: and empty her vesselles, & breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her trust: therfore do ye thynke thus, we are myghty and stronge men of warre? Moab is destroyed: and her cyties bzent vpon, her chosen yonge men be slayn, sayth þ kyng, whose name is þ Lord of Hostes. The destruccyon of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say, O how happeneth it, that þ strong staffe, & the goodly rodde is thus broke? And thou daughter Dibon come downe from thy gloze, and syt in thyrte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vpon to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, & loke aboute the, aske them that are fled and escaped, & saye: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, and Jabezah, vpon Nephaath & Dibon: vpon Rabb Num. xxi. a.

Esa. xli. a. Jer. xli. a.

The hoine of Moab is smytten downe: and her arme broken, sayeth the Lorde. Make her drunken, for she magnified her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men maye clap theyr handes at her vomite, and þe also may be laughed to scozne. O Israell, shalt thou not laugh hym to scozne, when he is taken among theues? * Yea, because of thy wordes that thou haste spoken agaynst hym þe shalt be diuen away. Ye Moabites shal leaue the cities, & dwel in rockes of stone and be come lyke doues, þe make theyr nestes in holes.

* As for Moabs pride, we haue heard of it: he is very hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnesse her boastyng, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomacke, sayeth þe Lorde, I knowe (sayeth the Lorde) her indignacyon, she doth not ryght her wordes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therfore shal there mournyng be made for Moab, and euery manne shal crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shalbe made to the menne that stande vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jaser, and for the, O thou vineyard of Sabmah. Thy vyne bzaunches shal come ouer the sea, and the bzaunches of Jazer but vnto the sea: the destroyer shal breake into thy harvest and grapegatheryng: myrthe and chere shalbe taken away from the tymbrie feld and from the hole lande of Moab.

¶ There shalbe no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shal haue no stomacke to crie: yea, there be none to cry vnto hym: which aforetyme wer herd from Hezebon to Cleale & Jabez, whiche lyfted vp theyr voice from zoar vnto Hozonaim, the bullocke of thre yere olde shal go mourning. The waters also of Memrim shalbe dryed vp. Moreover, I wyll make Moab cease, sayeth the Lorde, from the offerynges and censyng þe hath made vnto her Goddes in high places. Wherfore my hert mourneth for Moab lyke a croude playng an heuy songe: and for þe mens sake of the bypck wal my hert mourneth also: euen as a pype that ppyeth a doleful song: for they shalbe very fewe, and destroyed.

Esa. xli. a.

Deu. xxi. c. Jer. xli. a.

* All heedes shalbe shauen, and all bearded clipped of, all handes bounde, & loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Vpon all þe house toppes and stretes of Moab there shalbe lamentable mournyng: For I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnproftable vessel, sayth the Lorde: O howe is she destroyed! O howe mourneth she! O howe doth Moab hange downe her heed, and is ashamed! Thus shal Moab be a laughynge stocke and had in derisyon of all theim that be rounde about her. * For thus sayth þe Lorde: Beholde, the enemy shal come flyng as an Eagle: and spred his wynges vpo Moab. They shal clyme ouer the walles, and wynn the stronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens hertes in Moab shal be lyke the hert of a woman traueling wchilde. And Moab shalbe made so desolate that she shal nomore be a people because she hath set vpon her selfe agaynst the Lorde. * Feare, ppe & snare shal come vpon the, O Moab, sayth the Lorde. Whoso escapeth the feare shal fall in the ppe & snare. For I wyll bypunge a ppe of visytacyon vpon Moab sayth the Lorde. They that are hable to fle, shal stande vnder the shadowe of Helebon: For there shal go a fyre out of Helebon and a flame from Sion, and shal burne vnto that proude people of Moab, and the top of those ledeycous chyldren.

¶ Doe be vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe. Per: thy sonnes & doughters shalbe led away captiue. Yet at the last, wyll I bypunge Moab out of captiuitie agayne sayeth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

The xli. Chapter.

¶ The wordes the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Jumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

A concernyng the * Ammonytes, I thus the Lorde sayth: hath Israel no chyliden, or is he withoute an heire? Why hathe poure kynge then taken Gad in: Wherfore doeth his people dwel in his ctytes? Beholde therfore, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde: that I wyll bypunge a noie of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: & it shal be layde on a desolate heape & her ctytes byente vp: and the Israelytes shalbe lordes ouer those that had them in possessyon afore, sayth þe Lorde. Helebon shal mourne: for wy shalbe roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde.

The ctytes of Rabah shal crye out, & gyde them selues with sackcloth, they shal moune and runne about þe walles: for their kyng shal be led away prysoner: yea, his prestes and pynces with hym.

Wherfore trustest thou in the valley: thy valley hath flowed away: O þe feare doughter: and thynkest thou that thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shal come to the? Beholde, I wyl bypunge a feare vpon the sayeth the Lorde God of hostes, from all those that be about þe: so that ye shalbe scatred euery man from another, and no man shal gather the together agayne that be fled. But after that I wyll bypunge the Ammonytes also oute of captiuitie agayne.

* Vpon the Edomytes hath the Lorde of hostes spokē on this maner: Is there nomore dwel dome in Cheman? Is there nomore good counsaile amonge dys people? Is their wysdome then turned cleane to nought? Get you hence, turne your backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye cptezens of Dedan.

For I wyll bypunge destruccyon vpon Esau: yea, & the daye of his visytacyon. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, wulde they not leaue some grapes? If ye nyght robbers came vpon the wulde they not take so much as they thought were ynough?

But I wyll make Esau bare, and dyscouer his secretes, so that he shal not be hable to hyde them them: which shall be wasted away: yea, his brethren and his neyghbours: and he hym selfe shall not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behynde the, and I wyl kepe them: and thy wyfowes shall take thes comfote in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. * Behold they that men thought were vnnete to drynke of the cuppe, howe drunken wyl they be: and thynkest thou then to be free?

No, no, thou shalt neyther be quyte nor free: but thou must drynke also. For why? I haue sworne by my selfe, sayeth the Lorde: that Babilon shall become a wyldecnesse, an open shame, a laughing stocke and cursyng: and all her cyties shall be a continuall deserte.

For I am perswytte informed of the Lorde, that he hath sent a message already vnto the heathen. Gather you tog yther, & go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle: for lo, I wyl make the but small amonge the heathen, and lytly regarded amonge men.

* Thy hye stomacke, and the pryde of thy herte haue deceyued the, because thou wylt dwell in holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountaynes in possession. Nevertheless, though thy herte were as hye as the Eagles: yet wyl I caste the downe, sayeth the Lorde. Moreover, Idumea shall be a wyldecnesse: * who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, & wondre at her miserable plagues: like as Sodome, Gomorre, and the cities that lay thereabout were turned vnto downe by the Lorde: so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habytacion there. Beholde, lyke as the Lorde, so shall a destroyer come vnto the pleasaunt meddowes of Jordan by the stronge dwellinge place: and when I haue made him quyet, I wyl make hym to flye from her: and all chosen men wyl I set in aray agaynst her: Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyl streue with me? What shepherde may stande in my handes?

* Therfore heare the counsaile of the Lorde that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose that he hath deuysed vpon the cytizens of Thema. The least of the stocke shall reare them in pices, and loke what fayre thyng they haue, they shall make it waste: and them selues also.

At the noyse of thes fall, the earth shall quake: the crye of thei voyce shall be herde vnto the red sea. Beholde, the enemye shall come and flye vnto hyther, lyke as it were an Eagle, and spred his wynges vpon Babilon. Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the herte of a woman trauelyng of childe. * vpon Damascus, Hamath and Arphad shall come confusyon: for they shall beare cruell tydynge, they shall be confounded and fralyke the see that can not stand styll. Damascus shall be soe afrayed, & shall flye, trembling shall come vpon her. Sozore and payne shall ouertake her as a woman trauelyng with childe. But howe shal she soe worshipfull & glorious adme be forsaken? Here therfore: her poynt me shall fall in the stretes, & al her men of war shall be taken away in that tyme, sayeth the Lord of hostes:

I wyl kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

* As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Babilon whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, & get you vnto Cedar, and destroye the people toward the east. They sentes and their flockes, shall they take away: yea their hangynges and theyr vesselles. Theyr camels also shall they carry away with them. They shall crye to them: Feare is on euery syde.

Arise, get you gone away, crape into caues, that ye may dwell there, O ye inhabytors of Babilon sayeth the Lorde, for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon hath holden a counsel conernyng you: and concluded his deuysed agaynst you. Arise, and get you vnto agaynst ponder riche and carelesse people (sayeth the Lorde) which hath nei ther gates nor doore barres, but dwell alone.

Theyr camels shall be stollen, and the dromes of theyr cattel dryuen away. Moreover, those wyl I scatter towarde al the wyndes: and byng the to destruction: yea, and that thow theyr owne fampliers, sayeth the Lorde. Babilon also shall be a dwellinge for dragons, & an euerlastyng wyldecnesse: so that no body shall dwell there: and no man shall haue there his habytacion.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremie, conernyng * Elam, in the begynnyng of praygne of zedekiah kyng of Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyl breake shewe of Elam, and take away theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyl byng the foure wyndes from the four quarters of heauen, and wyl scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flye vnto them.

For I wyl cause Elam to be afrayed of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyl byng vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, sayeth the Lorde. And I wyl persecute them w the swerde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to nought. I wyl set my throne in Elam, I wyl destroye bathe the kyng and the princes from thence, sayeth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wyl byng Elam out of captiuitie agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The i. Chapter.

The prophesy of the destruction of Babilon, and the deliuerance of Israhel, which was in captiuitie.

Be the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophet Jeremie, conernyng Babilon, and the landes of the Caldees: * Preache amonge the Gentyles, let your voyce be hearde, make a token, crye out, kepe no sylene, but say: Babilon is wanne * Bel is confounded, and Merodach is ouercome.

* Yea, theyr goddes be brought to shame, and theyr ymages burst in pices. For out of the north there doeth come a people agaynst her, whiche make her lande so waste, that no body dwell therein, neyther man, nor beaste: for they flye, and depart from thence. * In those dayes at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israel shal come, they and the chyldren of Juda wepyng & makyng hast, and shal seke the Lorde theyr God. They shal aske the waye to Syon, thither shal they turne theyr faces, sayinge: Come and we wyl cleave to the Lorde, in a covenannt that neuer shalbe broken.

M My people hath bene a lost & flocke, my shepherdes haue disceyued the, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylls. They haue gone fro the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and forgotten theyr folde. All they came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and theyr enemyes sayde: we haue made no default agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yea, euen the Lorde, whiche is the beauty of their righteousness, and that defended theyr fathers. Yet shall ye flye from Babylon, and depart out of the land of the Chaldees, & be ye as the rammes that go before the flocke.

J For lo, I wyl wake vp an host of people fro the northren lande, and byng them vnto Babylon: these shal laye siege to it, and wynn it. Their arrowes shal not mysse, lyke as a conynge archer shotech not wronge.

And the Chaldees shalbe spoyled, and al they that spoyl them, shalbe satisfied, sayth the Lorde: E although ye were so chereful & glad, to treade downe myne herytage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grass, and triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victory. Your mothers shalbe sore confounded, and they that beare you, shal come to shame.

She shalbe the least seth y amonge the nacions voyde: wasted and dreyed vp. No man shal be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shalbe whole desolate. J All they that go by Babylon, shal stande styll and be abashed, and shal wondre at all her plages.

E So forth in your a rape agaynst Babylon rounde aboute, all ye can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arrowes: for she hath synned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out, vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her round about: she shal peld her self, her foundations shal fall, and her walles shal come downe: for it shalbe the vengeance of the Lorde. J Yea, vengeance shalbe take of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye w her. Rote out the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the spyle in haruest. For feare of the swerde of the enemye every man shal get him to his owne people: and every man shal flye to his owne lande. Israel is a scattered flocke & lyons haue disperled them.

J For the kyng of the Assyrians deuoured them, last of al this Nabuchodonozor king of Babylon hath broked all theyr bones.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl visite the kyng of Babylon and his kyngdome as I haue visited the kyng of the Assyrians, and wyl by bring Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may fede vpon Chamel and Basan, and be satisfied vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad. J In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde: If the offyce of Israel be sought for, there shal none be founde, If men enquire for the syn of Juda: there shalbe none: for I wyl be merciful vnto them, whom I suffice to remayne ouer.

Go downe, thou auenger, into the enemies lande, & visit the that dwell therein: downe with them, & smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lorde: do accordyng to al that I haue comaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter & great murther, namely on this manner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus broken, & bruscd in sondre? How chaunceth it, that Babilon is become a wilderness among the heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, & thou art taken vna-wares art thou trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto angre. The Lorde hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the land of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: breake vp her chestes, thersher as ye thes she corne: destroye her, that nothyng shalbe left. Slaye all their mighty souldiers, & put the to death. Wo be vnto them, for the day & tyme of theyr visitacion is at hande. We thynke I heare alreadye a crye of them & fled & escaped out of the lande of Babylon, which we we in Sion the vengeance of the Lorde our God, the vengeance of his temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitch your tentes rounde aboute her, & none escape. J Recompence her as she hath deserued: & accordyng as she hath done, so deale with her agayne, for she hath set vp her selfe against the Lorde, agaynst the holy one of Israel. Therefore shal her yonge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe rooted out in the daye sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto the, thou proude, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy day shal come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shal stumbe and fall, and no man shal helpe hym vp. I wyl burne vp his cyties wyth fyre, and it shal consume all that is rounde about hym.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Juda suffice violence together. Al they that haue them in captiuitie, kepe them faste, and wyl not let them go, but theyr auenger and redemer is mighty. Whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shal mayntayne theyr cause he shal make the land shake, and iudge the that dwell therein, one wyth an other. The swerde shal come vpon the Chaldees, sayeth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon theyr prynces, and vpon theyr wyle men. The swerde vpon theyr souldiers, as for those, they shalbe come fooles. The swerde vpon theyr worthyes, so that they shal stande in feare. The swerde vpon theyr horsemen and charrettes, and vpon all the comune people that dwell vnder them: so that they shal all become lyke women.

The swerde vpon theyr treasure, so that it shalbe stollen awaye. I brought vpon theyr waters, so that they shalbe dreyed vp.

For the lande wyl shyppe the ymages, and deluyeth deleth in strange wondrous things. Ther taper, and estriches dwel therein, for there shal never man dwell there, neyther shal anye man have his habitation there for evermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorre: with the cities that lay thereabout, sayth the Lorde.

So shal no man dwell there also, neyther shal any man have there his habitation. Beholde, there shal come a people from the north with a great bonde of men, & many kynges shal stande up from the endes of the earth. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruel are they & unmerciful.

6 Theyr voyce roareth lyke the raging see, they ryde upon horses, and come weaponed to fyghte agaynst the, O Babylon. As soone as the kyng of Babylon heareth tel of them, his handes shal ware feble. Sorowe and heynesse shal come upon him, as a woman traueplyng with chylde.

Beholde, lyke as the lyon cometh up from the and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shal I chose out, and ordeyne to suche a thyng?

gyuen vpon Babylon, and the deuyse that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees.

haue: they shal laye it waste. The noyse at the wynnynge of Babylon shal moue the earth, and therre shal be hearde amonge the Gentyles.

The li. Chapter.

Both Babylon shulde be ouerthrowen. Jeremie spaketh his boke to Sarais.

Thus hath the Lorde sayd: beholde, I wyl rayse vp a perylous wynde agaynst Babylon and her cytizing that beare euill wyl agaynst me. I wyl sende also into Babylō faners to fanne her cut, and to destroye her lande, for in the daye of her trouble they shal be about her on every syde. Moreouer, the Lorde hath sayde vnto the bowmen, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in breaste plates. Ye shall not spare her younge men: kyll downe al her hooste. Thus the flayne shal fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, and the wounded in stretes. * As for Israel and Iuda, they shal not be forsake of their God of the Lorde of hostes for the holy one of Israel sake: no, though they haue fylled all the landes of synne. * Flye away from Babylon, every man saue his lyfe, that ye be not rotd out with her wyckednesse: for the tyme of the Lor-des vengeance is come: yea, he wyl rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande, * a golden cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken:

therefore are they out of theyr wyttes. * But so-daynly is Babylon fallen, and destroyed.

Mourne for her, byngng playsters for her woundes, yf she maye perauenture be healed agayne.
We wolde haue made Babylō whole, say they:

but she is not recovered. Therefore wyl we let her alone, and go every man to hys owne coun-tre. For her iudgemēt is come into beaute & is gone vp to cloudes. The Lorde hath brought forth our ryghteousnes. And therefore com on, we wyl shewe vpon y worke of y Lorde our God.

Make sharpe the arrowes, and multiplie your shylles: * for the Lorde shal rayse vp the spyrte of the kyng of the Medes, which hath alreadye a desyre to destroye Babylon. This shal be the vengeance of the Lorde, and the vengeance of hys temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon make your watche stronge, set your watchmen in aray: yea, holde prynt watches: and yet for al that shal the Lorde go forth with the deuyse which he hath taken, vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure & ryches, thyne ende is come, and the rekenyng of thy wyngyn-ges. * The Lorde of hostes hath sworn by hym selfe, that he wyl ouerwhelme the with men, lyke greshoppers in nombre, whych with a co-rage shal crye, alarum, alarum agaynst the.

* Yea euen the Lorde of hostes, that with hys power made the earth, with his wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, and with hys discretion spede out the heauens. As soone as he letteth hys voyce be herde, the waters in the ayre ware fearce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth the lyghtnynges to rayne, he bynggeth the wyndes oute of theyr secret places: yf they be esteemed by their wysdom all men are become fooles. * Confounded be all the casters of ymages, for the thyng that they make is but disceyte, & hath no breath. Clayne is it, and an erronious worke: and in the tyme of vpsitation it shal perishe.

Neuer thelesse, the porcion of Jacob is none suche: but he that made al thynges, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, he is the rodde of his en-heritaunce. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapons for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in peces: & with the haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Thowow the haue I beate to pondre horse and horseman: yea, the charettes and such as sat vpon them. Thowowe the I haue broken man and woman, olde and yonge, bachelor and mayden. Thowow the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke, the husbandman and his cattell, the princes and the rulers. Therefore wyl I rewarde the cytie of Babylon, and al her cytizing, the Chaldees with all the euill whiche they haue done vnto Sion: yea, that ye your seluts shal se it, sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I come vpon the, thou noylome byll, sayeth the Lorde: thou that destroyest al landes: I wyl stretch out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and wyl make the a bzent byll: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor fou-dacions of stones shal be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate shalte thou lyfe for euermore, sayth the Lorde.

tes amonge the hepten: prouoke the nacjons agaynst her, calle the kyngedomes of Ararat, Menini: & Alcanes agaynst her. Set the prince agaynst her, bypunge as greete a sorte of terribble hozles agaynst her: as if they were greshoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Medes with the kynges, princes, and al the chefe rulers: yea, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal shake and be afrayed whē the deuyle of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the land of Babylō so waste that no man shal dwell any moze therein. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, they strength hath fayled them, they shalbe lyke women. They dwellynge places shalbe bzent vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursuaunte shal mete an other: yea, one post shal come by an other, to bypunge the kyng of Babylon tydynge: that his ctye is taken in on euerye spde, the fourdes occupped, the fennes bzent vp, and the souldyers soze afrayed.

D For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the doughter of Babilon hath ben in her tyme lyke as a therspyng flooze, but shortlye shal her harvest come. Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilō hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath mademe an empty vessel. He swallowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled hys belve wyth my delycates: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substance away, and the thyng that was left me hath he carped vnto Babylon, sayth the doughter & dwelleth in Syon: yea, & my bloode also vnto the Chaldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl defende thy cause, and auerge the: I wyl drynke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

E *Babylon shal become an heape of stones, a dwellynge place for dragons, a fearfulnesse and wondring, bycause no mā dwelleth there. They shal roze togyther lyke lyons, and as the ponge lyons when they be angrye, so shal they bende them selues. In theyr brate I shal gyue them a dynner, and they shalbe dronken for ioye. *Then shal they slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde. I shal cary them downe to be slayne like shepe, like wethers and gootes. How was Sefach wonne? How was the glozy of the whole lande taken: how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at among the hepten? The see is rylen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her wyth hys greete waues. Her ctyes are layed waste the land lpyth vnbylde, and voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man tranapleth thozowe. Moreover, *I wyl vylite Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gētyles also shal runne nomoze vnto hym: yea, and the walles of Babylon shal fall.

O my people, *come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue hys lyfe from the fearful wraoth of the Lorde. Be not sayntherred, and feare not at euery rumour that shalbe hearde in the lande: for euerye pere bypungeth newe tydynges, and in the pere folowynge newe tydynge and robbynge in the lande, and lorde vpon lord. And lo, the tyme cometh, that I wyl vylite the ymages of Babylon, and the whole lande shal be confounded: yea, and her slayne shal lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth, wyth al that is therein, shal reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, sayth the Lorde.

*Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal ther fal many and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye & haue escaped & swerde halt you, stande not styl, remembre the Lorde as farre of, & thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we are ashamed to heare & blasphemies our faces were couered with shame, bycause the strange aleauntes came into the sanctuarie of the Lorde. Wherefore beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme cometh, & I wyl vylite the ymages of Babilon, and thozowe the hole lande they shal mourne and fal. *Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, & kept her power on hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayth the Lorde.

Appitious crye shalbe herde from Babylon, and a great myserie from the lande of the Chaldees when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hye stomake and proude boostynge, wherwyth they haue bene as furious as the waues of great water floudes, & made great crakes wyth theyr wordes. For the destroyers shal come vpo her (euen vpon Babylon) whych shal take theyr worthyes, and bzeake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auerge him selfe vpo them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl make theyr princes, theyr wyse men, theyr chefe rulers, and al theyr worthyes dronke: so that they shal slepe an euerlastynge slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The thycke wal of Babilon shalbe broken, and her hye gates shalbe bzēt vp. And & thyng that the Gētyles and the people hath wrought wyth great traunaple and labour, shal come to nought and be consumed in fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Neriah, the son of Masiah, when he went towarde Babylon wyth Gedaiab & kyng of Juda, in & fourth yere of his raygne. Nowe this Saraiab was a peaceable prince, Jeremy wrote in a booke all the myserie that shulde come vpon Babylō: yea and al these sermons that he wyrtten agaynst Babylō, and gaue Saraiab his charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade all these wordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out this place, so & neither people nor catell shal dwell there any moze: but to lye waste for euer: and when thou hast redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: euen thus shal Babylon synke, and be thrust downe wyth the burthen of trouble, that I wyl bypunge vpo her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynge of Jeremy.

The lii. Chapter.

Hereafter the taking of Zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees. Zedekiah's sonnes are kyled before his face, and his eyes put out. The cite is burned. The temple is spoiled and robbed. They that were left in Jerusalem are carped to Babilon, kyng Jehoachin is brought forth of prison, and fed lyke a kyng.

Zedekiah was * xxi. yere olde when he was made kyng, and he raygned a leue yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremys daughter of Libna. He lyued wyckedlye before the Lord, even as Jehoachin dyd. For þe Lord was angrie at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his preience. And zedekiah fell from the kyng of Babilon. * But in the nyth yere of his raygne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon wyth all his hoost came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwokes rounde about it. And this besieging of the cite endured vnto the eleuenth yere of kyng zedekiah.

* And in the fourth moneth, the ix. day of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the cite: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake a waye, and fled out of the cite by nyght thorow the waye of the porte betwene two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cite rounde aboute, yet went these men the waye towarde the wyldernesse.

And so the Chaldees followed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jericho, when his hoost was runne from hym: So they carped þe kyng a waye prisoner to Reblath vnto the kyng of Babilon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

The kyng of Babilon also caused zedekiah's sonnes to be slayne before his face: yea, and put al the princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, and caused hym to be bounde with two chaynes, to be carped vnto Babilon: and let him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth, in the nyth yere of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon. Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, and the kyng of Babilons seruautes came vnto Jerusalem, and bent vp the house of the Lorde. He bent vpon also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buydynge in Jerusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees þe were with the chefe captayne, brake downe al þe walles of Jerusalem rounde about.

As for the poze people and suche folke as yet was left in the cite, whiche also were fallen to the kyng of Babilon: yea, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne carped them away prisoners. But the poze people of the countrey, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vyneyardes and feldeg. The Chaldees also brake þe brasen pylers that were in þe house of the Lord, yea, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and carped all the metal of them vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the caldrys, chonels, fethokes, sprinklers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruice, with the basins, colepannes, sprinklers, pottes, candlestykkes, spones, and cuppes wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe captayne toke also the two pylers of the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate * which kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessel conteyned so much metal, þit myght not be weyed. For every pyler was eyghtene cubites hie: and the rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubites, and foure fyngers thicke and round. Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and etherie knoppe was fyue cubites hie: & vpon the knoppes, were whopes, and pomegranates rounde about of cleane brasen.

After this maner were both the pylers fashioned: and the pomegranates, wherof there were an hundred and. xcvi. whych hanged vpon the whopes rounde aboute. The chefe captayne also toke Saraiab the hie priest, & Sophoniah that was chefe next hym, and the thre keepers of the treasure. He toke out of the cite a chambrelayne whiche was a captayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruautes, whiche were founde in the cite: and Sephera captayne that vled to mustre the men of warre, with thre score men of the countrey that were taken in the cite. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and carped them to the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblath and the kyng of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the land of Hemath. And thus Juda was led away captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonozor led away captiue.

In the seuenth yere of hys raygne, he carped away of the Jewes, thre thousand and thre and twentye. In the. xviii. yere Nabuchodonozor carped awaye from Jerusalem eyght hundred, thretye and two persones. In the. xxiii. yere of Nabuchodonozor, Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke awaye seuen hundred forty and fyue Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousand and fyve hundred.

In the. xxxvii. yere after that Jehoachin the kyng of Juda was carped awaye in the. xxv. daye of the. xii. moneth Euphmerodach kyng of Babilon (the same yere that he raygned) gaue Jehoachin the kyng of Juda hys pardon, and let him out of prison, and spake louingly to him. And let hys throne aboute the trones of the other kynges that were wyth hym in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea, and he dyd eate with hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a contynuall lypung gyuen hym of the kyng of Babilon, every day a certayne thyng he alowed hym all the dayes of hys lyfe vntyll he dyed.

The Lamentacions

of Jeremie:

The fyrst Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into captivite and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremie the prophet sat weeping and sorrowfull bewayled Jerusalem, and syghinge and howling with an heuye and woofull herte sayde.

Alas, how syttesth the cytte so desolate, that somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a wyddowe * which was the lady of all nations: how is she brought vnder tribute that ruled all landes: She wepeth sore in the nyght, so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for a monge all her louers, there is none that gyueth her anye comforte: * yea, her nexte frendes transgresse agaynst her, and are become her enemyes. Iuda is taken prisoner, because she was defyled, and for seruyng so many straunge goddes, she dwelleth now among the heythen. She fyndeth no rest, al they that persecuted her, toke her in strapte places, where she coude not escape

B The stretes of Syon mourne, because no man commeth any more to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her preestes make lamentacion, her maydens are careful: and she her selfe is in greate heynesse. Her enemyes haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered, because the Lorde hath chastened her, for her greate wyckednesse: * her chyldren are led awaye captiue before they enemyes. All the beautye of the doughter of Sion is awaye, her princes are become lyke hartes that fynde no pasture. They are dyspued awaye before they enemye, so that they haue no power.

C Howe doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her miserie and disobedience: yea, the toye & pleasure that she hath had in tymes paste, seinge her people is brought downe thowowe the power of their enemy, and there is no man for to helpe her: her enemyes stande lokyng at her, and laugh her Sabbath dayes to scozne. Ierusalem hath sinned euer more and more, therefore is she com in decay. All they that had her in honoure despyse her, for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yea, she sygheth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

D Her skyrtes are defyled, she remembred not what wolde folowe: therefore is her fall so wondreful: & there is no man to comforte her. O Lorde consyde my trouble, for myne enemye hath the vpperhande. The enemye hath put his hande to al p precious thynge that she had: yea, euen before her eyes came the heythen in and out of the Sanctuary: * whom thou (neuer theles) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion.

* All her people seke theys freed wyth heynesse, and loke what pceuous thynge euery man hath, that gyureth he for meate, to save his lyfe. Consyde, O Lorde, and se howe vyle I am become. Haue ye no regarde, O all ye p go farby, beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lorde hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones, and it burnetted them cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mourninge.

The poke of my transgressyon is come at the last, with his hand hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, wherout I can not quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath destroyed all the mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter al my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the doughter of Iuda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.

* Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out of water: for the comforte that shoulde quychen me, is farre from me.

My chyldren are dyspued away, for wher the enemye hath gotten the vpperhande.

Syon casteth out her handes, and there is no man to comforte her. The Lorde hath layed the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abhominacion in the myddest of them. * The Lorde is ryghteous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto angre. O take hede all ye people, and consyde my heynesse. My maydens and my yonge men are led away into captivite.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my preestes and counsellers, but they perpered: euen whyle they sought for meate to save theyr lyues. * Consyde (O Lorde) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquyeted, my hert turneth aboute in me, * (and I am full of heynesse) because I rebelled stubburnly. The swerde hurteth me without, and within I am lyke vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that wyl comfort me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because I hast done it and thou hast brought forth p tyme which thou calleddest, when they also shal be lyke vnto me.

From the shall come al they aduersite, thou shalt plucke them away, euen as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wyckednesse. For my sorowe is very great, and my herte is heuye.

The ii. Chapter.

Alas, howe hath the Lorde darkened the doughter of Syon so sore in his wrath: As for the honour of Israel, he hath cast it downe fro heauen vnto p earth. How happened it, p he remembred not his owne * fote stole wher he was angry: The Lorde hath cast downe all the habitacions of Jacob wout any fauour: al the stronge places of the doughter Iuda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwe the downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her pynces hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the hozne of Israel: he hath withdrawen his right hand fro the enemy yea, a flambe of fyre is kindled in Jacob, & hath consumed vp all rounde about: he hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye: he hath fastened his ryght hande as an aduersary: and euery thynge p was pleasaunt to se, he hath smitten it downe. He hath poured oute his wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and al his palaces:

yea, all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed, & fylled the doughter of Iuda with moche sorowe and heynesse.

* Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solempne feastes and Sabbothes in Sion: are cleane forgotten. In hys heuie displeasure hath he made the hynges and preestes to be despyled.

The Lorde hath forsaken his owne aultare, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuarie, and hath gyren the walles of theyr townes into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

The Lorde thought to breake downe y^e walles of the doughter of Syon, he sprede oute hys lyne, & dyue not in his hand, tyl he had destroyed them. Therefore mourne the turrets and the broken walles togyther.

Her gates are sonke downe to the grounde, her barres are broken, and smytten in sondre, * her hynges and prynces are carped awaye to the Genyles. They haue neyther lawe nor prophetes, nor yet any vpsion from the Lorde.

The senatours of the doughter of Syon sate vpon the grounde in sylence, they haue strawed ashes vpon theyr heedes, and gyrded them selues wyth sackcloth. The maydens of Ierusalem haue downe their heedes to y^e ground. Myne eyes begyn to faple me thowowe wepyng, * my body is disquered, my licuer is poured vpo the earth for the great hurt of my people, seing y^e chyldren and babes dyd sowne in the stretes of the ctye.

¶ Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meate and drynke? for whyle they so layde, they fell downe in the stretes of the ctye, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saie of the, O thou doughter Ierusalem, to whom shall I lyke the? To whome shall I compare the, O thou doughter Syon, to comfort the wythall? Thy hurt is lyke a mayne lea: who maye heale the?

* Thy prophetes haue looked out vayne and foolysch thynges for the: they haue not shewed y^e of thy wyckednesse, to kepe the from captiuitie: but haue ouerladen the, & thowowe falslye scattered the abrode. All they that go by the, clappe theyr hādes at the: byslyng and waggyng their herdes vpon the doughter of Ierusalem, and say: is this the ctye that men call so fayre: wherin y^e hole lādere ioyseth? All thyne enemies gape vpo the, whysperyng and bytyng theyr teeth, sayng let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come, we haue founde and sene it.

* The Lorde hath fulfilled the thyng that he was purposed to do: & perfourmed that he had deuyled longe agoo: he hath destroyed, and not spared: he hath caused thyne aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne enemye. * Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lord, O thou ctye of the doughter Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ruer, daye and nyght, & st not, and let not the apple of thyne eye leane of.

Stande vp, and make thy prayer in the fyrste watche of the nyght, poure out thyne herte lyke water before the Lorde: lyft vp thyne hādes for the lynes of thy ponge chyldren, that dye of hunger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lorde, and consyde, why hast thou gathered me vp so cleane? Shall the women then eate theyr owne frute? euen chyldren of a spanne longer? Shall the preestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarie of the Lorde? Ponge and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, any maydens and ponge men are slayne with the swerde, whome thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacyon hast put to death: yea, euē thou hast put them to death, and not spared them. My neyghbours y^e are rounde about me hast thou called as it were to a feast daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was anye left behynde. Those that I haue brought and nourished, hath myne enemye destroyed.

¶ The .iii. Chapter.

Am the man, that (thowowe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of myserye. He droue me forth, and led me: yea into darknesse, but not into lighte. Agaynst me onelye he tourneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My flesh and my skynne hath he made olde, and my bones hath he bzyled. He hath buylded round about me, and closed me in with gall, and trauayle. He hath set me in darkenesse, as they that be deed for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuie lynkes vpon me.

Though I crye and cal pitiously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes with fouresquared stones, and made my pathes crooked. He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beere, & as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogither. He hath bent his bow and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arrowes of hys quyer hath he shot euen into my reynes.

* I am laughed to scozne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me wyth bytternesse, and gyuen me wormwood to drynke. He hath smitten my teeth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges, I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lord. O remember yet my myserye, and trouble, y^e wormwood and the gall.

¶ Yea thou shalt remember them, for my soule melteth a waye in me. Whyle I consydre these thynges in my hert I get a hope agayne. Namely it is of y^e Lordes mercyes that we are not vterly consumed. For truly his pitiful cōpassyon hath not ceased. Newe mercyes shall the Lorde shewe vpon the earlye in the daye spryng, (O Lorde) great is thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lorde is my porcion, sayth my soule: therefore wyll I hope in hym. O howe good is the Lord vnto the, that put theyr trust in hym. psal. cxi. a

To treade all the pryſonners of the earth vnder his feet. To moue the iudgment of man before the moost hygh.

To condempne a man in his cauſe. The Lorde hath not pleaſure in ſuch thynges.

What is he then that layeth: there ſhulde ſome thyng be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hygh goeth not euyl and good?

Wherefore then murmureth the lypynge man? Let hym murmur at his owne ſynne.

Job. xxxi. d psal. xiiii. a.

* Let vs loke well vpon our owne wayes, & remembre our ſilues, and turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lyft vp our hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene diſſemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intricated? Thou haſte covered vs in thy warthe, and perſecuted vs, thou haſte ſlayne vs without any fauoure. * Thou haſte hyd thy ſelfe in a cloude, that our prayer ſhulde not go thorowe. Thou haſt made vs outcaſtes and to be deſpyſed amonge the people. All oure enemyes gape vpon vs.

Eccl. xxxv. b

Feare, and pytie is come vpon vs, pea, deſceyte and deſtruction. * Whole ryuers of water gush out of myne eyes, for the great hurte of my people.

Thren. i. d

Myne eyes runne, and can not ceaſe, for there is no reſt. O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and conſpyder?

I Myne eyes breake myne hert bycauſe of a'l the daughters of my ctye. Myne enemyes hunted me out warply lyke a byrde: yea and ſ with out cauſe. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt, and they haue caſt ſtones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heed, then thoughte I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O lord, out of ſ deſce pyt. Thou haſt herd my voice & haſt not turned away thyne eares fro my lighpynge & crying. Thou haſt enclpynd thy ſelfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haſte ſayde: feare not. Thou (O Lorde) haſt mayntayned ſ cauſe of my ſoule, and haſt redeemed my lyfe. O Lord thou haſt ſene my blaſphemers, take thou my cauſe vpon the. Thou haſt well conſpyred howe they go aboute to do me harme, and that all they counſayles are agaynſt me. Thou haſt hearde they deſpyteful wordes (O Lorde) pea, and all they ymaginacions agaynſt me.

The lypyes of myne enemyes, and they deuyſes that they take agaynſt me, all the daye longe. Thou ſeeſt all they ſpytynge downe and they rpylynge vp: they make they tonges of no thyng but of me. Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of they handes. Gyue them an obſtinate hert, euē thy curſe. Perſecute them (O Lorde) wylt thyne indignacyon, and roote them out from vnder the heauen.

The. liii. Chapter.

How is the golde become ſo dimme? How is ſ goodlye colour of it ſo chaunged? and the ſtones of the ſanctuarie thus ſcattered in the corner of euery ſtete. The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honour, and clothed with the mooste petyous golde: how are they now become lyke the earthen veſſels, whyche be made w the potters hande? The dragons gyue they ponge ones ſucke with bare bzyſtes, but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wyldeſſe lyke the Eſtryches.

The tonges of the ſuckynge chyldren cleue to the roſe of their mouthes for very thyrſt. The pong chyldren aſke bzyed, but there is noman that gyueh it them. They that were wont to ſare delicately, peryſh in the ſtetes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make now moch of dong: The ſynne of the daughter of my people is become greater then * the wickedneſſe of Sodome that ſodaynelye was deſtroyed, and not taken wylt handes.

Her abſtayners (or Nazaries) were whyter then the ſnowe or mylke: their colour was freſh, red or Corall, they brautye lyke the Sapphyr. But now their faces be very blacke. Inſomuche that thou ſhouldeſt not knowe them in the ſtetes. * They ſkyne cleaueth to they owne bones. It is wythered, & become lyke a dye ſtocke. They that be ſlayne with the ſwarde are happper then ſuche as dye of hungre, and peryſh awaye, famyſhyng for the frutes of the felde.

* The women (which of nature are pityfull) haue ſodden they owne chyldren with their handes, that they myght be they meate in the myſerable deſtruction of the daughter of my people. The Lorde hath perſourmed his heuy wrath he hath poured oute the furyouſneſſe of hys dyſpleaſure, he hath kyndled a fyre in Sion, which hath conſumed the foundacyons therof.

Neither the kynges of the earth, nor all the inhabitours of the world wold haue beleued ſ the enemy and aduerſary ſhuld haue come in at the gates of the ctye of Jeruſalem, whyche neuertheleſſe is come to paſſe for the ſynne of her prophetes, and for the wyckedneſſe of her pteſtes, that haue ſhed * innocentes bloode within her. So that blynde men wente ſtomblyng in the ſtetes, and ſtayed them ſelues with bloode. They wolde in no wyſe touche they garments. But they cryed vnto euery man, ſaye ſ ſtaynyng, awaye, get you hence. touche it not. Pea they fled, and remoued from them: pea, they haue ſayde amonge the hepythen, they ſhall nomore dwell in thys ctye.

The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophesied and in what place Hys offsprynge and offyce. The vylion of the fourre beastes.
The vylion of the wheles. The vylion of the throne and of the pmage aboute the throne.

Ichaunced in the thyrtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth mo-neth, that I was amonge the pyloners by the ruer of Co-bar: where the heauens opened and I sawe a vylion of God.

Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth, made oute the fyfth yere of kynge Ioachins captiuitie.

At the same tyme came the worde of p Lord, vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Busi the preeste, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Co-bar: where the bande of the Lorde came vpon hym. And I looked, and behold, a stormy wynde came oute of the North with a great cloude ful of fyre, whiche wpth hys glyste lpghtened all rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an Aungell, and as it were the lykenesse of.iiii. beastes, and thys was theyr lykenesse. They were fasthyoned lyke a man: laupnge that euery one had fourre faces and fourre wynges.

Theyr legges were streyght, but theyr feete were lyke bullockes feete, and theyr glysted, as it had be fayre scoured metall. Under their wynges, vpon al the fourre corners they had mennes handes. Theyr faces and their winges were toward the fourre corners: yet were the winges so that one euer touched an other. When they wēt they turned them not aboute: but eche one went streyght forwarde. Furthermoze this was the similitude of theyr faces. * Upon the right syde of these fourre, theyr faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left syde they had the face of an ore, and the face of an Aegle. Theyr faces also and theyr wynges were lyed out aboue: so that two wiges of one touched ouer two winges of an other, and with the other they couered theyr bodye. Euerye one when it went, went streyght forwarde. Where as the spyrite led them, thither they went, and * turned not about in theyr goynge.

The fasthyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, enē as though burnynge cressettes had bene amonge the beastes: * (this was the vision) and the fyre gaue a glyster, and out of the fyre there went lpghtenynge.
When the beastes went forwarde & backward one wolde haue thought it had lpghtened. Now when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, wpth fourre faces also vnto the beastes.

The fasthyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The fourre wheles were soynded and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they went all fourre, and turned them not aboute in theyr goynges. They were large, great and horryble to loke

for they them selues neyther regarded the presentes nor pytied theyr elders. Wherefore yet oure eyes fayle vs: whyle we loke for dayne helpe, seinge we be euer waytynge vpon a people, p can do vs no good. They lay so sharpe wayt for vs that we cannot go safe vpon the stretes, for our ende is come, oure dayes are fulfpled, oure ende is here. * Our persecuters are swifter then p Eg-gles of the ayre, they folowed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes and layed wayt for vs in the wyl-derdesse. The very bzeth of our month: enē the anoynted Lord him selfe was taken in the ir net of whom we saye: Under his shadow we shalbe preserued among the hepten. And p (doughter Edom) that dwellest in the lande of huz, be glad and reioyse: for the cup shal come vnto the also, which when thou suppest of, thou shalte be drunken. Thy synnes be wel punyshed (doughter Syon) he shal not suffre the to be carped a way any moze. But thy wyckednesse (doughter Edom) shal be vylit, and for thy syn-nes lake he shal leade the into captiuitie.

The v. Chapter.

The prayer of Jeremye.

All to remembzaunce (O Lorde,) what we haue suffred, confidre, and se our confusio. Our enheritaunce is turned to the straungers and our houses to the aleautes. We are become careful and fatherlesse, & our mothers are as the wyddowes. We are fayne to drynke oure owne water for money, & our owne wood must we bye with money. Our neckes are vnder persecution, we are wery, and haue no rest.

Afoze tyme we yelded our selues to the Egiptians, and now to the Assirians, onely that we might haue bzied ynough. * Our fathers (which now are gone) haue synned, and we must beare theyr wickednesse. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, & noman deliuereth vs out of theyr handes.
We must get our lypynge with the peryll of our lyues, bycause of the drouth of the wyldezenesse.

Our skyn is as it had bene bzent in an ouen for very soze hūgre. The wpues are rauished in Syon, and the maydens in the cyties of Iuda.
The pynces are hanged vp with the hand of p nymies, they haue not spared the olde sage mē they haue taken yong mens lyues from them, & the bopes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders sit nomoze vnder the gates, & the yongmen vse nomoze playng of musyke. The ioy of our hert is gone, oure mery quere is turned into mournig.
The garland of our heed is fallen: alas, that we er synned so soze. Therefore, our herte is ful of heynesse, and our eyes dym: bycause of the byl of Sion p is destroyed. Inlomoche that p foxes runne vpon it. But thou, O Lorde, that remay-nest for enermoze, and thy seat world wptout ende: wherefore wylt thou stil forget vs, and for-lake vs so long? * O Lorde turne thou vs vnto p so shal we be turned. Renue oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banysed vs now lōg ynough, and hast bene soze displeased at vs.

to loke vpon. Theyr backs were ful of eyes rounde about them al foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whither soeuer the spirite went, thither went they also: and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them for the spirit of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forth, stode styl, or lyfte them selues from the earth, then the wheles also went, stode styl, and were lyft vp, for the byeth of life was in the wheles. Aboue ouer the heedes of the beastes there was a firmament, whych was fastyned as it had bene of the mooste pure Chrystal, and that was spred oute about vpon theyr heedes: vnder the same firmamente were theyr winges layed abrode one towarde an other and two wynges couered the bodye of euery beaste.

And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke the noyse of greete waters, as it had bene the noyse of a great God and a rushyng togyther as it were of an hoste of men. And when they stode stille, they lette downe theyr wynges. Now whē they stode styl and had lette downe theyr wynges, it thundred in the firmament that was aboue theyr heedes, Aboue the firmament that was ouer theyr heedes ther was the fasshon of a seate, as it had ben made of Saphir. Upon the seate there sat one lyke a man. * I beheld hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre within fro his loynes vppward. And beneth, whē I looked vnder hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shynyng fyre, that gyueth lycht on euery syde. Yea, the shyne and glyster that lychtened round about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glozy of the Lord appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and berkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The ii. Chapter.

The prophet is sent to call the people from theyr error.

And then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy feete (thou sonne of man) and I wyll talke wyth the.

* And as he was comuninge w me the spirite came into me, and set me vp vpon my feete: so that I marked the thyng that he sayd vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde thou sonne of man: I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne away from me * both they and theyr forefathers vnto this daye.

Yea, I wyl sende the vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiffe stomakes: vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner: This the Lord God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a froward household) they may knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

* Therefore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neyther be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prouokers and thornes are with the. Yea thou dost dwelle amonge scorpions: but feare not theyr wordes, be not abashed at theyr lokes, for it is a froward household. Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate.

Therefore, thou sonne of man, obeye thou al thynges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styfnecked, lyke as they are a styfnecked household. Open thy mouth, and eat that I gyue the. So as I was lokyng vpon, beholde, there was sent vnto me a hande, wherin was closed a booke, & the hande opened it befoze me, and it was wyrtten within and wythoute full of carefull mourninges: alas, and woo.

The iii. Chapter.

The prophet beinge fed wyth the worde of God and wyth the constaunte boldnesse of the spirit is sent vnto the people that were in captiuyte. The punishment of a curate that swerth not the people theyr synes.

After this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eat that, whatsoeuer it be: yea * eat that booke and go thy way, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: So, I opened my mouth and he gaue me the booke for to eat and sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eat, & thy bowels shall be fylled with the booke that I gyue the. Then dyd I eat the booke, * and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. And he sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man, * get the sone vnto the house of Israel, and shew them the wordes that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a straunge unknowē, or harde speche but vnto a house of Israel: Not to many nations, whych haue dyuers speches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not * Neuerthelesse if I sent the to those people they wolde folowe the. But the house of Israel will not folowe the, for they wyl not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue styffe forehedes, and harde hertes. * Beholde, therefore I wyll make thy face preuayle agaynst theyr faces, and harden thy foreheed agaynst theyr forehedes: so that thy foreheed shall be harder then an Adamant or flint stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayd of them, for they are a frowarde household.

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thyne herte: and go to the prysoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner. Thus the Lord God hath spoken: whether ye heare or heare not. Wych that the spirit toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a great rushyng and remouyng of the most blessed glozye of the Lord oute of his place. I hearde also the noyse of the winges of the beastes, that rushyd one agaynst an other: yea, and the ratlyng of the wheles that were by them, which rushynges & noyse was very great. * Nowe when the spirit toke me vp, and carped me awaye, I wente wythan heuy and sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnyng of a moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners * that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in the place where they

they were: And so continued I among them seue dayes being very sorow. And whē the seue dayes were expyred, the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vn to y^e house of Israel, therfore take good hede to the wordes of my mouthe, and gyue them war ninge at my commaundement.

¶ If I laye vnto the concernyng the vngodly mā, that (without doubt) he must dye, and thou givest not him warning, nor speakest vnto him that he maye turne from his euill waye: and so to lye. Thā shal the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrightheousnes: but hye bloode wyl I requyre of thyne hand. Neuerthelesse, pf thou givest warning vnto the wicked, and yet he forsake not his vngodlynnes: then shal he dye in his owne wyckednes, but thou hast discharged thy soule. Nowe pf a ryghteous man go from * hye ryghteousnesse, and do the thyng that is euil: I wyl laye a stumblinge blocke before hym, and he shal dye, bycause thou hast not giue him warnyng: yea, dye shal he in his owne sinne, so that the vertue whych he dydde before, shal not be thought vpon: but his bloode wyl I requyre of thyne hand. Neuerthelesse, pf thou exhorrest the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghte-ous doo no synne: then shal he lye bycause he hath receyued thy warnyng, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lord vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: stande vp, and go into the felde, that I may ther talke with the. So whē I had rpsen vp, & gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glorie of the Lord shode there, * lyke as I sawe it afoze, by the water of Cobar. * Then fell I down vpon my face and the spirite came into me, whych set me vp vpon my feet, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye and shut thy selfe in thyne house. Behold (O thou sonne of man:) there shall chaynes be brought forth to bynd the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyl make thy tonge cleaue to the roofof thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme, and not be as a chylder w them: for it is an obstinate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, whose heareth, let hym heare: whose wyll not, let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate howsholde.

The.iii. Chapter.

The besyge of the ctyte of Ierusalem is signified.
The longe continuance of the captiuitie of Israel.
An hungre is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

Thou sonne of manne: take a lytle stone and lay it befoze the, and descrybe vpon it the cytie of Ierusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulwoozhes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it: descrybe also tentes and an hooste of men rounde aboute it wyth engyns of warre.

Moreover, take an yron panne, and set it be twixt the and the cytie, in steede of an yron wal.
Then set thy face toward it, to besiege it, & lay ordinaunce agaynst it to wynde it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt sleepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the sinne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appointed, thou shalt sleepe vpon that syde, & beare theyr synnes.* Neuerthelesse, I wyll appoynt the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) and the num bre of the dayes: Thre hundred & xc. dayes must thou beare þ wickednesse of the house of Israel.

Whē thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and sleepe vpon thy ryghte syde fortye dayes, and beare the synes of the house of Iuda.

* A daye for a pere, a daye (I saye) for a pere wyl I euer laye vpon the. Therefore set nowe thy face agaynst that besieged Ierusalem, and dis couer thynne arme, that thou mayest prophesy a gaynst it. Behold, I wyl lay chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the from one side to an other, til I haue ended the dayes of this besiging

Wherefore take vnto the wheate, barley, beanes, gromel seed, Millium, and fitches and put these together in a vessel, and make the loues of breed thereof, accordynge to the nombze of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bred to eat for thze hundred and .xc. dayes. And the meat that thou eatest shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twenty cycles euery day. This appoynted meat shalt thou eate dayly from the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, y^e fyrst parte of an Hynt shalt thou drynke dayly from the begynnyng vnto y^e end. Early cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrst tooke them at a fyre made wth manys donge, that they may se it. And with that sayd y^e Lord: Euen thus shal the chyldren of Israel eate their despyled byerd in the myddest of the Gentiles, amonge whome I wyll scatter them.

Then sayd J: Oh Lord God. Behold, my soule was neuer yet stayned: for from my yowth vnto this houre, I did neuer eat of a deed carcasie, or of that whiche was slayne of wyld beasts, neither came ther euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth. Where vnto he answered me and sayde: wel, than I wyl graunt þe to take cowes donge for the donge of man, and to tooke the byed with all before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Behold, thou sonne of man, * I wyll mynyshe all the proupyon of breed in Ierusalem, so that they shal wey they breed, and eate it with scarcenesse: But as for water, they shal haue very lytle measure therof to drynke. And when they haue nomoze breed noz water, one shal be destroyed with an other, and famysh awaye for theyr wychednesse.

The. v. Chapter.

The riddle of the heeres, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God, towards the people.

Thou sonne of manne, take the then a sharpe knyfe: namely, a rasoure.

Take that and shaue the beere of thy heed and behrde. Then take the scales and the weyghe, and deuide þe beere also dre. And after thou hast accomplisshed the dayes of þe siege: burne the thyrd parte thereof in the fyre in the middest of the cite, and cut the other thyrd part in peces with a knyfe. * As for the thyrd parte that remaineth cast it in the wynde, and I wyl drawe out a swerde after them.

The Prophecie

B Yet afterwarde take a litle of the same, and bynde it in thy rote lappe. Then take a curtispe of it and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, & burne it in the fyre: Out of the same fyre shal there go a flame vpon the whole house of Israel. Mozeouer thus sayth the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. I se there in the myddest of the bethen, and nacpons that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgementes moze then I Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes moze then the nacpons that lye rounde about her. For they haue caste out myne ordynances, and not walked in my lawes: Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: * For so moche as ye haue bene moze augmented in nombre of people, then the heythen that dwel round about you: and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordynances, & ye haue not liued so rightously as I heathen & are round about you. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God.

Le. xlii. d.

C I wyl also come vpon the, I my selfe, I say: for in the myddest of the wil I syt in iudgement in the sight of the heathen, and wyl handle the of suche a fassyon as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyl do from that tyme forth, and that because of al thyne abhominacions. For in the fathers * shalbe sayne to eate theyr owne sonnes and sonnes theyr owne fathers. Suche a court wyl I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte of the wyl I scattre into all the wyndes.

Therefore, as truly as I lye (sayth the Lord God, seynge thou hast despyled my sanctuarie with al maner of abhominacions, and wyl shameful offences. For this cause wyl I also destroy the. Myne eye shal not ouerle the, neither wyl I spare the. * One thynde part wythin the shal dye of the pestilence and of hungre: Another thynde parte shal be slayne downe, rounde aboute the with the swearde: The other thynde parte that remaineth wylle I scattre abroad to ward all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerd after them. Thus I wil perfourme my indignacion, and set my wrath agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne angre agaynst them, they shal know that I am the Lord, whiche with a ferverent Ielousye haue spoken it. Moreover, I wyl make the waste and abhorred, before al I heythen that dwell about the, and in the sight of al them that go by the, so that when I punyssh the in my wrath, in myne angre, and with the plage of my whole displeasure thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame a gasynge and wondrynge stocke, amonge the heythen that lye about the. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shal come to passe, whē I shote amonge them the perplous darteres of hungre, which shalbe but death. Yea, therefore shal I shote them, because I wyl destroy you: I wil increase hungre, and minishe all the prouision of breed amonge you. Plages and mysery wyl I sende you: yea, & wilde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodsheddyng shal come vpon you, and the swearde wyl I byynge ouer you. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

The. vi. Chapter.

The. vii. Chapter.
The ende of all the lande of Israel shal sodainly come. The cause of the destruction thereof. The prophet is com- manded to write the summe of the sayes that are at hand.

Ad the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleyes and dales. Beholde I, I my selfe I saye: wyl byynge a swerde ouer you, and destroye poure hye places: I wyl cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymages. Your slayne men wyl I laye before your goddes, and the deed carcases of the chyldren of Israel wyl I cast before theyr ydols, your bones wyl I destroye rounde aboute your alters and dwellinge places.

The cyties shalbe desolate, the hylle chapels layed waste: your alters destroyed and broke your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane roted out. Your slayne men shal lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe howe thyr I am the Lord. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swearde, wyl I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I wyl scattre you amonge the nacions. And they that escape of you shal thynke vpon me among the heythen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for that whorish & vnfaithfull hertes of theyrs, wherewith they runne awaye fro me: I wyl breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theyrs, that comyt fornication wyth theyr ydols.

Then shal they be ashamed and displeased with theyr selues, for the wickednes and abhominacions whiche they haue done: and shal lerne to knowe that I am the Lord, howe that it is not in vayne, & I the Lord spake to byynge suche misery vpon them. The Lord sayd moze ouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes togyther, & stampe with the feet, and say: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wyckednes of the house of Israel, for because of them they shal perishe with the swearde, with hungre, and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of shal dye of the pestilence that is nye at hande, shal perishe with the swerd: and the other that remaine and that are besieged, shal dye of hungre.

Thus wyl I satisfy my wrathful displeasure vpon them. And so shal ye learne to knowe that I am the Lord, when your slayne men lye amonge your ydols, and about your alters, vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge al grene trees, amonge all thycke oke euen in the places where they did sacrifice to al theyr ydols. I wyl stretch myne hand out vpon them, and wyl make the lande waste. So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wilderness of Deblothah forth, thowow al their habitacions to learne them for to knowe, & I am the Lord.

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shal sodainly come. The cause of the destruction thereof. The prophet is com- manded to write the summe of the sayes that are at hand.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: The Lord said, O sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cometh vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verely the ende cometh vpon all the corners of the lande. But now shall the ende come vpon the, for I will sende my wrath vpon the, and will punish according to thy wayes, and will reward after al thyne abhominacions. Mine eye shall not ouersee the, neyther will I spare the: but will reward the according to thy wayes, and declare thyne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, one mylere and plage shall come after an other, the ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for the, beholde, it is come alreadye, thy destruction is earlye come agaynst the, that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedition is harde by, and the crye shall not be as the sounnyng agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore I will shortly poure out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the al thy abhominacions. Mine eye shall not ouersee the neyther will I spare the: but will reward the after thy wayes, and thyne abhominacions shall be punished in myddes of the, to lerne you to knowe how that I am the Lord that sayeth. Beholde the daye is here, the daye is come, y hour is run out, the rod floz ybethe, pryde wareth grene, malicious violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye warden to a staffe. None of the shall remayne ouer, none of theyr ryches, not one of theyr sede and no lamentacion shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye. Whoso byeth, let hym not reioyse: he that sel- leth, let hym be sorre: for why? Trouble shall come in the myddes of them al: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the thyng that he sold although they lyfe be yet with the lyuing. For when the prophete was preached vnto all the people, none turned from theyr line, and no mā toke strengthe to hym agaynst his wyckednesse, to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blow, & make you all ready, but noman shall go to the batayl, for I am wroth with al the whole multitude. The swerde shall be without, pestilence and hūgre within: so that whoso is in the felde shall be slayne with the swerde: and he that is in the cytie shall perishe with hūgre and pestilence. And suche as escape, and fle fro among them shall be vpon the hylls, lyke as the doves in the felde: every one shall be afrayed, because of his owne wyckednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, and al knees shall be weake as the water: they shall gird them selues with sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon the, theyr faces shall be confounded: and theyr hea- des balde: theyr spluer shall they cast forth in the streets, and theyr golde shall be despyled: yea, theyr spluer and golde maye not deluyne them, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lord.

They shall not satisfie theyr hungrye soules neyther fyl theyr emptye bellies therewith: for it is become theyr owne decaye thowoe theyr wyckednesse. And theyr beutyfule costly orna- ment that God had ordeyned to be theyr greate glozy, in it they haue set vp abhominacions vnto theyr ydols. For this cause will I make the and it to be abhorred. Moreover, I will gyue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked for to be robbed, & they shall destroy it. My face will I turne from them, my treasury shall be despyled: for the theues shall go in to it, and spende it. Make a chayne, for the land is whole despyled with vnrightheous iudgement of innocent bloode, and the cytie is ful of violent oppressyon.

Wherefore I will bypunge the moste cruel ty- rauntes from among the heathen, to take theyr houses in possellion. I will make the pompe of the proude to cease, and theyr sanctuary shall be despyled. When this trouble cometh, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One mys- chiefe and sorowe shall folowe an other, and one rumoure shall come after an other. Then shall he seke vspons in vayne at theyr prophetes. The law shall be gone from the prestes, and wyl dome from the elders. The kinges shall mourne the princes shall be clothed with heynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande, shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after theyr own wayes, accordyng to theyr owne iudgements: will I iudge them, to lerne them for to knowe that I am the Lord.

The viii. Chapter.

An apperance of the similitude of god. Ezechiel is broughte to Jerusalem in the spirit. The Lord sheweth the prophet the pylarres of the house of Israel, and chesyle of the prestes.

It happened, that in the fyrte yere, y fyrte daye of the fyrte moneth, I sat in my house, and the lordes of y con- sayl of Iuda w me: and the hande of the Lord god fel euē there vpon me: And as I looked vp, I sawe as it were a lyke- nesse of fyre from his loynes downewarde, and from his loynes upwarde: it shyned maruelous clere, and lyke an angel to loke vpon. This li- miltude stretched out an hande and toke me by the heary lockes of my heed, and the spyrte lyft me vp bet wyrtē hauen and earth: and brought me in a visyon to Jerusalem, into the entry of y inner porte that lyeth toward the North: there stode an ymage, with whom he hath all thynges in his power was very wroth.

And beholde, the gloze of the God of Israel was in the same place: enē as I hadde sene it a foze in the felde. And he sayde vnto me. Thou sonne of man, O lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke to warde the North. Then lyft I vp myne eyes to warde the North, and beholde: besyde the porte northwarde, ther was an auter made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the verpe entrynge in. And he sayde furthermoze vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seest thou what this do? Seest thou y greate abhominacions that the house of Israel comitteth in this place, to dyne me from my sanctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greeyet greater abhominaciōs. And with þ brought he me to the courte gate: and when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou son of man, dygge thow the wall. And when I dygged thow the wall behold, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me go thy way in, and loke what wycked abhominaciōs they do here. So I went in, and sawe, and beholde, there were all maner ymages, of wormes and beastes, all ydols and abhominaciōs of the house of Israel, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also before the ymages. * Ixx. lordes of the counsell of þ house of Israel, and in the myddst of them stode Jaazanih, the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of the had a censour in his hand, and out of the insence there went a smoke as it had ben a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man haste thou sene what the senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambze? * For they saye: Cusse, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not þ world. And he sayde vnto me. Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greter abhominaciōs that they do. And with that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournyng for Tamas. Thā sayd he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greter abhominaciōs then these are. And so he brought me into the inward court of the Lordes house: And behold, at the port of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entree and the altar, there were. xxv. men, that tourned theyr backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces towarde the East, and these worshipped the Sunne.

And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? thyneketh the house of Juda that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominaciōs here? Shulde they fyl the lande full of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me to angre? Yea, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me? Therfore wyl I also do some thyng in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shal not ouer se them, neyther wyl I spare them. * Yea, and though they cpe in mine eares with a loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The ix. Chapter.

The destruction of ydolaters, and the conuersion of the ryghteous. They that shalbe saved are marked. They þ are vnmaked are slayne. A cōplaiunt of the prophet for the destruction of the people.

ICryed also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come, heare ye rulers of þ ctye, euerye man w þys weponed hand to the slaughter. Then came there syxe men out of the strete of the vpper porte towarde the north, and euerye man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter. Ther was one amongeste them that had on hym a linnen rayment, and a wryters ynkehozne by þys syde.

These wente in, and stode besyde the brasen altar: for the glozpe of the Lorde was gone awaye from the Cherub which was vpon hym and was come down to the theshold of þ house and he called the man þ had the linnen rayment vpon him, and the wryters ynkehozne by his side and the Lorde sayd vnto hym: go thy waye thow the city of Ierusalem, and set a marke vpon the forehedes of them that mourne and are sorow for all the abhominaciōs that be done therein. And to the other he sayde, that I myght heare. * So ye after hym thow the ctye, slaye, ouer se none, spare none: kyll, and destroye both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marke vpon them, let that ye touch them not: and begynne at my sanctuarie. Then they beganne at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, & fylled the courte with the slayne, then go yowre waye forth. So they went out, and flue downe thow the ctye. Nowe when they had done þ slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fel downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then destroye al the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel & Iuda is very great: so that the land is ful of bloode and the ctye full of vnfaythfulnesse. For they saye: * Cusse, the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therfore wyl I vpon them: myne eye shal not ouer se them: neyther wil I spare them, but wyl recompence theyr wickednesse vpon their bedes. And behold, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon him and the wryters ynkehozne by his side tolde al the matter how it happened, and sayd: Lorde as þ hast comaunded me, so I haue done.

The x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke hote burnynge coles out of the myddle of the wheles of the Cherubins, in token of the burning of Ierusalem. A rehearsal of the vpsyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubins.

As I looked, behold in the firmament that was about the Cherubins there appered þ similitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: * Then said he that sat therein, to him that had þ linnen rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thyne handeful of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubins and cast them ouer the citie. And he crept in, that I myght se.

Nowe the Cherubins stode vpon the ryghte syde of the house when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the inner courte. * But the glozpe of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubins, and came vpon the thesholde of the house: so that þ temple was full of cloude, and the courte was full of the syne of the Lordes glozpe: Yea, and the sounde of the Cherubins winges was herde into the forecourte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almyghtie God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hote coles from the myddst of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubins: he went and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth the hande from vnder the cherubins, vnto the syde þ was betwene betweene the Cherubyns, and toke thereof, and gaue it vnto him that had on the lincnapment in his hande: which toke it, and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I saw also foure wheles besyde the Cherubyns, so that by every Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the faschon of the pierpont stone of Charlis: yet, (vnto the syde) they were all foure of one faschon, as if one whele had bene in an other.

¶ When they went forth, they went all foure together, not turninge about in theyr goyng. But where they wēt, thither went they after also, so they turned not about in theyr goyng. Theyr whole bodys, theyr backes theyr handes and wynges: yea, and y wheles also were all full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I heard hym call the wheles. * Every one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were liftyd vp aboute. This is the beaste that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns went, the wheles wēt with them and when the Cherubyns stode theyr wynges to lyft them selves vpward, the wheles remayned not behynde but were with them also. Shortlye when they stode these stode also. And when they were lyfted vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them for the spyrte of lyfe was in the wheles.

¶ Then the glorie of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns shakkered with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selves vp fro the earth: so that I sawe when they wente and the wheles with them. And they stode at y eastsyde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorie of the Lorde was vpon the. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceived that it was the Cherubyns. Every one had. iiii. faces, and every one. iiii. wynges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the figure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of them. Everye one in his goyng went straght forwarde.

¶ Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Agayne these be prophesies, wherebyng them how they shal be dispersed abrode. The remayng of the herte commeth of God, otherwyle can we not walke in his commaundmentes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsels.

¶ Againe, the spirite of the Lord lyft me vp, and brought me vnto the east porte of the Lordes house. And beholde ther were. xxv. men vnder the doore amonge whome I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiab, the rulers of y people. Then said the Lorde vnto me. Thou son of man, these men ymagine myschefe, and a wycked consayle take they in this cite, saying: Tulse, there is no destruction at hand, let vs buyde houses, thys Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe.

¶ Therefore shalte thou prophesye vnto them: yea, prophesye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spyrte of y Lord vpon me, and said vnto me: Speake, thus saith the Lorde. On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginations of your hertes. Many one haue ye murdered in this ctye, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore thus saith the Lorde God. The slayn men that ye haue layed on the grounde in the cite are the fleshe, and thys cite is the cauldron. * But I wil bring you out of it: ye haue feared the swearde, and I wyl bringe a swearde ouer you saith the Lorde God. I wyl dryue you out of this cite and deliuer you into your enemyes hand, and wyl condempne you. Ye shal be slayne in all the costes of Israel. I wyl be auenged of you to lerne you to knowe that I am the Lorde. This ctye shal not be poure cauldron, neyther shal ye be the fleshe therein, but in the costes of Israel wyl I punyssh you, that you may knowe that I am the Lorde, in whose comaundmentes ye haue not walked, nor kepte his lawes: * but haue done after the customes of y heathen, that lye rounde aboute you.

¶ Now when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiab died. Then fel I downe vpon my face and cried w a loude voyce, saying: O Lorde God, wylt thou then utterly destroy al the remnant in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner, thou sonne of mā, thy brethren, thy kynskolke, and y whole house of Iuda which dwel at Jerusalem, saye: With drawe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lande is gyuen vs in possession. Therefore tell the. Thus saith the Lorde God: I wyl sende you far of amonge the Gentyles, and scattre you amonge the nacjons, and I wyl hallowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell them also. Thus saith the Lorde God: I wyl gather you agayne out of the nacjons, and bring you from the countres where ye be scattered, and I wyl gyue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shal come thither. And they shal take away al theyr ydols, and all theyr abhominacions from thence. * And I wyl gyue you one herte, and I wyl plant a newe spyrte within your bowels.

¶ That stonye herte wyl I take oute of youre bodye, and gyue you a fleshy hert, that ye may walke in my comaundmentes, and kepe myne ordynaunces, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God: but loke whose hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abhominacions & wicked liuinges those mens dedes wyl I bring vpon theyr owne heedes, saith the Lorde God. After this did the cherubyns lyft vp theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and y glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glory of the Lorde went vp from the myddest of the ctye, and stode vpon the mount of the ctye, toward the East. * But the wynde toke me vp & in a vision (which came by the spyrte of god) it brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the pyloners. Then the vision that I had sene vanysshed awaye frome. So I spake vnto the pyloners carefulness: and for wine shalt thou drinke thou on this manner: thus sayth the Lorde God to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and in the lande so that it shall nomore be commonly used in Israel.

But saye thou unto them: I dayes are at hand that every thyng which hath bene prophesied shall be fulfilled. There shall no vision be in daye, neither any prophete saye amonge the children of Israel: For it is I the Lorde I spake it: and whatsoeuer I the Lorde speake, it shall be performed, and not be slacke in cominge.

Yea, even in your dayes (O ye frowarde hou-sholde) wyl I deuyse some thyng, and bringe it to passe, sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lorde came unto me, saying: behold, thou sonne of man. The house of Israel sayeth on this manner, Cursed be the vision that ye haue seene it wyl be many a daye or it come to passe. It is farre of yet, the thyng that he prophesied.
Therefore saye unto them: Thus sayth the Lord God. All my wordes that nomore be slacke, loke Behold, I wyl vpon you, sayth the Lorde.

Ayme

myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and pleache lyes: they shal not be in the counsell of my people, nor wyrtten in the booke of the house of Israel, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde God. And that for bycause: they haue dysceyued my people, and told them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a walle, and they daube it wyth loose claye.

Therefore tell them whyche dawbe it wyth vntempered morter, that it shal fal. * For there shall come a great showe of rayne, great hayle stones shall fal vpon it, & a sore storme of winde shall breake it, so shall the walle come downe. Shall it not thā be sayd vnto you: where is now the morter that ye dawbed it wythall. Therefore thus sayth y Lord God: I wyll breake out in my wrathful displeasure with a stormy wind so that in myne angre there shal come a myghty showe of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye wythall.

As for the walle that ye haue dawbed wyth vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen wyth the grounde: so that the foundation therof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yea and ye your selues shall perishe in the myddest therof, to learne you for to knowe, that I am y Lord. Thus wil I perfourme my wrath vpon this walle, and vpon them that haue dawbed it wyth vntempered morter, and then wyll I save vnto you: the walle is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are y prophetes of Israel, which prophete vnto the citie of Ierusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore, (O thou sonne of mā) set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophete out of their owne hertes: and speake thou, prophete agaynst them and save thus.

Thus sayeth y Lord God. Come vnto you, that sowe pyllowes vnder al arme holes, & bolsters vnder the heedes both of yonge and old, to catch soules wythall. * For whē ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie, ye promple them lyfe, and dishonour me to my people for an handrull of barley, and for a peece of breede when ye kille the soules of them that dye not, & promple lyfe to them that lyue not. Thus ye dishamble with my people, that beleuech your lyes.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lorde God: Behold, I wyll also vpon the pyllowes, wherth ye catch the soules in slaying: them wyl I take from your armes, and let the soules go that ye catch slaying. Your bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and deuyne my people out of your handes, so that they shall come nomore in your handes to be spoyled. And ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. Seeing that with your lyes ye discomforthe the hertes of the ryghteous, whome I haue not discomforted: Agayne, for somoche as ye coage the hande of the wycked, so that he may not turne from his wycked way and lyne, therefore shal ye spee out nomore vanitie, nor prophete your owne gespynges: for I wyll delpyer my people oute of your hande, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The xliiij. Chapter.

¶ The Lorde denyet his worde to the people for they synnes sake. The despylers of the worde doeth the Lorde somtyme deceyue by false prophetes. A shewe of them that fled vnto Babylon.

Here resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, these me beere they vnclenes in they hertes, and go purposelye vpon the stonbyng blocke of they owne wyckednesse: shoulde I then answere at they request? Therefore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: Every man of the house of Israel, that beareth dys vnclane ydolles in his herte, purposyng to stonble in his owne wyckednesse and cometh to a prophete, to enquyre any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde my selfe gyue answere, accordyng to the multitude of the ydols, that the house of Israel maye be snared in they owne hertes, bycause they be cleane gone from me, for they abhominacions sakes. Wherefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, for sake your ydolles, and turne your wynges from your fylthyngnesse, and turne your faces from all your abhominacions.

For every man (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger) that sojourneth in Israel, whyche departeth from me, and carryeth ydols in his herte, purposyng to go still stonbyng in his owne wyckednesse, and cometh to a prophete, for to aske counsaile at me thowoe him: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde gyue answere, by myne owne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynst that man, and wyll make him to be an example for other: yea, and a commune by worde: and wyll roote hym out of my people, that he maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde: * and yf that prophete be dysceyued, when he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lorde my selfe haue deceyued that prophete, and wyll stretche out myne hande vpon hym, to roote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for they wyckednesse. Accordyng to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomore from me thowoe errout, and be nomore despyled in they wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I they God, sayth the Lorde God.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretche out myne handes vpon it, * and destroye all the prouision of they breed and sende derth vpon them, to destroye man and beaste in the land. * And though Noe, Daniel, & Job, these thre men were among them, yet shal they in they ryghteousnesse delpyer, but they owne soules, sayeth the Lorde God.

If I bypunge nopsome beastes into y lande to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, y no man may gother in go therin for beastes: yf these thre me were also in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shall saue neyther sonnes nor daughters, but be onely deliuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

I Of yf I bypunge a swerde into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the lande: so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, and yf these thre men were therin. As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but only be saued them selues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure oute my sore indignacion vpon it in blood, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therin, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shall deliuer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr ryghtousnesse. Moreover thus sayth y lord god.

Ezech. xlii. b. G Moche more when I sende my * foure trou- blous plagues vpon Ierusalem: the swerde, hun- gre, perillous beastes and pestilence, to destroye man and beast out of it. Beholde, there shall be a remnant saued therein, which shall bring forth theyr sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall see theyr waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be com- forted, as touchyng all the plagues that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye see theyr waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not wythout a cause that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I did sayth the Lord God.

The. xli. Chapter.

As the vnpromysable wood of the vyne tree is cast into the fyre, so sayth he that Ierusalem shall be bzent.

I The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: what cometh of the vyne amonge al other trees: and of the wyld vyne stocke amonge al other tymbre of the groue? Do men take wood of it, to make any worke w^{al}? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thyng vpon? beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be bzent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it: the myddle is bzent to a shew. Is it mete then for any worke? No. Seinge then that it was mete for no worke, being whole: much lesse may ther any thyng be made of it, whē the fyre hath con- sumed and bzent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Like as I cast the vyne vnto y fyre for to be bzent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwel in Ierusalem and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume the. * Then shall ye knowe, y I am the Lord, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the lande waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayth the Lord God.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The prophet entredyng to speake of the abominacions of Ierusalem doth fynd the benefices of God toward it. Ierusalem is reproued of vnpurdues for her fornicacion wyth Idolles. He iustifyeth the wickednes of other people in comparason of the synnes of Ierusalem. The cause of the abominacions into whiche the Sodomytes fell. Ezechye is prompted to the repentaunt.

A Sayne, the worde of the Lord spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man shewe the cite of Ierusalem their ab- hominacions, and say: thus sayeth y Lord God vnto Ierusalem. Thy pro- geny and kynred came out of the land of Cana- an thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Ce- chite, thus was y maner of the birth. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, y stryng of thy nauell was not cut of, y wast not bathed in water to make y cleane. Thou wast neiter rub- bed w^{al} salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man re- garded y so moch, as to do any of these thynges for the, for to shewe the such fauour, but y wast vtterly cast out vpon y felde: yea, despyed wast thou in the day of thy byrth. Then came I by y and saw the troden downe in thyne owne blood and sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be de- spied in thyne owne blood: yea, eue I (I tell the) sayd vnto the: lyue, although thou be despyed in thyne owne blood. * So I platted the, as y blof- som of y felde thou arte growen vp, and warden greate: thou hast gotten a marvelous pleasant beauty, thy brestes are com vp, thy heer is good- ly growen, where as y wast naked & bare afore.

Nowe when I went by the, and looked vpon the: beholde, the tyme was come: yea, euen y tyme to wowe the. Then spyed I my clothes ouer y to couer thy dishonestie. yea, I made an oth vnto y * and marped my selfe with the (sayth the Lord God) * so thou becomest myne owne. Cha- w- shed I the with water, and pouged thy bloode from the. I anoynted the with oyle. I gaue the chasige of raymentes, I made the shoes of Ca- rus: I ther: I gyrded the about with whiter silke I clothed y wyth kercethes. I decked the wyth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore- heed, carnynges vpon thyne eares, & set a beau- tyfull crowne vpon thyne heed. Thus wast thou deckt wyth syluer and golde, & thy rayment was of fyne whyte sylke of nedle worke, and of dy- uers colours. Thou dydst eat nothing but sym- nels, hony and oyle: marvelous goodlye wast y and beautifull: yea, euen a very quene wast thou. In somoch y thy beauty was spoken of amonge the deytbe, for thou wast excellent in my beauty which I put vpon the, sayth y Lord God. But thou hast put cofidence in thyne owne beauty, & playde the harlot: when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast comytted whozedome wyth al that wet by y, and hast fulfilled theyr desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers co- lours, & deckt thyne aultares ther wyth, wherof thou myghtest fulfill thyne whozedome, * and of suche a fasson, as neuer was done, nor shall be. * The goodly ornaments and iewels which I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and comytted whozedome wythhall.

Thy garmentes of dyuers colours hast thou taken, and deckt them therwyth, myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them. My meate which I gaue the, as symnells, oyle, hony: (to fede the wythhall) that hast y set before them them for a swete sauour. And thys came also to passe sayth the Lorde God: * Thou haste taken thyn owne sonnes and doughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these haste thou offered vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is this but a smal whozedome of thynne (thynkest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, and geneest them ouer, to be byent vnto them? And yet in all thy abominacions and whozedoms, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy yowth, howe naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, & troden downe in thynne owne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

Thou hast buylded thy strewes and bydel houses in euery place Thou hast buylte hye places: yea, at the head of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aulster.

Thou hast made thy bentp to be abhored, thou hast layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thynne whozedome. * Thou hast compted fornicacion wyth the Egipcians thy neyghbours, whyche had muche fleshe: and thus hast thou encreased thine whozedome, to anger me. Behold, I byd stretch out myne hande ouer the, and byd * minishe thy store of fode, and delyuered the ouer into the wylls of the Philistines thynne enemyes, whyche are ashamed of thy abominable waye.

* Thou hast played the whoze also wyth the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: Yea, thou hast (I saye) with them played the harlot, and yet haddest thou not ynough. Thus haste thou furthemoze compted thy fornicacion fro the lade of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy lust not satysfied. Howe obstinate is thynne herte (sayth the Lorde God) seyng thou doest al these wyckes of an erraunte whoze: byldynge thy strewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy bydel houses in all places: Thou hast not bene as an other whoze that holdeth scozne of a smal rewarde, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in steade of her husbände. Gyftes are geue to all other whozes, but thou geuest rewarde vnto all thy louers: & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of al places, and to comytte fornicacion wyth the. It is come to passe wyth the in thy whozedoms contrary to the vse of other women: yea, there hath no such fornicacion bene compted after the, seyng that thou proferest gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen the: thys is a contrary thyng.

Therefore heare the worde of the Lorde, O harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God: For so muche as thou hast set forth thy yowth to whozedome & dyscouered thy shame, thowowe thy whozedome wyth all thy louers, and wyth all theydolles of thy abominacions in the bloude of thy chyldren * whome thou hast geuen them: Beholde, therefore I wyll gather together al thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe comen: yea, and all them whom thou fauourest, & euery one that thou hatest I wyll (I saye) gather the together roud about the: * and wyll dyscouer thy shame before them that they maye se al thy fylthyness.

* Moreover, I wyll iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murder, and recompence the thyn owne bloud in wrath & gelously I wil geue the ouer into theyr power, & I will breake downe thy strewes, and destroye thy bydel houses: they shall stryp the oute of thy clothes, al thy sayre & bentpfull Jewels shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked & bare: * yee, they shall byng the comen people vpon the which I haue stene the and slay the downe with theyr swordes. They * shall burne vp thy houses, and pynthe the in the syght of many women. Thus wyll I make thy whozedome to cease, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewarde. Shuld I make my wrath to be styl, take my gelousye from the, be content and no moze to be dyspleased: seyng thou remembrest not the dayes of thy yowth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in al these thynges? Beholde therefore, I wyll byng thynne owne wayes vpon thynne heade, sayth the Lorde God: howbeit I neuer byd vnto the accordyng to thy wyckednesse and al thy abominacions. Behold, al they that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse thys prouerbe al so agaynst the suche a mother, such a doughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter that hath cast of her husbände and her chyldren: Yea, thou arte & syster of thy sisters, which forsake theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Pourre * mother is a Cethite, and pour father an Amorate. Thynne eldest syster is Samaria, she & her doughters that dwel vpon thy lefte hande.

But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy ryght hāde is Sodoma and her doughters. Yet thou hast not walked after theyr wayes, nor done after theyr abominacions: but thou stodest a lytel and very small tyme, & in al thy wayes thou hast bene moze corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster wyth her doughters, hath not done so euell, as thou and thy doughters. Behold, * the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Dynde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce and ydelnesse: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besydes that they reached not theyr hande to the poore and neddy, but were proude, and byd abominable thynges before me: therefore I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, * yea thou hast exceded them in wickednesse: In so muche that in comparisson of all the abominacions which thou hast done thou haste made thy sisters good women. Therefore thou (whyche dydest condempne thy syster) beate thynne owne shame, for thynne owne offences, that thou hast compted, moze abominable the they byd which in dede are moze righteous then thou art be thou (I saye) ashamed, & beate thy shamefull rebuke: seyng that thou hast proued thy sisters in comparisson of the ryght wyfe.

As for theyr captiuite, namely the captiuite of Sodoma, and her doughters: the captiuite of Samaria & her doughters: I wyll byng the agayne, so wyll I also byng agayne thy captiuite amonge them: that thou mayst take thynne owne confusio vpon the, and be ashamed of al that thou hast done, and to coforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria and her doughters with thy self and thy daughters shalbe broughte agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednes came to lyght: I woldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Assyrians wyth all theyr townes, and the Philistines w^{ch} al that lye rounde aboute them, broughte the to shame and confusyon: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne filthynes and abhominacion, sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lord God, I shulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyled the oth, and broken the couenaunt. Neuerthelesse, I will remember the couenaunt that I made with the in thy yowthe, in so muche that it shalbe an everlastyng couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, w^{ch} I wyl make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunt. * And so wyl I reueue my couenaunt with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord, that I mayst thynke vpon it: be ashamed, & excuse thine owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgiven the, al that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

The .xvii. Chapter.

The parable of the two Aegles.

The worde of I^e Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou son of man: put forth * a darke speakyng & a parable, vnto I^e house of Israel, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Ther came a greate * Aegle wyth great wynges: yea, with a myghty longe bodye, & ful of fethers of dyuerse colours vpon the mounte of Libanus, and toke the best braunche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and carped it into I^e lande of Canaan, and set it in a Cytie of marchantes. He toke also of the seide of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull grounde, he broughte it vnto greate waters, and set it as a wyllow tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vyne stocke, but lowe by the ground whose braunches turned into it selfe, and the rotes of it were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, & it brought forth blossoms, & spred out braunches.

But there was an other Aegle, a great one, whych had great wynges and many fethers: & beholde, the rotes of this vyne had an hunger after hym, & spred out his braunches toward him that he myght water her wyth I^e orchard that he had planted. Neuerthelesse, it was plated vpon a good grounde besyde greate waters: so I^e (by reason) it shuld haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue bene a goodly vyne.

Speake thou therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Shall this vyne prosper? shal not hys rotes be plucked oute, hys frute be broken of, hys grene braunches wyther and fade awaye? yea, without any stryde arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by I^e rotes. Behold, it was planted: shal it prosper therfore? Shall it not be dyed vp & wythered: yea, euen in the cutting out of his blossoms, as lone as the east wynd bloweth?

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Speake to I^e forward household:

knowe ye not, what these thynges do synifye? Tel them: Beholde, * I^e kyng of Babilon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kyng and his prynces, and led them to Babilon. He toke of the kynges seide, and made a conenaunt wyth hym, and toke an oth of hym: The prynces of the lande toke he wyth hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym, and sente hys ambassytours into Egypt, that he myght haue horses and much people.

Shulde that prosper? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doeth suche thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, he shal dye at Babilon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, & made hym kyng: whose othe he hath despyled, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neether shal Pharaon wyth hys great host and multitude of people, mayntayne hym in I^e warre: whē they call vpon dyces, and set vpon bulwokes to destroie much people: For seyng he hath despyled the othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue hys hande therupon) and done al these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyl byngne myne oth I^e hath despyled, and my couenaunt that he hath broken vpon his owne heade. * I wyl caste my nette aboute hym, and catch hym in my parne. To Babilon wyl I carpe him, there wyl I punish him because of the great offence that he made me. As for those that fle from hym out of the hoste, they shalbe slayne with the sword. The residue shal be scatered toward al the wyndes: and ye shal knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyl let it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyl I plante it: that it maye byngne forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a great Cedre tree: so that al maner of foules maye buyde in it, and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And al the trees of the felde shal knowe that I the Lorde haue broughte downe the hye tree, and sette the lowe tree vp: that I haue dyed vpon the grene tree, and made the drye tree to flourish. Euen I the Lorde I spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The .xviii. Chapter.

He sheweth that every man shall leaue hys owne tyme. To hym that amendeth, is saluacyon promysed. Death is prophesied to the wicked, whiche turned backe from the ryght waye.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: What mane ye by this comen proverbe, that ye vse in I^e land of Israel, sayinge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the chyldrens teth are set on edge. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shal vse this by worde no more in Israel. Beholde, * all soules are myne. Lyke as I father is myne, so is I^e son myne also. The soule that synneth, shal dye. * If a man be godly, and do the

do the thyng that is equal and right, he eateth not upon the hylls: he lyftech not hys eyes vp to the foule ydols of Israel: he defyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe: he medleth wyth no mēstrous woman: he greueth no bodye: he gyueth hys better hys pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: * he parteth hys meat wth the hongry: he clotheh the naked: * he lendeth nothyng vpon vsury, he taketh nothyng ouer: he withdraweth his hāde from doyng wronge he dealeth faythfully betwene man and man: & walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them faythfully.

* This is a ryghteous man: he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ If he now get a sonne, that is a murderer, a feeder of bloude: yf he do one of these thynges (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hylls: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and neddy: he robbeth and spyleth: he greueth not the better hys pledge agayne, he lyftech vpon hys eyes vnto ydols: and medleth wyth abhominable thynges: he ledeh vpon vsurye, & taketh moreouer. Shal this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seyng he hath done all these abhominacions, he shal dye, his bloud shalbe vpon him.

¶ Nowe yf this mā get a sonne also, that seeth all hys fathers synnes, whych he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyftech not his eyes vp to the ydols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he vereth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spyleth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat with the hongry: clotheh the naked: he oppresseh not y^e poore he receaueth no vsury, nor any thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This mā shal not dye in his fathers synne, but shal lyue wythout fayle. As for hys father, because he oppressed and spyled his brether, and dyd wyckedly amōge his people: lo, he is dead in his owne syn. And yet saue ye: Whether then shuld not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therefore, because the sonne hath done equite and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therefore shal helpe in dede. The same soule that synneth shal dye.

* The sonne shal not beare the fathers offence: neither shal the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnesse of the righteous, shalbe vpon hym, and the wyckednesse of the wycked shalbe vpon hym selfe also. * But yf the vngodly wyll turne awaye from al hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes and do the thyng that is equal and ryght: doutles he shal lyue, & not dye. As for al hys synnes that he dyd before, they shal not be thought vpon but in hys ryghteousnesse that he hath done, he shal lyue. * For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lorde God, but rather y^e he conuerte & lyue? Agayne: yf the ryghteous turne awaye from his ryghteousnesse, and do iniquite, accordyng to al the abhominacions, that y^e wicked man doth: shal helpe? Al the ryghteousnes that he hath done shal not be thought vpon:

but in the faute that he hath offended wythal, in the synne that he hath done, he shal dye.

And yet ye saue: Tush: the waye of y^e Lorde is not indifferēt. Hear therfore ye house of Israel: is not my way ryght? Or are not your wayes rather wycked? * When a ryghteous man turneth awaye from his ryghteousnesse, & medleth with vngodlynnesse: he must dye therein. Yea, for the vnyghteousnes that he hath done, muste he dye. Agayne, * when the wycked mā turneth awaye from his wyckednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thyng whych is equal & ryght: he shall saue hys soule alpye. For in so muche as he remembreth hym selfe, and turneth him from al the vngodlynnesse that he hath vsed, he shal lyue and not dye.

And yet sayth the house of Israel. Tush: the waye of the Lorde is not equal. Are my wayes vnyght? O ye house of Israel: Are not your wayes rather vnequal? As for me I wyll iudge euery mā, accordyng to hys wayes. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. * Whether he conuerted and turne you cleane fro al your wyckednesse: shal there no synne do you harme? Cast awaye from you al your vngodlynnesse, y^e ye haue done: * make you new hertes and a new sprete. Whether wyll ye dye: O ye house of Israel: seyng: I haue no pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shal lyue.

¶ The xix. Chapter.

The captiuitie of Ierobabam and of Ierobachin is signified by the Lyons whelpes, and by the Lyon. He setteth oute the prosperite of the cytye of Ierusalem that is past, and y^e wylle therof that is present.

BUt thou sone of mā mourne thou for the prynces of Israel, and say. Whether fore lay thy mother y^e lyonelle amōge the lyons, and nourished her yōge ones amōge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a Lyon, it learned of spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The hea then hearde of hym, and toke hym in theyr nets, and brought hym in chaynes vnto y^e lāde of Egypt.

¶ Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a Lyon of hym: whych wente amōge the lyons, and became a farse Lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made theyr Eyties waste. In so muche that the whole lande and euery thyng therein, were vtterlye desolate, thowrowe the very voyce of hys roaryng.

¶ Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countrees agaynst him, layd their nettes for hym, and toke him in theyr pytte. So * they bounde hym wyth cheynes, and broughte hym to the kyng of Babylon: whych put hym in prison, that hys voyce shulde nomore be herd vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy bloud, plāted by y^e water syde: her frutes and brāches are growe out of many waters, her stalkes were so strōge that men myght haue made stauess therof for of fyers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceeded the her gyth & multitude of her braunches, she was roted oute in dyspleasure, and caste doſſone to the grounde. The Caſte wynde dyed vpper frute, her ſtronge ſtalkeſ were broken of: wythered & brent in the fyre. But nowe ſhe is planted in the wylderneſſe, in a dyke and thyrſty groude. And there is a fyre gone oute of her ſtalkeſ, whiche hathe brente vpper her braunches and her frute: ſo that ſhe hathe no mo ſtronge ſtalkeſ, to be ſta-ues for officers. Thys is a ppyous and myle-rable thynge.

The .xx. Chapter:

The Lorde deſpeth that he wyl anſwere them when they praye for the offence of vnkynedneſſe whiche he hath obler-ced. He promyſeth that hys people ſhall returne from capti-uſſe. By the wood that ſhal be deſtroyed, is ſignified the burnyng of Jeruſalem.

In the ſeuenth yere the tenth daye of ſe-pſyth moneth, *it happened, that certaine of the elders of Iſrael came vnto me, for to aſke counſell at the Lorde, and ſat them downe by me. Then came y word of the Lorde vnto me on thys maner: Thou ſon of man: ſpeake vnto the elders of Iſrael, & ſaye vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: are ye come hyther to aſke any thynge at me? As truly as I lyue (ſayeth the Lorde) I wyl gyue you no anſwere. Wylte thou not reprove them (thou ſonne of man) wylte thou not reprove them?
Shewe them the abhominacions of theyr forefathers and tell them.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I choſe Iſrael, & lyft vpper myne hande vpper the ſede of the houſe of Iacob, & ſhewed my ſelfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea, when I lyft vpper myne hande ouer them, & ſayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vpper myne hande ouer them, to brynge them out of y lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had promyſed for them, which floweth with mylke and ho-ny, and is a pleaſaunt lande amonge all other.
Then ſayd I vnto them. * Caſte awaye euery man the abhominacions that he hath befoze him and deſple not poure ſelues wyth the ydolles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled againſt me, and wold not folowe me: to caſte awaye euery man the abho-minacions of hys eyes, and to forſake the ydolles of Egypte. Then I made hym to poure myne in-dignacion ouer them, and to ſatiffye my wrath vpon them: yea, euen in the myddelt of the lande of Egypt. But I wold not do it: for my names ſake: that it ſhulde not be vnhalowed befoze the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whome I ſhewed my ſelfe vnto them, y I wold brynge them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe when I had carped them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wylderneſſe: I gaue them my comaundementes, and ſhewed the my lawes, * whiche who ſo kepeth ſhal lyue in them: I gaue them alſo my holy dayes, to be a token betwyxte me & them, & therby to know that I am the Lorde, whiche halowe them. And yet y houſe of Iſrael rebelled agaynſt me in the wylderneſſe, they wold not walke in my commaundementes, they haue caſt away my lawes (whiche who ſo kepeth ſhal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indig-nacion vpon them: and to conſume them in the wylderneſſe. Yet I wold not do it, for my names ſake, leſt it ſhulde be diſhonoured befoze the heathen, from the wyche I had carped them awaye. But I ſwoze vnto them in y wylderneſſe that I wold not brynge them into y lade, which I gaue them: a lade that floweth wyth mylke & hony, and is a pleaſure of al landes: and that becauſe they reſuſed my lawes, and walked not in my comaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their hert was gone after their ydols. Neuertheleſſe, myne eye ſpared them, ſo y I wold not utterly ſlaue them, & conſume them in the wylderneſſe. Whereouer, I ſaid vnto their ſonnes in the wylderneſſe: * walke not in the ſta-tutes of your forefathers, kepe not theyr ordynances, & deſple not your ſelues w theyr ydolles for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my ſtatutes, kepe my lawes and doo them, halowe my Sabbothes, * for they are a token betwyxte me and you, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde your God. Not wythſtandynge, they ſonnes * rebelled agaynſt me alſo, they walked not in my ſtatutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfyl them (whiche he that doth ſhal lyue in the) nether halowed they my Sabboth dayes. The I made me againe to poure out myne indignaci-on ouer them, & to ſatiffye my wrath vpper them in the wylderneſſe. Neuertheleſſe, I withdrew my hande for my names ſake, leſt it ſhulde be vn-halowed amonge the heathen, befoze whom I had brought them forth I lyft vpper myne hande ouer them alſo in the wylderneſſe, that I wold ſcater them amonge the heathen, and ſtrawe them amonge the nations, becauſe they had not kepte my lawes, but caſt aſide my comaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyfte vpper theyr eyes to theyr fathers Idols. Wherefoze I gaue them alſo comaundementes not good, & lawes thowowe the wyche they ſhulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes * (when I appoynted for my ſelfe all theyr fyrſt borne) to make them deſolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Therefore (thou ſonne of man, tell y houſe of Iſrael, thus ſayeth y Lorde God.) Weſyde al thys your forefathers haue yet blaſphemed me more and greatly offended agaynſt me. For after I had broughte them into the lande, that I promyſed to geue them, when they ſawe euery hye hyll and al the thicke trees: they made there theyr offerynges, and prouoked me wyth theyr oblacions, makynge ſwete ſauoure there, & poured out theyr dynke offerynges.

Then I asked them what is the hyll altare that ye go to it? And therfoze is it called the hye place vnto thys daye. Wherefoze, ſpeake vnto the houſe of Iſrael: thus ſayth the Lorde god ye are euen as vncleane as your forefathers, and compt whozedome alſo w theyr abhominacions.
In all your ydolles, wher vnto ye brynge your oblacions, * & to whole honour ye burne your children, ye defyle your selues, euen vnto this day: howe dare ye then come, and aske any question at me? O ye householde of Israel: As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) ye get no answer of me: and as for the thyng that ye go aboute, it shal not come to passe, where as ye say we wyll be as the heathen, and do as other people in the lande, wood & stone wyll we worshyp.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I my selfe wyll rule you with a myghty hande, wth a stretched out arme, and with indignacion powred out ouer you: and wyll byynge you out of the nations and landes, where in ye are scatered, and gather you together with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme and with indignacion powred out vpon you: and wyll byynge you into the wyldernes of the people, and there I wyll reason wth you face to face. Lyke as I punished your fozfathers in the wyldernes of Egypte, so wyll I punish you also, sayeth the Lord God. I wyll byynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The fozsakers also and the transgressours wil I take fro amonge you, and byynge them out of the lande of your habytacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shal not come in it: that you maye knowe howe that I am the Lord.

Go to nowe then (sayeth the Lord God) ye house of Israel. * Every one of you folowe your ydolles, and serue them, seying ye refuse to obey me. And my holy name shal ye nomore inhallowe with your offerynges and ydolles. For vpon my holy hyll euen vpon the hye hyll of Israel sayeth the Lord God, shal all the house of Israel and all that is in the lande, worshyp me: * & in the same place wyll I fauoure the, & there wyll I requyre your heue offrynges and fyfistlynges of your oblations, wth all your holy thynges.

I wyll accepte your swete sauoure, when I byynge you from the nations, and gather you to gether out of the landes, wherin ye be scatered: that I may be halowed in you before the heathen and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lord whych haue brought you into the lande of Israel: yea, into the same lande, that I swore to geue vnto your fozfathers. There shal ye call to remembraunce your owne wayes and al your ymaginacions, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye shal iudge your selues worthy to be destroyed for all your wyckednesse, that ye haue done. And ye shal knowe, that I am the Lord, when I treat you after my name, not after your wicked wayes; nor according to your corrupt workes. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lord.

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: set thy face toward the south, and speake to the south wynd and saye to the wood toward the south: heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde I wyll kyndle a fyre in the, that shal consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shalbe able to quench his flame, but al that loketh from the south to the north, shalbe brente therein: and all fleshe shal se, that I the Lord haue kyndled it, so that no man may quench it.

Then sayde I: O Lord, they wold saye of me: * Tush, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The xxi. Chapter.

The threateneth the swerde, that is to saye, destruction to the cyty of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of hyge zedekiah. He is commaunded to prophete the destruction of the children of Ammon. After the slaughter of ocher, at the laste the Lord threateneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor hymselfe.

He worde of the Lord came to me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophete agaynst the lande of Israel, say to the lande of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll drawe my swerde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghteous and the wycked. Seyng the that I wyll rote out of the both the ryghteous & wycked, therfore shal my swerde go oute of my sheath agaynst all fleshe from the North to the South: that al fleshe may knowe how that I the Lord haue drawen my swerde out of my sheath and it shal not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (O thou son of man) that thy lopnes cracke wythal, yea mourne bytterly for them in theyr presence. And yf they saye: wherfore mourest thou? Then tell them: for fyrynges that cometh, at the whyche al hertes shal melte, all handes shalbe letten downe, all stomakes shal faynte, and all knees shal waxe feble. Beholde, it cometh and shalbe fulfilled sayeth the Lord God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophete, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lord God: speake. The swerde, the swerde is sharpened and wel scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be byght. Shal we then make myrrh? Agaynst the trybe of my sonne it is gone forth destroyeng al trees. He hath put his swerde to the dyghtyng, that good hold may be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened and dyghte, that it maye be geuen vnto the hande of the manslayer. Crye, (O thou sonne of man and houle, for this swerde shal smyte my people, & al the rulers in Israel,) my people shalbe feared thorowe this swerde. Smyte therfore vpon thy thigh, for it is gone forth to make a tryall.

And what a tryall shal this be, when euen my scepter shalbe reproued? It shal not be sayth the Lord God. Prophecy the sonne of man, and smyte thyne handes together: make the swerd two edged, yea, make it thre edged the m^{ay}slayers swerd that swerd of the great slaughter, which shal smyte the, euen in theyr prey chabers: to make them abashed & faynt at the hertes, and in al gates to make some of the fal. I haue gyuen the fearful swerd. O howe byght & sharpe is it, howe well dyght and mete for the slaughter? Get the some place alone, ether vpon the right hande or on the left, whither so euer thy face turneth. I wyll smyte my handes together also and satisfye my wrathful indignacion: Euen I the Lord haue sayde it. The worde of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne sayng: Thou son of man, make the stretes, the swerd of the kyng of Babilon may come. Both these stretes shal go out of one kynges lade. And chole the a place, at þ heade of the strete chole out a corner. Make the a strete, that the swerde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytie of Jerusalem. For the kynge of Babilon shal stande in the turnynge of the waye, at þ heade of the two stretes: * to aske counsel at the sothslayers, ca-stynge the lottes with his arrowes, to aske counsell at the ydolles, and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothslayenge shal point to the ryght syde vppon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre to synpte it with a great noyle, to crye out alarū to set battel rāmes agaynst the gotes, to graue vp dyches, and to make bulwokes.

¶ Neuerthelesse, as for the sothslayenge, they shal holde it but for vanite. And esteeme them as those to whome they haue often swozne: Notwithstandynge he shal remember theyr wyckednesse, so that he ryght they must be take & wōne Therefore sayth the Lorde God. For so much as ye pour selues the we pour offence, and haue opened your wyckednes, so that in al your workes men may se your synnes: therefore are ye come to remembraunce, and ye shalbe taken by violence.

¶ Thou shamefull wycked gypde of Israell, whose dape is come: euen the tyme that wyckednesse shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the garlande, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the hūble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyshe, punyshe yea, punyshe them wyl I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfullyd vntyl he come, to whō the iudgemente belongeth, and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophceye, and speake: thus sayth the Lorde God to the chyldren of * Ammon, and to theyr blasphemy, speake thou: The swerde, the swerde is drawen forth already to the slaughter, and scoured to consume, that it glysteth (because thou haste loked the out vanities, & prophced lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke lyke as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne whose dape cam when theyr wyckednesse was ful.

¶ Shulde I put it vp agayner? Naye I wyl pu-nysh the, in the lade where thou wast noysed and borne, and poure myne indignacion vpon þ and wyl blowe vpon the in þ fyre of my wrath, and delyuer þ vnto cruel people, whych are leaned to destroy. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy bloude shalbe shedde in the lande, that þ mayest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

The .xxii. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for manslau-gher, and denyng the honoure vnto theyr fathers & mothers, and other wyckednesse. Of the wycked doctrine of the false prophetes and preestes, and of theyr vnfacible couetousnesse. The tyranny of rulers. The wyckednesse of the people.

¶ Moreouer, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reprove this bloud thurslyng out? Shewe them theyr abhominacions, and tel them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: O thou Cytie, that sheddest bloud in the myddest of the, that thy tyme may come also: & makest the ydolles to defyle the withal. Thou hast made thy selfe gyltye, in the bloude þ thou hast shed: and defyled the in the ydolles, which thou hast made. Thou haste caused thy dayes to come. Therefore wyl I make the to be confounded amonge the heathen, and to be despyled in al the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shal laugh the to scozne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte ful of myschefe. Beholde, þ rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed bloude in the. * In the haue they despyled father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the straūger, in þ haue they vexed the wydowe, and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyled my Sanctuary, and vnhalowed my Sabbath. Murthurers are there in the, that shed bloude, and eate vpon the hylls, and in the they vse abhominacion.

* In the haue they dyscouered theyr fathers shame: in the haue they vexed women in theyr sykenesse. Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neyghbours wyfe, and abhominably despyled his doughter in lawe. In the hath euery man forced his owne syster, eue his fathers doughter: yea * gyltes haue bene receyued in the: to shedde bloude: * Thou hast taken vsury and en-crease, thou haste oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcion, and forgotten me sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, I haue smytten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vled, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed in the.

¶ Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy hades defende them selues, in the tyme that I shal brynge vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyl brynge it also to passe. * I wyl scatter the amonge the heathen, and strowe the about in the landes, and wyl cause thy fylthyngnesse to ceasse oute of the. Yea, and thou shalt be thyme owne enheritaunce and not myne in þ syght of the heathen, that thou maist knowe, that I am the Lorde. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israel is turned to dross. Al they that shalbe be brasse, tynne, yron, and leade are in þ fyre become dross. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde god

For so muche as ye al are turned into dross beholde: I wyl brynge you together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tyn, and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blo-wen there vnder to melte them. Euen so wyl I gather you, put you in tegether, and melte you in my wrath and indignacion. I wyl brynge you together, and kinde the fyre of my displeasure vnder you, that you maye be melted therin. Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therein, that ye may know howe that I the Lorde haue powored my wrath vpon you, and the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vncleane land, which is not rayned vpon in the day of the cruel wrath: * thy prophetes are in the, are swozne together to deuour soules,

They receyue riches and good, and make many wyddowes in the. Thy prestes breake my lawe and desyle my sanctuary. * They put no dyfference betwene the holy and unholy, neither discern they betwene the cleane and unclean: they turne theyr eyes from my sabbothes, and I am unhalowed among them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauynslyng wolues to the bloude, and to destroye soules for theyr owne couetous luche. * As for thy prophetes, they daube with vntempered claye, they se vanities, and prophesy lyes vnto the, saying: the Lorde God sayth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken: The people in the land vse the wicked extorcion and robbry. They were the poze and neddy and * oppresse the stranger agaynst ryght. And I sought in the land for a man, that wolde make by the hedge, and set himselfe in y gap before me in y landes behalfe that it shulde not be corrupted: but I could fynd none. Therefore wyll I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fire of my wrath: theyr owne wayes wyll I recompence vpon theyr heedes, sayth the Lorde God.

Co the fornicacyon, that is to saye of the idolatrye of Samaria and Iherusalem, vnder the names of Wholab and Wholbah. In comparayson of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacyon of Iherusalem is the fylthier. The destruction of Iherusalem is prophesied. The aduouty of both the whoredoms founde out. Their destruction.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayyng: Thou sonne of man, there were two women, that had one mother: these (wher they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes * in Egypt. There were theyr brestes brused, & the pappes of theyr maydenhed dyd the Egyptians destroye. The eldest of them was called Wholab, & her yongest syster Wholbah. These two were my wyues, and bare sonnes & daughters. Their names were Samaria, and that was Wholab: and Iherusalem that was Wholbah. As for Wholab she began to go a whooring when I had taken her to me. * She was set on fyre vpon her louners the Assirians as her neyghbours which had to do with her, euen the prynces and lordes that were dect in costly aray, sayr yonge men, lustye ryders of hores.

Thus thowowe her whoz dome, she cleued vnto al the yonge men of Assiria. Yea, she was mad vpon them, and desyled her selfe with all theyr ydols. Neither ceased she from the fornicacyon that she vled w the Egyptians: for in her youth they lay with her, they bzoled the brestes of her maydenhed, and poured theyr whozdom vpon her. Wherefore * I deliuered her into the handes of her louners: euen y Assirians wher she so loued. These discovered her shame, toke her sonnes and daughters, & slay her w the sword. A new name gat she of all her people, and they punished her.

* Her syster Wholbah sawe this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, more than she, and exceded her syster in whoz dome * she loued the Assirians (which also laye with her) namelye the prynces, and greute lordes, that were clothed with all maner of gorgeous apparell al lusty horesmen and sayr yonge persons.

Then I sawe, that they both were desyled a-lyke. But she encreased styll in whoz dome for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh colours, with sayr gyrdles about them, & goodly bonettes vpo theyr heedes, lokyng all lyke prynces (after the maner of the Babylonians, and Chaldees in theyr owne lande wher they were borne) immediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she bzent in loue vpo them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye with her, and desyled her with theyr whoz dome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them * her whoz dome and shame was discovered and sene: then my hert forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her sister also. Neuerthelesse, she vled her whoz dome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlote in the lande of Egypt: * she bzent in luste vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the flesh of Asses, and theyr seed lyke the seed of hores. Thus thou hast renued the fylthynes of thy youth, when thy louners brused thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egypt.

Therefore (Wholbah) thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll rasye vpon thy louners (with whome thou hast satisfyed thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them toggyther rounde about the: namelye, the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, myghtie men and tyrauntes, with all the Assirians: all yonge and sayr louners prynces and lordes, knyghtes & gentle men, whiche be all good horesmen. These shall come vpon the with hores, charettes, and a great multitude of people: which shall be harnessed about the on euery syde: with brest plates, shylde and helmettes: I wyll punysh the before the: yea, they them selues shall punyssh the according to theyr owne iudgement I wyll put my gelousy vpo the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnant shall fall thorow y sword. They shall cary away thy sonnes and daughters, & the residue shall be bzent in the fyre. They shall strypp the out of thy clothes and cary thy costly iewels away with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whoz dome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalt tourne thyne eyes nomore after the and cast thy minde nomore vpon Egypt. For thus sayth y Lorde: beholde, I wyll deliuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust which shall deale cruelly with the.

All thy labour shall they take with them, and leane the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whoz dome shall come to lyghte. All these thynges shall happen vnto the bycause of thy whoz dome which thou hast vled amonge y Gentiles, with whose ydols thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy sister, therefore wyll I gyue her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalt drinke of thy sisters cuppe, howe depe and farre loauer it be to þ botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scozne, and had as greatye in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dronkenesse and sozowe, for the cuppe of thy syffer Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges: yea thou shalt eat vp the broke peces of it, and so teare thyne owne brestes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. For somoche as thou hast forgotten me and cast me asyde behynde the, so beare now thyne owne filthinesse and whozdom. The Lorde sayd mozeouer vnto me: Thou son of man, wylt thou not reprove Dholah and Dholibah? Shewe them theyr abhominaciōs namelly that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, and stayned theyr handes with bloude: yea, euen with theyr ydolles haue they commytted aduoutry * and offred them by the fyre theyr owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had bozne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and haue ynhalowed my Sabbath. For when they had slayne their children for theyr ydolles, they came the same daye into my sanctuary to defyle it.

ill. ze. xxi. a ezec. xli. c

Lo, thus haue they done in my house: Wespde all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men out of farre countreys: and when they came thou hast bathed & paynted thyne eyes with colours trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fashion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed and a table spred before the, wher vpon thou hast set myne *insence and myne oyle.

ezec. xxi. d

¶ Then was there greate cheare with her to obtayne peate, and though with those men many men came, yet were ther also brought me of Saba from the wilderness: which gaue the bracelets vpon theyr handes: and sette glozyous crownes vpon theyr heedes: and I sayde vnto her: þ seing she was stryken in age in her whozdomes: now we shall her fornicacyons come to an ende with her. And they went into her as vnto a comen harlot. Eue so went they (I say) to Dholah and Dholibah those fylthy women. O al ye þ loue vertue and ryghtousnesse, iudge them, punyssh them: * as aduouters and murderers, ought to be iudged and punysshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in theyr handes. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll bynge a greate multitude of people vpon them & make them be scatred and spoyled: these shall stone them, and goze them with theyr swerdes. They shall slay their sonnes and daughters and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

ezec. xxi. b ezec. xli. d

Thus wyl I destroy all suche fylthinesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after your vnclemesse.

And so they shall laye theyr fylthinesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shall be punysshed for the synnes that ye haue comitted with your ydols, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The prouph the syngge of Ierusalem by a parable of a sechynge pot. The parable of Ezechiels wyte being drede to bech he after expoundech.

In the nyynth yere, in the tēth moneth & the tenth daye of the moneth came þ word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wyte vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, when the kyng of Babilon set him selfe agaynst Ierusalem. Shewe that obstinat household * a parable and speake vnto the Thus sayth the Lorde God: Get the a * pot, set it on, and powder water into it: put all the peces togyther in it all the good peces: the loyne and the shuldre, and fyl it with the best bones. Take one of þ best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therin. With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy ctyte of þ pot, where vpon the rustinesse hangeth, & is not yet B scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it one after an other: there neade no lottes be caste therfore, for the bloud is yet in it. Vpō a playne dye stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde that it myght be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne dye stony rocke, bicause it shuld not be hyd, and that I myght bring my wyathful indignacion and vengeance vpon her.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto that bloudy ctyte, for whom euen I my selfe wyl make a great fyre and set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, & C spyrce the pot, so þ the very bones shall be bynt. Mozeouer, I wyl set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metall shall be bynt, and molten also for heate, and the filthinesse of it shall be molten in it, and the drosse of it shall be columed. Thou takest great payne this to defyle thy self And it wyl not be pouged from the excedynge drosse in it: but thozowe fyre shall the drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthinesse euen in the miche vuous dedes thou dost contynue, and bicause thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I haue clesed the but thou art not clesed. Thou shalt not be purged from thyne vnclemesse til I haue poured my wyathful indignacion vpo the. Euen I þ Lorde haue so deuyled. Yea, it is come therto alreadye that I wyl do it: I wyl not goo backe, I wyl not spare, I wil not be entreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punysshed: sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man beholde, I wyl take away the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone but vse no deedly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonnet, and put on thy shoes vpo thy feet, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bred. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the nyngynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe, I did as I was comaunded, and þ people sayde vnto me, wylt thou not tell vs what this signifieth toward vs, for this thou dost for our sake. I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyl visit spende my Sanctuarie, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue lefte shal fall thowowe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eat no mourning bread: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your feet. Ye shall neither mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shall be sorowfull, and one repent with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shewetoken. For lyke as ye haue done, so (when this cometh) ye shal do al so: that ye maye learne to knowe that I am the Lorde God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man, In the day whē I take from them their power, their ioye and honour, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of their lyues: namely theyr sonnes and daughters, shal not this be knowen? Then shal there one escape, and come vnto the for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouthe be opened to him which is escaped, that thou mayst speake, & be nomeze dom. Yea, and I shal be theyr shewetoken & they may knowe how I am the Lorde.

The xxv. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioysed at the fall of Ierusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seir. agaynst Idumea, agaynst the Philistynes.

The word of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynst the *Ammonites, prophesy vnto them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the word of the Lorde God. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: For somoche as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarie. I ha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel: I trowe it be now desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Iuda, I trow they be now led away prisoners: Behold, I wyl deliuer the to the people of the east, that they may haue the in possessiō: these shall set theyr castels and houses in the. They shall eat thy frute, and drynke vnto thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a fall for camels and of Ammon a shepfold and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: In somoche as thou haste clapped with thyne handes, and staped with thy feet: yea, reioysed in thyne heart ouer the lande of Israel with despice: beholde, I wyl stretche oute myne hande ouer the also, and deliuer the, to be spoyled of the heythen, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yea, I wyl make the to be layd wast, that thou mayst know that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: For somoche as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Iuda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be. Therefore beholde, I wyl open the syde of Moab, and take away theyr strength theyr ctyes, and chefe coostes of theyr lande, whiche are the pleasures of thy countrey. As namely, Bethelmoth, Baalmon, and Carathaim, these wyl I open vnto them of the east, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites, and wyl grue them in possession, so that the Ammonites shal nomeze be had in remembraunce amonge the heythen.

Euen thus wyl I punyssh Moab also that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde God. By cause that *Edom hath auenged and ealed hym selfe vpon the house of Iuda, & hath done great offence, and auenged hym selfe vpon them therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: I wyl reache out my hande vpon Edom: and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Theman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shal be slayne with the swerde * thowowe my people of Israel wyl I auenge me agayne vpon Edom, they shal handle hym accordyng to my wrath and indignaciō, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce sayeth the Lorde God.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: For somoche as the *Philistines haue done this: namely taken vengeaunce with despitfull stomackes, and of an olde euyl wyl set them selues to destroye, therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl stretche out myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause al the remnaunt of the see coost to perishe. A great vengeaunce wyl I take vpon them, and punyssh them cruelly: that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde which haue auenged me of them.

The xxvi. Chapter:

Be propheseth that Tyre shalbe overthrowen by cause it reioysed at the destruction of Ierusalem: The wdrage and astonnyshment of the marchauntes for the destruction of Tyre.

It happened, that in the eleuenthyere, the fyrst daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, because *Tyre hath spoken vpon Ierusalem. I ha, now I trowe the portes of the people be broken: and he turned vnto me: for nowe that he is destroyed, I shal be fylled. Yea, therefore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyl vpon the, I wyl byynge a great multitude of people agaynst the lyke as when the see aryseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towers: I wyl scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the drynging place where the fysshers hange vpon their nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it sayeth the Lorde God. The Gentyles shall spoylle her: her daughters vpon the felde shal pershe with the swerde, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl byynge byther Nabuchodonozor (which is the kyng of Babilon, and a kyng of kynges) from the north vpon Tyre: with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the land shal be slayne with the swerd, but agaynst the he shal make bulworkes, and graue vpon dyches aboute the, and lyft vp his shilde agaynst the. His singes and batelrammes shal be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towers. The dust of his horses shal couer the thy shalbe so many, thy walles shal shake at the noise of the horsemen, charettes, and wheles when he cometh to thy portes, as men do into an open ctye.

cytie. With the bones of his horse fete shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

C He shall slay the people with the swerde, and breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shall wast away thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchandise. Thy walles shall they breake downe and destroy thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones thy timbre & foundations shall they cast in þe water. * Thus wyl I bypnyng the melody of thy songes, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende so that they shall nomore be herde. I wyl make a bare stone of the: pea, a bypnyng place for nettes and thou shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God: thus hath the Lord God spoken concerning Tyre. The ples shall be moued at þe noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of thy slayne that shall be murdered in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from theyr seates regal: they shall lay away theyr robes, and put of theyr costly clothynge. Pea, with trembling shall they be clothed they shall sit vpon the ground: they shall be afrayed at thy sodayne fall, and be abashed at þe.

D They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: * Thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that hast bene þe strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom all men stode in feare. Howe arte thou nowe so utterly destroyed: Howe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabytours of the ples: pea and the ples the selues shall stande in feare at the ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: when I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no man dwell in) and when I bypnyng the deape vpon the, that great waters maye couer the. Then wyl I cast the downe vnto them that descende into the pyt vnto a people that hath bene longe deed, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wylderneesse, with them whiche go downe to theyr graues, so that no man shall dwell moze in the. And I wyl make the to be nomore in honoure, in the lande of the lpyng. I wyl make an end of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be found for euer moze: sayth the Lord God.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The prophet is moued to bewaile the desolacion of Tyre: He setteth out the people of Tyre for the haunteys of marchauntes thereto.

I The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: O thou son of man, make a lamentable coplaynt vpon * Tyre and saye vnto Tyre: thou which art a port of the see, that occupiest with moche people, and many ples: thus speaketh the Lord God, O Tyre, thou hast sayde: what I am a noble citie, thy borders are in the myddest of þe see, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of þe mount Sanyr. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make þe mastes, and the okes of Balan to make the rowers.

B Thy borders haue they made of puerp, and of costly wood out of þe yle of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle worke oute of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy masse and thy hangynges of pelowe sylke, purple, out of the ples of Cilias. They of Sydon and Tyre were thy shipmasters, and þe wysest in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wysest at Gebal were they that amended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see with theyr shypmen occupied theyr marchaundise in the. The Perses, Libians & Idutens were in thyne host, and helped the to fyght, these hanged vpon theyr chyldes and helmettes with the, these set forth thy beaute.

They of Arvad were with thyne hoost rode aboute thy walles: and the Hygmenians were thy watchmen vpon thy towers, these hanged vpon theyr quyers rounde about the walles, and made þe maruelous goodly. Charlis occupied the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynn and leade, and made thy market greete. Iauan Tubal, & Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men and ornaments of metall for thy occuppyng. They of the house of Togarma brought vnto the at þe tyme of thy marce, horse, horsmen and mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other ples that occupied with the, brought the wethers, elephant bones, and Decokes for a present. The Sirians occupied the bycause of thy dyuers workes, and increased thy marchaundise, with smaragdes with scarlet, with nedle worke, with whyte linnen cloth, with sylke, and with chrystall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, and brought vnto thy markettes wheat of Minith, and Baneg, balne, honny, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also vled marchaundise with the in the best wyne of Helbon, and with wool by cause thy occuppyng was so greete, & thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, & Mesal, haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron reddy made, with Cassia and Calamus, according to thyne occuppyng. Dedan occupied the in sayre tapestry worke and custyns. Arabia, and all the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers, and gootes.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the, in all costly spices, in all pprecious stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy markettes. Haram Chene, and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Affiria, & Chelmad were all doers with the, and occupied with the. In costlye raymente of pelowe sylke, and nedle worke (verpe pprecious, and therfore pacts and bounde together with ropes.) Pea, and in cedre wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Charlis were the chefe of thy occuppyng.

Thus thou art ful, and in great worthe, euen in the myddest of the see. Thy robbers shall bypnyng the into greete waters, the east wynde shall ouerbeare the in the myddest of the see, so that thy wares, thy marchaundise, thy ryche, thy mariners, thy shypmasters, thy builders of thy broken places, thy occuppers (that brought the thynges necessarye) the men of war that are in the, and al the comens shall perishe in the myddest of the see, in the daye of thy fall: The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of the shypmen.

All wher men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall kepe out of theyr botes, and set the selues vpon the lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce because of thes make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr bedes, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, and put sackcloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorrowe and heuy lamentation: yea, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundise came from the sees: thou gannest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth haue made ryche, thowowe the multitude of thy wares occupying. But thou art now cast downe into the deepe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perswaded with the. All they that dwel in the pleasure are abashed at the, and all theyr kynges are aghast: yea theyr faces haue chaunged colour. The marchautes of the nations wondre at the. In that thou arte so cleane brought to nought, and comest nomore vp.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God agaynst the kyng of Tyre, for by the prophete Daniel the prophete is moued to bewyle the kyng of Tyre. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The Lorde promyseth that he will gather together the chylde of Israel.

The word of the Lorde came vnto me saying: thou sonne of man, tell the prynces of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: because thou hast a proude herte, and hast sayde: * I am a God. I haue my seate in the myddest of the see lyke a god, wher as thou art but a man & not god, and yett standest in thyne owne conceyte, that thou art god: Behold, thou thyngest thy selfe wysler than Daniel, that ther is no secretes hyd from the.

With thy wysdome and thy vnderstandyng thou hast gotten the great welthyngesse, and gathered treasure of syluer and golde. With thy great wysdome and occupying hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy great rychesse thyne herte is proude.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast lyft vp thyne hert as though thou were God, behold, I will byynge enemies vnto the, enen thytrauntes of the hepythen: these shall drawe out theyr swerdes vpon thy beauty and wysdome, and shall defyle thy glorie. They shall cast the downe to the pye, so that thou shalt lye in the myddest of the see, as theyr be slayne. Let se, yf thou wilt saye then (before them that slaye the) I am God, wher as thou arte but a man and not God, in the handes of them that slay the. Yf thou wilt saye then, such as the vncircumcysed in the handes of the ennemyes for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

Whereafter the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, make a lametible complaynt ouer the kyng of Tyre, and tel hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: thou arte a leale of a lykenesse, full of wysdome and excellent beauty: Thou hast ben in the pleasaunt garde of God: thou art deckt with all manner of precious stones: with Ruby, Topas, Christall, Jacynth, Onix, Iaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle and gold. The beauty and the holes be in the, were set forth in the daye of thy creation. Thou art a fayre Cherub, exalted by the annoynting, stretched wyde out for to couer. I haue set the in this dignitie vpon the holy mount of god there hast thou ben, & walked amonge the fayre glystryng stones. From the tyme of thy creatiō thou hast ben ryght excellent, tyll wyckednesse was founde in the. * Because of thy great marchaundise, thyne hert is full of wyckednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore will I cast the fro the mount of God (thou couerynge Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glystryng stones. Thy hert was proude in thy fayre beauty, and thowow thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wysdome: I will cast the downe to the grounde, and that in the syght of kynges. Thou hast defyled thy sanctuary with the great wyckednesse of thy vnryghteous occupyinge. I will byynge a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the: and will make the to ashes, in the syght of all them that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquainted with the among the hepythen shall be abashed at the, seinge thou art so cleane brought to nought, and comest nomore vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst Sydon: * Prophecy vnto it, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Sydon, I will vpon the, and get me honour in the: that it may be knowen, howe I am the Lorde: when I punish the, and get me honour in her. For I will sende pestilence and bloudshedding into her stretes, so that those whiche be slayne with the sword shall lye rounde aboute in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde. She shall nomore be a pryckynge thorne, and an hurtynge byer vnto the house of Israel, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her, and hate her, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: when I gather the household of Israel together agayne from the nations amonge whom they be scatred, then shall I be sanctified in them in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruauit Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buylde houses, and plant vyneyardes: yea, safely shall they dwell therein: when I haue punished all those that despyse them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde thy God.

The xxix. Chapter.

The prophete agaynst Pharaon. The prophete telleth the destruction of Egypt, and the sparklyng abode of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he will restore Egypte agayne after 70. yeres. Egypt is the rewarde of kyngs. Madaian shall be a labourer for the labour whiche he toke agaynst Tyre.

At the tenth yere vpon the tweluth day of the tenth moneth, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: * Thou sonne of man, set now thy face agaynst Pharaon & kyng of Egypt. Prophecy agaynst hym, and agaynst the whole land of Egypt. Speake, and tel hym: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, O Pharaon thou kyng of Egypt of Egypte, I wyll vpon the thou great dragon that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that, I wyll drawe the out of thy waters: yea, and al the fysh of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I wyll cast the out of the drye lande, with the fysh of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde.

B Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp: but shalt be meate for the bestes of the felde, & for the foules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egypte maye knowe: that I am the Lorde by cause thou hast ben a staffe of reed to the house of Israel: whē they toke hold of the with theyr hand thou brakest and pyckedst them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtedst the raynes of theyr backs. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: behold, I wyll byng a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast: yea, the lande of Egypte shall be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Bycause he sayd: the water is myne: I my selfe haue made it. Behold therefore, I wyll vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate and in abasment, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Moziars lande: so that in forty yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of catel go there, neyther shall it be inhabited. I wyll make the lande of Egypte to be desolate among other waste countreys, and her cyties to lye voyde forty yeres amonge other voyde cyties: And I wyll scatere the Egyptians among the hepythen and nacions, and strowe them in the landes about.

C Agayne: thus sayeth the Lorde God * when the .xl. yeres are expyed, I wyll gather the Egyptians togyther agayne, out of the nacions, among whom they were scatered, & wyll bynge the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Pathures theyr owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shall be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalt them selues aboue the hepythen: for I wyll so mynysh them that they shall nomore rule the hepythen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke them anye more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde God.

D In the .xxvii. yere, the fyrst daye of the fyrste moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath made his host, with great trauaile and labour to come before Tyre that euery heed maye be balde, & euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre gyven neyther him nor his host any rewarde, for a great trauaile that he hath taken there. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll gyue the lande in Egypte vnto Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, that he may take away al her substaunce, robbe her robbyes, & spoyle her spoyle to pay his host theyr wages withal. I wyll gyue him the lande of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wyll I cause the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne among them: that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

The .xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypt and of her cyties is declared.

The word of the Lorde came more vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophesy & speake: thus sayth the Lorde God. Mourne, wo worthe this daye, for the daye is here, the day of the Lorde is come: the darke day of the hepythe the houre is at hande. the swerde cometh vpon Egypt. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacyons are destroyed, the Moziars lande shall be afrayed: yea the Moziars land Libia and Lidia, al theyr comen people, & Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thorowe the swerde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The maynteyners of the lande of Egypte shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the towre of Syenes: shall they be slayne downe wth the swerd sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreys they shall be made desolate, among other waste cyties they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kindle a fyre in Egypt, and when al her helpes are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers go forth from me in shypes, to make the carelesse Moziars afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them accordyng to the daye of Egypt for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll make an ende of the people of Egypt thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon. He and his people with hym: yea, and the cruell tyrantes of the hepythen shall be brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe out theyr swerdes vpon Egypte, and fyll the lande full of slayne men. I wyll drye vp theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therein, I wyll destroye thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: * I wyll destroye the ydolles, and bynge the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a pryncer of Egypt, and a fearfulness wyll I sende into the Egyptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyll make it desolate, and kindle a fyre in zoan the cytie. No, I wyll punyssh and poure my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin which is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kindle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greate heynesse, Alexandria shall be rooted out, and Noph shall haue daye of sorowe. The best men of Heliopolys and Bubast shall be slayne with the swerd, and carped awaye captiue. At Caphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the sceptre of the land of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall shall have an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her daughters shall be ledde a waie into captiuitie. Thus wyl I punyssh Egypt, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the eleuenth yere, vpon the seventh day of the first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayenge; Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kyng of Egypte: and lo, it shall not be bounde vnto be healed, neither shall any plaister be layd vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swerde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyl vpon Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and breake his strong arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wyl smyte the swerde out of his handes.

As for the Egyptians, I wyl scatter them among the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyl strengthe the arme of the kyng of Babylon, and geue him a swerde in his hande, but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so that he shall hold it before him pyteously lyke a wounded man.

Yea, I wyl stablyshe the king of Babylons arme, and the armes of Pharao shall fall downe that it may be knowen, that I am the Lorde which geue the kinge of Babylon my swerd in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon the land of Egypt, & that when I scatter the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, & strowe them in the landes about, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The xxxi Chapter.

A comparison of the prosperitie of Pharao with the prosperitie of the Assyrians. He prophesyeth a lyke destruction on to them both.

Moreouer, it happened in the eleuenth yere, the fyrst daye of the thyrde moneth, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatnes? Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus with fayre braunches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes & shotte out very hye: his toppes reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rōnde about the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sent out his lytel ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde.

Therfore was he hyer then al the trees of the felde and thowoe the multitude of waters that he sent fro him, he obtayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his braunches: vnder his bowes gendred al the bestes of the felde, & vnder his shadow dwelte al people. Fayre & bewtiful was he in his greatnes in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode besyde great waters, no Cedre tree might hyde hym. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyrrer tree like his braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his bewty, so saye & goodly had I made hym wyth the multitude of his braunches. In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God had enuy at hym.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God, for so moche as he hath lyft vp hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppes into the cloudes, and seynge his herte is proude in his hyghnes, I wyl deliuer him in to the handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, whiche shall rote hym out. Accordyng to his wyckednes wyl I cast hym away, & enemye shall destroie hym, and the myghty men of the heathen shall so scatter hym, that his braunches shall lye vpon all moūtaynes, and in al vales his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde & thowoe out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon hym, and all the wyld beasts of the felde shall go aboute amonge his braunches so that from henceforth, no tree in the water shall attayne to his hyghnesse, nor reache his toppes vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they al be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyl cause lamentacion to be made, I wyl couer the depe vpon hym, I wyl stanche his floudes, & the great waters shall be restrained. I shall cause Libanus to be forowful for his sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wyl make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fall when I cast hym downe to hell, with them that descende into the pyt. Al the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and al they that are plated vpon the waters shall mourne wyth hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hel wyth him, vnto them that he slayne wyth the swerde, whiche dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To whom shalte thou be lykened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the erth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircūcised, wyth them that he slayn with the swerde. Euen thus is it wyth Pharao and al his people, sayth the Lorde God.

The xxxii Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to bewaile Pharao the kyng of Egypte. He prophesyeth that destruction that come vnto Egypte thowoe the kyng of Babylon.

In the eleuenth yere, the first day of the tweluenth moneth, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao kyng of Egypt, & say vnto him: Thou arte reputed as a Lyon of the heathen, & as a whalespyhe in the see. Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete and stampst in the floudes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * I wyl sprede my net ouer the, namely, a great multitude of people, these shall dyspue the into my parne, for I wyl cast the vpon the lande: and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the. I wyl geue all the bestes of the felde prouche of the. Thy fleshe wyl I cast vpon the hylls, and fyl the vales wyth thy highnesse. I wyl water the lande

Esa. xlii. b lande with the aboundaunce of thy blood, even to the mountaynes, and the ryuers shal be ful of thy blood. When thou art put out, I wyll couer the heaue, and make his starres dymme * I wyll sprede a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the moone shall not geue her lycht. Al the lychtes, of heauen wyll I put oute ouer the, and byngge darkenesse vpon thy lande, saith the Lord God: I wyll trouble the hartes of many people, when I byngge thy destruction amonge the hepythen and countreyes, whom thou knowest not. Yea I wyll make manye people with theyr kynges so afrayde thowowe the, that theyr heer shal stand vp, when I shalke my swerde at theyr faces.

Sodaynly shal they be astonyed, euery man in himselfe, at the daye of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lord God, the kyng of Babylons swerde shal come vpon the, with y^e swerdes of the woorthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty among the Gentiles shal wast the proude pompe of Egypt, and byngg downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypt wyll I destroye, that they shal come nomore vpon y^e waters, so that neyther mans foote nor beastes clawe shal styre them any more. Then wyll I make theyr wayes depe, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth the Lord God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countreye with al that is therein, shal be layd wast, and when I smyte al them which dwel in it, that they maye knowe that I am the Lord. This is the mournynge that the daughters of the hepythen shal make. Yea, a sorowe and lamētacion shal they take vp vpon Egypte, and al her people, sayth the Lord God

Esa. xlii. c. Esa. xlii. c. In the xii. yere, the xv. daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: Take vp a lamētation vpo the people of Egypt, & cast the downe: yea them I say, & the myghty people of the hepythen also euen wth them * that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe into y^e graue. Downe (how saye so euer thou be) & lay the with y^e vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne wth the swerde, shal they lye. To the swerde is the already deliuered: therfore plucke downe to the grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghty woorthyes shal speake to him out of the hel & to his helpers that be gonne downe and lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

E Asur is there a so wth hys companye, and theyr graues rounde about, whiche were slayne and fell all with the swerde, whose graues lye helyde hym in the lowe pytte. His commens are buryed rounde aboute hys graue, all togyther wounded and slayne with the swerde, whiche men afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lypynge.

Jer. xlii. c. Jer. xlii. c. * There is Elam also wth all his people, & theyr graues round about: which al being wounded & slayne with the swerd are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheless somtyme brought feare into the lande of the lypynge: for y^e whiche they beare their shame, wth the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is g^uen them, and all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr graues are rounde about all them whiche be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thowowe the swerde: for seynge that in tymes past, they made the lande of the lypynge afrayed, they must now beare theyr owne shame, with them that godowne to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesek also and Tubal, and theyr people, and theyr graues rounde aboute. These al are among the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne wth the swerde, bycause afore tyme they made the lande of the lypynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also among y^e woorthyes & vncircumcised gyautes: which wth theyr weapons are gone downe to hel whose swerdes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednes is vpon theyr bones: bycause that as woorthyes they haue brought feare into the lande of the lypynge. Yea, among the vncircumcised shal thou be destroyed, and slepe with them that perished thowowe the swerde.

There is y^e lande of * Edom with her kinges and princes also, which with theyr strength are layed by them that were slayne wth y^e swerd, yea, among the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. More ouer, there be al the princes of the north, wth all the Sydonians, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With theyr feare and strength they are come to confusio, and lye there vncircumcised among those that be slayne with the swerde, and beare theyr owne shame, with them y^e be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe when Pharao seeth this, he shal be comforted ouer al his people, that is slayne with the swerde, both Pharao and al his host. Sayth y^e Lord God. For I haue giuen my feare in the lande of the lypynge. But Pharao and al his people shal lye amonge the vncircumcised and amonge them that be slayne with y^e swerde sayth the Lord God.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The xxxiii. Chapter. He setteth out the offyce of a curate that preacheth the Gospel. He strengtheneth them that byspaze, and boldeueth them with the promysse of mercy. The word of the Lord agaynst the remanant of the people, agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

Gayn, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man Speake to the children of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swerde vpon a land, yf the people of the lande take a man of theyr countrey, and set hym to be theyr watchman, the same man (when he seeth the swerde come vpon the lande) shal blowe the trompet and warne the people.

Yf a man now beare the noyse of the trompet & wyl not be warned, and the swerde come and take hym away, his blood shal be vpon his owne heed: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, and wolde not take heed, therfore his blood be vpon hym. But yf he wyl receyue warnynge, he shal saue hys lyfe.

A gayne, yf the watchman se the swerde come and he we it not with the trompette, so that the people people is not warned: yf the swearde come then and take any man from amonge them: the same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne synne, but his blood wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

* And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest anye thyng oute of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. Yf I saye vnto the wicked: thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye: and yf I saye vnto the righteous: thou shalt surely lyue. But thou shalt surely dye in his owne synne, but his blood wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheless, yf thou warne the wicked of his waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyl not be turned from it, then shall he dye by cause of his syn, but thou shalt deliuered thy soule.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yea say thus. Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we are corrupte in them, how shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe. Tell them: * As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but moche rather that yf wycked turne from hys waye, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes: O ye of the house of Israel, wherfore wyll ye dye?

O thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of the people. * The ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shal not saue him, whensoever he turneth a waye vnfaythfull ye. Agayne, the wyckednesse of the wycked shal not hurte him, whensoever he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse.

And the ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shal not saue his lyfe, whensoever he synneth. Yf I say vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his owne rightousnesse, and do synne, then shall hys ryghteousnesse be nomore thought vpon, but in yf wyckednes that he hath done he shall dye. * Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked, thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from hys synnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryght. In somoch that the same wycked man giueth yf pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robberye, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wrong. Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea, the synnes that he hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon. For in somoch as he doth new the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Truly, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, but they lye, where as they owne waye is rather vnrigh.

When the ryghteous turneth from his ryghtousnesse, and doth the thyng that is wycked, he shal dye therfore. But yf the wicked turne from his wickednes, doing the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye say * the way of yf lord is not equal: O ye house of Israel. * I wyl iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

In the twelue yere, the fyfth daye of the fyfth moneth of our captiuitie, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cytie is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the eunyng afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntill the moynynge that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouth. So that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayd: O thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: nowe are we many, and the land is giue vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the blood haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyfte vp vnto ydols, * and haue shed blood: shall ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon your swerdes, ye worke abominations, euery one defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: and shall he then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wilderness shall be slayned with yf swerde: whatsoeuer is vpon the felde I wyl gyue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and denes, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wyl make the land so desolate and waste and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes of Israel shalbe so wast that no man shall trauaile therby.

* Then shal they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate by cause of all theyr abominations, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles, and in the doores of theyr houses, sayinge one to an other. Come, lette vs heare what word is gone forth from the Lorde. These come vnto the, after yf maner of a great people: yea as who sayth they were my people, they lyt downe before the, & heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter, * for in their mouthes they make a iest of them, and they herte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre, and as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunt to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyl not do thereafter. Whe this cometh to passe (for lo: it cometh in dede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Agaynst shepherdes and curates that despyse the flocke of Christ, and seeke theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyl visite his dispersed flocke, and gather them together. He reioyceth the malice of certayn of the flocke he promyseth the trewe shepherdes Corryntians: and wyl hym peace.

And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophecy agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophecy and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. * Wo be vnto the shepherdes of Israel, that fede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fat, ye haue clothed you with the wol: the best fed haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weak haue ye not holden vp * the syncke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue ye not ye not sought, but *churlyshly & cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus are they scattred here and there without a shepherde: yea, all the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and they go astraye.

My shepe go wandrynge vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euery hye hyl: Yea, they be scattred abrode in all felde, and ther is no man that careth for them, or seketh after them. Therefore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue forsomuche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beastes of the felde, haung no shepherde: & scinge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues only, and not my shepe. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I my selfe wyll vpon the shepherdes: and requyre my shepe from theyr handes, and make them ceasse from fedynge of my shepe: yea, the shepherdes shall fede them selues nomore. For I wyll deliuer my shepe out of theyr mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayth the Lorde God:

Isa. lxxv. b.
Isa. lxxv. c. a.

* Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepherd among the flocke seketh after the shepe that are scattred abrode, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them togyther out of al places, where they haue ben scattred in the cloudy and darke day. I wyll bypunge them oute from all people, and gather them togyther out of all landes. I wyll bypunge them into their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the country. I wyll fede them in right good pastures, & vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall theyr foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

Luke. lxxv. b.
John. x. a.

I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, & bypunge them to theyr rest, sayeth the Lorde God. * Suche as be lost, wyll I seke: suche as go astraye, wyll I bypunge agayne: suche as be wounded, wyll I bynde vp: suche as be weake wyll I make strong, suche as be fat & stronge, those wyll I roote out, and fede them with the thyng that is lawfull.

Mat. xxv. c.

E And as for you (O my shepe) sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers and the goates. Was it not ynough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe & resydue of your pasture with your feet also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye must trouble the resydue also wyth your feet?

Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thyng, that ye haue troden downe with your feet, and to drynke it, that ye with your feet haue defyled. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll leuer the fatte shepe from the leane: for somuche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulters, and runne vpon them with your hornes, so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattred them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yea, I wyll discerne one shepe from another. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one only shep-herde, euen my seruante * David, he shall fede them, and he shall be theyr shepherde. I the Lorde wyll be theyr God, and my seruante * David shall be theyr kynce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it

Moreover, I wyll make a couenant of peace with them, and bypue all euyl beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperite wyll I gyue them and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyl. * A prosperous shewe and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wood may bypunge forth theyr frutes, and the ground her encrease. They shall be safe in theyr lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lorde, which haue broken their yoke, and deliuered them oute of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall nomore be spoyled of the heythens, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffre nomore hunge in the lande, neyther beare the reproche of the heythens any more. Thus shall they vnderstande, that I the Lorde theyr God am with them, & that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayeth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke, * ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayth the Lorde God.

The xxxv Chapter.

The destruction that shall come on the hyl Seir, that is on the Idumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

Moreover, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mount Seir, prophete vpon it, and say vnto it. Thus sayth the Lorde God:

Beholde (O thou mount Seir) I wyll vpon the. I wyll reache out myne hande ouer the yea, waste and desolate wyl I make the. Thy cities wyll I byrake downe, and thou shalt lye boyde: that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * For somuche as thou bearest an olde enemyte agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and hast drawn the chyldren of Israel vpon the swearde, what tyme as they were troubled and punysshed for theyr synne. Therefore, as truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: I wyll prepare the vnto bloode: yea, bloode shall folowe vpon the: * scinge thou layest wayte for blood, therefore shall bloode persecute the. Thus wyll I make the mount Seir desolate and waste, and bypunge to passe, that there shall no man go thither, nor come from thence. Hys mountaynes wyll I fyll with his slayne me: thy hylles, valleyes, and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I wyll make the a perpetual wyldernesse, so that thy cities shall not turne to theyr former estate, that ye may know how that I am the Lorde.

And because thou hast sayde: what, bothe these nacjons, and bothe these landes must be myne, & I wyll haue them in possession * where as the Lorde was there. Therefore thus sayeth the the Lord God: as truly as I live, I will handle thee according to thy wrath and jealousy like as thou hast dealt cruelly with them, that I may be known among them, how I have punished the sea, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord have heard all the despytefull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and gyven vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boost agaynst me, yea, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue heard altogether. Whereunto thus sayeth the Lord God: to the love of all the worlde will I make the waste. * And lyke as thou (O mounte Sion) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: even so will I do vnto the also, that whole Edom shalbe destroyed, and know, that I am the Lord.

¶ The xxxvi. Chapter.

He promyseth the deliuerance of the Gentiles vnto Israel. The benefites done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercie of God, & not vnto thei deservynges. God reneweth our vertues, that we may walke in his commaundementes.

In the sonne of man, prophete vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: * Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God, because your ene my hath sayde vpon you: Aha, the hye euerspringe places are now become ours, prophete therfore, and speake, thus sayth the Lord God: Seeing ye be wasted and troden downe oneuery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles: which haue brought you into mens mouthes, and vnto an euill name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lord God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wyldernes and desolate cities, which are spoiled, and had in derision oneuery syde, among the residue of the hepten: Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lord God. In the fyre of my jealousy haue I taken a deuice agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, and agaynst all Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioysed from thei whole herte wyth a despytefull stomake, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleyes and dales thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, this haue I deuised in my jealousy and terrible wrath. For somoche as ye haue suffered reproofe of the hepten, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God. I haue sworn that the Gentyles which lye about you, shall beare thei confusion theselues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shal shote out your braunches, & byng forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that it wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I tourne me, that ye maye be tyllled and sowne.

I wyl sende you moche people, which shalbe of all the house of Israel, the cyties shalbe inhabited, and the decayed places shalbe repayred agayne: I wyl proude you wyth moche people and cattel: which shal encrease and byng frute: I wyl restore you also to your olde estate, and shewe you more kindnes then euer ye had before wherby ye shal knowe that I am the Lord: Yea people wyl I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shal haue the in possession, and shal be thei enherytaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be wyth them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as they saue vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eat nomore men, nei ther destroy thy people any more sayth the Lord God. And I wyl not suffre the, for to beare thyne owne confusyon, amonge the Gentyles from henceforth. Thou shalte not beare the reproofe of the nacyns, nor cast oute thyne owne people any more, sayth the Lord God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, when I house of Israel dwelt vpon thei owne ground, they despyled the selues wyth thei owne wapes and ymaginacions: so that in my syght thei wape was lyke the vnclenes of a menstruous woman wherfore, I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloode that they had shed in the lande, and because of thei ydolles, wherwyth they had despyled them selues. I scattered them also among the hepten, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accordynge to thei wapes, and after thei owne inuencyons, so dyd I punyssh them.

* Nowe when they were gone vnto the hepten, and come in among them, they dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of thei owne land? Then spared I my holy name whych the house of Israel had dyshonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therfore tel the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake which ye dishonoured among the hepten, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyl halowe my great name agayne which among the Gentiles is euill spoken of: for ye your selues haue dyshonoured it among them. And the Gentiles shal knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before thei eyes, sayth the Lord God.

As for you, I wyl take you from among the hepten, and gather you together out of all countries, and bynge you agayne into your owne lande. * Then wyl I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shalbe cleane: yea, from all your vnclennes, and fro all your ydols shal I cleanse you. A newe herte also wyl I geue you, and a newe spirite wyl I put vnto you. As for that stony herte, I wyl take it out of your bodye, and geue you a fleshy hert. I wyl geue my spyrite among you * and cause you to walke in my commaundementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And soye shal dwel in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shal be my people, and I wyl be your God. I wyl helpe you oute of all of all your uncleannes. I wyll call for the corne, and wyll encrease it, and let you haue no hūgre. I wyll multiplie the frutes of the trees, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare nomore reproche of hūgre among the hepten. Then shal ye remembre youre owne wycked wayes, and your ymaginacyons, whyche were not good: so that ye shal thynke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abominacyons.

G But I wyll not do this for your sakes (sayth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde God: What time as I shal clesse you from all your offences, then wyll I make the cities to be occupied agayne, & wyll repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be buylded agayne, which afore tyme lay waste in the sight of all them that went by. Then shal it be sayd: this wastelande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cyties are now strong and defenced agayne. Then the resydue of the hepten that lye rounde about you, shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broke downe, and plant agayne that that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Jerem. l. a. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet ones be found agayn of the house of Israel, & do this for them: * I shal encrease them as a stocke of men. Like as the holp stocke and the stocke of Ierusalem are in the solempne feastes: so shal also the wyld waste cities be filled with stockes of men: & they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The prophecie of the byngynge agayne of the people, being in captiuitie. He sheweth the vniō of the ten trybes with the two.

A The hand of the Lorde came vpon me and caried me out in the spirite of the Lorde and let me down in a playne felde, that lay ful of bones, & heled me roūd about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde were very many, and merueylous dyde also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered, O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones and speake vnto them. Ye dyde bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Behold, I wil put bryth vnto you, that ye may lyue: I wyll geue you sinowes and make flesh growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: & so geue you * bryth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe that I am the Lorde.

Jerem. li. b

So I prophecyed, as he had comaunded me: And as I was prophecyng, there came a noyse and a great moētion, so that the bones ran euery one to an other. Now whē I had looked, behold, they had synowes, and flesh growe vpon them: and aboute they were couered with skynne, but there was no bryth in them. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophecy thou toward the wynde: prophecy: and speake to the wynde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God. Come (O thou sonne) from the foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these flayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I C prophecyed as he had comaunded me: then came the bryth into them, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vpon their feet, a merueylous great sorte.

Moreover, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dyed vpon, our hope is gone, we are cleane cutte of. Therefore D prophecy thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, and bynge you into the lande of Israel agayne. So shal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open youre graues, and bynge you out of them. My spyrite also wyll I put in you, and ye shal lyue: I wyll set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shal knowe that I am the Lorde which haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, take a stycke, & wyte vpon it. Vnto Iuda and to the chldren of Israel his companions. Then take an other stycke and wyte vpon it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israel his companions. And then take bothe these together in thyne hande, so shal there be one styck therof. Nowe ys the chyliden of the people saye vnto the: wylt thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answer: thus sayth the Lorde God. Behold, * I wyll take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his fellows, and wyll put them to the stocke of Iuda, and make them one stocke, and they shal be one in my hande: and the two styckes whereupon thou wytest, shalte thou haue in thyne hande, that they maye se, and shal saye vnto them.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take away the chyliden of Israel from amonge the hepten, vnto whome they be gone, & wyll gather them together on euery syde, and bynge them agayne into their owne lande: Yea, I wyll make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shal haue but one kynge. They shal nomore be two peoples from henceforth, neyther be deuēded into two kyngdomes: they shal also despyle them selues nomore with their abominacions, ydols, and all their wycked doinges. I wyll helpe them out of all their dwellynge places, wherein they haue synned: and wyll so clesse them, that they shal be my people, and I theyr God.

Dauid my seruaunt shal be their kynge, and they all shal haue one shepherde only. They shal walke in my lawes, and my comaundementes shal they bothe kepe and fulfill. They shal dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea, euen in the same lande shal they, their chyliden, and theyr chyliden chyliden dwell for euermore, and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their euermore lasting prince. Moreover, I wil make a bond of peace peace wyth them, whyche shall be vnto them an euerlastyng couenaunt. I wyll sette them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarpe wyll I set among them for evermore. * My dwelling shall be with them: yea, I wyl be theyr God, and they shall be my people. Thus the heythen also shall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holpe maker of Israel, when my sanctuarpe shall be among the for evermore.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The propheth that Gog and Magog shall come wyth an appointed host into the lande of promysse. Theyr intent. He reherseb that the comyng of Gog was before prophethed of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou son of man, turne thy face toward Gog y lande of Magog, which is the chefe pryncce at Mesech and Tubal: prophete agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou chefe pryncce of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll turne the aboute, and put a byt in thy chaues: I wyll byynge the forth and all thy host, both horse and horsemen, whiche be all weapened of the best fastyon, a great people, that handle altogether speares, shylbes, and swerdes: the Berles, Morians, and with them the Libians, which all beare shildes and helmettes: Sommer and all hys hostes, the house of Chogorizma out of the north quarters, and all his hostes: yea and moche people wyth the.

Therfore prepare the, sette thy selfe in aray wyth all thy people, that are come vnto the by hapes, and be thou the defence. After many dayes thou shalt be vsited, and in the latter yeres thou shalt come into y lande that hath bene destroyed wyth the swerde, and nowe is replemyshed agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whyche haue longe lpen waste: yea, they be brought out of the nacyns, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp lyke a stormy wether, to couer the land, and as it were a darke cloude, thou with all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people wyth the.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagin mischefe, and saye: I wyll vp to ponder playne lande, seynge they spt at ease, & dwell so safely (for they dwell al without any walles, they haue neither barres nor dozes) to spoyle them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon their so wel inhabited wildernesses agaynst that people, that is gathered togyther from amonge the heythen, whych haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba & Dedan, and the marchantes of Charis with al theyr worthies say vnto the: Arte thou come to robbe? Haste thou gathered thy people togyther, bicause thou wilt spoyle: to take syluer and golde, to carpe awaye cattell and good, and to haue a great praye?

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophete, and saye vnto Gog. Thus sayth the Lorde God: In that day thou shalt know that my people of Israel dwelleth safe, and shalt come from thy place out of y north partes: thou and moche people wyth the, whyche ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the land. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyll byynge the vp into my lande, that the heythen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before theyr eyes.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou arte he of whom I haue spoken aforetyme by my seruantes the prophetes of Israel which proph. cied in those dayes and yeres, that I shulde byynge the vpon them. At the same tyme when Gog cometh vp into y lande of Israel (sayth the Lorde God) shall my indignaciō go forth in my wrath. For in my gelouspe and hote displeasure I haue deuised * that there shall be a great trouble in the lande of Israel at that tyme. The very fishes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, shall tremble for feare of me.

The hylls also shall be turned vpsydedowne, the stayres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synke to the grounde. I wyll call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes sayth y Lorde God: so that euery mans swerde shall be vpon an other. With pestilence and blood wyll I punyssh hym, stormy rayne and hayle stones, fyre, and byrmstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, yea, and vpon all that greete people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnified, honoured, and knowe among the heythen: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

The xxxix. Chapter.

The sheweth the destructiō of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and his host. He prophetheth that Gog and his company shall be deuoured of byrdes and beastes, wherfore the house of Israel is wasted: Theyr bringyng agayne from captiuitie is promysed.

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, prophete agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O Gog, thou chefe pryncce at Mesech and Tubal, I wyl vpon the, and punyssh the with sylre playges and lead the from the north partes, & byynge the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wyl smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy ryght hand. Thou wyth all thyne heape, and all the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wyll I gyue the vnto foules & wyld beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vpon the felde: for enen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

Into Magog, and amonge them that spt so careless in the ples: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, I wyl make also y name of my holines to be knowe amonge my people of Israel: and I wyl not let my holy name be euill spoken of any more: but the very heythen also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holpe one of Israel: Beholde, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. This is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

They that dwell in the cyties of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapons: and burne them: shylbes and speares, bowes and arrowes, bylles & clubbes, seuen yeares shall they be burninge thereof, so that they shall elles bypunge no styckes from the felde, neither haue nede to be w downe out of the wood. For they shall haue weapons ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoiled them, sayth the Lorde God. At the same tyme wyll I gyue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valleie wherethorowe men go from the east to the seewarde. Those that traunsp therby, shall stop the yres noses for steeche. There shall Gog & all his people be buried: & it shall be called the valleie of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the lande. Yea, all the people of the lande shall bury them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be deed buryers, euer going thorowe the lande, and appoynt the certayne places to burye those in, which remaine vpon the felde, that the lande may be cleansed. Fro ende to ende shall they seke, and that seuen monethes long. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, tyll the deed buryers haue buried it also, in the valleie of the people of Gog. And the name of the cypre shall be called Hamonah (that is a multitude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lord God. Speake vnto al the foules & euerie byrde, yea, & to all the wyld beasts of the felde, heape you togyther & come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate fleshe, and drynke bloode. Ye shall Spoc. xij. d. eate the flesh of the worthyes, and drynke the bloode of the prynces of the lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be al slayne at Basan. Eate the fatte pour belly full, and drynke bloode, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, whych I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table with horses and stronge horsemen, with captaynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lorde God.

I wyll bypunge my gloze also amonge the Geytes, that all the hepten maye se my iudgement, that I haue kept, and my hande whych I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israel may knowe how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the hepten shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde into captiuitie: it was for theyr wyckednesse sake, because they offended me.

For the whych cause I hydde my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of theyr ennemys, that they myght all be slayne with the swerde. Accordynge to theyr vncleynesse and vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hydde my face from them.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now wyll I bypunge agayne the captiues of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, & be gealous for my holy names sake. All their confusio and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye, and so safelye shall they dwell in theyr lande, that noman shall make them afraid. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of theyr enemies landes, and am prayled in them before many hepten: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whych suffred them to be ledde into captiuitie amonge the hepten, but now haue I brought them agayne into theyr owne lande, & not lefte one of them yonder.

After that wyll I hyde my face nomore from them. *but wyll poure out my spyrite vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lorde God.

The xl. Chapter.

The restoring of the cyties of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the xxv. yere of our captiuitie in the begynnynge of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the xiiij. yere after that the cytie was smytten downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and carped me for the: euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and set me downe vpon a metuapulous hye mountayn whereupon there was a buyliding (as it had ben of a cypre) towarde the north.

Ther he carped me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, which had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meterod also. He stode in the doze, and said vnto me: thou sonne of man marke well with thyne eyes, hearken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne herte, whatsoeuer I shall shewe the, for to present that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And whatsoeuer thou seest thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the meterodde that he had in his hande was syre cubytes longe, and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buylidinge, which was a meterodde, and the heygth also a meterod. Then came he vnto the east doze, and went vp the stappes, & measured the postes of the doze, wherof euery one was a meterodde thicke: Euery chambze was a meterod longe & brode betwene the chambzes were fyue cubytes. The post of the doze within the porche, was one meterodde. He measured also the porche of the innermer doze, whych conteyned a meterodde. Then measured he the entry of the doze, that is sayned cyght cubytes, & his pillars two cubites and thys entrye stode inwarde.

The chambzes of the dooze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pylles also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, whiche was ten cubytes, and the heygth of the doze thytene cubytes. The edge before the chambzes was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambzes syre cubytes wyde of eether syde. He measured the the doze from the rydge of one chambze to another, whose wydenes was. xxv. cubites, and one doze stode agaynst an other. He made pylers al so. lx. cubytes hie, rounde about the court doze. Before the inwarde part vnto the fore entrie of the innermoze doze, were fifty cubites. The chambzes & thre pylers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze had syde wyndowes. So had y fore entries also, whose wyndowes went round about wythin. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into y fore court where as were chambzes and paved workes, made in the fore court round about. xxx. chambzes vpon one paved worke. Now the paved worke was a longe beside y dozes, and y was the lower paved worke. After this he measured the bredth from the lower doze, vnto the innermoze court of the outsyde, whiche had an hundred cubytes vpon the east and the north parte. And the doze in the uttermost court towarde the north, measured he after the length and bredth: hys thre chambzes also on either syde, with hys pylers and fore entries: which had euen the measure of the fyrst doze. His heygth was. l. cubites, the bredth. xxv. cubites, his wyndowes and porches w his date trees, had euen like measure as the doze toward the east: there were seuen steppes to go vp vpon and thre porche before them. Nowe the doze of the inner court stode streight ouer agaynst the doze, that was toward the Northeast. From one doze to an other he measured. c. cubytes.

After that, he brought me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward y south: whose pylers and porches he measured, these hadde the fyrst measure: and wth thre porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyrste wyndowes. The heygth was. l. cubytes, the bredth. xxv. wth steppes to go vp vpon: his porch stode before with hys pylers and date trees on eyther syde. And y doze of the inner court stode toward the south and he measured from one doze to an other hundred cubytes. So he brought me into the innermoze court, thowoe the doze of the southsyde which he measured: and it had the measure aforesayde. In lyke maner hys chambzes pylers and fore entries, had euen the fore sayd measure also. And he had with hys porches rounde about wyndowes of. l. cubytes heygth, and. xxv. cubytes brode. The porches rounde aboute were. xxv. cubytes longe, and fyue cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the uttermost court vpon hys pylers, there were date trees and eyght steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into the inmooste court vpon the eastsyde, and measured the doze accordyng to the measure aforesayd, his chambzes, pylers and porches had euen the same measure as the fyrste had: and wth hys porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was. l. cubytes, the bredth. xxv. cubytes, hys porche reached vnto the uttermooste court: hys pylers also had date trees on eyther syde, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doze, and measured it, whiche also had the foresayde measure. His chambzes, pylers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was. l. cubytes, and the bredth. xxv. His pylers stode towarde the vtmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambze also whose entraunce was at the doze pylers, and there the burnt offeringes were washed.

In the doze porche there stode on eyther syde y two tables for the slaughtynge: to slay the burnt offeringes: syn offeringes, and trespass offeringes thereupon. And on the outsyde as men go forth to the north doze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on eyther syde of the doze, that is. vi. tables, wherupon they slaughtered. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offeringes of a cubyte and an halfe longe and brode, & one cubyte hie: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornaments whych were vsed to the burnt and slayne offeringes: when they were slaughtered. And within there were hokes foure fyngers brode, fastened rounde about to hange fleshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offerynge fleshe. On the outsyde of the innermoze doze were the syngers chambzes in the inwarde court besyde the North doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also besyde the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambze on the southsyde belongeth to the preestes, that kepe the habytacyon: and thys toward the north is the preestes that wayte vpon the altar: whiche be the sonnes of *Sadoch that do seruise before the Lorde in steade of the chyldzen of Levi. So he measured the forecourt, which had in length an hundred cubytes, and a smooche in bredth by the foure corners. Nowe the altar stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entrie of the house, and measured the walles by the entrie doze, which were fyue cubytes long on eyther syde. The thynknesse also of the doze on eyther syde, was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was. xx. cubytes: the bredth. xi. cubytes and vpon steppes went men vp to it, by the walles also were pylers on eyther syde one.

The xlii. Chapter.

The disposicion and decuple of buyldynge agayne the temple and the other thynges thereto belongynge.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes whych were of both sydes fyue cubytes thynke, accordyng to the widenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the doze on eyther syde fyue cubytes. He measured the length thereof, whiche conteyned fourty cubytes, and the bredth twentye. Then went he in and measured the doze pooles, whiche were two cubytes thynke: but the doze it selfe was fyue cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was seuen cubytes. He measured the length & bredth thereof, which were euery one twentye cubites, before y temple.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the holpest of all he measured also the wall of the house, whiche was fyue cubytes. The chambzes y stode rounde about about the house, were euery one foure cubytes wyde: and one stode harde vpon an other, wherof there were: xxxiii. there stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were, the hygher the wyder, and had steppes thozowe them rounde aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men might go to the hyest by the myddle chambres. I sawe also that þe house was very hye rounde about. The foundacyon of the syde chambres was a meterod, that is. vi. cubytes bzyde. The thycknesse of the syde wall wythoute, contepned. v. cubytes, and so vnd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

But wene the chambres was the wydenesse. xx. cubytes rounde aboute the house. The chambre doozes stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one doze was towarde the north, the other towarde the south: and the thycknesse of the out wall was v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldyng that was separated towarde the west, was. lxx. cubytes wyde, the wall of the buyldyng was v. cubytes thycke rounde about, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house, which was an. c. cubytes longe, and the separated buyldyng with the wall, were an. c. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house, and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an hundred cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyldyng before & behynde with the chambres vpon both the sydes, and it contepned an. c. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pylers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer wyth boozdes: and thus was it aboue the dooze vnto the inmost house, & without also. Yea, the whole wall on euery syde, both within & without was syled ouer w great boozdes. There were Cherubins & date trees made also, so that one datetree stode euer betwxt two cherubins. One cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge asyde towarde the datetree, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde about in all the house. Yea, the Cherubins & datetrees were made from the grounde vpon the dooze, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

D The hye postes of the temple were four squared, & the fallpon of the Sanctuarpe was: euen as it appered vnto me afore in the vision. The table was of wood. iii. cubytes hye, and. ii. cubytes lunge: his corners, the length & the walles were of wood. And he sayde vnto me: This is þe table that shall stande before þe Lorde. The temple and the holpest of al had eyther of them two dozes, and euery doze had two lytle wyckettes, which were folden in one vpon an other, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple there were made Cherubins and datetrees, lyke as vpon the walles, and a great thycke balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Upon both the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes & datetrees, haupnge beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambres of the temple for the prestes, and the holy thynges.

When carped he me out into þe forecourt towarde the north, and brought me into the chambre that stode ouer agaynst the back buyldyng northwarde which had the length of an hundred cubytes, whose doze turned towarde the north. The wydenesse contepned fyfty cubytes, ouer agaynst the xx. cubytes of the innermer court, & agaynst the paved worke that was in the court, beside al the thre there stode pylers, one ouer agaynst an other. And before this chambre there was a walkyng place of. x. cubytes wide, & within was a way of one cubyte wyde, and the doozes towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest & myddlemoost of the buyldyng, for they bare chambre vpon chambre and stode thre togyther one vpon an other, not hauing pylers like the forecourt: therfore were they smaller then those beneth, & in the myddest to reken from the grounde vwarde.

The wall about that stode by the chambres, towarde the vtermost court vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was. l. cubytes longe, for the length of þe vtermost chambres in the forecourt was. l. cubytes also: but the length therof before the temple was an. c. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intraunce of þe east syde, wher by a man myght go into the out of the forecourt thozow the thycke wal of the forecourt towarde the east, ryght ouer agaynst the separated buyldyng: Before the same buyldyng vpon this side there were chambres also, which had a way vnto them, lyke as the chambre of the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

The intraunce, fallpon, and dozes were also of the same maner. Yea, euen lyke as the other chambre doozes were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambres towarde the north and þe south which stande before the backe buyldyng: those be holy habitacions, wherin the prestes that do seruyce before the Lorde, must eate the moost holy offerpynges: and there must they laye the moost holy offerpynges: meate offerpynges, syn offerpynges, and trespasse offerpynges: for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shall not go out into the forecourt: but (singe they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of theyr mynistacyon, and put on other garmentes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thozow the east parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde wyth the meterodde, which rounde aboute contapned. v. c. meterodes: And the north syde measured he, which contepned rounde aboute euen so moche. The other two two sydes also toward the south and the west, whiche he measured, conteyned eyther of them foure hundred metrodde. So he measured all þe foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde about foure hundred metrodde longe, & as brode also whiche separated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ The xliii. Chapter.

¶ He seeth the gloire of God goynge into the Temple, from whence it had before departed. He mencioneth the ydolatre of the chyldren of Israel, for the whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentance.

So he brought me to the doze that turneth toward the east. Beholde then came the gloire of the God of Israel, from out of the east, whose voyce was like a great noyse of waters and the earth was lychtened with his gloire. Hys syght to loken vpon was like the fyr that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cite shuld haue ben destroyed: and lyke the vision that I sawe by the water of Eobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the gloire of the Lorde came into the house, & shone the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp and brought me into the innermer courte, & beholde: the house was ful of the gloire of þe Lorde.

I heard one speakynge vnto me out of the house: and there stode one by me, that sayd vnto me: O thou sone of man, this roune is my seat and the place of my fote steps, where as I wyll dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel for evermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomore defyle my holy name: neyther they, nor theyr kynges thowowe theyr whoredome, thowowe theyr hye places, and thowowe þe dead bodies of their kynges: whiche haue buylded theyr thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thresholds, and theyr postes almost at my postes: and a wal betwixt me and them. Thus haue they defyled my holy name with theyr abhomyacions, & they haue comytted. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But now they shal put away their whoredome, and the deed bodies of theyr kynges out of my syght, that I maye dwell among them for evermore. ¶ Therefore O thou sonne of man shewe thou the household of Israel a temple that they maye be ashamed of theyr wyckednesse and measure the selues an exemple therat.

And when they be ashamed of al theyr wyckednes, then shewe them the fourme and fashion of the temple, the compynge in, the goynge oute, al the maner and description therof. Yea, all the vylles and ordynances of it, that they may kepe & fulfill all the fashyons and customes therof.

¶ This is the description of the house. A boue vpon the mounte rounde about al the corners, it shalbe the holdest of all. Beholde, that is the description and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the altare, after þe true cubyte: which is a spanne longer then an other cubyte, his bottom in the mydd was a cubyte longe and wyde and the ledge that went rounde about it, was a spanne brode. This is the heygth of the altare. From the ground to the lower steps, the length is two cubytes: and the bredthe one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the hygher, are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

* The altare was foure cubytes hye, & from the altare vwarde stode foure hornes, and it was twelue cubytes longe, and twelue cubites brode vpon the foure corners: the couerynge of þe altare was fourtene cubytes long and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute had halfe a cubyte, and the botto me therof rounde aboute one cubyte: his steps stode toward the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God these are þe ordynances and lawes of the altare in the daye when it is made to offre burnte offerynges, and to spynkle bloode ther vpon. To þe prestes, to the Leuites that be of the seed of Sadoch: and treade before me to dome seruice, sayeth the Lorde God. Vnto these gyue thou a pong bullocke for a synne offering: and take þe blood of hym, and spynkle his foure hornes withal: & the foure corners of the altare couerynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute, here wyth shalte thou clense it, & reconeyle it. * Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the synne offering, and burne hym in a seuerall place without the Sanctuary. The nexte daye, take a gote bucke, with oute blemyshe for a synne offering, to reconeyle the Altare wythall, lyke as it was reconeyled wyth the bullocke.

Nowe when thou hast made it cleane, then offer a ponge bullocke without blemyshe, and a ramme oute of the flocke wythout blemyshe al so. Offre them before the Lorde, and let þe prest cast salt ther vpon, and giue them so vnto the Lorde for a burnt offering. Seuen dayes shalt thou bynge euery daye a gote bucke for synne. A ponge bullocke and a ram of the flocke, bothe without blemyshe, shal they offre. Seuen dayes shal they reconeyle and clense the altare, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyed, then vpon the eyghte daye and so forth, the prestes shal offer theyr burnt offeringes and helth offeringes vpon the altare: so I wyll be merciful vnto pou, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ He sheweth what doze of the temple is shutte. He is commaunded to bydayd the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcised in herte, and in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the seruyce of the temple: and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wolde haue admittred into the holy place, and also theyr offence.

After this he brought me agayne to the outwarde doze of the Sanctuarie on the east syde & that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me, this doze shalbe stil shut and not opened for any man to go thowowe it: but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea, he shal go thowowe it, elles shal it be shut styll. The bynce hym selfe shal come thowowe it, that he maye eate breade before the Lorde. At the portche shal he come in, and there shal he goo oute agayne. Then brought he me to the doze vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde the gloire of the Lorde fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face.

So the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten thyss to thyne herte: beholde, and take take diligent hede to all that I wyl lape vnto the concernynge all the ordynauces of y^e Lord and all his lawes: ponder well with thynne herte the comynge in of the house and the goynge forth of the Sanctuary: and tell that obstynate household of Israel: Thus sayth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe done ynoughe wth all your abhominacyons, seynge, that ye haue broughte into my Sanctuarie straunges, haupnge vncircumcysed hertes and flesch, where thowowe my Sanctuarie is defyled, when ye offre me breade, fat, and bloode.

C Thus with all your abhominacyons ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kept the holy ordynauces of my Sanctuarie: but let keepers of my Sanctuarie, euen after your owne mynde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: of all the straungers that dwelle amonge the chyldren of Israel, no straunger whose herte and flesche is not circumcysed, shal come within my Sanctuarie: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe from me: and haue disceyued y^e people of Israel wth all errors, goynge after theyr Idols: therefore shal they beare theyr owne wickednes. Shuld they be set and ordeyned to minyster vnder the doores of the house of my Sanctuarie? And to do seruyce in the house: to slape burntofferings & sacryfices for the people: to stande before them and to serue them, seynge the seruyce that they do them, is before theyr ydols, & cause the house of Israel to stumble thowowe theyr wyckednes?

iii. reg. ii. f.

I For the which cause I haue plucked out my hande ouer them, sayeth the Lord God: so that nowe they must beare theyr owne iniquity, and not to come nye me to serue me with theyr presthode, in my Sanctuarie, and most holpest of all that they may beare theyr owne shame and abhominacyons, which they haue done. Shuld I vse them to be porters of the house, and to al the seruyce that is done therein? But the prestes, the Leuites, the sonne of * Sadoch, that kepeth y^e holy ordynauces of my Sanctuarie, when y^e chyldren of Israel were gone from me, shal come to me to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloode: sayth the Lord.

E They shal go into my Sanctuarie, & trade before my table: to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynauces. Nowe when they go in at the doores of the innermer court: they shal put on linnen clothes, so that no wollecnye come vpon them whyle they do seruice vnder y^e doores of the innermer court and within. They shal haue sayze linnen bonettes vpon theyr heedes, & linnen byches vpon their loynes, which in their labour they shal not put about them. And whē they go forth to y^e people into y^e outward court, they shal put of the clothes, wherein they haue minystred, and laye them in the habitacyon of y^e Sanctuarie, and put on other apparel, lest they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes.

* They shal thewe my people the difference betwene the holy and vnholy, betwixt y^e clean and vnclean. If any discorde arysse they shal discern it: and giue sentence after my iudgements. My sollemne feastes, my lawes and ordynauces shal they kepe, and hallowe my Sabbothes. * They shal come at no deade person to desyle them selues, except it be father or mother sonne or doughter, brother or syster, that hath had yet no husband, in such may they be defiled

And when he is censed, there shal be reckened vnto hym seuen dayes: and yf he go into y^e Sanctuarie agayne to do seruyce, he shal bypnyng a sin offering, sayth the Lord God. * They shal haue an he. i. age: yea I my self wyl be theyr heritage elles shal ye gyue them no possession in Israel, for I am theyr possession. The meat offering, synnecoffering, and trespass offering shal they eate, and euery dedicate thinge in Israel, shal be theyrs. The fyrstfruytes of all the fyrstfrutes, and all the frewyl offerings shal be the prestes.

Ye shal giue vnto the prest also all the fyrstfrute of your fyrst bozne, all I saye, and all that is separated vnto God, al your heue offerings (I saye) shal be the prestes, and also the fyrstfruytes of your dough, that God maye prosper the resydue. * But no deed carpon shal the Preste eate, nor suche as is deuoured of wylde beastes, foules, or cattell.

The xlv. Chapter.

Oute of the lande of promys are there seuerate fourte portions, of which the fyrste is giuen to the prestes & to the temple, the second to the Leuites, the thyrde to the cite, & fourth to the prince. An exhortacion vnto the heedes of Israel, of iust weyghes & measures. Of the fyrst frutes, &c.

When ye deuyde the lande by y^e lot, ye shal put asyde one * part for y^e Lord to be holy from other landes: namely. xxv. M. meterodes longe, & r. M. brode. This shal be holy as wide as it is round about. Of this part ther shal belong vnto the Sanctuarie. v. C. metroddes in all the foure corners, and fyrty cubites wyde round about to the suburbs: and from this measure namely of xxv. M. meteroddes longe, and ten. M. brode thou shalt measure wherin the Sanctuarie and the holpest of all maye stande.

The resydue of that holy grounde shal be the prestes whych do seruyce in the Sanctuarie of the Lord, and go in before y^e Lord to serue him that they maye haue rowme to dwell in. As for the Sanctuarie, it shal stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house there shal be giuen twenty habitacyons, of the xxv. thousand length, and ten thousande bredth: ye shal gyue also vnto the cite a possession of fyue thousande meterods brode, and. xxv. thousande longe, besyde the parte of the Sanctuarie: that shal be for the whole house of Israel. * Upon bothe the sydes of the Sanctuarie, and by the cite, there shal be gyuen vnto the prince whatsoeuer lyeth ouer agaynst the cite: as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde, whych shal be as long as one parte, from the west vnto the east cast. This is his land in Israel, that my pynnes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And such as yet remayneth ouer in the land shal be giuen to the house of Israel according to theyr trybes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: O ye pynnes, ye haue nowe oppressed and destroyed ynough: nowe leaue of, handle nowe accordyng to the thyng that is equal and lawfull: & thrust out my people nomore sayth the Lorde God.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I doze of the innermer courte toward the East shal be shut I syxe workynge dayes: but in the Sabbath, and in the daye of the newe mone it shal be opened. Then shal the pynce come vnder the doze portch, and stande styll without by the doze cheke. So the pcestes shal offer vphys burnte and helth offerynges. And he shal worshyp at the doze post, and go his way forth agayne but the doze shal nomore be shut tyl the euenynge.

On the same maner shal the people of I land also do theyr worshyp before the Lord wythout this doze vpon the Sabbathes and newe mones. This is nowe the burnt offering, that I pynce shal byng vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabbath syxe lambes without blemyshe, and a ram wythout blemyshe, and an Ephah for a meat offering with the ram. As for the lambes, he maye gyue as many meat offerynges to them as he wyl: and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of I new moneth it shal be a yonge bullocke wythout blemyshe: syxe lambes and a ram also without blemyshe. With the bullocke he shal giue an ephah and wyth the ramme an ephah also for a meat offering, but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah.

When the pynce cometh, he shal go vnder the doze portche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of I lande come before the Lord in the hye solempne feast, as many as come in by the north doze to do worshyp, shal go out again at the southdoze. And they I come in at the south doze, shal go forth agayne at the north doze. There shal none go out at the doze where he came in, but shal go ryght forth ouer on the other syde, and the pynce shal go in and out amongethem. Alpon the solempne and hye feast dayes this shal be the meat offering.

An Ephah to a bullocke, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he wyl put euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the pynce byngeth a burnt offering, or an helth offering with a fre wyl vnto the Lord, the east doze shal be opened vnto hym, that he maye do wyth his burnt and helth offerynges, as he doth vpo the Sabbath, & when he goeth forth, the doze shal be shut after hym agayne. He shal dayly byng vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde withoute blemyshe for a burnt offering: thys shal be do euery moynynge.

And for a meat offering, he shal gyue I syxte parte of an Ephah, and I thyrde parte of an hyn of oyle, to myngle with I cakes euery moynynge. This shal be a dayly meat offering vnto the Lorde: for an euer lastyng ordynance: and thus shal the lambe, the meat offering and oyle be gyuen euery moynynge, for a dayly burnt offering.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: If the pynce giue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shal it be hys sonnes herptage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But yf he wil gyue one of his seruantes, some of his herptage, it shal be his to the fre yere, and then to retorne agayn vnto I pynce: for his herptage shal be his sonnes only.

The xvi. Chapter.

The sacrifices of the Sabbath and of the newe mones. Whowse which dozes they must go in, or come out of the temple. &c.

Thus sayth the Lorde God. The fyrste daye of the fyrst moneth thou shalt take a yonge bullocke without blemyshe, and clense the Sanctuary. So the pcest shal take of the bloode of the synoffryng, and sprynkle it vnto the postes of I house, and vpon the foure corners of the aultar, with the doze postes of the innermer court. And thus shalt thou do also I seuenth daye of the moneth (for such as haue sinned of ignorance, or byng disceaued) to reconyle the house withal. Upon the xiiii. daye of I fyrst moneth, ye shall kepe easter. Seuen dayes shal the feast contynue, wherein there shal no sowze nor leuended breade be eaten.

Upon the same daye, shal the pynce gyue I for hym selfe and all the people of I lande, a bullocke for a synoffryng. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shal offre euery daye a bullocke & a ramme that are wythout blemyshe for a burnt offering vnto the Lorde: and an he gote dayly for a synoffryng. For the meat offeringes he shal giue euer an Ephah to a bullock, an Ephah to a ramme, and an hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the xv. day of the seuenth moneth, he shal kepe the seuen dayes holy one after another, eue as the other seuen dayes: with the synoffryng, burnt offering, meat offering, and with oyle.

The Prophecie

¶ The prince also shall take none of the proples inheritance nor put them from thei poss-session, but to his owne sonnes that he giue his possession, & my people be not scattered abroad but that every man maye haue his owne. And he brought me thowowe the entraunce at the syde of the doze to the habitacon of the Sanctuary that belongeth to the prestes and stode toward the north, and behold, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me.

G This is the place where the prestes shall dwyght the trespasses and synoffrynges, and bake the meatoffrynges, that they nede not beare the into the outwarde court, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost court rounde about all the foure corners. Beholde: in every corner of the court, there was yet a litle court. Yea, in al. iiii. corners of the court, there was made a litle court of fourty cubytes long, and thirtie cubytes brode: these four litle cour-tes were of one lyke measure, and there went a rydge wall rounde aboute them al foure, vnder the which ther were herthes made round about Then sayde he vnto me. This is the place where the mynstres of the house shall dwyght the syn-offrynges of the people.

The. xlvii. Chapter.

The bysyon of the waters that came oute of the temple.
The courses of the lande of promys, and the deuytyon therof by trybes.

After this he brought me agayn before the doze of the house: and beholde there gushyd out waters from vnder the postes of the house east ward, for the house stode toward the east that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the altar southwarde. Then caried he me out to the northdoze, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vtmost doze the water vpon the ryght syde. Nowe when the man that had the metrod in his hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a thousand cubites and then he brought me thowowe the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousand, and brought me thowowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thowowe the water vnto the loynes.

B After this he measured a thousande agayn then was it suche a ryuer, & I myght not wade thowow it. The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, O thou son of man: and wyth that he brought me to the ryuer banke agayne. Nowe when I came there, ther stode many trees vpon eyther syde of the riuer banke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out: and maketh the waters whole. Yea, al that lyue and moue, wherunto this ryuer commeth shall recover. And where this water commeth there shall be muche fysh. For al that cometh to this water shall be lyste and whole. By this ryuer shall the fyshers stande from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, and there spreade out they nettes: for there shall be greate heapes of fysh lyke as in the mayne see. As for his clape and pyttes they shall not be whole, for why? it shall be occupied for salte.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the doze there shall growe all maner of fruitefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall they frutepere: but euer be ripe at they monethes for they water runneth out of the Sanctuary.
His frute is good to eate, and his leafe propytable for medycine. Thus sayth the Lorde God Let this be the border wherein ye shall deuyde the land vnto the twelue trybes of Israel, wyth the lyne. Part it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: of the whiche lande I swaie vnto your fathers, that it shalbe fall to your enheritaunce.

This is the border of the lande vpon the north syde, from the mayne see, as men go to zabada: namely Hemah, Berotba, Sabarim, from the borders of Damascus and Hemah vnto Halar, Tichon, and that lyeth vpon the costes of haueran. Thus the borders from the see forth, shall be Bazar, Euan: the border of Damascus, the north and the borders of Hemah, this is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from haueran and Damascus, from Galed and the land of Israel by Iordane and so forth, from the seecoste, that lieth east ward: this is the east part.

The southsyde is, from Chamar forth to the waters of Iyke vnto Cades, the ryuer to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the great see from the borders therof, tyll a man come vnto Hemah this is the west parte.

* This lande shall ye parte amonge you, ac-cordinge to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heritage for you: and for the strangers that dwell amonge you, and beget chyldren.
For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of your owne housholde, and countrey, and they shall haue heritage with you among the chyldren of Israel Looke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye gyue hym his heritage sayeth the Lorde God.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The lottes of the seuen trybes. The partes of the possession of the prestes, of the temple, of the Leuites, of the ciyte, and of the prince are reherced. The lottes of the other trybes.
The gates of the ciyte.

These are the names of the trybes that lye vpon the northsyde, by the way of Hetlon, tyll thou comest vnto He-math and Hazar, Enam, the borders of Damascus toward the north be-ders of Dan from the east syde vnto the west shall Isser haue his porcion. Vpon the borders of Isser from the east part vnto the west shall Rephthai haue his porcion.

Vpon the borders of Rephtali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his porcion. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the eastsyde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue porcion. Upon the borders of Ephraim, from the east parte vnto the west: shall Ruben haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Ruben, from the east quarter vnto the west: shall Juda haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Juda, from the east parte vnto the west, ye shall set asyde one porcion of xxv. M. metredodes longe and bode, lyke as an other porcion from the east syde vnto the west, wherein the sanctuary shall stande.

* As for the porcion that ye shall separte out for the Lord, it shall be xxv. M. longe, and x. M. bode: which separated holy porcyon shall be longe vnto these: namely to the prestes, toward the north. xxv. M. and toward the west. x. M. bode, toward the east. x. M. bode also, and toward the south. xxv. M. longe, wherein the sanctuary of the Lord shall stande. Yea, this same place shall be the prestes that are of the children, of Sadoch and haue kept my holy ordinaunce which went not astray in the error of the chyl dren of Israel, lyke as the Leuytes are gone astray: and thys separated peace that they haue of lande, shall be the most holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuytes. And nexte vnto the prestes shall the Leuytes haue xxv. M. longe, and x. M. bode. This shall be on euery syde. xxv. M. long, and x. M. bode. Of this porcyon they shall sel nothyng, nor make any permutacyon thereof, lest the chefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord.

The other. v. M. after the bredth that lyeth by the xxv. M. shall be comen: it shall belonge to the cite, and to the suburbs for habytacyons, and the cytye shall stande in the myddest therof. Let this be the measure: toward the north part v. C. and. liii. M. toward the south parte. v. C. and. liii. M. toward the east part. v. C. and. liii. M. toward the west part. v. C. and. liii. M.

The suburbs hard vpon the cytye shall haue toward the north fyfey and. ii. C. toward the south. l. and. ii. C. toward the east. l. and. ii. C. toward the west also. l. and. ii. C. As for the residue of the length, ye lyeth harde vpon the separated holy ground: namely. x. M. toward the east and. x. M. toward the west, next vnto the holy porcyon: it is the encrease therof shall serue for theyr meate: that labour in the cytye. They that labour for the welth of the cytye, shall mayntayne this also, out of what trybe soeuer they be in Israel. All that is separated of the xxv. M. longe and. xxv. M. bode on the. liii. partes, that shall ye put asyde for the leparated porcyon of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the cytye.

The residue vpon both the sydes of the sanctuary & possession of the cytye, shall belonge to the prynces before the place of the xxv. M. vnto the east ende, and before the place of the xxv. M. westwarde vnto the borders of the cite, this shall be the prynces porcyon. This shall be the holpe place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stand in the myddest. Moreover, fro the Leuytes and the cytyes possession, that lyeth in the myddst of the prynces parte: loke what remaineth betwixte the border of Juda, and the border of Ben Jamin it shall be the prynces.

Nowe of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west, Gal Ben Jamin haue hys porcyon. Upon the borders of Ben Jamin from the east syde vnto the west, shall Simeon haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Simeon from the east part vnto the west shall Isakar haue hys porcyon. Upon the borders of Isakar from the east syde vnto the west, shall Zabulon haue hys porcyon. Upon the border of Zabulon from the east part vnto the west shall Gad haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Gad southwarde, the costes shall reache from Thamar forth vnto the waters of Syfte to Cadis, and to the floude, euen vnto the mayne see.

This is the lande with his porcyons, which ye shall dystribute vnto the trybes of Israel, sayth the Lord God. Thus wyde shall the cytye reache vpon the north parte. v. C. and. liii. M. measures. The portes of the cytye, shall haue the names of the tribes of Israel. The portes of the north syde, one Ruben, another Juda, the thyrde Leui. Upon the east syde. v. C. and. liii. M. measures, with thre portes the one Joseph, an other Ben Jamin, the thyrde Dan. Upon the south syde. v. C. and. liii. M. measures, with thre portes: the one Simeon, another Isakar, the thyrde Zabulon. And vpon the west syde. v. C. and. liii. M. measures, with thre portes also: the one Gad another Asser, the thyrde Nephthali. Thus shall it haue. xviii. M. measures rounde aboute. And from that tyme forth, the name of the cytye shall be, the Lord is there.

The ende of the prophesye of Ezechiel.

The booke of the Prophet Danyel.

The fyfthe Chapter.

The prophet sheweth the captiuitie of Jehoakim kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captiuitie: the kynge commaundeth to chose whiche of them shulde be taught the learninge and language of the Chaldees. They are allowed the kynges feeding. Danyel absteyneth from the meat of the kyng of Babylon.

In the thirde yere of the raygne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor, kynge of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, and besyged it: * and the Lord deliuered Jehoakim the kynge of Juda in to hys hande, wth certaine ornaments of the house of God, whiche he caried awaye vnto the lande of Sennar to the house of hys God, and there he broughte them into hys goddes treasure. And the kyng spake vnto Asphanaz the cheefe chamberlayne that he shoulde brynge hym certayne of the children of Israel, that were come of the kynges seed and of prynces, yonge spryngales without any blemish, but sayre & well fauoured, instruct in all wysdome, compynge and vnderstandyng whych were able to stande in the kynges palace to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldaye.

Unto

The Prophecie

Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate : and of the wyne, whych he dranke hym selfe, so to noyze them thre yere: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these now were certayne of the chyldren of Juda : namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chiefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Danyel Balthazar, Ananias Sidrach: Misael Misach: and Azarias Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wth hym selfe, * that he wolde not be defyled thowhe the kynges meate nor the wyne whych he dranke. And this he despyed of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he should desple hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chiefe chamberlaine that he sayde vnto hym : I am afrayde of my lord the kynge, which hath appoynted you your meate & drynke, lest he spee poure faces to be worse ly kynge then the other spryngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto y^e kynge.

Ben. xlii. c.

Dan. i. a.

Then Danyel answered Melassar, whome the chiefe chamberlein had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, & let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and they that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seest, so deale wth vs thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter and proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, they faces were better lykynge and fatter then all y^e ponge spryngaldes, whych dyd eate of the kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wyne, & gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue now these .iiii. spryngaldes connyng and learninge in al scripture and wysedome : but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of al visions and dreames. Nowe when y^e tyme was expyred, that the kynge had appoynted to byng in these yonge spryngaldes vnto hym, the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the king comuned with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquired of them, he founde them ten tymes better, then al y^e southsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Danyel abode still, vnto the first yere of kynge Cyrus.

The seconde Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym soth sayers, and requyeth of them both the dreame and the interpretation therof. They answer that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wise men of Babilon to be slayne. Daniel requyeth tyme to solute the questyon the lord openeth y^e mystery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, & sheweth hym hys dreame, & the interpretation therof. Of the euill lastyng kyngdome of Chyrie.

Job. vii. b.
Dan. ii. a.
and. b. a.

In the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * wherethow his spiryte was vbered, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kynge commaunded to call togither al the southsayers, charmers wytches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled there wth, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in y^e Syrians speche: O kynge God saue thy lyfe for ever. Shewe thy seruantes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees theyr answer and sayde: It is gone from me. If ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wth the interpretation therof, ye shall dye, and your houses shalbe pyyled.

But if ye tell me the dreame & the menyng therof, ye shal haue of me gyftes, rewarde and great honoure : onely shewe me the dreame and the signification of it. They answered agayne and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruantes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceue of a truthe, that ye do but prolong y^e tyme for so much as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore if ye wyl not tell me the dreame ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, whych ye speake before me, to put off the tyme. Therfore tel me y^e dreame, and so shall I know, if ye can shewe me what it meneth: Upon this, the Chaldees gaue answer before the kynge, and sayde : there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thyng, whiche the kynge speaketh of: yea, there is nether kynge, prince, nor lord, that euer asked such thynges at a southsayer, charmer or Chalde: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynges requyeth. Neyther is there any, that can certifie the kynge therof, excepte the goddes : whose dwellyng is not amonge the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kynge was wroth with greate indignacyon, and commaunded to destroye all the wyle men at Babilon : and the proclamacyon went forth, & the wyle men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Danyel wth hys companions. Then Daniel enquired of Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth al ready to kill suche as were wyle at Babilon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beyng then the kynges deputye. Why hath the kynge proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, and despyed the kynge that he myght haue leysure, to shewe the kynge y^e interpretacyon, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions: y^e they shuld beseech the God of heaue for grace in this secret that Daniel and his fellows wth other suche as were wyle in Babilon, perswaded not. Then was the mystere shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyghte. And Danyel prayled the God of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of god myght be prayled for ever and euer, for wysdom and strength at his owne * he chaigeth the tymes and ages, & he putteth down kynges, he setteth vp kynges, & he giueth wysdome vnto the wyle, and vnderstandyng so thole

to those that vnderstand, he openeth the depele crete: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in dark nesse, for the lyghte dwelleth wyth hym.

I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou haste lente me wysedome and strengthe, and haste shewed me th thynges, that we desired of the, for thou haste opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kyng had ordeyned to destroye the wyle at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wyle in Babylon, but bringe me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shewe the the interpretacyon. Then Arioch broughte Danyel in to the kyng in al the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue found a man among the prisoners of Iuda, that shal shewe the king the interpretacyon. Then answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Danyel, whose name was Balthazar. Arte thou he that canste shewe me the dreame, which I haue sene, and the interpretacyon therof? Danyel answered the kyng to hys face, and sayde: As for this secret: for the which the kyng maketh inquisytion: it is neyther the wyle, the sozcerer the charmer, nor the deuyl con-furer that can certifie the kyng of it. * Onely God in heauen can open secrettes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame, and that which thou haste sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shuld come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, thy secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other lyuyng, but onely that I myght shewe the kyng the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe the thoughte of his owne herte. Thou kyng sawest, & beholde, there stode before the a great ymage whose fy-gure was maruelouse grete, and hys vylage grimme. The ymages heade was of fyne gold his brest and armes of syluer, his bodie and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Thy thou sawest the tyme, that with oute anye handes, there was hewen of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that woe both of yron and earth, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken all togyther in pe-ces: and became lyke the chaffe of cozne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer floures, that they can nomoze be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a grete mountayne, whych fulfyllethe the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now we will shewe before the kyng what it meaneth.

* O kyng, thou arte a kyng of kynges.
 For the God of heuen hath gyuen þa kingdom vnto the strength, and maiesty: and hath deli-uered the all thynges, that are amonge the chyliden of men: the bestes of the felde and the foules vnder the heauen, and gyuen the dominyon ouer them all: Thou art that golden heade. After that there shall aryse an other kyngdomme, which shalbe lesse then thyne. The thynde kyng dome shalbe lyke copper, and haue domynacion in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shalbe as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & bre-keth all thynges: yea, euen as yron beate the eue-ry thyng downe: so shal it beate downe and de-stroye. Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whych neuer thelesse shal haue some of the yron grounde myxt wyth it, for so muche as thou haste sene the yron myxt wyth claye. The toes of the fete that were parte of y-ron and parte of claye, signifyeth: that it shal be a kyngdome, parte ly stronge & partly weake.

 And where as thou sawest yron myxt with clay they shal myngle them selues wyth the seede of symple people, and yet not contynue one with a nother lyke as yron wyl not be souldered wyth a potte hearde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauen set vp an everlastyng kyngdomme which shal not perishe, and his kyngdome shal not be giuen ouer to another people: yea, þ same shal breake, and destroye all these kyngdomes but it shal endure for ever.

And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut out of the * mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, þ earth the syluer and golde in peces: by that harbe the grete God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure. Then þ kyng Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon hys face, and bowed hym selfe vnto Danyel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meat offerynges and swete o-doures vnto hym. The kyng answered Danyel, and sayde: yea, of a truthe your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue al kynges, and an opener of secrettes: seying thou canst discouer this misterye. So þ kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue hym many and great gyftes.

* He made hym ruler of all the countreys of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated the kyng for Sidrach, misach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer al the officers in þ land of Babylon. But Danyel hym selfe remayned still in the courte by the kyng.

The iii. Chapter.

The kyng setteth vp a golden ymage, which he commaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, misach, and Abednago are accused bycause they despyled the kynges commaundment.
 They are broughte vnto the kyng and commaunded to worship the ymage, they refuse to do it, and are put into a burnyng ouen. By belefe in God they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confelleth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden ymage to be made, whych was forty cubytes hye, and syxe cu-bites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura, in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather togyther þ dukes lordes and nobles, þ iudges and offycers the debtyes and shryues: w all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to the dedication of the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, Judges and officers, debittes and Cheues with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together and came vnto the dedicatyng of the ymage, & Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cried out with all his myght: O ye people, kynnedes and tonges, to you be it sayde: & when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shal be blowen, with the harpes, Hawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies and all maner of Musyke, ye fall downe and worshyppe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe shal euen in same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore when all the folke heard the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, Hawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies, and all kynde of melody, then all the people kynnedes and nacjons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, & Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

C Nowe were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that went euē then and accused the Jewes and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for ever. Thou beyng kynge hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes harpes, Hawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies, and all the other melodies shal fall downe and bow them selues, towarde the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe and worshipped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Now are there certayne Jewes, whome thou hast set out the officers of the lande of Babylon: namely Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundment, yea they wyl not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that thou hast set vp.

D Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wraethe and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, wyl not you serue my goddes: nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Wel, be redye hereafter, When ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes Hawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshyp the ymage whych I haue made. But yf ye worshyppe it not, ye shal be cast immediatly into an hote burnyng ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye delpue you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago answered the king and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? our God whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnyng ouen (O kynge) & can ryght well delpue vs out of thy handes.

E And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shuld be made seven tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoste, for to bind Misach, and Sidrach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burnyng ouen.

So these men were bounde in theyr cotes, hosen, shoes, with theyr other garmentes, and caste into an hote burnyng ouen: for the kynge's commaundement was so strypte, and the ouen was excreadyng hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three men Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fel downe in the hote burnyng ouen, beyng fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge marueled and stode vp in al haste: he spake vnto his counsaile and sayde, dyd not you caste these three men bounde into the fyre? They answered and sayd vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge. he answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men going loose in the myddest of the fyre, & no burnyng corrupt, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of god to loke vpon.

Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnyng ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago ye seruautes of the hye God, go forth and come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes, and nobles, and the kynge's counsaile came together to se these men, & vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In so muche that the verpe heere of theyr heade was not burnt, and theyr clothes vunchaunged: yea there was no smel of fyre felte vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: whiche hath sent his aungell, and defended his seruautes, that put theyr truste in him that hath auerted the kynge's commaundement and ienarde theyr bodies there vpon, rather then they woulde serue o' worshyppe any other God: excepte theyr owne God only.

Therfore I wyl and commaunde, that all people, kynnedes, and tonges, whiche speake any blasphemie against the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shal dye, and theyr houses shal be pyyled: Because there is no God but my saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago in the lande of Babylon.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreted it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme: and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored vnto his kyngdome.

Nabuchodonosor the kynge vnto all people, kynnedes, and tonges that dwelle vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplied among you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous workes, that the hye god hath wrought vpon me. O howe

How great are his tokens, and howe myghte are his wondres: * his kingdome is an euer lastinge kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer, and euer.

I Nabuchodonozor beynge at rest in myne houle, and sloupslyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afrayed: & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, wyth the vylions of myne heed, troubled me. * Then sente I oute a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babylon shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, & conuincers of deuils: to whom I told the dreame but what it betokened, they coude not shewe me tyl at the last there came one Daniel (other wyse called Balthazar, accordyng to the name of my God) which hath the spirite of the holpe goddes in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthazar, thou prince of sothsayers: For so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the spyryte of the holy goddes, and no secreete is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the vylion of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifie. I sawe a vylion in my heed vpon my bedde: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verpe hye, great and myghty: the heygth reached vnto heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earthe: hys leaues were sayre, he had very moch frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.

The bestes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I saw in my heed a vylion vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holpe one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayinge: He we downe the tree, bryake of hys bryanches, bryake of hys leaues, and scattre hys frute abrode: that all the bestes maye get them a way from vnder hym, and the foules from hys bryanches. Reuert helesse, leaue the ground of hys roote styl in þe earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. Wyth the dewe of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde wyth other wilde bestes. That mans herte of hys shal be taken from hym, and the bestes hert shal be gyuen hym tyl seuen yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This errande of the watcher is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the counsell of hym that is moost holpe: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them, to whom it lyeth hym, and byngeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame that I kyng Nabuchodonozor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifeth: for so moche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of þe holy goddes is in the. Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held his peace by the space of one houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So þe kyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let nether the dreame nor the interpretation thereof feare the. Balthazar answered, sayinge: O my lord, thys dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretation to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great and myghty, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and his bredth into all the world, whose leaues were sayre, and the frute moche, vnder the whych the bestes of the felde had theyr habitation, and vpon whose bryanches the foules of the ayre dyd lyt.

Euen thou, O kyng arte the tree, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of þe earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayd: he we downe the tree, and destroy it: pet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earth and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron & stele. He shal be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his part shal be with the bestes of the felde, tyl. vii. yeres be come and gone vpon hym: Thys (O kyng) is þe interpretation, yea, it is the very deuyce of him, that is hyest of all & it toucheth my lord the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out from men, & thy dwelling shal be wyth the bestes of the felde, wyth grasse shal thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet wyth the dewe of the heauen: yea, seuen yeres shal come, and go vpon the, tyl þe knowe * that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whome he lyst. Moreover, where as it was sayd: þe roote of the tree shulde be lefte styl in the grounde: it betokeneth, þe thy kyngdome shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power cometh from heauen. Therfore, O kyng, be content wyth my counsaile, that thou mayst redeme thy synnes with almesse * & thyne offences wyth merce to poore people: for thys shal be an healyng of thyne erreure. All these thynge touche the kyng Nabuchodonozor.

So after. xii. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde: Thys is the grete ctyte of Babylon, whych I my selfe (wyth my power and strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my maiesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonozor, to the be it spoken. Thy kyngdome shal departe from the, thou shalt be cast oute of mens companye, thy dwelling shal be wyth the bestes of the felde, so that thou shalt eat grasse as an oxe, tyl seuen yeres be come and gone ouer the: euen vntyl thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpo the kyngdomes of men: & that he may gyue them: vnto whom it pleaseth him. The very same houre was thys matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonozor: so that he was cast out of mens companye, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet wyth the dewe of heauen, tyl hys heeres were as great as Egles feathers, and his nayles lyke byrdes claws.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonozor lift vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne understandyng was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the hyst. I magnified and prayled hym that lyueth for euer moze * whole power endureth alway, and his kyngdom from one generacion to an other: in comparison of whom al they that dwel vpon the earth are to be reputed as nothyng.

* He handleth accordyng to his wyl, amonge the powers of heauen, and amonge the inhabytours of the earth: and there is none that maye resyst hys hande, or saye: what doest thou? * At the same tyme was myne understandyng gpyuen me agayne, & I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignitie, and to myne owne shape agayne. My great estates & princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdom agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonozor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all hys workes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As for those that go on proude, he is able to bypunge them downe.

The v. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon, abusyng the vessels of the temple, seeth an hande wyptyng on the wall. The sorflayers called of the kyng, can not expounde the wyptyng: Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar beinge slayne, Darius succedeth in his roume.

KYng Balthazar made a great banquet to his housholde lordes: with al those thousande he made great chere, & whē he was dronken wyth wyne, he commaunded to bypunge hym the golden & seluer vessels * which his father Nabuchodonozor hadde taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that th kyng and his lordes, with his quene and concubynes myght drynke therout.

Isa. xlv. c.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem: Then the kyng and his lordes with his quene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and prayled theyr ydols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wood, and stone.

In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wyptyng, ryght ouer agaynst the candlestykke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace, and the kyng laue the palme of the hande that wrote. * Chaunged the kyng hys countenance, and hys thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of hys bodye shoke: & his knees smote one agaynst the other. * Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtelye, that they shulde bypunge hym the charmers, Caldees, and coniters of demylles. The kyng spake also vnto the wyse men of Babylon, & sayd: Whoso can reade this wyptyng, and shewe me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Dan. ii. a.

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude neyther reade the wyptyng, nor shewe the kyng what it signified. Then was the kyng sore afrayed, in somoche, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed.

So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng and hys lordes, the quene went vnto her selfe in the banquet house and spake vnto the kyng, saying: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spyrite of the holpe goddes within hym, * as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath understandyng and wysdome lyke the goddes. Psea, the kyng Nabuchodonozor thy father made this man chefe of the sorflayers, charmers, Caldees, and readers of destenies, bycause that such an abundaunt spyrite, knowledge and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doubtles) was founde in him, yea, euen in Daniel whome the kyng named Balthazar. Let the same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tell what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Arte thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whome my father the kyng brought out of Jewrye? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the spyrite of the holpe goddes experient & understandyng, and that there hath bene great wysdome founde in the. Howe haue there bene brought me, wyse and conynge charmers, to reade thys wyptyng, and to shewe me the meanyng therof. But they coude not tell me what thys matter signified. Then herde I saye, that thou canst expounde darke thynges, and declare harde doubtles. Well, then yf thou canst reade this wyptyng, and shewe me the meaning thereof, thou shalt be clothed w purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayd before the kyng: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, or gpyue thy ryche gyftes to an other: yet not the lesse, I wyll reade the wyptyng vnto the kyng, and shewe hym the interpretacyon thereof. * O kyng heare. God the hyst gaue vnto Nabuchodonozor thy father, the dignitie of a kyng wyth worshyp and honour, so that all my people kyn reded and tonges stode in awe and feare of hym by reason of the hyst estate, that he had lent him. For why? he slewe whome he wolde: he smote whom it pleased hym. Agayne, whom he wolde he set vp: and whom he lyst he put down. * But bycause his herte was so proude, & hys stomake set so fast vnto wysefalsnesse: he was deposed fro hys kyngly trone, and hys maiesty was taken fro him. He was shut out from amonge men, his herte was lyke a bestes herte, and hys dwelling was with the wyld asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, & hys bodye was wet with the dewe of the heauen, tyll he knewe, that the hyst had power vpon the kingdomes of men, and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou hys sonne (O Balthazar) for all thys, haste not submytted thyne herte, thought thou knewest al these thynges: but hast magnified thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of his house were brought before the that thou, and thy lordes, wpyth thy Quene and thy concubynnes, myght dypnke wyne thereout. And hast prayled the ydols of syluer and golde, copper and yron, of wood and stone, whych neyther se, heare, nor vnderstande. As for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breath, and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym.

Therefore is the paulme of thys hande sente wyth from hym, to token vp thys wyptynge. And thys is the scripture that is wypten vp. Dane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacio of the thyng is this: Dane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou arte wayed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar to cloth Daniel wpyth purple, to hange a chayne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamacion concerning hym: that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrd part of his kyngdome. * The verpe same myght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, and * Darius oute of Medea toke in the kyngdome, being lxii. yere of age.

The. vi. Chapter.

Daniel is made ruler ouer the lordes. The ymaginacion of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamacion of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kyng as a transgressor: he is put into a denne of lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is delpued by fapth in God. Daniels accusers are put vnto the lyons, to be toine in sonore Darius by the proclamacion of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an. c. and. xx. lordes, whych shoulde be in all his kyngdome about. Aboue these he sette thre prynces (of whome Daniel was one) that the lordes myght gyue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vnderleashed.

But Daniel exceded all these prynces and lordes: for the spyryte of God was plenteous in hym: so that the kyng was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the prynces & lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniel some quarrell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faute vpon hym. For why: he was so fapthfull, that there was no blame nor dishonestye founde in hym.

Then sayd these men: we can get no quarell agaynst thys Daniel, except it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon thys, went the prynces and lordes together vnto the kyng, and sayd thus vnto hym: Kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greates estates of the realme, as the prynces, dukes, senatours, and iudges, are determined to put out a comaundement of þ kyng and to make a sure statute: namely, that whoso despyeth any petition, either of any God or man (wpythin these xxx. dayes) except it be only of þ, O kyng: the same person maye be cast into the lyons denne. Wherefore, O kyng: confirme thou thys statute, and make a wyptyng: þ the thyng whych the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wyptyng: & confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode that þ wyptyng was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of his wall toward Jerusalem stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made his petition: & prayled hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makynge his petition, and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kyng and spake befoze hym concernynge hys commaundement, sayng: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute: that wpythin. xxx. dayes whoso requyeth hys petition of any God or man but onelye of thy selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into þ denne of the Lyons. The kyng answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the pryncers of Juda, O kyng, regardeth neyther the nor thy statute, þ thou hast made: but maketh his petition thre tymes a daye. When the kyng herde these wordes he was soze greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to delpue hym, and put of þ matter, vntyll the Sunne went downe, to the intente that he myght saue hym.

These men percepyng the kynges mynde, sayd vnto hym: knowe this (O kyng) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the comaundement and statute whych the kyng maketh, maye not be altered. * Then the kyng bad them bypunge Daniel: and they cast hym into the lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, enþ he shall defende the. And there was broughte a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne, thys the kyng sealed with hys owne rynge, & wpyth the sygnet of his prynces: that the kynges comaundement concernynge Daniel, shoulde not be broken.

So the kyng went vnto hys palace, and ate no meate that night, neither was there any mynistrellye brought in befoze hym, neyther coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the moynynge at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cryed wpyth a ppytious voyce vnto Daniel: yea þ kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunte of the lyuynge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delpue thee from the lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * O God hath sent hys angell whych hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For why: myne vngplytynesse is founde oute befoze hym. And as for þ, O kyng, I neuer offeded the.

Then was the kyng excedyng glad, and comaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no manner of hurt was founde vpon hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kyng comaunded to bypunge them.

The vii. Chapter.

Ca bysion of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The bysion is interpreted of. iiii. kynge-domes of the world. of the power and encrease of Antichrist. Of the euergloryng kynge-dome of Christe.

A the fyrst pere of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a bysion was in his heed, vpon his bedde. Whyche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys: Daniel spake and sayd: I sawe in my bysion by nyght, and beholde, the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure great beastes came by fro the see one lyke an other.

Jer. iii. a. b. Eze. i. b. c. a. Eze. xvi. a. The fyrst was as a Lyon, and yet had he: Eagles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plukte from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans herte.

2 Beholde, the second beast was lyke a beare, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had. iiii. greate longe teeth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Aryse, eate vp moche fleshe. Then I looked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leopard, thys had wynges as a foule, * euen foure vpon the backe. Thys beaste had foure heedes, & there was power gyuen hym. After this I sawe in a bysion by nyght and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greate yron teeth, it deuoured and destroyed & stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnylike the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

Apor. xiii. c. Eze. xiii. a. Apor. i. c. im. rr. b. Dan. x. a. Apor. b. d. And beholde, there came vp amonge them an other lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the beste hornes pluckt awaye. Beholde, thys horne had eyes lyke a man: and a mouth speaking presumptuous thinges. * I looked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat hym downe. His clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and the heeres of his heed lyke pure woll. His throne was lyke the fyrre flame, and his wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drew forth a fyrre streame: and went oute from hym. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. x. M. tymes ten thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, and the bookes opened. Then toke I hede thereunto, bycause of the voyce of the proude wordes: which the horne spake. I behelde tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, * gyuen ouer to be bzert in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye: but they: lyues were prolonged for a tyme and seasō. I sawe in a bysion by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the sonne of a man, which wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and dignitie regal, that al people, tribes and tonges shulde serue him. * Hys power is an euerlastyng power, which shal neuer be put downe: and his kynge-dome endureth vncorrupte. My hert was vexed, & * I Daniel had a troubled spryte within me, & the visions of my heed made me afrayed tyll I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the truthe, concernyng all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges.

These foure greate beastes are foure kynges, whiche shal aryse out of the earth. These shal take in the kynge-dome of the saynctes of the most hest, and possesse it tyll moze and moze for a longe season. After thys I requyred diligently to knowe the truthe, concernyng the fourth beast whiche was so farre vnylike the other beastes, and so horryble, whose teeth were of yron, & his nayles of brasse: whych deuoured and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder his feet: I desired also to knowe the truthe, as touchyng * ten hornes that he had vpon his heed, and thys other whych came by afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre, which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thinges, and looked wyth a grymme bylage then his fellows. I behelde, and the same horne made battell agaynst the saynctes, yea, and gat the victorye of them vntyll the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the cheffest saynctes: and tyll the tyme that the saynctes had * kynge-dome in possession. He gaue me thys answer. That fourth beaste shal be the fourth kynge-dome vpon earth, it shal be moze then al other kynge-domes, it shal deuoure, treade downe and destroye all other landes.

* The ten hornes are ten kynges, that shal aryse oute of the kynge-dome, after whome there shal stande by an other, whiche shal be greater then the fyrst. He shal subdue thre kynges, and shal speake wordes agaynst the best of all: he shal destroye the saynctes of the most hest * & thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be gyuen vnder his power, * vntyll a tyme, two tymes and an halfe tyme.

But the iudgement shal be kepte, so that his power shal be taken from hym, for he shal be destroyed, & perishe at the last: As for * kynge-dome, power, and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it shal be gyuen to the holpe people of the most hest, * whose kynge-dome is euerlastyng: yea, al powers shal serue and obey him. Thus farre extēde the wordes. Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance changed changed: but wordes I kept styl in my hart.

The. viii. Chapter.

A visyon of a strete betwene a Ramme and an hegoate The vnderstanding of the visyon is of the battel betwene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the famous kynge Antichrist.

In the thyrde yere of the raygne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a visyon vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * fyrst, I sawe in a visyon (and when I saw it, I was at Sulis in the chiefe citie, whych lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the visyon, me thought I was by the ryuer of Alai.

Then I looked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whych had two horns: and these two hornes were hye but one was hyer then another: and the hyest came vp be hynde. I sawe that thys ramme pulshed wyth hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north and agaynst the south: so that no beastes myght stande before hym, nor defende them from hys power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & waxed great yr. I toke hede vnto thys, and then came there an hegoate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous wyse the horne betwyxe hys eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had the two hornes (whō I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcelly vpon hym wyth hys myght. I sawe hym drawe nye, vnto the Rame, beyng verrye ferece vpon hym: pea, he gaue hym such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Neither had the Rame so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder hys fete, and no man was able to deliuer the Ramme out of hys power.

The goate waxed excedyng greete, & when he was at the strongeste, hys greete horne was broken also. * Then grew there other foure such lyke in the steade, towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. Pea, oute of one of the leest of these hornes, there cam yet vp another, whych waxed maruelous great toward the south, toward the east, and toward the sayre pleasaunt lande. It grew vnto the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the star-res also, and trode them vnder fete.

Pea, it grew vnto the prince of the hoost from whom the dayly offryng was taken, and the place of the Sanctuarie casten downe. And a certayne season was gyuen vnto it, agaynst the dayly offryng (because of wickednes) that it myght cast downe the veritie to the grounde, & so to prospere in al thynges, that it went about.

Vpon thys I harde one of the sayntes speakyng, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked thys question. Howe longe shall thys visyon of the dayly sacrifice and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarie and the powre shall so be troden vnder fete? And he answered hym: Vnto the euenynge and the monyng, euen two thousande and thre hundred dayes: than shall the Sanctuarie be clesed agayn.

Howe when I Daniel had sene thys visyon and sought for the vnderstanding of it: beholde there stode before me a thyng like vnto a man.

And I harde a mans voice in the ryuer of Alai whych cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make thys man to vnderstande the visyon. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys commyng, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of mā marcke well, for in the last tyme shall thys vis-yon be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakyng vnto me, I waxed saynt, so that I sank downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge: Beholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the last wyth: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfilled.

The Ramme whych thou saweste wyth the two hornes is the kynge of the Medes and Per-ses: but the goate is kynge of Greke lande: the greete horne that stode betwyxe hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signyfyeth, that out of thys people shall stande vnto foure kynngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kynngdomes (whyle vngodlynes is a growyng) there shall aryse a kynge of an vnchamefast face, whych shall be wyse in darcke speakynges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in hys owne strength. He shall destroye aboute measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospere he shall slaye the stronge and holpe people. And thorowe hys chastynes, falsch shall prospere in hys hande, his herte shall be proude, and many one shall be put to death in hys welthynesse. He shall stande vnto agaynst the prynces of prynces, * but he shall be destroyed wythout hande. And thys visyon that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the moynyng: * Therefore wyte thou vnto thys syghte, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe.

Vpon this was I Daniel verry saynt, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but whē I rose vp I wente aboute the kynnges busynesse, and mar-ueled at the visyon, neuer theles, nomā knew of it

The Prophecye.

Baruc. i. b. * We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene dysobediente and gone backe: yea, we haue departed fro al thy pzeceptes and iudgementes.

Exmo. i. b. We wolde neuer folowe thy seruantes the prophtes, that spake in thy name to oure kyn- ges & princes, to oure fozfathers and to al the peo- ple of the lande. * O Lorde, ryghteousnes belon- geth vnto the, vnto vs peteyneth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe thys daye vn- to euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israell, whether they be farre or nye, thozowe out al the landes: wher- in thou haste strowed them, because of the offen- ces, that they had done agaynst the.

psal. cxi. a. Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to oure kinges, & prin- ces, to oure fozfathers, euen to vs all, * that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde oure God, pertayneth mercye and fozgeuenesse. As foz vs, we are gone backe fro hym, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord oure God, to walke in hys lawes. * which he layd befoze vs by hys seruantes the prophtes: yea, al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe fro thy lawe, so that they haue not harkened vnto thy voyce.

Deu. xxi. and. xxi. b. Reu. xxi. b. Wherfoze, the curse and oth* that is wrytten in the lawe of Moses the seruante of God (a- gaynst whom we haue offended) is powred vpo vs. * And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst our iudges & iudged vs: to brynge vpo vs such a great plage as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all thys plage, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer befoze the Lorde oure God, that we myghte turne agayne from our wickednes, & to be learned in thy veritie. Therfoze hath the Lord made hast, to bryn- ginge thys plage vpon vs, foz the Lorde oure God is ryghteous, in all hys workes which he doth foz why: we wolde not herken vnto hys voyce.

Baruc. ii. b. Jer. xli. xlii. and. xlii. b. * And now, O Lorde oure God: that wryth a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypte, to get thy selfe a name whyche remay- neth this daye, we haue synned O Lorde, & done wyckedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrythfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the) from thy cite of Jerusalem thy ho- ly hill. And why: foz oure synnes sake, and foz & wyckednesse of oure fozfathers, is Jerusalem & thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs: Nowe therfoze, O oure God, heare & prayer of thy seruante: and his intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth wast: foz the Lordes sake.

E O my God, enclpne thynne eare, and herken (at the lest foz thine owne sake) open thynne eyes beholde howe we be desolate, yea, and the cite also, whyche is called after thy name: foz we do not cast our prayers befoze & in our owne rygh- teousnesse: no, but only in thy great mercyes, O Lorde: heare: O fozgoue Lorde, O Lorde consi- der, tary not ouer longe: but foz thynne owne sake do it. O my God: foz thy cite, and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakyng at my prayers, knowlegynge myne owne synnes, and the syn- nes of my people, makynge so myne intercessi- on befoze the Lorde my God, foz the holy hill sake of my God: yea: while I was yet speaking in my prayer: beholde, the man Gabriel, (* who I had sene befoze in the visyon) came flyenge to me, and touched me aboute the offrynge tyme in the euenynge. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell sayd he: I am now come to make the vnderstande it. Foz as soone as thou began- nest to make thy prayer, it was so dryed, and therfoze am I come to thewe the. And why? * foz thou arte a man greatly beloved.

Wherfoze, pondeze the matter wel, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the visyon. Ix. weekes are determined ouer the people and ouer the holy cite: that the wyckednesse maye be con- sumed, that & synne maye haue an ende that the offence maye be reconciled, and to brynge in euer lastynge ryghteousnesse to fulfill the visyon & the prophtes and annoynte the most: oly one vnderstande thys then, and marke it well: that from the tyme it shalbe concluded * to go and re- payze Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ (oz the a- noynted) prynce: there shalbe seuen weekes: The firste shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne Ixii. weekes: but wryth harde troublous tyme. After these Ixii. weekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. The thirde there come a people wryth the prynce, & destroye the cite and the Sanctuary: and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde wryth many foz the space of a weake: and when the weake is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meat offrynge. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacio, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shal continue to the ende.

The x. Chapter.

There appereth vnto Daniell a man clothed in lyn- nen whyche sheweth hym wherfoze he is sent.

In the thyrde yere of kynge Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwyle called Baltha- zer) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well and perceyued what & visyon was. At the same tyme: I Daniell moun- ned foz the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as foz fleische & wyne there came none wrythin my mouth: No, I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, tyl the whole thre weekes were out.

Upon the xiiii. daye of the fyfthe moneth, I was by the greates floud, called * Cygrus I lyft vp myne eyes, and looked: and beholde a man clo- thed in lynen, whose loynes were girded wryth fyne golde of Arabye: hys bodye was lyke the Chrysolpste stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lpghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre hys armes and fete were lyke sayze glysterng metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the the booke of a multitude.

* Daniell alone sawe thys visyon, & the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a great fear fulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and dyd them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe thys greates visyon, so longe tyl there remayned nomore strenght wythin me.

Yea, I lost my coloure cleane I wailed awaye, and my strenght was gone. Yet harde I y voice of hys wordes: and as soone as I harde it, saynt plesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto me: * Daniell, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, for vnto the am I now sente.

And when he had sayd these wordes, I stode vntrembling. Then sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniell: for whysence y fyrst day that y dydest set thynne harte to vnderstande, and dydest chaunty selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue ben herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganest to speake, had not y prince ouer y king dome of the Perses wythstande me. xxi. dayes.

But lo, * Michaell one of y chiefe prynces, came to helpe me, & I was left to continue ther wyth y kynges of Persia, & am come to shewe the what shal happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. for it wylbe longe yet or the visyon be fulfilled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the grounde and helde my tounge. Beholde, there touched my lyp- pes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my ioyntes are loosed in y vy- syon and there is nomore strenght wythin me.

Howe may my Lordes seruaunt the falke wyth my Lorde saynge there is no strenght in me, so that I can not take my breath: vpon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man: and comforted me, sayenge: O thou man so well be- loued feare not: be content, take a good hart vn- to the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou haste refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wyl I go to fyght wyth the kyng and the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekelande shall come. neuerthe- lesse I wyl shewe the that thyng, that is false noted in the scripture of truth. And as for pon- der matters, there is none that helped me in the, but Michaell your prince.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

¶ A prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, and of the bonde ther of, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that fle into the kyng of Egypte, whome Antio- chus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, whiche figured vnto be Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

¶ And in the fyrste yere of Darius of Media I stode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strenghten hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Beholde, there shal stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farr re- cher then they all. And when he is in the chiefe power of hys ryche, he shal prouoke enery mā agaynst the realme of Grekelande. * Then shal there arys yet a myghty kyng, that shal rule wyth greates dominion, and do what hym lyst. * And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shal be destroyed, and deuoyded toward the foure wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shal not haue suche power and dominion as he: but hys kyngdome shalbe scatered, yea, euen a- monge other then those. And the kyng of the south shalbe myghty, then hys other prynces. And one shalbe stronger then he, and shal rule hys dominion wyth greates power.

And in the ende of yeres, thry shalbe toyned together, and the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the kyng of y North, for to make frendshipp, but he shal not obtayne the power of that arme, nether shal she be able to endure tho- rowe hys myght: but she, and such as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shal be deliuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shal one stande vp in hys steade whiche wyth power of armes shal go thorowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to hys strenght. As for the y Idols and prynces, wyth they costly Je- wels of golde & syluer, he shal cary them awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shal raygne more yeres then the kyng of the North. And when he is come into the kynges realme of y South, he shalbe sayne to turne agayn into his owne land. Wherefore his sones shalbe displeased, & shal ga- ther together a myghty great host of people: & one of them shal come, & go thorowe lyke a wa- ter floude: then shal he retorne, & go forth wyth despyng and boastynge vnto hys owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angrye & shal come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the north: yea, he shal bypunge a greates mul- titude of people together, and a greates heape shal be geuen into hys hāde: these shal he cary away wyth greates pryde, for so muche as he hath caste downe so many thousandes, neuerthelesse, he shal not meuaile. For the kyng of the north shal ga- ther (of the newe) a greates heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeres) wyth a myghty host, and exceedynge greates good.

At the same tyme there shal many stande by agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shal exalte them selues (to fulfill the visyon) and then fall. So the kyng of y North shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fenced cityes: And y po- wer of them of the south shal not be able to a- byde hym, & the beste men of the people shal not be so stronge, as to resyst hym. Shortly whē he cometh, he shal handle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countre, whiche tho- rowe hym shalbe destroyed: he shal set hys face wyth all hys power to obtayne hys kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea, that shal he do, & gyue hym vnto the daughters amonge women, to destroy hym. But he shall sayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shall he set hys face vnto the fles & take many of them. A pryncce shall stoppe hym, to do hym shame, besyde the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, stumbe and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon hym and dyd hym violence, shall stande in hys place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdom: and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, and that nether in wyath, nor in battell. In hys steade there shall aryle a vyle persone, not holde worthy of a kyn ges dignitie: thys shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome wyth sayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the pryncce of the couenaunt.

D So after that he hath taken truce wyth him he shall handle dysceitfully: that he may get vpon & ouercome hym wyth a small flocke: & so wyth craftynesse to get hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale other wyse, then ether hys fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thyng, that they had robbed & spoyled, yea, & all theyr substaunce, ymagynyng thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, & that for a tyme. Hys power & harte shall be stered vpon wyth a great armye agaynst the kyng of the south where thorow the kyng of the south shall be moued then vnto battell, wyth a greates & myghtye host also. Neuertheles he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shall hurt him: so that his host shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

E These two kynges shall be minded to do mischief, and talke of dysceite at one table: but they shall not prospere, for why? the ende shall not come yet: vnto the tyme appoynted. * then shall he go home agayne into hys owne lande wyth great good, and set hys harte agaynst the holye couenaunt, he shall busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the tyme appointed he shall come agayne, & go towarde the south. So shall it happen other wyse then at the fyrste, yet once agayne.

ii. Mac. b a And why? * the shippes wiche Italijs shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne: that he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, he shall turne him, and drawe such vnto him as leaue the holy couenaunt.

iii. yf. l. i. b

H He shall set myghtye men to vnbalowe the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offryng, and to set vpon the abhominable desolation. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wyth sayre wordes. But the people that wyl knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people shall enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted wyth swearde, wyth fyre, wyth captiuitie and wyth the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vpon wyth a lytle helpe: but manye shall cleane vnto them saynedlye.

Yet some of those whiche haue vnderstandinge shall be persecuted also, that they maye be tryed purified and clyensed, tyl the tyme be out: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what him lyst * he shall exalte and magnifie him selfe agaynst all that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynst the God of all goddes wherein he shall prospere, so longe tyl * the wyath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuyled already. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women. Yea, he shall not care for anye God, for he shall magnifie him selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worship the myghtye stout God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall be honoured with gold and syluer, with precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

Thus shall he do, thorow his stronge fenced places, settinge vpon his straunge God whom he confesseth and encreasing his glorie. Such as wyl receaue him, & take him for God, he shall geue them great worship & power: yea & make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south stryue with him, and the kyng of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him with charrettes, horsemen and with a great nuy of shippes. He shall come into the landes, destroye & go thorow: he shall entre also into the pleasaunt lande: Many cities and countreys shall decaye * except Edom, Moab, & the best of the children of Ammon, which shall escape fro his hand. He shall stretch forth his handes vpon the countreys, & the lande of Egypt shall not escape him. For thorow his goynge in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer al the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethiopia: * Neuertheles, the tidinges out of the East & the north shall trouble him, for the which cause he shall go forth to destroy and roote out a great multitude. The tetes of his palace shall be pitched betwixt the two sees, vpon the hill of the noble Sanctuary, for he shall come to his death * and then shall no man helpe him.

The xlii. Chapter:

He propheseth the resurrection of the dead. The darkenesse of the prophete of Daniell.

In the tyme wyl come also, that the great pryncce * Michael, whiche standeth on thy peoples syde, shall aryle vpon, for * there shall come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was, sence there began to be any people vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be deliuered, yea, al those that be founde wyten in the booke. * Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake some to the euerlasting lyfe, some to perpetual shame and reprobacion * the wyse (such as haue taught other) shall glifye as the shynnyng of beauen: & those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the starres, worlde wythout ende.

And thou O Daniell, shut vpon these wordes, and seale the booke tyl the laste tyme. Many shall go aboute here & there, and then shall knowledge increas increase. So I Daniel looked, and beholde, ther stode a (as it were) other two, one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon ponde syde. And one of them sayd vnto hym, which was clothed in linnen, and stode aboue vpon the waters of the founte: Howe longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous workes?

* Then herde I the man with the linnen clo thes, whiche stode aboue vpon the waters of y founte, when he helde vp his right and left hand vnto heauen, and sware by hym whiche lyueth foreuer, * that it shall tarpe for a tyme, two ty mes and halfe a tyme: and when the power of y holly people is cleane scattered abrode, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

I hearde it wel but I vnderstode it not.

* Then sayde I: O my Lorde, what shall happen after that? He answered: So thy waye Daniel, for these wordes shall be closed vp, and sealed, til the last tyme: and many shall be purified, clenfed and tryed. (as it were with fyre.) But the vngodly shall lyue wyckedly, * and those wycked (as ma ny of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstan ding. As for such as haue vnderstanding, they shall regarde it. And from the tyme forth that y dayly offering shall be put downe, and the abho minable desolatyon set vp, there shall be a. 4.
xxx. dayes. * I well is hym that wayteth and commeth to the. 4. iii. C. and. xxxv. dayes. So thou thy way nowe tpyl it be ended: take thy rest and abyde thy lot, tpyl the dayes haue an ende.

The ende of the Prophecy of Daniel.

The booke of the Prophete Oseas.

The fyrste Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by takinge an harlot to his wyfe, signified the desolatyon of the people the destruction of the offspring of Iehu and of the Israe lites, is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Be ery * in the dayes of Oseas Joa than, Ahas, and Iezekias kynges of Iuda, and in the tyme of Iero boam the sonne of Joas kyng of Israel. Fyrst when the Lorde spake vnto Ose as, he sayd vnto him: * So thy way, take an har lotte to thy wyfe, and gette chyldren by her, for the land hath committed great whoredom against the Lorde. So he went & toke Gomer, the dought tar of Deblaim, which conceived and brought forth a son. And the Lorde sayd vnto him: cal his name Iezrael, for * I wyll shortly auenge the bloud of Iezrael vpon the house of Iehu, & wyl bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyl I breake the bow of Isra el in the valley of Iezrael.

She conceived yet agayn, and bare a dought C ter: And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name Lorn hamah (that is, not obtayning mercye:). * for I wyl haue no pitye vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remem braunce. * Neuerthelesse, I wyl haue mercy v pon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue them euen thorowe the Lorde theyr God. But I wyl not delyuer them thorowe any bowe, sword, bat tyle, horses, and horsemen.

Now whē she had wayned Lornhamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayd he: call his name Loamp. For why? ye are not my people: therfore wyl I not be your God. and though the nombze of the chyldze of Israel be as the sande of the see, whiche can neyther be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayd vnto them, * ye be not my people: eue there shall it be thus reported of them * they be y chyl dren of the luyng God. * Then shall y chyl dren of Iuda, and the chyldzen of Israel, be gathered togither agayne, and chose them selues one hed, and then departe out of the land: for great shall be the daye of Israel.

The. ii. Chapter.

The people is called to repentance.

Tel your brethze, that they ar my peo ple: and your systers, that they haue obtained mercy. As for your mother ye shall chyde with her, and reprove her, * for she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husband: onles she put away her whor dome out of my syght, & her aduouty from her brestes. Yf no, I shall strip her naked, and set her * euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall laye her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernes, and slaye her for thyrs. I shall haue no pitye al so vpon her chyldzen: * for they be the chyldzen of fornicacyon.

Theyr mother hath broken her wedlock, and she that bare them * is come to confusyon. For she sayde: I wyl go after my louers that gyue me my water and my bread, my woll and flaxe, myne oyle and my drynke. But I wyl hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her fote steppes, and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: she shall seke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye: wel, I wyl go turne agayne to my first husbande: for at that tyme was I better at ease then now. But this wold she not knowe where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, and golde, * whiche she hath hangd vpon Baal.

Wherfore nowe wyl I take my corne and wyne agayne in theyr season, and set agayn my woll and my flaxe which I gaue her to couer her shame. * And now wyl I discover her folpynes euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall delyuer her out of myne handes. Moreover, I

Jos. vii. b. Judic. ii. a. Then shal she syng there * as in the tyme of her yowth, and: lyke as in the daye when she came out of the lande of E gypt. Then (sayth the Lorde, she shal saye vnto me) O my husbnde, and shal call me nomore Baal: for I wyl take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth: yea, she shal neuer reme mber theyr names any more. * The wyl I make a couenaunt with them, with the wylde beastes with the foules of þe ayre, and with euery thyng that crepeth vpon the earth.

In sayth also wyl I marre the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyl I be to my selfe frendly and gracious vnto the heuens, sayeth the Lorde: and the heuens shal helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shal helpe Jezrael. * I wyl sowe them vpon earth, for a seede to myne owne selfe: and wyl haue merce vpon her, that was without merce. And to them whiche were not my people, I wyl saye: thou art my people: and he shal saye: thou art my God.

The. iii. Chapter.

Jer. xlii. b. Offer loue of God towarde the people.

Jer. xlii. b. Then sayde the Lorde to me: * Go yet thy waye and wou an aduoutrous woman, to whome thy neyghboure lo ueth, as the Lorde doeth the chyldren of Israell: howbeit, they haue respectes to straunge goddes, * and loue þe wyne cannes. So I gate her for fyftene syluerlynges and for an homer and an halfe of barley, & sayde vnto her: Thou shalte abyde wyth me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, & loke thou medle with none other man, and then wyl I kepe my selfe for the.

Jer. xlii. b. * Thus the chyldren of Israell shal spt a great whyle without kyng and prynce, without offe ryng and aulter, without prestre and reuelacion But afterwarde shal the chyldren of Israell co uert, and seke the Lord theyr God, and * Dauid theyr kyng: and in þe latter dayes they shal wor ship the Lorde, and his lounge kyndnesse.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jer. xlii. b. A complaint agaynst the people: and the preastes of Israell.

Jer. xlii. b. Are the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israell. For þe Lord must punyssh them þe dwel in the lade. And why: there is no treuth, there is no merce, there is no knowledg of god in the lande: but swearyng, lyng, manslaughter, thefte and aduoutry haue gotten the vpper hande: and one gyltynesse foloweth another. Therfore shal the lande be in a miserable case, & all they that dwell therein shal be rooted oute. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the see shal dye: Yet is there none that wyl chasten noz repone an other. For * thy people rebuketh the preastes, which shuld reforme other men.

Jer. xlii. b. Therfore stonblest thou in the daye tyme, & the prophet with the in the nyght. I wyl byyng thy mother to scylence: and why: * my people per ysh, bycause they haue no knowledg. Seynge then that þe hast refused vnderstandyng, therfore wyl I refuse the also: so that thou shalt no more be my prest. And for so much as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyl also forget thy chyldren. The more they increased in þe multytude, the more they synned agaynst me, therfore wyl I chaunge theyr honoure in to shame. * They ate vp the synnes of my people and courage them in theyr wyckednes. * Thus the preaste is become lyke the people. Therfore I wyl punyssh them for theyr wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to theyr owne y maginacions. * They shal ente, and not haue ynoughe. They haue vsed whozdom, therfore shal they not prosper: and why: they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Jer. xlii. b. Whozdom, wyne, and dyonkenesse taketh the hert awaye. * My people aske counsaile of theyr stockes, theyr staffe must tell them. For a whozph mynd hath deceyued them so that they commit fornicacion agaynst their God. * They make sacrificys vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyr insence vpon the hylls: yea among the okes, groues, and busshes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore your doughters are becom harlottes, and your spouses haue broken theyr wedlok: I wyl not punyssh your doughters for beyng defyled, and your bydes þe became whores: * seyng þe fathers them selues haue medled with harlots, and offered vnto yfites: but þe people that wyl not vnderstand, must be punished.

Jer. xlii. b. Though thou Israell arte disposed to playe v the harlot, yet wouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou wouldest not haue runned vnto Gilgal, * nor haue gone vp to Bethaunem: nor haue sworn, the Lorde lyueth. For Israell is gone backe lyke a wanton cow. The Lord therfore shal make her fede as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of ydols: well, let hym go, theyr dyonkenesse hath put them back, and brought them to whozdom. Theyr rulers loue rewarde, byyng (saye they) to theyr owne shame. A wynde shal take holde of theyr fetters: and they shal be con founded in theyr offrynges.

The. v. Chapter.

Jer. xlii. b. Against the preastes and rulers of Israell.

Jer. xlii. b. O ye preastes, heare thys, take hede, O thou household of Israell: gyue eare, O thou kynglye house, for it were your part to se iudgement done: but you are become become a snare vnto Mizphab, and a spred net vnto the mount of Chabor. They kyll sacryfices by heapes: and turne farre from the Lorde, and I haue bene a rebuker of them al. * I know Ephraim well ynough, and Israel is not hydde from me, for Ephraim is nowe become an harlot, and Israel is despyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto theyr God, for they haue an whozish harte, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

* But the pyde of Israel wyl be rewarded hym in his face: yea bothe Israel and Ephraim shall fall for theyr wyckednesse, and Iuda with them also. * They shal come with theyr shepe & bullockes: to seke the Lorde, but they shal not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and broughte vp bastarde chyldren: a moneth therfore shall denoure them with theyr porcyons. Blowe with the shawkes at Gibe, and wyth p trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethauen vpon the ponde: syde of Ben Jamin. In the tyme of p plague shal Ephraim be layde waste, therfore dyd I saythfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are p princes of Iuda become lyke them: that remoue the lande markes: Therfore wyl I poure oute my wrath vpon them lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no ryght of the law: for why they folowed the doctrynes of vngodlye men. Therfore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Iuda a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe his syknes and Iuda his disease, * Ephraim went vnto Assur, & sente vnto kynge Iareb: yet coude not he helpe you, no: ease you of youre payne: I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Iuda. Euen I wyl spoye them, and goo my waye. I wyl take them wyth me, and no man shall rescue them. I wyl go, and retourne to my place, tyll they knowledge that they haue synned, and seke me.

The. vi. Chapter.

Affliction causeth a man to turne to God. The wyckednesse of the prelates.

In theyr aduersyte, they shal earlye seke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde: * for he hath smytten vs, and he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shal bynd vs vp agayne: after two dayes shal he quychen vs, in the thyrde daye shal rayse vs vp, so that we shall lyue in his syghte. Then shall we haue vnderstandyng, and endeuer our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall go forth as the spryng of the daye, and come vnto vs: as the euening and moonyng rayne vpon the earthe.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? Iuda, how shal I entreat the: seing your lone is lyke a moonyng cloude, and lyke a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, & let them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasur in louyng kyndnes, and not in offryng: yea in p knowledge of God more then in burnt sacryfice. But euen lyke as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt and set me at nought. Gilead is a cite of wycked doers of malicous people, and bloudesthedders. And as they are armed, wayte for hym that passeth by the waye: suche is the counsaile of p prestes, which with one agreed counsaile, murder cruellye suche as kepe the waye: yea, they darre do all vnspeakable myschefe. * Horryble thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is despyled: yea, and thou Iuda kepest an harlotte for thy selfe, when I retourne the captiuitie of my people.

Of the byres and wantonnesse of the people.

When I vndertake to make Israel hole then the vnglacypousnes of Ephraim and the wyckednesse of Samaria, cometh to lyghte: then go they aboute wyth lyes: therfore the thefe robbeth wythin: & without the spoyler destroyeth. They confydre not in theyr hartes, that I remembre all theyr wyckednesse. Nowe theyr owne inuencions haue be set them, whiche I se well ynough. * They make the kynge and the princes, to haue pleasure in theyr wyckednes & lyes. All these burne in aduoutye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth when he hath left kneddyng, tyll p dowe be leauened. Euen so goeth this daye with our kyniges and princes, for they begyn to be wood dronken thowowe wyne, they vse familiarite with suche as deceyue them. They with the p-maginion of theyr hert are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the moonyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne Judges all theyr kyniges are fallen, yet is there none of the that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixt amonge p heatden. Ephraim is become lyke a cake that no man turneth, straungers haue deuoured his strength: yet, he regardeth it not. He waxeth full of grape heeres, yet wyl he not knowe it: * and the pyde of Israel is cast downe before theyr face, yet wyl they not turne to the Lorde theyr God, no: seke hym for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a done p is begiled, and hath no hart. * Now call they vpon the Egyptians: now go they to the Assyrians: but while they be going here & there. I wyl spred my net ouer the, and drawe them downe as the foules of p ayre: and accorpyng as they haue bene warned, so wyl I punysh them. * Woe be vnto the, for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought: * I am he that redeemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. * They call not vpon me with theyr hartes, but lye vpon lye vpon theyr beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meat and drynke, and me they wyl not obeie: I haue taughte them, and defended theyr arme: yet do they imagine myschefe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not to the moost hyest, and are become as a broken bowe. Theyr princes shal be slayne with p sword, for the malice of theyr tonges, suche scornes shal they haue in the lande of Egypt.

The

The Prophecie.

The viii. Chapter.

The destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of their idolatry.

And the horn to thy mouth, and blowe swiftly (as an Eagle) shall the enemy come agaynst the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my * couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel shoulde haue sayde vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the but he hath refused the thyng that is good, therfore shall the enemy folow vpon hym. * They haue obeyed kynges, but not thow me: they haue made prynces, and I must not knowe of it. * Of theyr syluer and golde haue they made the ymages, to byngne them selues to destruction. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wrathfull indignacyon is gone forth agaynst the. How longe wyl it be, or they can be clenched. For the calfe came from Israel, the workman made it, therfore can it be no god but euen in peces shall the calfe of Samaria be broken. They haue sowed wynde, therfore shall they reape a storme.

Theyr sede shall beare no corne, there shall no meale be made of theyr increase: though they reape, yet shall straungers denoure it vp. Israel shall perishe, the Gentyles shall intreate hym as a foule vessel. Synge they went vp to the Asyrians, they are become lyke a wilde Ass in the deserte.

* Ephraim giveth rewardes to get louers, & though they byrre them amonge the hethen, yet now wyl I gather them vp. They shall begyn to be werped wth the burthen of kynges and prynces. Ephraim hath made many altars to do wyckednesse, his altars (I saye:) he had to his synne. Though I thewe them my lawe neuer so moch, they count it but strange doctrine. Where as they do sacrifice, offryng the fleshe, and eatyng it, the Lorde wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remembre theyr wyckednesse, and punishe theyr synnes. * Israel turneth agayn into Egypt they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buyde sayre palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cityes: * therfore wyl I sende a fyre into theyr cityes, and it shall consume theyr palaces.

The ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

And not thou trumphe, O Israel, make no boasting ouer ioyous thynges as do the heathen: for thou hast commytted aduoutry agaynst thy God: wherfore rewardes hast thou loued, more then all the corne floozes.

* Therfore shall they nomore enioye the corne floozes and wyne presses, and theyr swete wyne shall fayle them. They wyl not dwell in the Lordes lande: * but Ephraim tourneth agayne into Egypt, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne for a drynk offryng vnto the Lord, neither gyue they hym theyr sayne offrynges: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherein all they that ate them are defyled. For the bread that they haue suche lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the solempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Lo they shall get them a way for the destruction. Egypt shall receyue them, & Noph shall bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe theyr pleasure goodes, and barres shall be in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacyon is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hande: And then shall Israel know, that they were deceyued by a prophet foolyshe and mad, in a franse, for the multitude of theyr iniquitye, God shall multiplye enemies agaynst the Ephraim hath made hym selfe a watchman of my God a prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in euery strete, and abhominacyon in the house of bys God. They be gone to far, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore tyme * at Gaba: * therfore theyr wyckednesse shall be remembred, and theyr synnes punished.

I found Israel lyke grapes in the wyldernes and sawe theyr fathers as the fyrst * fyrgges in the toppe of the fyrgge tree. * But they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye from me to that shameful ydole, and are become as abhominable as theyr louers. Ephraim flyeth lyke a byrde, so shall theyr glorie also: Insomuch that they shall neyther beget, conceyue, nor beare chyldre. And though they byngne vp anye, yet wyl I make them chyldles amonge men. Yea, who shall come to them, when I departe from them. * Ephraim (as me thynke) is planted in welthyngnesse, lyke as Cyprus: but now we must the byngne her owne chyldren forth to the mansear.

O Lorde thou shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue them: geue them an vnfruteful wybe and drye breastes. All their wyckednes is done at Gilgal, there do I abhor them. For the vngaciousnesse of theyr owne inuencions: I wyl dryue them oute of my house. I wyl lone them nomore, for all theyr prynces are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, theyr roote is dried vp, so that they shall byngne nomore frute: yea, and though they byngne forth anye, yet wyl I slaye euen the best beloued frute of theyr bodye. My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedyent vnto hym: therfore shall they go astraye amonge the heathen.

The x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israel and bys ydoles.

Irael was a goodly, * vine, but he hath brought forth vnprofytable frute: yea, the more frute he had, the more altars he made: the more good I dyd to their lade the more frendshipp I dede they to theyr ymages. Their hert is deuided, therfore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe theyr ymages, he shall destroye theyr altars. Then shall they saye: we haue no kyng, for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kyng do to vs? They commune together, and sweare vayne othes: they be confederat together, therfore groweth their punishment as pweedes in the forowes of the lade. They

They that dwell in Samaria haue worshipp ed the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shall the people mourne ouer them. Yea, and the prestes also that in theyr welthyngesse resoyced wyth them.
And why? it shall passe awaye from them.
It shall be brought to the Assyrian, for a present vnto kynge Iareb. Ephraim shall receyue ful punishment. Israel shall be confounded for his owne ymagynacions. Samaria with his kynge shall haue the waye as the scomme of the water.
The hye palaces of Auen wher Israel do sinne shall be caste downe: thyssles and thornes shall growe vpon theyr alters. * Then shall they say to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

Israel, thou hast synned as * Gabaa dyd afore tyme where they remayned: shoulde not þ battayle then come vpon þ wycked chyldren as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wyll chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre: the people shall be gathered togyther ouer them, when I pu-nyshe them for theyr great wyckednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is vsed to go to plowe, therfore I loued hym, and fell vpon his fayre necke: I drew Ephraim, Iuda plowed, & Jacob played the husuande man. Some vnto righteousnes, and reape the frutes of welldoing plowe by your fresh lande, for it is tyme to seke the Lorde, tyl he come and rayne righteousness vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynesse ye haue reaped iniquitie, you haue eaten þ frute of lyes. Seynge thou putttest thy confydence in thyne owne wayes, and ledest to the multitude of thy worshypes: there shall growe a sedicion amonge thy people. All thy stronge cityes shall be layde waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his familiers thow hym that was auen-ger of Arbel, in the daye of battayle, where the mother perished with her chyldren. Eue so shall it go with you (O Bethel) because of poure malicious wyckednes. Lyke as the morning goth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

The xi. Chapter.
Agaynst the vnkynndesse of Israel.

When Israel was ponge I loued him * and called my sonne out of þ lande of Egypte. But the more they were called, the more they wet backe: offeryng vnto ydols of Baal, and censyrng ymages. I learned Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me that wolde haue helped them. I led them wyth cordes of frendshipp, and wyth bandes of loue. I was euen he that layd the pike vpon theyr nec-kes. * I gaue them fodder my selfe, þ they shuld not go agayne into Egypt. And now is Assur theyr kynge. For they wolde not turne vnto me therfore shall the swerde begyn in theyr cityes: the fozze that they haue layde vp, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that bycause of theyr owne ymagynacions: and my people shall stande in a doubt whither to turne them, for when the prophetes called them to the most hiest, not one yet wolde gyue hym his gloze.

What great thynges haue I gyuen the, O

Ephraim: howe faythfully haue I defended the O Israel: haue I dealt with the as with * Ada-ma? O haue I entreated the lyke Sebolim? No my hert is other wyse mynded. Yea, my mercye is to feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrathful dyspleasure.
For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddest of the, though I came not within the cytpe.

The Lorde roseth lyke a lyon, that they may folow hym: yea, * as a lyon roseth he, that they may be afrayd lyke the chyldren of the see, that they may be scattred awaye from Egypte, as men scatter byrdes: and frayde away (as dones vse to be) from the Assyrians lande, and that by cause I wolde haue them tarpe at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goeth about me wyth lyes, and the house of Israel dyssembleth. Only Iuda holdeth hym with God, and with the true holly thynges.

The xii. Chapter.
Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

Ephraim is fed with ayze, and foloweth after the east wind: he is euer increasyng lyes and destruction.
They be confederate wyth the As-sirian. * Theyr oyle is carped into Egypte. The Lorde hath a courte to holde wyth Iuda, and wyll punyshe Jacob. After theyr owne wayes, and accordyng to theyr owne inuencions, shall he recourence them. * He toke his brother by the bele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in his strength he wrested with God. He * stroue wyth the Aungell, and gat the victoize: so that he prayed and desp-red hym. * He founde hym at Bethel, and there he talketh wyth vs.

Yea, the Lord God of hoostes, euen the Lord hym selfe remembred hym. Then tourne to thy God, kepe mercye and equitye, and hope styll in thy God. But thou art lyke the marchaunt, that hath a false wayght in his hand, he hath a pleasure to occuppe extorcion. Ephraim thyngketh thus: * Cuth, I am riche, I haue good ynough: in all my workes shall not one fault be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of þ land of Egypte, and sette the in thy tentes, and as in the hye feastes.

I haue spoken thowowe the prophetes, and shewed dyuerse visyons, and declared my selfe by the ministracyon of the prophetes. But at Gilead is the abhominacyon, they are fallen to vanite. At Gilgal they haue slayne ore: as many heapes of stones as they had in theyr landeforowes, so many altars haue they made. * Jacob fled into the lande of Syria and Israel ser-ued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kepte shepe.

By a prophet the Lord brought them out of Egypt, and by a prophet he reserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure tho-row his abhominacions, therfore shall his blood be poured vpon hym selfe, and the lord his God shall rewarde hym his blasphemyes.

The xiii. Chapter.

The

The Prophcie

The abhominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, the heathen troubled: and he was exalted among the Israelites, but he is gone backe to Baal: therefore must he dye. And now they synne more and more: * of thei? spluer they make them molten ymages, after the ymaginacions of thei? owne bzaings, that is very ydols and yet all is nothing, but the worke of the craftsman. Notwithstanding, they preache of the same to such as ther sacrificeth: whoso wyl kysse the calves, offreth perfectly. Therefore they shal be as the moynynge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye, and lyke as duste that the wynde wynde taketh awaye from the floze, and as the smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde God, whiche broughte the out of the lande of Egypte: that thou shouldest know no God but me only, and that thou shouldest haue * no sauour but onely me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wyldernesse, that dye lande. But when they were well fedde, and had ynough, they waxed proude, & forgot me: * therefore wyl I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a leopard in the wayes to * Assyrians. I wyl come vpon them, as a she beare that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyl breake the stubburne hert of thei?. There wyl I deuoure them as a lyon yea, the wyld beasts shal teare them.

Irael, thyne iniquitie hath destroyed * but in me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kyn ges now, that shuld helpe the in all thy ctytes? Yea, and thy Judges, of whome thou saydest: * gyue me a kynge and pynces: (well) I gaue the a kynge in my wrath, and in my displeasure wyl I take hym from the agayne. The wyckednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne lyeth byd. Therefore shall sorowes come vpon hym, as vpon a woman that traunyleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he consydreth not that he shoulde not haue bene hable to haue endured in the tyme of his byrthe, had not I defended hym from the graue, and deliuered hym from death.

Death, I wyl be thy death: O hel, I wyl be thy styng: yet can I se no comforte, for when he is now the goodlyest among the brethren, & east wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shal come downe from the wyldernesse, and dye vpon his condytes, and dypnke vpon his welles: he shal spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shal be layde waste, and why: they are disobeyent vnto thei? god. They shal perishe with the swerde: thei? chyldren shal be slayne, and their women great with chyld shal be rpyte vpon.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

Irael, * turne the nowe vnto * Lorde thy God: * for thou hast taken a greete falle thowowe thy wyckednesse. Take these wordes wyth you when ye turne to the Lorde, and saye vnto hym: O forgyue vs all our synnes, receyue vs graciously, * and thā wyl we offer the bullockes of our lippes vnto the: * Assur shal be nomore our helper, neyther wyl we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the workes of our handes, we wyl nomore call vpon them: for it is thou that art our God: thou the west euer mercy vnto the fatherlesse.

I (yf they wolde do thes) I shoulde heale thei? sores: yea with all my herte wolde I loue them: so that my wrath shulde cleane be turned awaye from them. Yea, I wolde be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shoulde growe as the lylle and his roote shoulde breake oute as Libanus. His bzaunches shoulde spreade oute abrode, and be as fayre as the olyue tree, and smell as Libanus. They that dwell vnder his shadowe shuld come agayne, and growe vpon as the corne: and flozethe as the vyne. He shoulde haue as good a name as the wyne of Libanus.

Ephraim, what haue I to do with ydols any more? I wyl graciously heare hym, and leade hym forth. I wyl be vnto the as a grene fyre tree: vpon me shalte thou fynde thy frute.

* Whoso is wylle shal vnderstande this: and he that is ryght enstruct, wyl regarde it. * for the wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous, such as he godlye wyl walke in them.

As for the wycked, they wyl stumbe therein.

The booke of the Prophete Joel.

The fyrste Chapter.

A prophete agaynst the Iewes. He exhorteth the priestes to prayer and fastynge for the myserye that was cominge at hande.

This is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel. Heare, O ye elders: ponde thes well, all ye that dwell in the lande: Yf euer there happened such a thynge in youre dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell your chyldren of it, and let them shewe it vnto thei? chyldren, and so they to certifie youre posteritye thereof. Loke what the caterpyler hath left, that hath the grewhopper eaten vpon: what the grewhopper left that hath the locust eaten vpon: and what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed.

Make vpon ye dzonkardes, & wepe: moune al ye wyne sapper, bycause of your swete wyne: for it shalbe taken awaye from your mouth. Yea a mighty and an innumerable people shal come vpon into my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, & chaf bones lyke the lionesses. * They shal make my vyneyardes waste, they shal pil of the barks of my fygtrees, strype them bare, cast them awaye, & make the bzaunches whyte.

Make thy mone as a virgyn doth that gyrdeth her selfe wyth sacke, bycause of her bydew growe. for the meate and dypnke offrynge shalbe taken

Taken awaye from the house of the Lorde, and the preastes the Lordes minystrers shall mourne. The felde shall be wasted, the lande shall be in a myserable case: for the corne shall be destroyed, & wyne shall come to confusyon, and p oyle utterly desolate. The husbandmen and p wyne gardeners shall loke pteouslye, and make lamentacion for the wheate, wine, and barley, and because the harvest vpon the felde is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make grete mone, when the vyneyardes and fyg trees be so utterly wasted. Yea al the pomegranates, palm trees, apple trees, and other trees of the felde shall wyther awaye. Thus the mery chere of the chyl dren of men shall come to confusyon.

¶ Gyde you, and make your mone, O ye pre- sters, mourne ye minystrers of the avtar go your waye in, and slepe in sackcloth, O ye officers of my God: for the meat and drynke offeryng shall be taken awaye from the house of your God. Proclayme a fastyng, cal the congregacyon, ga ther the elders, * And al the inhabytours of the lande togither into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lord: alas alas, for this daye. And why: the day of the Lorde is at hand, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghtye shal not the meates be taken awaye before our eyes, the myrth also and ioye from the house of our God: The seed shall perishe in the ground, the garner shall lye waste, the fozes shall be broken downe, for the corne shall be destroyed. What a spghyng make the kyne: the bullockes are in very euill lykynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famyshe awaye.

¶ Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernes and the flambe hath burnt vp al the trees of the felde. Yea, the wyld beasts crye also vnto the Lord: for the water ryuers are dried vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldenesse.

The prophesyeth the commynge and crueltye of theyr ene- mies. An exhortacyon to moue them to conuerte.

Blowe out a trompet in Syon, and crye vpon my holpe hyll, that all suche as dwell in the lande, shall tremble at it, * for the daye of the Lorde cometh, and is harde at hande: a darke daye, a glomyng daye, a cloudye daye: yea and as a stormy daye, lyke as the moornyng spreadeth out vpon p hyl- les. Namely, a great and myghtye people: suche as haue not bene sence the begynnyng, neyther shall be after them for euermore: before him shall be a consumyng fyre, and behynde hym a burn- yng flambe. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him: but behynde hym shall it be a verpe waste wyldernes, and there is no man that shall escape him: They are to loke vpon lyke barbed hozses, and runne lyke hozsemen. They shalpe vp vpon the hylls as it were the sound of charrettes: as the flambe of fyre that consu- meth the strawe, and as a myghtye people redy to the battayle.

¶ The folke shall be afrayde of hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a pottle: These shall run lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in his going shall kepe his araye, and not go out of his path. There shall not one dryue an other, but eache shall kepe his owne way. They shall breake in at the wyndo- wes and not be hurte. They shall come in to the cite, and runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and shalpe in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before him: yea the heuens shall be moued. * The Sunne and the moone shall be darkened, and the starres shall withdraue theyr shyne. The Lord shall thewe his voyce before his booste, for his boost is grete, stronge and myghtye, to fulfyl his commaundemente. This is that great and maruaylous fearfull daye of the Lorde. * And who is able to abyde it?

¶ Nowe therfore sayth the Lorde: * Turne you vnto me with al your hertes, wyth fastyng, we pyng and mournynge: rent your hertes and not your clothes: Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is a gracious and merciful, longe suffryng, and of great compassion: and ready to pardon wyckednesse: Then (no doubt) he also shall turne and forgyue, & after his chastenynge he shall let your encrease remayne for meate and drynke offerynges vnto the Lorde your God.

* Blow out with the trompet in Syon, pro- clayme a fastyng, call the congregacon, and ga ther the people togither: warne the congrega- cyon, gather the elders, byng the chyl dren and sucklynges togither. Lette the bydegrome go forth of his chambze, and p byde out of her clo- set. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwxt the porche and the aulter wepyng, and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thyn heritage be brought to such confusyon, lest the heathen be lordes therof.

* Wherefore shulde they saye amonge the hea- then: where is nowe theyr God?

¶ Then shall the Lorde be gelouse ouer his land and spare his people: yea, the Lord shall answer and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wyl sende you corne, wyne, and oyle, so that ye shall haue plentye of them: and I wylle nomore gyue you ouer, to be a reprofe among p hethen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall dryue hym farre from you: and cast hym out into a drye & waste lande, his face towarde the east see, and his byn der partes towarde p uttermost see: The stinke of hym shall goo vp, and his fylthy corruptyon shall fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proude. Feare not (O lande) but be glad, and reioyce: for the Lorde wyl do grete thynges. Be not ye afrayde neyther (O ye beasts of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene, and p trees shall beare theyr frute: the fyg trees and vyne- yardes shall gyue theyr encrease.

¶ Be glad then (O ye chyl dren of Syon) and reioyce in the Lord your God, for he hath giuen you a teacher of rightousnesse: * and he it is that shall sende you downe shoures of rayne, earlye and late in the first moneth: so that the garneres shall be ful of corne, and the prestes plenteous in wyne and oyle. A Take hede: in those daies and at the same tyme, whē I turne againe the captiuitie of Iuda and Jerusalem: I shall gather al people together, and bryng them in the valley of Josaphat: and there wyll I reason with them bycause of my people & heritage of Israel, whō they haue scatred about in the nations, & parted my lande: yea, they haue cast lottes for my people, the younge men haue they set in the brode house, and solde the damels for wyne, that they might haue to drynke. * Thou Tyrus and Sydon, and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Wyll ye despye me? well yf ye wyll nedes despye me, I wyll recompence you euen vpon your heed, and that ryght wozthely: for ye haue taken a waye my syluer and golde, my sayre and goodlye te wels, & brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Iuda and Jerusalem haue I solde vnto the Grekes, that ye myght bryng them farre from the borders of theyr owne countreys.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rase them oute of the place where ye haue solde them, * and wyll rewarde you euen vpon your heed. Your sonnes and your daughters wyll I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Iuda, and so they shall gyue them forth to sell vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lord him selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge y^e Gentyles, proclayme warre, wake vp the gyautes let them drawe nye, let them come vp all the lusty warrpours of them: * Make you swordes of your plowshares, and speares of youre speckles and sythes: Let the weake man say: I am stronge Mustre you and come, all ye heathen rounde about gather you together: there shall the Lord laye all thy gyautes to the grounde. In the valley appoynted there shall be many people: for the daye of the Lord is nye, in the valley appoynted. * The sunne and moone shall be darkned, and the stars shall withdraue their lyght. * The Lord shall roze out of Syon, and crye out of Jerusalem, that the heauens and the earth shall quake withal. But the Lord shall be a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for y^e chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe that I the Lord your God dwel vpon my holy mount of Syon. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thorowe her any more.

* Then shall the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, and the hylls shall flowe with mylke. Al the ryuers of Iuda shall haue water ynough, and oute of the Lordes house there shall flowe a spring, to water the brooke of * Sitim: but Egypt shall be layde waste: and Edom shall be desolate, bycause they haue dealt so cruelly wyth the chyldren of Iuda, and shed innocent bloode in theyr lande. The booke of the prophete Amos.

C The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme of the prophesye of Amos. The wordes of the Lord agaynst Azab, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the sonnes of Ammon.

These are the sermonnes that were shewed vnto Amos, (whych was one of the shepherdes at Therman) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Dasiab * kynge of Iuda, and in the tyme of * Jeroboam the sonne of Joab kynge of Israel, two yere before the earth quake. And he sayde: * The Lord shall roze out of Syon, and shewe his voyce from Jerusalem so that the pastures of y^e shepherdes shall be in a myserable case, and the top of Carmel dried vp. Thus sayeth the Lord: for thre and foure wyckednesses of * Damascus, I wyll not spare her: bycause they haue thershed Galaad wyth yron flayles. But I wyll sende a fyre into y^e house of Hazael, the same shall consume y^e palaces of Benadab. Thus wyll I breake y^e barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the seide of Auen: And him that holdeth the scepter out of y^e pleasaunte house: so that the people shall be dyuen out of sayre Siria: sayth the Lord. Thus sayth sayth the Lorde. For thre and foure wickednesses of Gaza, I wyl not spare her, bycause they make the prysoners yet more captiue, and haue byuen them into the lande of Edom. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into þ walles of Gaza, which shall deuoure her houses. I wyl rote out them that dwell at Asdod, and hym that holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shall perishe, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of the cite of Tyre, I wyl not spare her: bycause they haue encreased the capti-uitie of the Edomites and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into þ walles of Tyre, that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Edom I wyl not spare hym, bycause he persecuted his brother with þ sword, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe and so kept indignacion alway by hym. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into The-man, which shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and four wickednesses of the chyldren of Ammon, I wil not spare them: bycause they crypt by þ womē great wth chyldre in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I wyl kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a great crye, in the dawe of battayle, in tempest and in the dawe of storme so that theyr kyng shall go into captiuitie, he and his prynces togyther, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

Agayne Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wyl not spare hym: bycause he brent the bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes.
Therfore, wyl I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perishe wth noyse, and the sounde of a shawme. I wyl rote out the Judge from amonge them, and slaye all his prynces with him sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre wickednesses of Iuda I wyl not spare hym: bycause he hath cast asyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes: for why? they wolde nedes be disceyued with the lyes that theyr fathers folowed. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into Iuda, whiche shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wyl not spare hym, bycause he hath solde the ryghteous for moneye, and the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heedes, in the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meake. The son and the father go to þ harlot, to dishonour my holy name, they be byde euery anlitare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in þ house of theyr gods they drynke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amorites before them, that was as hye as the cedyres, & as strong as the oaks: notwithstanding I destroyed his frute from aboue, and his roote from vnder. * Agayne, I brought you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you fourty yeres thorow the wyldernes, that ye myght haue the Amorites landes in possession I rayled vpon prophetes amonge youre chyldren, and abstayners amonge your ponge men. Is it not so, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayth the Lorde? * But ye gaue þ abstainers wyne to drynke: & ye, ye commaunded the prophetes saying: Prophecy not. Behold, I wyl crash you in sondre, lyke as a wayne crassheth that is full of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neyther the stronge be able to do anye thyng: no, the Spawnte shall not saue hym owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swyft of fore shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of sto-make as a graunt, shall in that dawe be sayne to runne his way naked, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

He teipoueth the house of Israel of wickednesse.

Hear, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israel) namely vnto all the tribes whome I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: * you onely haue I excepted from all the generacions of the earth: therfore I wyl vspite you in al your wickednesses. May twayne walke togyther except they be agreed amonge them selues? * Doeth a lyon roze in the wood except he haue a prayr? Or cryeth a Lyons whelp oute of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somethyng? Doeth a byrdefall in a snare vpon the erth where no fouler is. Taketh a man his snare vpon the grounde afore he catche somwhat? Crye they out Alarum with þ trompet in the cite, and the people not afrayed?
Commeth there any plage in a cite, without it be the Lordes doinge? Now doth the Lorde God no maner of thyng, but he tellet his secret before vnto his seruantes the prophetes. When a lyon roze, who wyl not be afrayed? Seinge then that the Lorde God him selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophesye.

Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you togyther vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se great murder and violent oppression amonge them, for why? they regarde not the thyng that is right, sayth the Lorde: they gather togyther euill gotten goodes, and laye vpon robbyrie in theyr houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God. Thus lande shall be troubled and besyged rounde about, thy strength shall be pluckt from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayth the Lorde, lyke as an herdeman taketh t wo legges, or a pece of an eare oute of the Lyons mowthe: Euen so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria) hauynge theyr couches in the corner, theyr beddes at Damascus, shall be pluckt a waye.

* Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Jacob (sayth the Lorde God of doostes) that when I begynne to vspite the wickednesse of Israel, I wyl vspite the anlitares at Bethel also: so that the hornes of the anlitare shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde,

The. v. Chapter.

Agaynst the captiuitie of Israel.

Hearke this worde, O ye house of Israel, & why: I must make this mone for you.
The virgin Israel shall fall, & neuer ryse vp agayne: she shall be cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For this sayth the Lorde God Where as there dwelt a thousande in one cytie: there shall be left scarce an hundred therein: and where there dwelt an. C. there shall scarce ten be left in the house of Israel.

Neuerthelesse thus sayth the Lorde vnto y house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Bersaba: For Gilgal shall be carryed awaye captiue, and Bethel shall come to nought.
Seke the Lorde, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Joseph be brent with fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormewood, and cast downe ryghteousnesse vnto the grounde: * Ye forsake the Lorde that maketh the. vii. starres & the Moons, that turneth the nyght into daye, & of the daye he maketh darknesse. * He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon y playne grounde: y Lorde is his name. He rapeth destruction vpon the myghty people, and bypny-geth downe y stronge holde. But they owe hym euill wyl: that reynoueth them openly: & whoso tellethe them the playn trueth, they abhorre him.
For so moch then as ye oppresse the poore, & rob him of his best sustenance: * therfore where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasaunt vinyardes shall you plant, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke: and why: as for y multitude of your wickednesse & your stoute synnes, I know the ryght well. Enemyes are ye of the ryghtous, ye * take rewarde, ye oppresse the poore in iudge-ment. Therfore the wyle must now be sayne to holde his tyme, so wycked a tyme is it.

Seke after the thyng that is good, and not euill, so shall ye lyue: pea: the Lorde God of hostes shall be with you, accordyng to your owne desyre.
* Hate the euill, and loue the good: & syt vp ryght agayne in the porte: (no doubt) the Lorde God of hostes shall be merciful vnto the remnant of Joseph. Yf no (sayth y Lorde God of hostes) ther shall be mourning in al stretes: pea, they shall say in euery strete: alas, alas. They shall cal the bulbandman to lamentacion, & such as can mourne to mornynge. In al vynyardes there shall be vnynesse, for I wyl come amonge you, sayth the Lorde. Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde. Wherfore wolde ye haue it? As for the daye of the Lorde, it shall be darke and not clere.

Yea, lyke as when a man runneth from a lyon and a beer meteth meteth hym: or when he commeth into the house, and leaneeth his hande vpon the wall, a serpente byteth hym. Shall not the daye of the Lorde be darke * and not clere? Shall it not be cloudye, and no synne in it? I hate and abhorre your holy dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come together, I wyl not accept it.
And though ye offere me burnt offerynges & meat offerynges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for your fatte thank offerynges, I wyl not looke vpon them: A waye with that noyse of thy son-ges. I wyl not heare thy playes of mulcke: but se that equitie flowe as y water, and ryght-

The vii. Chapter.

Of the captiuitie of Israel and Iuda.

He Lorde God shewed me such a vision, behold, there stode one y made greshoppers, euen when the cozne was thoryng forth after the kynge had clypte hys shepe. Howe when they undertoke to eate vp all the grene thynge

I beseeche the, who shulde elles helpe by Jacob y is brought so lowe. So the Lorde was gracpous therin, and the Lorde sayde: well it shal not be.
Agayne, the Lorde shewed me thys vpsion: be-holde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyssh withal, and it deuoured the great depe: pea, it co-sumed a parte alreadye. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who shuld els helpe by Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was merciful therin, and the Lorde God sayde: wel, it shal not be. Mozeouer he shewed me this vision: behold, the Lorde stode vpon a playstred wall, and a masons trowell in his hande.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Amos, what seest thou, I answered, a masons trowell. Then sayd the Lorde: behold, I wyll laye the trowell amonge my people of Israel, and wyll nomoze o-uerse them: but the hyrchapels of Isaac must be layde waste, and the churches of Israel made desolate, * and for as y house of Jeroboam, I wyll stande by agaynst it wyth the swerde. Vpon this sent Amasiah the preeft to Bethel vnto Jeroboam the kyng of Israel, saying * Amos ma-keth the house of Israel to rebell agaynst the: y land ca not a way with his wordes. For Amos sayth: Jeroboam shal dye with the swerbe, and Israel shal be led away captiue oute of theyr owne lande. And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence: (thou that canst se so wel) & fflye into the lande of Iuda, get the there thy luyng & prophecye there: & prophecye nomoze at Bethel, for it is the kynges chappel, & the kynges court.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasiah. As * for me, I am neither prophet nor prophets son but a keeper of cattell. Now as I was breakyng downe mulberyes, and goinge after the cattell, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and prophecye vnto my people of Israel.
And therfore heare thou nowe the worde of the Lorde. Thou sayest: prophecye not agaynst Israel, and speake nothing agaynst the house of Isaac: wherfore thus sayth y Lorde. Thy wyfe shal be despyled in the ctyte, thy sones and doughters shalbe slayne with the swerde, & thy lande shal be measured oute wyth the lyne. Thou thy selve shalt dye in an vncleane lande, * and Israel shal be dyspuen out of hys owne countrey.

The viii. Chapter.

the temple be turned into sorowe, sayth y Lorde God: many deed bodyes shal lye in euery place, of corne to make the busshell lesse, and the spcke greater: We shall sette vp false weyghtes, that we may get the poore vnder vs wth theyr money, and the nedv also for shoes: yea, let vs sell & chaffe for corne. The Lord hath sworne agaynst the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theyr wyl I neuer forget. Shal not the lande tremble, and all they that dwell therein, mourne for thys? Shall not theyr destruction come vpon them, lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them as y^e floude of Egypt? At the same tyme (sayth the Lord God) I shal cause the sunne to go downe at noone: and the lande to be darke in the cleare daye. Your hye feastes wyl I turne to so: owe and pour songes to mourning: I wyl byrnyng sack cloth vpon all backes, and baldnesse vpon euery heed: yea, suche a mournyng wyl I sende them as is made vpon an only begotten sonne: and they shal haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord God) that I shal send an hungre into the earth, not the hungre of byeed, nor the thyrst of water: but an hungre to heare the worde of the Lord, so that they shal go from the one see to the other yea from the north vnto the east, running about to seke the word of the Lord, and shal not fynde it. In that tyme shall the fayre virgines and the ponge men perysh for thyrst: yea, euen they that sware in the execrable calfe of Samaria: & sayd as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan; and as trulye as thy God lyueth at Bersaba. These shall fall and neuer ryse vp agayne.

The .ix. Chapter.

Threatenynges agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

I Sawe the Lord standing vpon the aultare, and he sayde: Smyte the doze cheke, that y^e postes may shake wth al. For their conetousnes shal fall vpon all theyr heedes, and theyr poste rytie shalbe slayne wth the swerde. They shal not flye a waye, there shal not one of them escape nor be deliuered. Though they were buryed in y^e hell, my hande shal fetch them from thence though they clyme vp to heauen: yet shal I cast them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shal I seke them oute, and byrnyng them from thence: though they crepe downe fro my syght into the depe of y^e see, I shal commaunde the serpent, euen there to byte them. If they go away before theyr enemyes into captiuitie, then shal I commaunde the swerde, there to slaye them. Thus wyl I set myne eyes vpon them: for theyr harme, and not for theyr welth.

For when the Lord God of hostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwell therein, must nedes mourne: And whyr theyr destruction shal arysle as euery streame, & runne ouer them, as the floude in Egypte. He that hath his dwelling in heauē, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earth. He that calleth the waters as the see, and poureth them oute vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lord. O ye chyldren of Israel, are ye not vnto me, euen as the Egyptians, sayth y^e Lord: haue not I brought Israel out of the lande of Egypte? The Egyptians listynes from Capthor: and the Syrians from Cir: Behold, the eyes of the Lord are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the earth. Neuer theles, I wyl not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, sayth the Lord.

For lo, thys I promysse, though I lyfte the house of Israel among al nacions (lyke as they vse to lyft in a spue) yet shal not y^e smallest grauell stone fal vpon the earth. But al the wyched doers of my people, that saye: Cuse, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastylye vpon vs: those shal peryshe wth the swerde. At that tyme wyl I buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and hedge vp y^e gappes and loke what is broken, I shal repayre it: yea, I shal buylde it vp agayn, as it was afore tyme that they maye possesse the remnaunt of Edom: yea, and all suche people as call vpon my name, wth them sayth y^e Lord which doth these thynges.

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lord) that the plowman shal ouertake the mower, & treader of grapes him that soweth seede. The mountaynes shal droppe swete wyne, and the hylls shalbe frutesful, and I wyl turne the captiuitie of my people of Israel: they shal repayre the waste cities and haue them in possellio, they shal plant vynyardes, and drynke the wyne ther of, they shal make gardens, and enioye the frutes of them. And I wyl plant them vpon theyr own grounde, so that I wyl neuer roote them out agayne from theyr lande which I haue gyuenthem, sayth the Lord thy God.

Agaynst Edom, and the trust that they had in y^e chelle.

Ihis is the vision that was shewed vnto Abdi. Thus barde the Lord God spokē vpon Edom. We haue hearde of the Lord that there is an embassage sent amonge the heythen: Up, let vs arysle, and fyght agaynst them. dy to flye vnto Tharlis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: where he foundede a shyp readye for to go vnto Tharlis, so he payde his fare, and went aborde, & he myght go with them vnto Tharlis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde into the see, and there was a myghtye tempest in the see, so that the shyp was in iopardy of goynge in peces. Then the maryners were afrayed: and cried euery man vnto his God: and the goddes that were in the shyp, they cast into the see, to lpyghten it of them. But Jonas gatte hym vnder the hatches, where he layed hym downe and slombzed.

So the master of the shyp came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why slombzest thou? Up, call vpon thy Lod: & God (happelye) wyll thyneke vpon vs, that we peryshe not. And they sayde one to an other: come, lette vs caste lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, & the lot fell vpon Jonas. Then sayde they vnto hym: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence comest thou? (and whyther goest thou?) What coutrie man art thou? and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an E-bryue, and I feare the Lord God of beaues, which made both the see and the drye lande. Then were the men excedynglye afrayed, and sayde vnto hym: why dydest thou? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, bycause he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto him what shall we do vnto the, that þ see maye seale from troubling vs? (for the see wrought & was troublous) he answered them: take me, and cast me into the see, so shall it let you be in rest, for I wote it is for my sake: that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuerthelesse, the men assayed with rowynge to brynge the shyppe to lande: but it wolde not be, bycause the see wrought so: and was so trouthe Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde let vs not peryshe for this mannes death, neyther laye thou innocent blood vnto our charge: for thou, O Lord hast done euen as thy pleasure was.

came in at his portes, and cast iottes vpon Jeru-my people, in the tyme of theyr decay: thou shalt thou stand waytynge any more at the corners of dronken vpon my holy hyll, so shall all the he-pten drynke continually: yea, drynke shal they & uacion be, and holines, these shal be holy, and the house of Jacob shal possesse: euen those. * þ had house of Jacob shal be a fyre, the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau shal be þ strawe which they shal kyndle and consume, so that nothyng shal be left of the house of Esau, the Lord hym self hath sayd it. They of þ south shal haue the mount of Esau in posselpon: and loke what lyeth vpon the ground, þ shal þ Philistines haue, the playne feldes shal Ephraim & Samaria pos-min haue. And this host shal be the chyldren of Israels prysoners. Nowe what foloweth from Canaā vnto zarephath, and Sepharad, þ shal be of the south shal enherit it. Thus theyr escape

The Prophecy

But the Lord prepared a great fysh, to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh thre dayes, and thre nightes: And Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God, out of the fyshes bellye, and sayd: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lord, and he herde me out of the belly of hell, I cryed, & thou heardest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the see, and fflowdes compassed me about: yea, all thy waues and rowles of water went ouer me, I thought that I had ben cast away out of thy sight: But I will yet agayne loke toward thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the wedes were wrapte about myne heed. I went downe to the botome of fpylles, & was barred in with earth for euer. But f, O Lord my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule fapnted within me, I thoughte vpon the Lord: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanityes, wyl forsake his merrye. But I wyl do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgyuyng, and wyl pay that that I haue vowed, for whysaluacyon cometh of the Lord. And the Lord spake vnto the fysh, and it caste oute Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninue. The repentance of the kynge of Ninue.

When came the worde of the Lord vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * vp & get the to Ninue that greates ctyte, and preache vnto them the preachynge, whych I bad the. So Jonas arose and went to Ninue at the Lordes commaundement. Ninue was a greates ctyte vnto God, namelpe of thre dayes iourney. And Jonas went to, and entred into the ctyte: euen a dayes iourney, and cryed, sayinge: There are yet fourtye dayes, and then shall Ninue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninue beleued God, & proclaymed fastynge, and arayed them selues in sackcloth, as well the great as f smal of them. And the tidynge came vnto the kynge of Ninue, whych rose out of hys seate, and vpd his apparell of, and put on sackcloth, and sat hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed and comaunded in Ninue, by the auctoritie of the kynge and his lordes, sayinge: * se that neyther man, nor beaste, ore, or shepe taste ought at all: & that they neyther fede nor drynke water: but put on sackcloth both man & beast: & crye mightely vnto God: * Yea, se that euery man turne from his euyl waye, and from the wyckednesse that he hath in hande.

Who can tell? God maye turne, and repent, & cease from his ferece wrath, that we perishe not. And when God sawe theyr woekes, howe they turned from theyr wycked wayes: * he repented on the euyl, whych he sayde: he wolde do vnto them, and vpd it not.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

Herfore Jonas was sore discont, & angry. And he prayed vnto f lord and said: O Lord, was not this my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my coutry? therfore I hastid rather to dye vnto Charlis. * For I know wel ynough, that thou arte a mercyfull God, full of compassyon, long suffryng, & of great kyndnes, and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment: And nowe * O Lord, take my lyfe from me (I beseech the) for I had rather dye then liue. Then sayd the Lord: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of the ctyte, and sat downe on the east syde therof: & there made him a booth and sat vnder it in the shadowe, tyll he myght se what shulde chaunce vnto the ctyte.

And the Lord God prepared a wyld byne, whych sprang vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboute his heed, to delpue him out of his payne. And Jonas was excedyng glad of the wyld byne. But vpon the next morowe agaynst the spyng of the dape, the Lord ordeyned a worme, whych smote the wyld byne, so that it wythered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruēt east wynde: and the sunne bette ouer the heed of Jonas, that he fapnted agayne, and wisped vnto his soule that he myght dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Arte thou so angry for the wyld byne? And he sayd yea, very angry am I, euen vnto the death. And the Lord sayd: f hast compassyon vpon a wyld byne, wheron thou bestowdest no labour: nor madest it growe, whych sprang vp in one night, and perished in an other: And shulde not I then haue compassyon vpon Ninue that greates ctyte, wherein there are aboute an hundred and. xx. W. persons, that knowe not theyr right hand from the left, besyde moche cattell?

Of the destruction of Samaria by cause of theyr ydolatre.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Michas the Mozaite in the dayes of * Jorhan & * Achaz and * Jechezkiah kynges of Iuda: whych was shewed him vpon Samaria and Jerusalem.

* heare all ye people, marke this well O earth, and all that therein is. Yea, the Lord God hym selfe be wytnes amonge you, euen the Lord fro his holy temple. For whys? * behold: f Lord shal go out of his place, & come downe, & tread vpon the hye thynges of f earth. The mountayns shal consume vnder hym, and the valleyes shal cleane asondre: lyke as waxe consumeth at the fyre, & as the waters run downward. And al this shal be for the wyckednes of Jacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel. But what is f wyckednes of Jacob?

bout the vynepearde: her stones shall I cast into latry, they are corrupte, & shall miserably perishe If I were a fleshy fellow, and a preacher of lyes and tolde them that they might lyt bibbing and bollyng and be dzonken. O that were a prophet for this people. But I wyl gather the in dede, O Jacob, & dyue the remnaunte of Israel al togy-ther. I shall cary them one w an other as a flock in the folde, and as the cattel in theyze stals, that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh þ gappe, he shall go before. They shall bryke vp the porte, and go in and out at it. The kyng shall go before them, and the Lorde shall be vpon the heade of them.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Agaynst the tyrannye of princes, and false prophetes.

And I sayd: heare, O ye heades of þ house of Jacob, & ye leders of þ hous of israel: * shuld not ye know, what were lausful and right? But ye hate þ good, & loue the euyl, ye plucke of mens skines, & þ fleshe fro their bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, & flay of theyze skyn: ye break theyze bones, ye chop them in peces as it were into a chaldyon, & as flesh into a pot. Now þ tyme shall come, * & that when they cal vnto the Lorde he shall not heare the, but hyde hys face from the bycause that thozowe theyze owne ymaginacyons, they haue delte so wyckedlye.

And as concernynge the prophetes þ dysceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them.
* When they haue any thing to byte vpon, then they preach that al shall be wel, but if a man put not some thing into theyze mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym. * Therfore your visyon shall be turned to night, and your prophesying to darkenesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, and the day shall be darke vnto them.
Then shall the visyon seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea, they shall be sayne all the packe of the to stop theyze mouthes, for they haue not Godes word. * As for me I am ful of strength, & of the sprete of the Lorde, ful of iud-gemente & boldnes: to shewe the house of Jacob theyze wickednes, & the house of Israel their syn.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob and ye iudges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thyng that is lausful, and wzeist aside the thyng that is streyght. * Ye that buyld vp Syon with bloode, and Jerusalem with doing wzonge. * O ye iudges ye gyue sentence for gyf-tes. O ye prestes, ye teach for lucre. * O ye prophetes, ye prophesy for money. Yet wyl they be taken as thole that holde vpo god, and say, Is not the Lorde amonge vs? * Tush ther can no misfortune happen vs. * Therfore shall Syon (for poure sake) be plowed lyke a felde: Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, & the byl of the temple shall be turned in to an hye wood.

In the latter dayes it wyl come to passe, that the hylle of the Lordes house shall be sette vpper then any mountens or hilles: Pea, & people shall pzeace vnto it, and & multitude of the Gentyles shall hast them thither, saying: Come, *let vs go vp to the hyl of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teache vs hys wayes, and that we may walke in his pathes, *For the lawe shall come out of Syon: and the worde of God from Jerusalem, & shall gyue sentence among the multitude of the heathen, and reforme & people of farre countreyes: so that of theyr swerdes they shall make plough shares, and speches of theyr speares.

*One people shall not lyfte vp a swearde agaynst another: pea, they shall no moze learne to fyght: but euery man shall spt vnder his vine yarde, and vnder his fygtre, and no man to fray hym away: for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it: Therfor where as al the people haue walked euery man in the name of his own God, we wyl walke in the name of our God for euer & euer. *At the same tyme, sayth the Lord wyl I gather vp the lame and & outcastes, and suche as I haue chastened, and wyl gyue yssue vnto the lame, and make the outcastes a great people: *and the Lord hym selfe shall be theyr kynge vpon the mount Syon, from this tyme forth for euer moze.

And vnto the (O thou towre of *Eder, thou stronge holde of the doughter Syon) vnto the shall it come euen the lordshipp and kyngdome of the doughter Jerusalem. Why then art thou nowe so heuy: is there no kynge in the: are thy counsellers away that thou art so payned, as a woman in her trauayle? And now (O & doughter Syon) be sozpy, let it greue the as a wyfe labouryng with chyld: for now must thou get the out of the cytpe, and dwell vpon & playne felde: Pea: vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered, *& there the Lord shall looke the from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Nowe also are there many people gathered togyther agaynst the sayinge: what, Syon is cursed, we shall se our luste vpon her. But they knowenot *the thoughtes of the Lord, they vnderstande not his counsaile, that shall gather them togyther as the sheues in the barne. Therfor get & vp, O thou doughter Syon, & thersly out the corne: for I wyl make thy bozne yzon: and thy clawes brasse, that thou mayst grynde in ny people: theyr goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lord, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The. v. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

After that shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O thou robbers doughter: they shall laye lege agaynst vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke, *And thou Berthelem Ephrata, art lytle amonge the thousandes of Juda, Out of the shall come vnto me whyche shall be the gouernour in Israel: whose outgoynge hath ben from the begynnyng and from euerlastyng. In the meane whyle be plaggeth them for a season, vntyl the tyme that she (whiche shall beare) haue bozne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethren be conuerted vnto the chyldren of Israel. he shall stande faste, *and gyue fode in the + strength of & Lord, and in the victozy of the name of the Lord his God and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the furthest part of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace so that the Assirian may come into your lande, & treade in your houses. We shall bypnyng vp. vii. shepherdes, and. viii. prynces vpon them: these shall subdue & land of Assur with the swearde, & the lande of *Arimod with theyr naked weapons: *Thus shall he deliuer vs fro the Assirian, when he cometh within our lande, & setteth his fote within our borders.

And the remnaunt of Jacob shall be among the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lord and as the drops vpon & grasse, that tarreth for no man, & wayreth of no body. *Pea, the respyd of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles & the multitude of people, as the lyon among the beastes of the wood, and as the lyons whelp among a flocke of shepe: whyche (when he goeth thowrd) treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and ther is no man that can helpe. Thyne hande shall be lyft vp vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduersaries shall perishe. The tyme shall come also, sayth the Lord, that I wil take thy horses from the, and destroye thy charrets. I wyl breake downe the cyties of thy lande, & ouerthrowe al thy stronge holdes. *Al witchcrafts wil I rote out of thy hande, there shall no mo soothsaynges be within the. *Thyne ydoles & thyne ymages wyl I destroye out of the: so that thou shalt no moze bow thy selfe vnto & workes of thyne owne handes. Thy groues wil I pluck vp by & rootes, & breke downe the cyties. Thus wyl I be auenged also vpon all the heathen that wyl not heare.

The. vi. Chapter.

An exhortation to be at the iudgemente agaynst Israel beyng vnkynnde. What maner of sacrifices do please God.

Ecken nowe what the Lord sayeth: *I wyl reprove the mountaynes and let the hylles beare thy voyce, O heare & runnymment of the Lord, & mountaynes, and & myghtye foundacyons of the earth: for the Lord wyl reprove, hys people, & reason wyth Israel. O my people, what haue I done vnto the: or wher haue I hurt the: giue me answere. *Bycause I brought the from the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of & house of bondage: *Bycause I made Moyses, Aarō & Miriam to leade the: Remembre (O my people) & what Balach the kyng of Moab had ymagyned agaynst the, & what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, from Setbin vnto Galgal, that ye may knowe the louynge kyndnes of the Lord. What acceptable thyng shall I offer vnto the Lord? Shall I bow my knee to the hye God? Shall I come befoze hym wyth burntofferpynges, and wyth calues of a yere olde hath the Lord a pleasure in manye thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? O, shall Orshal I geue my fyrstborne for myne offesoule: I wyl shewe the, O ma what is good, & what the Lord requyret of þe, namely to do right to haue pleasure in lounge kyndnesse, to be so-wpe, and walke with thy God. * The Lordes poyce cryeth vnto the cytie, and the man þe be lamed conspydeth thy name (O Lord.) her-ken what is your rod, and heare hym that warneth you. * Shoulde I not be displeased for the vnyghtous good in the houses of the wycked, and because the measure is minished: O shuld Iustice the falle balaunces, and the bag of dis-ceptfull weyghtes. amonge those that be full of eyches vnyghtously gotten: where the citizen deale with falschod, speake lyes, and haue disceit full tonges in theyr mouthes?

Therefore I wyl take in hande to punyssh the, and to make the desolate because of thy syn-nes. * Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea, thou shalt bynge thy selfe downe. Thou shalt flye, but not escape: & those that thou wol-dest saue, wyl I delpue to the * swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olynes, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynte thy selfe wthal: thou shalt treade out sweate milk, but shalt drynke no wyne. Ye kepe the o-balaunces of * Amri, and al the customes of the house of Abab: ye folowe theyr pleasures, therfore wyl I make the waste, & cause thy inhaby-ters to be abhorred. O my people: & thus shalt thou heare thyne owne shame.

The vii. Chapter.

A complaynt of the lytle nombre of pnyghtous. Agaynthe trauhe oughte we not to holde with our grettest frendes.

Wis me: I am become as one that goeth a gleange in the harueste. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wold I fayne (with all my herte) haue of the best frute. * There is not a godlye vpon earth, there is not one ryghteous amonge men. They laboure all to shed blood, and euery man buteth hys brother to death: yet they saye they do wel whenthey do euyl. As the prince wyl so sayth the iudge, that he may do hym a pleasure agayn The great ma speaketh what his hert despyeth and the hearers alowe hym. The best of them is but as a thystle, and the mooste ryghteous of them is but as a byer in the hedge. But when þe daye of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be vplited, then shalt they be wasted awaye. * Let no man beleue his frende, nor put his confidence in a brother. Kepe the porte of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome, * for the sonne shal put hys father to dishonour, the doughter shal speke agaynst her mother, the doughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe: and a mannes foes shal be euen they of his owne household.

Neuerthelesse I wyl loke vp vnto the Lord I wyl paciently abyde God my sauour: my God shall heare me: * O thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayne: and though I syt in darknesse, yet the Lord is my lyght. I wyl beare the punishment of the Lord (for why, I haue offended hym) tyl he syt in iudgemēt vpon my cause, and se that I haue ryght. He wyl bynge me forth to the lyght, and I shall se hys ryghtousnesse.

She that is myne enemy shall loke vpon it and be confounded, whych now sayth: * Where is thy Lord God? Myne eyes shall beholde her when she shall be troden downe as the clay in þe streets. * The tyme wyl come, that thy gappes shall be made vp, and the lawe shall go abrode: and at that tyme shall they come vnto the from Assur vnto the stronge cyties, & from the strong cyties vpon the ryuer: from the one see to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

Not withstanding, the lande must be wasted because of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of theyr owne ymaginations. Therefore fede thy people with thy rod, the flocke of thyne heritage, which dwell desolate in the wood: that they maye be fedde vpon the mount of Carmel.
Basā and Galaad, as aforesayd. Herueplous thynges wyl I shewe them, * lyke as when they came out of Egypte.

This shall the hepten se, and be ashamed for all theyr power, * so that they shall laye theyr hande vpon theyr mouth, and stoppe theyr eares:
* They shall lyke the duste lyke a serpente, and as the wormes of the earth that treble in theyr holes. They shall be afrayde of the Lord oure God, and they shall feare the.

Where is there suche a God as thou: that pardonest wickednesse & forgyuest the offences of þe remnaunt of thyne heritage: he kepeth not his wraoth for euer: and why? hys delpue is to haue compassion: * he shal turne agayne, and be merciful to vs: he shal put downe our wickednesse, and cast al our synnes into the botome of the see.
Thou shalt kepe thy truthe with Jacob, & thy mercy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sworne vnto our fathers longe ago.

Ihis is the heuy burthen, which the Prophet Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, * how long shall I crye & thou wylt not heare? * howe longe shall I complayne vnto the, suffrynge wronge, & thou wylt not helpe? Why lettest thou me se werpnesse and labour?

* Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is tozne in peces and there can not right iudgement go forth. And why the vngodlye is more set by then the ryghtuous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement proceedeth. * Beholde amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abashed: for I wyl do a thyng in your tyme, whych thoughe it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. * For lo, I wyl rase vp the Caldees, that bytter & swyfte people: whiche shall go as wyde as the lande is to take possyion of dwellynge places, that be not they owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall yt in iudgement & punyche. They horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sozer then the wolues in the encynge. They bozemen come by greates heapes from farre, they flye bastele to deuoure as the Aegle. They come all tospoyl, oute of them cometh an eastwynde, whych bloweth and gathereth they captaynes, lyke as y lande. They shall mocke the kynges, and laugh ppyntes to scozne. They shall not let by any strong holde, for they shall laye ordynauce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freche corage vnto them: to go forth and to do more euyl, and to ascrpe the power vnto they god.

But thou O Lorde my God: my holy one, thou arte from the begynnynge, therefore shall Istode vpon my watche, and set me vpon my bulworke, to looke and se, what he wolde say vnto me, & what aunswere I shalde gyue hym that reproved me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnlye vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, may reade it. * For y vision is yet farre off for a tyme, but at y last it shall come to passe, and not fayle. * And though he tary, yet wayte y for hym, for in very dede he wyl come, and not be slacke.

Behold, the vnrpyghteous thynketh hym self in sauegarde, as in a strong holde: * but the iust shall lyne by his saythe. Lyke as the wyne dysceynerth the dzonkarde: euen so the proude shall fayle, & not endure. He openeth his desyre wide vp as the hel, * and is as vnslayable as death. All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto hym all people.

But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst hym, and mocke hym with a bye worde and saye? Wo vnto hym that heareth vp other mennes goodes. Howe longe wyl he lade hym selfe wyth thycke claye? Howe sodenlye wyl they stande vp, that shall byte, and awake, that shall reare the in peces: yea, thou shalt be they praye? * Seynge thou hast spoyled many heathen: therfore shall the remnaunte of the people spoyl the: by cause of mens bloode, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the Citie, and vnto all them that dwell therein.

* Wo vnto hym, that couetously gathereth euyl gotten goodes into his house, that he maye set his nest on hye, to escape from the power of mysfortune. A prayer of the prophete Abacuk for the ignorant.

Q Lord, when I hearde speake of the I was asfayde. The worke þe thou haste taken in hande, shalt thou persourme in his tyme, O Lord: & when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thynkest vpon merce, God commeth from Chemã, and the holpe one from the mounte of Paran: Selah.

His gloze couereth the heauens, and þe earth is full of his prayse. His thynne is as the sunne, & beames of lycht go oute of his handes, there is his power byd. Destruction goeth before hym and a pestilent sycknesse goeth from his sete.

Amos. ix. 2.

He standeth and mesureth the earth. He loketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of the worlde fall downe to pouldre, and the hilles are layne to howe them selues, for his goynges are euerlastynge and sure.

I sawe that the paupers of the Moziang, and the tentes of þe land of Madian were vered for werynesse. Wast thou not angry, O Lord in þe waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? yes, when thou sattest vpon thy horse, and when thy charettes had the victorie. Thou shewdest thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest prompted wyth an othe vnto the trybes. Selah.

Thou dyddst stryke the thowse with his sceptre the heedes of his playne people, whiche come as a storme wynde to scatter me abrode, and are glad when they maye eate vp the poore secretly. Thou makest a way for thyne horses in the see euen in the myddest of the great waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voice therof, my bones corrupt, I am asfayde where I stande. O that I might rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, whiche all are ready prepared.

The labour of the olyue shal be but lost, and the lande shal bynge no corne: the shepe shal be taken out of the folde and there shal be no cattell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyl be glad in the Lord, and wyl reioyce in God my saupour. * The Lord God is my strength, he shal make my feete as the feete of hartes: and he whiche gyueth the victorie shal bynge me to my hye places, syngynge vpon my psalmes.

The booke of the Prophete Sophonny.

The fyrst Chapter.

Threatenynges agaynst Iuda and Ierusalem bycause of theyr podelttee.

This is þe worde of the Lord, whiche I came vnto Sophonny: the sone of Chusi, the sone of Gedolia: the sonne of Amariah the sonne of Hezekiah, in the tyme of * Josiah, the sonne of * Amon kynge of Iuda.

I wyl gather vp al thynges in þe land (sayeth the Lord) I wyl gather vp man and beast: I wyl gather vp the foules in the ayre, and the fische in the see (to the great decaye of þe wycked) and wyl utterly destroye the men oute of the lande, sayeth the Lord.

I wyl stretch out myne hand vpon Iuda, and vpon all such as dwell at Ierusalem. Thus wil I rote out þe remnant of Baal from this place, and the names of the * Remurys and prestes, peas, and such as vpon theyr house toppes worshyppe howe them selues vnto the hoste of heu which sweare by the Lord, & by theyr Walchon also: whiche starte abacke from the Lord, and neyther seke after the Lord, nor regardec hym.

* Be still at the ptesence of þe Lord God for the day of þe Lord is at hand: pea the Lord hath prepared a daye of offering, and called his gesses therto. And thus shal it happen in the daye of þe Lordes daye of offering. I wyl visyte þe pynces the kynges chyldren: and all suche as weare straunge clothynge. In the same daye also wyl I visyte al those that treade ouer the threshold, so proudly, whych fyll they? Lordes house with robbery and falsed. At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) there shal be herde a great crye from the * fyre porte, & an howlyng from the other porte, and a great murther from the hylls.

Howe ye that dwell in the myll, for all the mar chaunte people are gone, and all they that were laden with syluer, are roted out.

At the same tyme wyl I seke thowwe Jerusalem wyl lanternes, and vsyte them that contynue in they? dregges, and save in they? bet tes: * Cusch, the Lorde wyl do neyther good nor euell. They? goodes shal be spoyled, and they? houses layde waste: & they shal buyde houses, and not dwelle in them, they shal plante vine yardes, but not drynke the wyne therof.

For the great * dawe of the Lorde is at hande, it is harde by and cometh on a pace. Horrible is the tydynges of the Lordes dawe, then shal the graut crye out: for that day is a dawe of wraath, a dawe of trouble and heynesse, a dawe of utter destruction and mysery, a darke and glomyng dawe, a cloudy & stormy dawe, a day of the nople of trompettes & thawmes, agaynst the stronge cyties and hye towres. I wyl bynng the people into such veracyon, that they shal go aboute lyke bynde inenne, bycause they haue synned agaynst the Lorde. They? bloode shal be shedde as the dust, and they? bodys as pmyre. * Ne yther they? syluer nor they? golde shal be able to deliuer them in that wraathfull dawe of p Lorde but the * whole lande shal be consumed thoww the fyre of hys gelousye: for he shal soone make cleane ryddaunce of all them that dwell in the lande.

The.ii. Chapter,

The mouth to retorne to God, prophesyinge vnto the one destruction, and to the other deliuerance.

Wampne poure selues & seache, O thou nacyon, that hast no desyre to the lawe, or pthynge go forth that God hath concluded, & or the tyme come wherin man shal passe away as the duste: or the fearfull wraath of the Lorde come vpon you: yea, or the dawe of the Lordes soze displeasure come vpon you. Seke the Lorde al ye make herted vpon earth, ye that worke after his iudgemente: seke ryghteousnesse. * seke lowlynesse: that ye may be defeded in the wraath full dawe of the Lorde: * For Gaza shal be destroyed, and Ascalon shalbe layde waste. They shal cast out Alood at the none dawe, & Accaron shal be pluckt vp by the rootes.

W vnto you that dwell vpon the see cooste ye murtherous people: the worde of the Lorde shal come vpon you. O Canaan thou lande of the Philistines, I wil destroye the, so that there shal no man dwelle in the any more, and as for the see coost, it shal be herdennes cotages and shepfoldes: yea, it shal be a porcion for such as remaine of the house of Iuda, to fede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shal they rest towarde nyght for the Lorde their God shal visyte them, and turne a waye they? captiuitie. * I haue herde the despyte of Moab, and p blasphemyes of the chyliden of Ammon, how they haue shamfully & intreated my people, and magnified the selues within the borders of they? lande. Therefore, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel) Moab shal be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dwe thorne hedges, salt pyttes, and a perpetuall wyldernesse: The resydue of my folke shal spyle them, the remnaunte of my people shal haue them in possession. * Thys shal happen vnto them for they? pryde, because they haue delt so shamefully with the Lorde of hostes people, and magnified them selues aboue them. The Lorde shal be grymme vpon them, * and destroye all the goddes in the lande. And al the fles of the heathen shal worshyp hym, euery man in hys place.

Ye Mozians also shal perishe with my sword yea, he shal stretche out his hande ouer y north, and destroye Assur. * As for Ninine, he shal make it desolate, dwe and waste. The flockes and all the bestes of the people shal lye in the myddest of it: pellicanes and storkes shal abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shal syng in the wyndowes, and rauens shal sit vpon p balkes, for the borders of Cedre shal be ryuen downe. This is the proude and carelesse cytie, that laid in her bert. * I am, and there is els none. O how is she made so waste, that the bestes lye therein: Whoso goeth by, mocketh her, and pynnteth at her wyl hys synger.

The.iii. Chapter,

Agaynst the gouerners of Jerusalem, of the callynge of all the Gentyls. A comferte to the resydue of Israel.

W to that abhomyable, fylthy, and cruell cytie: which wyl not heare, nor be reformed. Her truste is not in the Lorde, neyther wil she holde her to her God. Her rulers within her, are as roynng * lyons: her iudges are as & wolues in the euenynge whiche leaue nothynge behynde them tulle the morowe. Her prophetes are lyght persones and vnfaithfull men, her prestes vnhalowe the sanctuary, and do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lorde that doth no vneyght, was amonge them, euery moynynge he wynged them his lawe clearly, and ceased not. But the vngodly wyl not learne to be ashamed. Therefore wyl I roote oute this people, and destroye they? towres: yea, and make they? streates so voyde, that no man shal go therein. They? cytyes shalbe broken downe, so that no body shal be lefte, nor dwell there any more.

I layde vnto them: O feare me, and be contente to be reformed. That they? dwellynge shulde not be destroyed, and that there shoulde happen vnto them none of these thynnges, wher with I shal visite them. But neuertheles, they stande vpearly, to folowe the fylthines of there owne ymaginacions. Therefore, ye shal wayte vpon me (sayth the Lorde) vntyll the tyme that I stande vp: for I am determined, to gather the people, and to bynng the kyngdomes togyther, that I may powre oute myne anger, yea all my wraathful * displeasure vpon them. * For all the world shal be consumed wyl the fyre of my gelousye

¶ The moneth the people to returne to the Lorde, and eschewe yeare of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the Prophete, sayinge: The Lorde hath ben sore displeased at youre forefathers. And sape thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: * Turne ye vnto me (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnlyke youre forefathers, vnto whome the prophetes cryed afoze tyme sayinge. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: * Turne you from your euyl wayes, and from your wycked ymagynacions. * But they wolde not heare nor re-garde me sayeth the Lorde. What is now become of youre forefathers, and the prophetes? are they yet styll alpye? But dyd not my wor-des and statutes (whyche I comaunded by my seruauntes the prophetes) touche your forefathers? Upon this, they gaue answer and sayd: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deuyld to do vnto vs, accordynge to our owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he delt wyth vs.

¶ Upon the xxiii. day of the xi. moneth, which the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayinge, I sawe by nyght, and lo, ther sate one vpon * a redde horse, and stode styll amonge the myrre trees, that were benethe vpon the grounde, and behynde him were there redde speckeled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I, O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked wyth me, sayde vnto me. I wyll shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the myrre trees answered and sayde.

These are they whome the Lorde hath sente to go thozowe the worlde. And they answered the aungel of the Lorde, that stode amonge the myr-re trees, and sayde. We haue gone thozowe the worlde: and beholde, all the worlde dwelleth at ease, and are carelesse.

¶ Then the Lordes aungell gaue answer and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how longe wylt thou

¶ The ende of the prophete of Aggeus.

The Prophecie

Jech. viii. a. * I will turne me agayne in mercy towards Jerusalem, so that my house shall be builded in it, sayeth the Lord of hostes, yea, and the plummet shall be layde abroad in Jerusalem, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

D Crye also, and speake, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. My cities shall be in good prosperitie agayne, the Lord shall yet comforte Syon and chole Jerusalem: Then lyft I up myne eyes and sawe, and behold, foure hornes. And I said vnto the anngell that talked with me, what be these? he answered me. * These are the hornes whiche haue scattered Juda, Israel, and Jerusalem abroad. And the Lord shewed me four carpenters. Then sayde I: what will these do? he answered and said. These are the hornes whiche haue so strowed Juda abroad, that no man durst lyfte up his heade: But these are come to fraye them awaye: and to cast oute the hornes of the Gentyles: whiche lyfte up theyr horne ouer the lande of Juda, to scatter it abroad.

The. ii. Chapter.

The remynge of Jerusalem and Juda,

A Lyft up myne eyes agayne, and looked: and beholde, * a man with a measure lyne in his hande. Then sayde I: whyther goest thou? and he sayd vnto me: To measure Jerusalem, that I may se how longe and how brode it is. And beholde, the anngell that talked with me, wente bys waye forth. Then wente there out an other anngell to mete hym, and sayd vnto hym: Runne speake to this yonge man, and saye: Jerusalem shall be inhabited without any wal, for the very multitude of people & cattel that shalbe therein. * Yea, I my selfe (sayth the Lord) will be vnto her a wal of fyre rounde aboute, & will be honoured in her.

B O get you forth, & flye from the lande of the north, sayth the Lord, yea * whome I haue scattered in to the foure wyndes vnder heauen, sayth the Lord. Save thy selfe, O Syon: thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon, for thus sayth the Lord of hostes. After that glorious power hath he sent me oute to the hye then, whiche spoiled you * for who so toucheth you, shall touche the apple of my owne eye. Beholde, I will lyfte up my hande over them: & so that they shall be spoiled of thole: whiche afore ferried them, and ye shall knowe, that the Lord of hostes hath sente me.

C Be glad, and reioyce, O daughter of Syon for lo, * I am come to dwell in the myddeste of the, sayth the Lord: at the same tyme there shal many heathen cleue to the Lord, and shall be my people. Thus will I dwell in the myddeste of the, and thou shalt knowe that the Lord of hostes hath sente me vnto the. The Lord shall haue Juda in possession for his parte in the holy grounde and shall chole Jerusalem yet agayne. * Let all the people be still before the Lord, for he is rylen out of his holy place.

The. iii. Chapter.

Of the laste and hys estate of Chyr, vnder the figure of Ihesus the mess. A prophete of Chyr.

A And he shewed me Ihesus & he was standynge before the anngell of the Lord, * and Satan stood at his ryght hand to resyste hym. And the Lord sayd vnto Satan: the Lord reprove the (thou Satan) yea, the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem, reprove the. Is not this a bande taken oute of the fyre? Howe Ihesus was clothed in vncleane rayment, and stode before the anngell whych answered and sayde vnto those that stode before hym: Take awaye the fowle clothes from hym. And vnto hym he sayde: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the and will decke the with chaunge of rayment. He sayde moreouer, set a sayre myter vpon his heade. So they sette a sayre myter vpon his head, and put on clothes vpon him, and the angel of the Lord stode there. Then the angel of the Lord testified vnto Ihesus, and spake: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. If thou wilt walke in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou shalt rule my house, and kepe my courtes, and I will gyue the place amonge these & stand here. Heare (O Ihesus) thou hys priest, thou and thy frendes that dwell before the for they are wondrous people. Beholde, I will bypunge forth the brynche of my seruaunt: for lo, the stone that I haue layde before Ihesus: vpon one stone shalbe leuen eyes. Beholde I will hew hym out (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and take awaye the sinne of the land in one day. Then shal every man cal for his neighbour vnder the vine and vnder the figg tree, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The vlyon of the golden candelstyk and the exposition thereof.

A And the anngell that talked with me came agayn, and waked me up, as a man that is rayled out of hys slepe and sayd vnto me: what seest thou? And I sayd I haue looked, & beholde a candelstyk al of golde with a boult vpon it and his seuen lampes therein, & vpon euery lampe seuen stalkes. And * two olpue trees ther by, one vpon the ryghte syde of the boult, and the other vpon the lefte syde. So I answered, and spake to the anngell that talked with me: sayeng, O my Lord what are these? the anngell that talked with me answered and sayde vnto me: knowest thou not what these be? and I sayde: No my Lord he answered & sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lord vnto zorobabel, sayeng: * fleyther thowowe an hoste of me, nor thowowe strenght, but thowowe my spyrte, sayeth the Lord of hostes. What arte thou O great mountayn, before zorobabel: thou must be made euen. And he shall bypunge up the fyrst stone, so that men shal crye vnto hym good lucke good lucke. Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng. * The handes of zorobabel haue layde the foundation of this house: hys handes shall also finyshe it, * that ye may knowe both that the Lord of hostes hath sente me vnto you. For he that hath bene de spyled a lytell season, shal reioyce, when he seeth the synne wryge in zorobabels probabels hand. The seuen eyes are the lordes which go thorow the whole world. Then answered I, and sayde vnto hym: what are these two olpue trees vpon the ryght and left syde of the candlestycke? I spake mozeouer, and sayde vnto hym: what be these two olpue bzaunches, which thoro the two golden pypes emptye them selues into the gold? He answered me and sayde: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd: no, my Lorde. Then sayde he: * These are the two olpue bzaunches, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The .v. Chapter.

The vsurper of the spenge booke, spynnyng the rule of theues, and such as abuse the name of God by the vsurper of the measure is spynnyng the byrnyng of Iuda to Babylon.

I turned me, lyftynge vp myne eyes and looked, and beholde, a flynge booke. And he sayde vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flyng booke of twenty cubytes longe, and ten cubytes bryde. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all theues shall be iudged after this booke, and all wearers shall be iudged accordyng to the same, and I will bring it forth (sayth the Lord of hostes:) so that it shall come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of hym that falsely sweareth by my name: and shall remayne in his house, and consume it, with the tymbre and stones thereof. Then the Angell that talked with me went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyft vp thynne eyes, and se what is this that goeth forth? And I sayde: what is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out. He sayde mozeouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earth) to lye vpon: And beholde, there was lyft vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: this is vngodlynesse. So he cast her into the myddest of the measure, and threw the lompe of leade into y mouth of the measure.

Then lyft I vp myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, there came out two women, and y wynde was in theyr wynges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a stork) and they lyft vp the measure betwixte the earthe and the heauen. Then spake I to the aungel that talked with me: whither will these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: into the lande of * Synear to buylde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

By the foure charrettes he despybeth the prosperite of foure kynngdomes.

Mozeouer, I turned me, lyftynge vp myne eyes, and looked, and beholde, there came foure charrettes, oute, from betwixte two hylls, whiche hylls were of bzaile. In the fyrste charet were * redde hoxses, in the seconde charet were blacke hoxses, in the thyrde charette were whyte hoxses, in the fourth charet were hoxses of dyuers colours, and stronge.

Then spake I, and sayde vnto the Aungell that talked with me: O lorde, what are these? The Aungell answered, and sayde vnto me: * These are the iiii wyndes of y heaut, whiche be come for to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That with the black hoxse went into the lande of the north, and the white folowed them, and the speckled hoxses wente forth towards the south. These hoxses were verpe stronge, & went out, and sought to goo and take theyr ionnepe ouer the whole earth. And he sayd: get you hie, and go thorow the world. So they went thorowout the world. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: behold: these that go towards the north, shall still my wyath in y north countrey.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Take of thy pyssoners that are come from Babylon: namely, helдай, Tobiah, and Idaia: and come thou the same day, and go vnto the house of Josiah, the sone of Sophony. They take golde and siluer, and make crownes therof, and set vpon the heed of Iesua, the sonne of Iosedech the hie preeft, & speake vnto hym. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, the man whose name is * the bzaunche: and he that shall sprynge vp after hym, shall buylde vp the temple of the Lorde: pea, euen he shall buylde vp the temple of the Lorde. * He shall beare the prayse, he shall syt vpon the Lordes trone, and haue the dominion.

* A preeft shall he be also vpon his trone and a peaceable counsayl shall be betwixt them both. And the crownes shall be in y temple of the Lord for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaiah and Hen, the sone of Sophony, and such as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe, howe that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye will hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

The estimation of fastynge without mercy, the despylyng of charitie, and the obduracye of the people.

It happened also in the fourth yere of kynge Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto zacharye in the fourth daye of the nynt moneth, whiche is called Casien: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde, and that they shulde saye vnto the preeftes, whiche were in the house of the Lorde of hostes, and to the prophetes. Shoulde I wepe in the * fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres? Then came the worde of the Lorde of hostes vnto me, sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the land, & to the preeftes, and saye: wher ye fasted & mourned in the fyfth & vii. moneth (now this is x yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? when ye dyd eate also and drynke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for youre owne selues? Are not these the wordes, whiche the Lorde spake by his prophetes afore tyme when Ierusalem was yet enhabryed, and welthp, she and the cyties roide about her: whē there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in the playne countreys.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto zacharie, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Execute true iudgement: shewe mercy and longunge kyndnesse: every man to his brother.

Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the stranger and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyne euill agaynst his brother in his herte. * Neuerthelesse, they wolde not take hede, but touned their backs, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an adamant stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes: * whyche the Lorde of hostes sent in bysholpe spirite by the Prophetes afore tyme.

Wherefore the Lorde of hostes was verye wroth at the. And this is it come to passe * that lyke as he spake and they wolde not heare, euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayeth the Lorde of hostes: but scattered them amonge all Gentyles, whome they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauailed no man in it neyther to nor fro: for that pleasant lande was utterly layed waste.

The. viii. Chapter.

Of the returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, and of the mercy of God towards them: Of good wordes, the calling of the Gentyles.

So the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I was in greates gelousye ouer syon: yea, I haue bene verpe gelous ouer her in a greates displeasure, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I wyll tounne me agayne vnto syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Ierusalem: * so that Ierusalem shall be called a faythfull and true cytie, the hyll of the Lorde of hostes. Yea, an holpe hyll.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne, in the stretes of Ierusalem. Yea, and suche as go with traues in their handes for very age. The stretes of the cytie also shall be full of yonge boyes, and damselfs, playing vpon the stretes.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: yf the residue of this people thynke it to be vnpowable in these dayes: * shoulde it therfore be vnpowable in my syght, sayth the Lorde of hostes? Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll deliuer my people from the lande of the east and west, and wyll bypunge them agayne: that they maye dwell at Ierusalem. * They shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God, in truthe and ryghtousnesse.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: let your handes be stronge, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes whyche be in these dayes, that the foundation is layed vpon, the Lorde of hostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? * before these dayes, neyther men nor cattell coulde wyne anye thyng, neither myght any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let euery man go agaynst his neighbour.

Neuerthelesse, I wyll now intreate the residue of this people nomore as afore tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * but they shall be a seede of peace, the vyneparde shall geue her frute, the ground shall geue her encrease, and the heauens shall geue theyr dewe: and I shall cause the remnaunte of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the hepythen (O ye house of Iuda, and ye house of Israel) Euen so wyll I deliuer you, that ye shall be a blessing: feare not but let your handes be stronge.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: lyke as I deuylded to punysh you: what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayth the Lorde of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determined nowe in these dayes for to do well vnto the house of Iuda and Ierusalem, therfore feare ye not. Now the thynges that ye shall do are these: * Speake euery man the truthe vnto his neighbour, execute iudgement trulpe and peaceablenesse within your portes, none of you ymagyne euill in his herte agaynst his neighbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are the thynges that I hate, sayth the Lorde. And the word of the Lorde of hostes came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fyfth, the faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous byfeastes vnto the house of Iuda: only loue the truthe and peace.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet come people: and the enhabytours of many cyties, and they that dwell in one cytie, shall go to an other, saying: * Up, let vs go and praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hostes, I wyll go with you: yea, moche people and myghty hepythen shall come and seke the Lorde of hostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: In y tyme shall .x. men (out of all maner of language of the Gentyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garmente, & saye: we wyll go with you, for we haue herde, that God is among you.

The. ix. Chapter.

The churcyon of the Gentiles. The comynge of Chrysostome on an alle.

The worde of the Lorde shall be receyued at Adyache, and Damascus shall be his offryng: for the eyes of all men and of the trybes of Israel, shall loke vnto the Lorde. The borders of Hemah shall be harde therby: Cyrus also and Sidon, for they are very wyle: * Cyrus shall make her self stronge heape vpon splacer as the lande, and golde as the clape of the stretes. Behold, the Lord shall take her in, and haue her in possession: * he shall smite downe her power into the see, and she shall be consumed with fyre. This shall Ascalon se, and be afrayed. * Gaza shall be very sorow, so shall Accaron also, bycause her hope is come to confusyon. For the kynge of Gaza shall perishe: and at Ascalon shall no man dwell, Strangers shall dwell at Iddod, and as for the pride of the Philistines, I shall roote it out. * They bloode wyl I take awaye from theyr mouth, and theyr abominacions from amonge theyr teeth. Thus they shall be lefte for our God: yea they shall be as a prince in Iuda, & Ierusalem lyke as a Jebulste. And so wyl I compass my house rounde about with men of war, goinge to and fro: that no oppresour come vpon them any moze. For that haue I sene now wyl myne eyes.

* Reioyse thou great Ipe, O daughter Syon, be glad, O daughter Ierusalem. For lo, I kyng cometh vnto the, euen the ryghtous and sauour: lowlye and simple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vpon the foale of an asse. I wyl rote out the charctres from Ephraim, and the horse from Ierusalem, the battayle bowes shall be destroyed. He shall geue the doctrine of peace vnto the hepten, * and his dominion shall be from the one see to the other, and from the floudes to the ende of the worlde.

Thou also thou owe the bloude of thy coneuant, shalt let the prisoners out of the: pytte wherein is no water. Tourne you now to the stronge holde ye that be in prison, and longe soze to be deliuered. And this daye I wyl byng the worde, that I wyl rewarde the double agayne. For Iuda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, & Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes, O Syon, wyl I rayse vp agaynst the Grekes, and make the as a gyaunte swerde, the Lorde God shall be sene aboue them, and his dartes shall go forth as the lyghtnyng. The Lorde God shall blowe the trompette, and shall come forth as a storme out of the south.

The Lorde of hostes shall defende them, they shall consume and deuoure and subdue the with synge stones. They shall dynke and rage as it were thou owe wyne. They shall be fylled lyke balsens and the hornes of the altar. The Lorde theyr God shall deliuer them in the daye as the flocke of his people. For the precious stones of a diademe, they shall be set vp ouer hys lande. O how prosperous and goodly a thyng shall that be: The corne shall make the yong men chereful and the newe wyne the maydens.

The. x. Chapter.

The people is moued to requyre the doctrine of truthe of the Lorde. The Lorde promyseth to vpsyte and comforte the house of Israel.

Rape the Lorde then by tymes to geue the latter rayne, * so shall the Lorde make bynghte cloudes, and geue you rayne ynough for all the increase of the felde. For dayne is the answer of ydols. The soothsayers se lyes, and tell but dayne dreames, the comfort that they geue is nothyng worth. Therefore go they astraye lyke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, because they haue no shepherdes. My wrathful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyl vpsyte the gootes. For the Lorde of hostes wyl graciously vpsyte his flocke the house of Iuda, and holde them as a goodly fayre houle in the battayle. * Out of Iuda shall come the helmet: the nape, the battayle-bowe, and all the princes togyther. They shall be as the gyautes, whiche in the battayle treade downe the myze vpon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be wylth them, so that the horsemen shall be confounded.

I wyl comforte the house of Iuda, and preserve the house of Ioseph. I wyl turne them also, for I pytie them, and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lorde am theyr God, and wyl heare them. Ephraim shall be as a gasit, and theyr hert shall be cherefull as thou owe wyne: yea, theyr chyldren shall se it, and be glad: and theyr herte shall reioyse in the Lorde. I wyl blowe for them and gather them togyther: for I wyl redeme them. They shall encrease, as they increased afore. I wyl sowe them amonge the people, that they maye thynke vpon me in farre countreyes: they shall lyue with theyr chyldren, and turne agayne I wyl bynge them agayne also out of the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyl cary them into the lande of Gilead, and to Libanus, and they shall want nothyng. He shall go vpon the see of trouble, and smyte the see waues so that all the floudes shall be dyled vp. The proude bostyng of Assur shall be cast downe, and the sceptre of Egypte shall be taken awaye. I wyl comfort them in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name: sayth the Lorde.

The. xi. Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The care of the faythful is comytted to Christ by the father. A greuous bysion agaynst Ierusalem and Iuda.

When thy dozes, O Libanus, & the fyre I maye consume thy cedretrees. Houle ye fyretrees, for the cedre is fallen: yea all y proude are wasted awaye. Houle (O ye oketrees of Basan) for the mighty strong wood is cut downe. Men maye heare the shepherdes mourne, for theyr gloze is destroyed. Men may heare the lyons welpes roze, for the pride of Iordan is wasted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: fede the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shall be slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell them save: The Lorde be thanked, I am ryche: yea theyr owne shepherdes spare them not. Therefore wyl I nomoze spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lorde) but lo, I wyl deliuer the people, euerye man into hys neyghbours hande, and into the hande of his kyng: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of theyr handes I wyl not deliuer them.

I my selfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staves, the one is called loupng kyndnesse, the other is called destroyer, and so kepthe the shepe. The shepherdes I put out of offyce in one monethe, for I myght not a waye with them, neyther had they any delpte in me. Then sayd I: I wyl fede you nomoze * the thyng that dyeth, let it dye: and that that wyl perishe, let it perishe: and let the remnaunte eate, euerye one the fleshe of hys neyghbour. I toke also my loupnge meke staffe

E Then the poore symple shepe þ had a respecte of the Lord. And I sayd vnto them: yf ye thinke it good, bynge hyther my price: yf no, then leue.

So then they weped downe thyrte syluer pens, the value that I was prysed at. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly price for me to be valued at of them) and I toke þ xxx. syluer pens and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord. Tha brake I myne other staffe also, (namelye destroyer:) That I myght loose the brotherhood betwixt Iuda and Israel. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the also the staffe of a folys shepherde: for lo, I wyll rayse vp a shepherde in the lande, whyche shall not seke after the thynges that be losse, nor care for suche as go astray, he shall not heale the wou-ded, he shall not noryshe the thyng that is whole: but he shall eate the flesch of suche as be fat, and teare theyr clawes in peces.

earth: and giueth man the breath of lyfe. Beholde, I wyll make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfette, vnto al the people that are rounde about her. *Yea Iuda hym selfe also shall be in the siege agaynst Ierusalem. At the same tyme wil I make Ierusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that al suche as lyft vp, shall be tozned and rent and all the people of the earth shall be gathered to gyther agaynst it.

In that daye, sayeth the Lorde: I wyll make al horses abashed, and those that ryde vpo them to be oute of theyr wyttes. I wyll open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all the horses of the people with blyndenesse. And the princes of Iuda shall saye in theyr hertes: The inhabiters of Ierusalem shall gyue me consolaticonsume all the people rounde about them, both vpon the ryght hande and the lefte. Ierusalem also shall be inhabyted agayne: namelye, in the same place where Ierusalem standeth.

The Lorde shall preserue the tentes of Iu-da lyke as afore tyme, so that the gloze of the house of Dauid, and the gloze of the citizins of Ierusalem shall be but lytle regarded, in com-paryson of the gloze of Iuda. In that daye shall the Lorde defende the cytizens of Ierusalem, so that the weakest amonge them shall be as * Da-

At the same tyme wyll I go about to destroye

Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon

As for the false prophetes also, and the vn-so that yf anye of them prophete anye more, his owne father and mother that begat hym, shall saye vnto hym. Thou shalt dye, for thou sprakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, his owne father and mother that begat him shall wounde hym, when he prophete. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, euery one

The wastynge of the church under the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kynghome of the Lorde.

Behold, the daye of the Lorde cometh that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed, for I wyl gather together all the heathen to fyght agaynst Jerusalem, so þ the cytie shall be wone, the houses spoyled, & the women despyled. The halfe of the cytie shall go awaye into captiuitie, and the residue of the people shall not be caried out of the cytie. After that shall the Lorde go forth to fyght agaynst those heathen, as me vs to fight in the day of battel.
 Then shall hys sete stande vpon the mount Oli-uete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem And the mount Oliuete shall cleue in two, eastward and westward, so þ ther shall be a great haleye, and the halfe mount shall remoue toward the north, and the other toward the south. And ye shall flye vnto þ valey of my hylls, for þ valeye of the hylls shall reach vnto Mal. Pea, flye shall ye like as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Osiab kynge of Iuda. And the Lorde my God shall come, and all sayntes wth hym.
 In that day shall it not be lyght, eyther cleare or dymyne. * Thys shall be that special daye which is knowen vnto the Lorde, neither daye nor night but aboute the euynge tyme it shall be lyghte.
 * In that tyme shall there waters of lyfe runne out from Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them toward the east see, and the other halfe toward the uttermost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. * And the Lorde hym selfe shall be kynge ouer all the earth

At that tyme shall there be one Lorde onely, & hys name shall be but one. Men shall go aboute the whole earth, as vpon a felde from Gibeā to Rennō, and from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: fro Wē Jamins porte, vnto the place of the fyrst porte, and vnto the corner porte: and from the towre of Hananiel, vnto the kynges wyne presses.
 There shall men dwel, and there shall be nomore cursynge, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherewith þ Lorde wyl smyte al people, that haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, they shall consume awaye, though they stand vpon theyr sete, theyr eyes shall be corrupt in theyr holes, & theyr tong shall consume in theyr mouth.

In that daye shall the Lorde make a greate sedition among them, so that one mā shall take another by the hande, and lape hys handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. * Iuda shall fyght also agaynst Jerusalem, and þ goodes of all the heathen shall be gathered togyther rounde about: golde and syluer, and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall thys plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the bestes þ shall be in the hoost, lyke as ponder plage was. Eue-ry one þ remayneth then of al the people, whych came agaynst Jerusalem, shall go by earlye, to worshyp the kynge (euen the Lorde of hostes) * and kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacyn vpon the earth goeth not to Jerusalem for to worshyp the kynge (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. Vt the kynred of Egypt go not by, and come not, it shall not rayne vpon them neyther.

Thys shall be the plage wherewith þ Lorde wyl smyte all the heythen, that come not by to kepe þ feast of tabernacles: pea, thys shall be the synne plage of Egypte and the synne plage of al people that go not by to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shall the rydynge gere of þ hoses be holy vnto þ Lorde, & the kettles in þ Lo-des house shall be lyke the basens before the auter: pea, al the kettles in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holy vnto the Lorde of hostes and al they that slaye offsprynge, shall come and take of them: & dyghte them therein. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Cananites in þ house of the Lorde of hostes.

B I made a couenaunt of lye and peace wth hym, thys I gaue hym, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and hadde my name in reuerence. The law of truth was in his mouth, and there was no wyckednes founde in hym lyppes. He walked wth me in peace & equitie, and dyd turne many one awaye from theyr synnes. *For in the prestes lyppes shuld be sure knowlege, that men maye seke the lawe at hym mouth, for that messenger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleue out of the wape, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: *ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therefore wyl I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge al the people, because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene par cyall in the lawe.

*Haue we not all one father? Hath not one God made vs? *why doth every one of vs then despyle hym owne brother, and so breake the couenaunt of our fathers? Nowe hath Iuda offended: yea, the abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: for Iuda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, & hath kepte the doughter of a straunge God. But the Lord shall destroye the mā that doth thys: (yea, both the master and the scholer) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, wth hym that offereth vpon meat offeringe vnto the Lord of hostes. Nowe haue ye brought it to thys poynte agayne, that the aulter of the Lord is couered wth teares, weping and mournynge: so that I wyl nomore regard the meat offeringe, neyther wyl I receyue or accepte any thyng at your handes. And yet ye saye wherfore? Euen because that where as y Lord made a couenaunt betwxt the and thy wyfe of thy yowth, thou hast despyled. *Yet is the thyne owne companion and marped wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent spyrite. What dyd then the one? He soughe the seed promysed of God. Therefore loke well to your spyrite, and let no man despyle the wyfe of hym yowth. Yf thou hatest her, *put her away sayeth the Lord God of Israel, & gyue her clothyng for the scozne, sayth the Lord of hostes. Loke wel then to your spirite, & despyle her not. Ye greue the Lord wth your wordes, and yet ye saye: where wylthall haue we greued hym. In thys t hat ye saye. All that do euell are good in the syght of God, and such please hym. O els where is the God that punyssheth.

The. iii. Chapter.

Of the messenger of the Lord John Baptist of the dape of the Lord, and of Eliab.

E holde, *I wyl sende my messenger, whych shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord: whome ye wolde: shall come to hym teple, yea: euen the messenger of the couenaunt whome ye longe for.

Beholde, he cometh sayeth the Lord of hostes. But who maye abyde the dape of hym comynge? Who shal be able to endure, whē he appeareth? For he is lyke a goldsmithes fyre, and lyke washers sope. He shall set hym downe to trye & to clense the spluer, he shal purge the chyl- dzen of Leui, & purifye them lyke as golde & spluer, y they maye byrnyng meat offeringes vnto the Lord in rpyghteousnes. Then shall y offeringe of Iuda & Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord lyke as from the begynnynge & in the peeres afore tyme, I wyl come and punyssh the you, and I my selfe wyl be a stoppe wptnesse agaynst the wytyches: agaynst the aduoutters, agaynst falle swa-and ye, (O chyliden of Jacob) wyll not leaue of ken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde.

It is but lost labour, to serue God: * What profyte haue we for keepynge hys commaunde-mentes, and for walkynge humblye before the Lorde of hostes? * Therfore maye we say, that the proude are happye, & that they whych deale wyth vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: The Lorde consydereth and heareth it.
Yea, it is before hym a memoriall booke wyrt-ten for such as feare the Lorde, and remēbre hys name: And in the daye that I wyll make (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) they shal be myne owne possession: and I wyll fauoure them, lyke as a man faouret hys owne sonne, that doeth hym seruice. Turne you therfore, & consydre what dysference is betwixt the righteous and vngodly. betwixt hym that serueth God, and hym that serueth hym not.

The thyzde booke of Eldras.

The fyrste Chapter.

Josias holdeth Pascheouer. After hys death is Jechonias hys sonne made kynge in his steade: whos f. kynge of Egypte putted out, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed: and Sedechias is taken.

And Josias held f. feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde & slewe the Pascheouer the. xliii. daye of f. fyrste moneth. He set f. prestes also in order (accozdyng to theyr daylye curses) beyng arayed in longe garmetes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto the Leuytes the holpe mynysters of Israel, that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy Arke of the Lorde, in the house f. kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayd: Ye shal nomore beare the Arke vpon your shulders. Nowe serue your Lorde and take the charge of his people of Israel, after your vyllages and your trybes: accozdyng as kynge Dauid the kynge of Israel, hath ordeyned, and accozdyng as Salomon hys sonne hath honozable prepared: pee, loke that ye all do serupce in the temple accozdyng to theyr ordynge & dyscretyon of the pynypall mē whych are appoynted out of the tribes, to do serupce for the chyldzen of Israel. * Kyll the Pascheouer, and prepare offerynges for your brethren, and do accozdyng to the commaundement of the Lorde, whych was geuen vnto Moyses. And vnto the people f. was founde, Josias gaue. xxx. thousande of shepe lambs, kyddes, and goates, and thre thousand oxen. These the kynge (of hys kynglye lyberaltee) gaue vnto the people, accozdyng as he had promysed: and to the prestes for the Pascheouer, he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Mozeouer Jechonias, and Semelias, and Nathanaell, hys brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, & Josabab gaue them to the pascheouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thynges were broughte to passe, the prestes and the Leuytes stode goodly in theyr ordze, & had the vncleued bread thowre out the trybes. And after f. ordynge of f. pynypall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the syght of the people, accozdyng as it is wyrtten in the booke of Moyses, and so they roasted f. Easter lambe as accozdyng was. As for the thankeofferynges and the other, they dyght in the kettels & pottes, and set them before the people with good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues & the prestes. For the prestes offered the fat vntill the tyme was expyred, but f. Leuytes prepared for them selues & for theyr brethren the chyldzen of Aaron. The holpe syngers also, the chyldzen of Asaph stode in theyr order, accozdyng as Dauid deuysed. So dyd Asaph, zachary, & Jothum, which were appoynted by the kynge. Mozeouer the porters & doze keepers stode by the doozes and that dyligently, so that none went out of hys standynge and serupce: for theyr brethren (the Leuytes) prepared for them.

Thus were all thynges perfourmed, that belonged to the offerynge of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Pascheouer and offered thankeofferynges besyde the sacryfyce of the Lorde accozdyng to the commaundement of kynge Josias.

So the chyldzen of Israel whiche were then present helde an honourable Pascheouer, and the feast of swete breade seuen dayes longe. Pee, suche a Pascheouer was not kepte in Israel from the tyme of the prophete Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as this whych kynge Josias held, and the prestes the Leuytes, the Jewes, and all Israel, of al the that were at Jerusalem. And in the eyght tene yere of the raygne of Josias was this Pascheouer kepte. And wyth a perfecte herte dyd kynge Josias order all hys woorkes, before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wyrtten of hym in tymes paste, concernyng those that synned and were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before al people: & that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel. * After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao the kynge of Egypt went vp & came toward Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent f. kynge of Egypt to Josias, sayng: what haue I to do with the kynge of Juda? I am not sent of f. Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go f. thy way home agayne in al f. hast. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon his charet, but vnder-toke to fyghte agaynst hym, & harkened not vnto f. worde of the prophet, whych he told hym out of the mouth of God, but pytched battayle agaynst hym in the felde of Mageddo. And the pynces pleased to kynge Josias. Then sayde f. kynge vnto his seruautes. Carry me away out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediately his seruautes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. Then sat he vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed and was buryed in hys fathers sepulchre. And in all Jery they mourned for Josias, pee, f. rulers also w theyr wyues made lamentacion for hym vnto this day. And this was done euer styl in Israel.

These thynges are wyrtten in the booke of the stozes of the kynges of Juda, namely al the actes and woorkes of kynge Josias, hys kyngly power & maiesty, hys vnderstandynge in f. lawe of God, & what he dyd, pee, thynges whiche are not wyrtten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. * And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, & made hym kynge in steade of Josias his father, when he was. xxxiii. yere olde. And he raygned ouer Israel. iii. monethes. And f. kynge of Egypte put hym downe, f. he shulde not raygne in Jerusalem, and rayled vpon a tace of the people: namely, an hundred talentes of syluer and one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt also made Joachim hys brother kynge of Juda, and Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges counsell wythe the kynge hym selfe and zaraceles hys brother, he toke them and carped them awaye prisoners into Egypte.

Fyue and twenty yere olde was Joachim when he was made kynge in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem, and he dyd euell befoze the Lord. After this Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp, & bound hym with bandes of yron & carped hym vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonosor also toke al the vessels þ were halowed in the temple of the Lord, & all the Jewels, & carped them vnto Babilō, & brought them into his owne temple at Babilō. Of his vnclemnes & vngodlines it is wyrtten in the boke of the actes of the kyn- ges. And Joachim his sone raygned in his stead he was made kynge beyng. xviij. yere olde, and raygned but. iij. monethes and. x. dayes in Jerusalem, and dyd euell befoze the Lord. So after a yere Nabuchodonosor sente and caused him to be brought vnto Babylon wpth the holy vessels of the Lord & made Sedechias his brother kynge of Iuda and Ierusalē, when he was xxi. yere olde, and he raygned. xi. yere.

And he dyd euell also in the syght of the Lord and cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto hym by the prophete Jeremy, at þ mouth of the Lord. And where he had made an oth vn to king Nabuchodonosor, he forsooke him selfe and fell fro hym haupnge a styfnecke & a herte, & transgressed all the statutes & ordynances of þ Lord God of Israel. The rulers also & the hea- des of the people of the Lord dyd muche euell, & became vngodly, more then the heathē, beyng deyled in all maner of abhomyacions: Pea, & deyled the holy temple of the Lord at Ierusa- lem. And the God of theyr fathers sent his mes- saungers vnto thē, to turne them backe: and to cal them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wold spare haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had bys messaungers in derisyon: and loke what God spake vnto them by bys prophetes, they made but a sporte of it. Thys drewe on so lōge tyl the Lord was wroth with bys people for theyr vngodlynes, & tyl he caused the kynges of the Chaldees to come vp, which sette theyr pōge men with theyr swearde yee, euen in the compasse of theyr holy temple, & spared no body, nether pōg nor olde, nether may den nor pong mā, but they were al delpyered in- to the powre of the kynges of the Chaldees, & al the holy vessels of the Lord & the kynges trea- sures toke they and carped them vnto Babilō. * As for the house of the Lord, they went vp in to it, and bzente it, and bzake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyze vpon her towers, destroy- ed all her noble buyldynges & brought them to naught, and þ people that were slayne wpth the swearde, they carped vnto Babilon.

Thus became they prisoners and boundmen of the kynge of Babilō, tyl they were delpyered & raygned for themselves, * whē the wordes of þ Lord were fulfilled, whyche he promysed them by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, and tyl the lande had her rest: namely all the tyme þ it laye wall, had it rest and quyetnes. lxxvii. yeres.

The .ii. Chapter.

¶ Cyrus geteth licence to the Jewes to retorne to Ieru- salem, and restozeth the temple. After that are there letters sente to Artaxerxes: whiche accuse the Jewes for buyldyng of the temple: and so is the buyldyng dysposed of vntyll the seconde yere of Darius.

¶ Dwe * when kynge Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & whē the Lord wolde perfourme the worde that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy: þ Lord rayled vp the sprete of Cyrus, þ kynge of the Persians: so þ he caused his wyrtpyng to be proclaimed thozow out bys whole realme, saying: Thus sayeth the kynge of Persias: The Lord of Israel that bye Lord hath made me kynge of the lande, and com- manded me to buyld hym an house at Ierusa- lē in Jewry. If ther be any nowē of your people the Lord be wpth hym, & go vp with him to Je- rusalem. And all they that dwel rounde aboute that place shal helpe them, whether it be w gold wpth syluer, wpth gyftes, with horses and ne- cessary catel, & al other thinges þ are brought w a fre wyl to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem.

¶ Then the pryncypall men out of the trybes & byllages of Iuda, and Ben Jamin stode vp: so dyd the prestes also and the Leutes (whome þ Lord had moned) to go vp, & to buyld þ house of the Lord at Ierusalē. And they that were about them helped thē with all maner of gold, and syl- uer, and catel also, & with many lyberall gyftes, and this dyd many one, whose mynde was ste- red vþ therto. * Kynge Cyrus also brought forth the vessels, and ornementes, that were halowed vnto the Lord (which Nabuchodonosor þ kynge of Babylon had carped awaye from Jerusalem and consecrated them to bys Idol, and ymage) and delpyered them to Methridatus, bys trea- surer, and by hym they were delpyered to Sala- manasar the debyte in Jewry. And thys was þ nombze of them. ii. M. and. iiii. C. syluer boules xxx. syluer basens. xxx. basens of gold. ii. M. and. iiii. C. vessels of syluer, and a. M. besyde. Al the vessels of golde & syluer were. v. M. viii. C. and lx. These were nombzed vnto Salamanasar, & to them þ were come agayne wpth him to Ieru- salem out of þ captiuite of Babilō. * Nowe in þ tyme of kynge Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia, these mē: Balemus & Bithridatus, Sabellius Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius the scribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria & in other pla- ces vnder þ dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherin they cōplayned vn- to the kynge of them in Jewry & Ierusalē. The letter was made after thys maner. Syr, thy ser- uauntes Rathimus, the stozy wyrtter, Sabelli- us the scribe, & other iudges of the court in Ce- losiria, and Phenices. Be it knowen & manifest to our lord the kynge, þ the Jewes whyche are come vp from you vnto vs into the rebellious and wycked cytie begynne to buyld it agayne, & the walles about it, & to set vp the temple a newe. Nowe yf this cytie and the walles thereof be set vp agayne they shal not onely refuse to geue ty- butes and taxes, but also rebel vtterly agaynst the kynge. And for so muche as they take this in hande nowē aboute the temple, we thoughte it reason, to thyncke no scozne of it but to shewe it vnto our Lord the kynge, and to certifie hym therof: to the intente that yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it to be soughte in the bookes of olde that thou shalt fynde such warnynge wyth. I haile vnderstande þe thys crite hath alwaie bene rebellious and dyssobedient, that it hath suborned kynge & crite, & that þe Jewes whiche dwelt therein, haue bene a rebellious, obdurate disobedient, & fygthynge people, for the whiche cause thys crite is walled. Wherefore now we certeyn oure lord the kynge, that þe thys crite be buylded and occupied agayne, and the wallytherof let vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Celosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus, the stoy wyrtter, to Balthenius, to Sabellius, the scribe, & to the other officers & dwellers in Si-ria, and Phenices, after thys maner: I haue red the ppyll whiche thou sentest vnto me, & haue commaunded to make diligent searche, & haue found, þe cite hath euer refused kynge, & that the same people are dyssobedient, and haue caused muche warre, & that myghty kynge haue raygned in Jerusalem, whiche also haue capled vnto the of Siria, and Phenices. Wherefore I haue commaunded those people, þe they shal not buyld the crite, þe they make nomore in it, and that they proceed no farther with the buyldynge for so muche as it myghte be the cause of warre and dysspleasure vnto kynge.

Nowe when Rathimus & Sabellius the scribe & the rulers in the lande had red the wyrtynge of kynge Artaxerxes, they gat them together, and came in all the haste to Jerusalem with an host of horsemen, and with much people of foote, and forbad them to buyld. And so they left of from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

¶ Darius made a feast. The thre sentences of the thre kynge men, of the wyrtynge of the thre is declared.

Darius made a great feast vnto his seruantes, vnto all his court, & to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yee, to all the debtyes and rulers þe were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia an hundred and xxvii. countrees. So whē they had eaten & dronke, beyng satysfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius þe kynge went into his chaber, layde hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then þe thre yonge men, þe kepte the kynge's person, & watched his body, comoned amonge them selues, and spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thyng & loke whose sentēce is wyser & more excellent then the other, vnto hym shall kynge Darius geue great gyftes, & cloth hym w purple, he shal geue hi vessels of golde, to dynt in, clothes of golde & couerynges: he shall make him a costly charet & bryble of gold, he shall geue him a bonet of whylespake, & a chayne of gold a bout his necke: yee, he shal be þe seconde & pryncy-pal next vnto kynge Darius, & that because of his wisdom, & that he called the kinges kynsmā.

So euery one wrote his meanynge, sealed it and layde it vnder the kynge's pelowe, & sayde: when the kynge aryseth, we wyll geue hym our wyrtynge, and loke whose worde the kynge & þe lordes indge to be the mooste wyselpe spoken, the same shall haue the vyctorye. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thyng. The seconde wrote: The kynge is stronger. The third wrote Women haue yet more strengthe, but about all thynges the trouth beareth away the vyctorye.

Nowe when the kynge was rylen vp, they toke the wyrtynge & deliuered the vnto hym, & so he red the. Then sent he forth to call all þe schefe lordes, & all the debtyes & rulers of þe countrees of Media & Persia. And whē they were set downe in the countre, the wyrtynge were red before them. And he commaunded to call for the yonge men þe they myght declare the meanynge the selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto them: Geue vs, & make vs vnderstande what the thynges are þe ye haue wyrtten. Then began the fyrst (whiche had spoken of the strengthe of wyne) & sayde: O ye men: wyne is meruelous stronge, & ouercommeth them þe dynt it: it decaueth the mynde & byngeth bothe the prynces & the kynge to dotage & vanite. Thus doeth it also to the bond-man & wyth the fre, wyth the pope & cyche: it taketh a way the vnderstandynge, & maketh them carelesse and care, so that none of them remembereth any þepryete, or det, or dutye. It caueth a mā to thynke also þe thyng that he doeth is honest & good: and remembereth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in anarchye, and that he ought not to do suche thynges. Moreouer when men are dynt wyne, they forget all frendshipp all brotherly saythfulness & loue, but as soon as they are dronken, they drawe out þe sword & wil fyghte: and whē they are layde downe from the wyne, & so rylen vp agayne, they can not tel what they dynt: indge ye nowe is not wyne þe strongest.
For who wolde els take in hand to do such thyngges? And whē he had spoke this he held his tōg.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

¶ The declaration of the thre laste sentences of the yonge men: propounded in the chapter before: of whiche the laste is, that wyne beareth þe vyctorye in all thynges & is mooste commended and almyghty: Darius wyrtten referreth to all the rulers vnder hym, that they shoulde abyde for Sabellius, to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

Then the seconde (whiche had sayde: þe kynge was stronger) began to spake, sayenge: O ye men, are not they the strongest & mooste excellent, þe conquere the land and the see, and al that is in the see & in the earth? Nowe is the king loide of all these thynges, and hath domynyon of them all, and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he send his mā forth a warfare, they go and bryake downe pylles, walles, and towers.
They are slayne, and (slaye other men) them sel-ues, and ouerpass not þe kynge's worde. If they get þe vyctorye, they byng the kynge al þe ppyll.
Likewise the other þe medle not wyth warres & fyghtynge, but cpyll the grounde: whē they reape they byng trybute vnto þe kynge. And if þe kynge alone do but commaund to kyl, they kyl: If he co-maunde to forgeue, they forgeue: If he commaunde to smyte, they smyte: If he byd byue awaye, they byue awaye: If he commaunde to buyld, they buyld: If he commaunde to bryake downe, they bryake downe: If he commaunde to plant, they plant.

The thynde booke

25 The comen people and the rulers are obedyent vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane season sytteth hym downe, eateth and dryncketh and taketh his rest: then kepe they watch round about the kynge, and not one of them dare get hym oute of the waye, to doo hym anye busynes: but must be obedyent vnto the kynge at a word. Judge ye now. O ye men howe shuld not be gotten aboute, vnto whom are they obedyent? And when he had spake thus, he held his tounge. The thynde, whose name is zoobabell, whiche had spoken of women, and of truth beganne to saye after this maner: O ye me it is not a great kynge, it is not the multitude of men, neyther is it wyse that excelleth: who is it then that hath the lordshipp ouer them? haue not women borne the kynge, and all the people that rule those thinges? haue not women borne them and brought them vp, that plante the wyne, wheroute the wyne cometh? they make garments for all men, they geue honoure vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde and syluer and all precious thynges, & se a well fauored womā, they leaue altogether and turne they: eyes onely vnto the womā, and gaze vpon her, and haue more desyre vnto her, then vnto a syluer & golde, or any maner of precious thyng. A man leaueth his father that brought hym vp, leaueth his owne natural countrey, and cleaueth vnto the womā, yee, he leopardeyth his lyfe wth the womā, and remembreth neyther father, nor mother, nor countrey. Wth this then ye must nedes knowe that women haue domynyon ouer you.

Gene. 11. b.
Mat. 23. a.
1. Cor. 11. b.
Eph. 5. g.

Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his swerde, and goeth his waye to steale, to kyl, to murther, to sayle vpon the see, & seyth a Lye and goeth in the darcknes: and when he hath stolen, dysscaued & robbed, he byngeth it vnto his loue Agayne, a mā loyeth his wyfe better the father or mother: yee, many one ther be, that run out of they: wyttes, & become bondmen for they: wyues sake, many one also hath perished haue ben slayne, and haue synned because of women.

D And nowe beleue me I knowe a kynge, whiche is great in his power, & all landes stande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hande vpon hym: yett dyd I se, that Apame, (the daughter of the great kynge Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat helpe the kynge vpon the ryghe hand, & toke of his crowne from his head, and set it vpon hy: owne head & smote a kynge wth her left hand. Moreouer the kynge looked vpon her with open mouth yf she laughed vpon hym, he laughed also, but yf she toke any displeasure w him: the kynge was fayne to flatter her, and geue her good wordes, till he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

O ye me, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, & grete is the heauen. Who doth these thinges? Then the kynge & the princes looked one vpon another. So he beganne to speake of the truth: O ye men: are not women stronger? Great is the earth, grete is the heauen, wyft is a course of the lunne, * he compasseth the heauen rounde aboute, & fetcheth his course agayne to his owne place in one day. Is he not excellent & doth this? Yee, great is the earth, & stronger then all thynges. All the earth called vpon the truth, the heauen prayeth it, all wykes shake and tremble at it, and wth it is no vnyghteous thyng. Wth it is vnyghteous: the kynge is vnyghteous: women are vnyghteous: all the chyldren of men are vnyghteous: yee, all they: wykes are vnyghteous, & there is no truth in the: in they: vnyghteousnes also shal they be destroyed and perishe. As for the truth: it endureth, and is alwaye strong: it lyeth and conquereth for euer more: wth it wthout ende.

The truth accepteth no persons: it putteth no difference betwixte ryche or poore, betwixte the myghtie or symple, but doth ryght vnto euery mā, whether they be euil or good, & al me are loyngly dealt wthall in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it, there is no vnyghteous thyng, but strength kyngdome & power & maiestie for euer more. Blessed be a God of truth. And wth a he helde his tounge, & al the people cryed & sayd: Great is the truth, & aboue al. The sayd a kynge vnto hym: Aske what a Doyle, more then is appointed in the wyrtynge, and I shal geue it the: for thou art founde wyser then thy companyons: thou shalt syt next me, and be my kynsman. The sayde he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promysse and vowe, whiche thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou cammest to thy kyngdome) to buylde vp Ierusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels, and Jewels that were taken awaye out of Ierusalem: whiche Cyrus separated, when he offered in Babilon, and wolde sende the agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple, which the Edomites bzent, when Ierusalem was destroyed by a Chaldees. This onely (O kynge) is a thyng that I requyre: this is thy maiestie, which I desyre and aske of the: thou performe the vowe, which thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto a kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp, and kysed hym, & wrote a letter vnto all the chieues and shreues, to al the lordes and nobles, that they shulde conuey hym for the, and all them that wolde go vp wth hym. He wrote a letter also vnto al the shreues that were in Celosyria, and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, that they shulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Ierusalem, to buylde the cytye wthall. Moreouer, he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome, yno officer nor ruler, nor shreue, shuld come to they: dores, and that all they: lande whiche they had conquered, shulde be fre & not trybutarye: And that the Edomites shulde geue ouer the cytyes & villages of the Jewes, whiche they had taken in yee, and that they shulde yearly geue twentye talltes to the buyldyng of a temple, vntill the tyme that it were synished, & to the dayly halowynge of the bzent offerynges (as it is commanded) ten talentes yearly also: And that all they: which come fro Babilon to buylde a cite, shuld haue fre lybertye: they: & they: chyldren, and all the prestes. He wrote the greatnes also and commaundment that þe holpe garment shulde be geuen them when they mynyfired: and wrote that comaū-dementes shulde be geuen to the Leuites, vntyl the daye, that the house were synysed, and Jerusalem buylded vp, & commaūded þe all they that watched the cytie shulde haue theyr porcyons & hayes. He gaue ouer all the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylō: and all that Cyrus had geuen in commaūdemēt, the same charged he also: that it shulde be done, and sent vnto Jerusalem. Nowe when thys poynt mā was gone forthe, he turned his face toward Jerusalemye, & prayed the kyng of heauen, and sayd: * Of the commeth the vyctory, of the commeth wysdom and clearenes, & I am thy seruauant. Blessed art thou whiche hast geuen wysdome: the wyll I praye O Lorde, thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, & wente vnto Ba-bylō. And when he cam there, he tolde this vnto all his byethē that were at Babylō, and they prayed the God of theyr fathers, that he had geuen them refrethynge & lybertie to go vp and to buyld Jerusale & the temple (wherein the name of the Lorde is called vpon) and they reioysed w instrumentes and gladnes seven dayes longe.

Sanctuarie. xii. M. poundes of golde, fyue thou-in the countrey there aboute, the syngers also & þe porters, euery one of Israel in hys owne lāde.

* So when the seuenthe moneth came: and when the chyldren of Israel were euery man at hys busynesse, they came all wyth one assente in to the court whiche was before the Eastdore.
And there stode Iesua þe sonne of Iosedec, & hys brethren the preastes, and zojobabell, the sonne of Salathiel, and hys brethren, settynge vp an auter, to offre burntelacrifyces vpon it, as it is wypten in the lawe of Moyses.

There came people also of other coutries & the heathen out of all landes, to set vp the alter in his place, and offred sacrifyces and burntelacrifyces vnto the Lorde in the moynynge. And to theyr helde the feast of tabernacles, * as it is commanded in the law. And dayly offred they as accorpyng was, and made the sacrifyces ap-poynted, the offerpynges also of the Sabotbes, and of the newe Moones, and all holpe feastes.

1. Esd. iii. b

* And all they that bowed offerpynges vnto the Lorde, begane at the newe Moone of the seuthe moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the masons & carpeters, monye, meate, & drynke wyth chearfulnesse, vnto them of Sydon, also & Tyre, they gaue carres, & they shuld cary Cedre trees, from Lybanus to be lopstes, and beames and that they shulde make hyppes in the haueof Joppe, accorpyng as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Tyrsus kynge of the Persians.

And in the secōde yere, they came into the temple of God, at Jerusalem. * In the secōde moneth began zojobabell the sonne of Salathiel, & Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, & their brethren the preastes and Leuytes: and al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of þe captinite of Babylon, & layed the foundacio of the temple, in the newe Moone of the secōde moneth in the secōde yere, & they were come into Jewry & Jerusalem.
And they apoynted þe Leuytes (that were aboute xx. yere old) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde, so Jesua and hys sonnes, and hys brethren, al the Leuytes stode together, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynance in the house of the Lorde.

And the preastes stode, and had theyr garmentes & trompettes, and the Leuytes, the son-nes of Asaph, had cymbales, geuyng thanks and prayes vnto the Lorde, accorpyng * as Da-uid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned.

And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. * O synge vnto þe Lorde, for he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpon Israel endureth for euer. And al þe people blewe out wyth trompettes, & sāge wyth loude voyce pray synge the Lorde together, in the rearyng vp of the house of þe Lorde. * There came also amonge the preastes & Leuytes the rulers and elders accorpyng to the trybes & kynredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to the buyldynge of this temple wyth great crye, & great moynynge many also wyth trompettes & great ioye: In so muche, that the trompettes myghte not well be herdefor the wepyng & moynynge. For the commune people blewe goodly vpon þe trompettes.

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamin, to knowe what that tro-pettynge & noyce of shawmes myght be. And they perceyved þe it was theyr which were come agayne out of captinite, & wolde buyld the temple vp a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to zojobabell, and Iesua, and the rulers of the vyllages, & sayde vnto the. Shal we buyld wyth you also? For we likewise haue heard your Lorde, & we walke after the same maner from the dayes of Asbasereth the kynge of Assyria, which brought vs hyther. Then zojobabell and Iesua, & the rulers of þe vyllages of Israel, sayd vnto them: It is not mete, þe shulde buyld the temple of our God wyth vs, we our selues alone wyl buyld vnto the Lorde, lyke * as Tyrsus the kynge of the Persians hath commanded vs.

But the heathen in the land layde them sel-ues agaynst those that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldynge from them, layed mayntayn the preuylpe, stoppede suche as broughte any thinge to them, forbad them to buyld, & bynded those that that made them passage, that the buyldynge shulde not be synnyshed: and thys continued so longe as kynge Cyrus purd: and so they put of the buyldynge, for the space of two peares, vntyll the raygne of kynge Darius.

The vi. Chapter.

Aggeus and zacharye prophete. They buyld the temple wth out let or hinderance: by the commaundement of Darius.

Notwithstanding: in the second peare of the raygne of Darius. * Aggeus, and zacharye the sonne of Addo, propheted vpon them in Jewry, and Jerusalem, in the name of God of Israel: * Then zoroabel, the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua, the sonne of Josedei stode vp & beganne to build the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, when the prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At the same time came Silennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, wth the lanlozdes and hys companions, and sayde vnto them, Who hath hidde & commaunded you to buylde the house to make the rooffe and al other thinges agayne? And who are the woꝝke men: that buyld them? Neuertheles, the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the Lorde, that they wolde not be lette (though they were prouoked thereto) but buylded on styll: vntill the tyme that kynge Darius were certified thereof, and an answer receaued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius was after thys maner Silennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, and the lanlozdes wth theyꝝ companyons, whych are hed rulers in Siria, and Phenices, send theyꝝ salutacion vnto Darius þe kyng. We certyfy the Lorde the kyng, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem where we found them buylding the great house of God, and the temple, wth greate costly free ston, and wth goodly tymber for the walles yee, they make greate haste wth the woꝝke, and helpe one another, & it goeth forth the prosperously in theyꝝ handes, and with great diligence & woꝝhip it is made. Then asked we the elders who had commaunded the, to make vp þe house and the buyldynge: and thys we dyd, to the entente that we myghte certify the perfectly, and wyte vnto the, the names of those that were þe rulers of the woꝝke. So they gaue vs thys answer: we are the seruautes of the Lord, whych made heauen and earth, and as for thys house, * it hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by þe great and myghtie kyng of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto woꝝch, & sined agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon the kyng of the Chaldees whych brake downe the house and bent it, and carped awaye the people þe prisoners vnto Babilon. * Neuertheles, in the fyrst peare that kynge Cyrus reigned at Babilon, Cyrus the kyng wrote & commaunded, to buyld vp the house agayne, and al the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped away from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appoynted vnto hys owne temple, these broughte Cyꝝ forth agayne, and deliuered them to zoroabel and to Salmanasar, the vnderthene: commaundynge them, that they shulde byng those same ornaments agayne to Jerusalem, into þe temple & begynnynge from þe tyme forth, to buyld þe temple agayne, in hys owne place. Then Salmanasar layde the foundacyon of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, & ever sence they haue buylded, and yet is not ended. And therefore, O kyng þe thou thynkest it good, let it be sought in the lybraries and rolles of kynge Cyꝝ. If it be founde then, that it is done wth the counsell and consente of kynge Cyꝝ, and þe our lord the king be so minded, let him writ vnto vs therof.

Then commaunded kynge Darius to seke in the lybraries: and so at Egbatanis in a little cyt of Medea there was founde suche a wytyng. In the fyrst year of the raygne of Cyꝝ the same kyng Cyꝝ commaunded þe house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne, and odours there to be made contynually vnto the Lorde, whose hyght shalbe .x. cubytes and the bredthe .ix. cubites, and .iiii. square wth thre hewen stones, wth a losse of timber of the same countrey: yee, with a newe loft, and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of þe kyng Cyrus, and the ornaments of golde & siluer that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Silennes also the vnderthene in Siria, & Phenices, the prynces, and theyꝝ companions: & the other þe head rulers in Siria & Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thing to do wth þe place.

Cyrus haue commaunded also, that they shal buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp: and haue ordayned them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuyte: tyll the house of the Lorde be synnyshed: and out of the trybute and taryng that is yearly rayled vp in Siria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe of the offering of the Lorde: and the same to be deliuered vnto zoroabel the offycer, that he ther wthall may ordayne oren, rammes, lambes, and corne, salt wyne, and oyle, and that contynually euer ye after the expences: whych the prestes þe be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made daylie, thys shalbe geuen vnto them without delaye, & they may offer sacryfices dayly to the best God, for the kyng and for hys seruautes and to praye for theyꝝ lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery syde, & whosoener breaketh or despyseth this commaundement of the kyng, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of hys owne good) and al his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto þe king. The Lorde therfore whose name is there called vpon roote out, and destroy al the kynges, and people that undertake by violence to hinder þe same, or to deale vncurtously wth the house of þe Lord at Jerusalem. Darius the kyng haue ordayned þe these thinges shalbe done wth all diligence.

The vii. Chapter.

The temple is synnyshed and despoiled, and the feast of the vnleuened breade is holden. Then Silennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, & the other landlozdes wyth theyr companions, obeyed the thynges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were diligent in the holy woorkes, and were felowhelpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so þe woork of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus, and zachary prophesied. And they performed all thynges thowowe the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia.

B And thus was our house synysed vnto the xliii. daye of the moneth Adder in the. vi. yere of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, the prestes and Leuites, and þ other that were come out of captiuitie: and such as were iopned vnto them, did accordyng as it is wrytten in the booke of Moses. And in þ dedycacyon of the temple, they offered an. C. Oxen, two hundred rammes. iiii. Thys Esdras wente by from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandyng in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taught and done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him, and byd hym great woorth and honoure, after all his despyres. There wente by wyth hym also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the prestes, of þ Leuites, of the syngers, porters, & mynysters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yere of the raygne of kynge

Artaxerxes, in the. v. moneth, that is in þ. vii. yere of the raygne, they wente frome Babylon in the new moneth of the. v. moneth and came the hye waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as the Lorde hath prospered theyr journey. For in these Esdras gat greete instructyon, that he shuld leane none of the thynges he bynde, whych are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught hole Israel all ryghteousnes and iudgementes.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, & deliuered the wyrtynge (that were come from Artaxerxes the kyng) to Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. And thys is the coppe of the letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth his gretynge vnto Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Offrende thypp and good wyll, I haue ordeyned and charged yf there be any of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, whych despayth and is content to go wyth the vnto Jerusalem, that he maye do it. Therefore, yf any be mynded to be are the company, let the come together, and go wyth the lyke as I am contente & my seuen frendes, my councelers to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewrye, and kepe the thynges accordyng as thou hast, in the lawe of the Lorde, and to hyng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and al the syluer & golde that is in the country of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem wyth the thing that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Pee, that þ same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, Rammes, shepe, and goates, and othe that belonge to these thynges: and that they may offer sacryfices vnto the Lorde, vpon the altar of theyr Lorde whych is at Jerusalem.

And what soeuer thou and thy brethren wyll do wyth the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordyng to the commaundement of the Lorde thy God, & lyke wyll wyth the holye vessels that are geuen the, for the seruyce of the house of þ Lord thy God & other thynges what soeuer is necessary for the woork of the temple that shalbe geuen of the kynges treasure, shoke what thou wyth thy brethren wyll do with the golde & syluer, that do after the wyl of the Lorde. And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenicie that whatsoeuer Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wyte, it shalbe geuen him, tyll an. C. talentes of siluer, and of gold in lyke maner. Of coyne also an. C. measures & tyll an. C. vessels of wyne, and othe plenteous thynges without number. Let al thynges be done after the lawe of the prest God, that the wrath of God arysse not in the realme of the kyng & of his sonnes. I commaund you also that ye require no tax nor tribute of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, & mynistres of the temple, nor of the wyrters, & that noman haue auctorite to medle any thing against the. And for þ Esdras let thou iudge & arbiterers in the hole lande of Syria & Phenicie, after the wyl of God, & leane as such as are ignorant in the lawe of God the Lord, and let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punished: whether it be with death, or payne, to be cōdemned in mony, or to be banished.

Then sayde Eldas the wyrtier: * Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geue so good counsaile and wyll into the herte of the kynge to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was set fast in my mynde, accor-dyng as the Lord my God helped me: & chose me out of Israel to go with me. * And these are the names of the chylde: the kynges and houses of the fathers: that went wyth me to Babilon one of the kynges of the house of Artaxerxes. Of the sonnes of Phares: Gersonus. Of the sonnes of Simeon: Amelus. Of the sonnes of Da-uid: Arus; the sonne of Cecilia: Of the sonnes of Phares: zachary, and with him there turned agayne an. C. and. l. men. Of rie, zebel, and wyth him two hundred and. viii cham, and wyth hym an hundred and tennemen.

Of the sonnes of Adoniam, those that were left, and these are they: names. Eliphalam: the son of Gebel, and Semelas, and wyth him. lxx men. All these called I together by the water of Chia where we pitched our tente thre dayes: & there I mustred them.

* As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuy-tes, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Eccelom, and Mahiam, & Malobam and Canaathan, and Samea, & Josibimathā, Gumagā, zachary, Mosolamun (these were the elders and men of experyence) and I sent them to sayde: they shulde come vnto Loddis, which was by the place of the tresury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddis and to his brethren, & to those that were in the tresury, to sende vs such men: as myght execute the prestes offyce in the house of the Lord our God; and wyth the myghtye hande of oure Lord God, they brought vnto vs men of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Moosy us, the sonne of Levi, the sonne of Israel, Sebeiam, and the sonnes and his brethren: Albin, & Anin, of whom there were. xliii. From among the chylde of the sonnes of Cananeus, & their sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom David had ordeyned, and the pryncypall men & mynysters for the worke vnto the Leuytes in the temple two. C. xx. men.
* Then commaunded I a fastpage vnto the ponge men before the Lord, that I myght be-lyue of hym a prosperous iourney, & a good way for vs: pee, for vs for our chylde and for the Castell, because of the laynges of the temple, and I durst not requyre of the kynge men of house and of foote: to comye vs safely agayne to our cōtryes, for we had sayde vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lord our God shulde be wyth them that seke hym wyth they: hōly herte. And these four, we soughte God oure Lord earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer: And I seperated from among the rulers of the people, and from the prestes of the temple. xii. men and Seberia, and Asania, and x. men of they: brethren wyth them. And weyed them the golde and the syluer and all the prestly ornaments of the house of our God, whiche the kynge and his counsaile and his prynces and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an. C. l. talentes in syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden vessel, seven tymes twentye and vessels of other metall (pee, of good metall) xii. glysterynge as the golde, and sayd vnto the pe are hōly vnto the Lord, and the vesselles are hōly, and the golde, and the syluer is promysed vnto the Lord God of oure fathers.

We dyligente nowe, and kepe it, vntill the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prestes, to the Leuites, and to all oppall men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chamber of the house of our God.

* So the prestes and Leuites whych recei-ued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessel, broughte it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lord. And from the cytyer of Chia, we byke vp the twelue daye of the fyrst moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde daye was past, they weyed golde and syluer was de-liuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Jos: the prest, and wyth hym was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and wyth them were Josabbus the sonnes of Zafnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, & cer-tayne of the Leuytes to the number and to the weyght, and the weyght of them was wyrtten by the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuite, they offered sacrifice vnto the Lord the God of Israel: euen twelue oxen for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne, twelue kyne for a thankoffering all to the sacrifice of the Lord. And the kinges commission deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kynge, and to the vndershereues in Celocrya, and Phenyses.

* Nowe when those thynges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacyon of Israel, the prynces, the prestes and Leui-tes, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande haue not put a waye they: vncleynesse, from the Cananites, Hethites, Phereites, from the Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites. For both they and they: sonnes haue mingled themselues with the daughters of them, and the hōly seed is myxt with the outlandye heathen

The thyzde booke

¶ Since the beginning of the raigne haue & cullers & heades bene partakers of their wickednes ¶ As some as I haue herde these thynges, in-
 1. ed. 1. a. medially I rent my holpe garments: & pulled out the beere of my heade and my bearde & late me downe sorrowfull and heuy. So al they that were moued cho:ome the woide of & God of Israel, came vnto me, and sat by: full of heuyne vntill the euynge laccypte. Then stode I vp from laccyng, hauing rent clothes and the holy garmente, knelt downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the Lord, & sayde: O Lord I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for oure synnes are become many vpon our hea-des: and our wyckedneses are exalted vnto the heauen, for spence the tyme of oure fathers, we are in greete synne vnto thys daye. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we wyth our brethren and wyth our preastes haue bene deliue-red vnto the kynges of the earth: into the sword and into captiuite, and became a spoyle wyth confusion and shame vnto this day. And nowe O Lord God, howe greete is thy merce that we haue gotten of the: in that thou hast lefte vs a name and a root in the place of thy Sanctuary: to discouer oure lpgote in the house of the Lord oure God, and haste geuen vs meate at all tymes of oure mynystracion. And when we were in captiuite we were not forsaken of the Lord oure God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious, & fauorable vnto vs: so that they gaue vs bytapes, and meate, pee, and leane to buyde vp the temple of our Lord God agayne to repaire the wasted places of Sion: & to dwel in Jewye and Jerusalem. And nowe O Lord what shal we saye: haupnge all these thynges in possession: For we haue broken thy comma-ndementes: which thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruantes the prophetes saying The land that ye go vnto and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vncleennesse and fylthynesse of the heathen and with their abhominacions haue they po-luted it altogether. Therefore, shal ye not ioyne poure daughters vnto theyr sonnes, nor marie poure sonnes vnto theyr daughters. No: euer ye shal not seke to make peace wyth them, that ye maye encrease and eat the best, in the land, and that ye maye deuise the enheritaunce of the lād vnto poure chyldren for euer moore. As for the thing that nowe happened vnto vs, it cometh all for our wycked wo:ches and greete synnes yett hast thou geuen vs such a roote that we are come agayne into oure lande, and we are so wy-ked that we haue broken thy statutes & comma-ndementes agayne: and myngled oure selues with the vncleennes of the outlandish heathen.
 O Lord art thou angry wyth vs? Wylte thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote & name remay-ne no moze? O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yett vnto this present day And behold, nowe are we before the in our syn-nes, nowe can we not stande before the in them.
 ¶ And when Eliazas wyth hys praper hadde knowledged the synne, weppinge and lping flat upon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto hym frome Jerusalem a greete mul-tude of men and women, of yong men, and may-dens, for there was a very great weppinge, and mourninge in the congregacion. So when Je-chonias the sonne of Iehelp one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Eliazas: we haue synned agaynst the Lord, because we haue maried outlandish women of the heathen, flow-art thou ouer al Israel. We wyll sweare an oth therefore vnto the Lord: that we shal put away all our wyues which we haue taken of the heathen, wyth theyr chyldren, lyke as it is appoynted the by our fore elders. Stand vp then, open thou it & declare it plainly vnto vs, accordyng to the lawe of the Lord, for & matter belongeth vnto the and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Eliazas arose, and toke an oth of the rulers, of the preastes, and of the Leuites and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they swore

The ix. Chapter.

¶ After Eliazas had red the lawe, the people put away theyr weeping wyues: and then returned euer man into his owne dwellinge.

¶ Then Eliazas stode vp from the court of the temple, wythout, and went into the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Nabasus, and remayned there & dydeat no meate, nor dornk dryncke: for the multyde of the wyckednes of & people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewye and at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem oute of captiuite that whosoever came not to Jerusalem wythin two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgemente of the old Lordes of the counceyl) his goodes shuld be taken from him, and be excluded from the cogregacion of the captiuite. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the thwe-tie daye of the. ix. moneth, And the whole mul-tytude sat trymblyng in the court of the temple for it was wynter. So Eliazas rose vp, and sayde vnto them, ye haue done vncyphredouslye in & ye haue taken outlandish wyues, to mar-age, & so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And no we knowlege the same, & gene prayse vnto the Lord God of our fathers, & personne hys wil depart ynge from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cryed & hole multytud wyth a loud voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but forsomuche as the people are manye, and the wynter heare, we maye not stande without the house. Agayne thys wo:che is not a thyng that can be finisshed in a day or two. For we be many, that haue sinned in these thynges. O:deyne therefore that the rulers of the multytude, & they that dwel wyth vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues & the preastes also and iudges of euery place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wo:ath of the Lord in thys busines.

¶ Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezeiel, and O-zias & Thecam receaued the charge of this matter, and Bozozanus, and Leius, & Sabathus helped them thereto. After thys, all they stode up

up that were come oute of captiuyte. And Eldras the preast chose vnto hym the pryney pall men from among þ fathers accordyng to they names, & in the newe moneth of þ. x. moneth they sat together, to examine this matter And so the matter was a determynyng (concernyng the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntill the newe moneth of the first moneth. And of the prestes that had myrte them selues wyth outlandyshe wyues there were found. * Of the sonnes of Iesu, the sonnes of Iosedec, and hys brethren. Ma- zeas, Eleazer, Jozibus, & Joadeus, whych offe red them selues to put awaye they wyues and to offer a rame for their ignoraunce. And of the sonnes of Semeri, Masleas, and Elies, & Jee- lech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Jocer, Limosi as, Hylmaen, Nathanea, Justio, Jeddus, & Cal- las. And of the Leuites, Josabbus, Semeis, & Colnis, Caletas, Facteas, Colnas, & Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary. Eliarib, za- karus. Of the porters, Shallumus, and Tolba- nes. And of Israel, of the children of Jozo, Osi and Remias, & Geddias, and Melchias, Miche- lus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias, and Bonas. And schyldren of Jolania. Chanias, zachary, Feiz- relus, Joddus, Erimoth, and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jarhoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and zo- chias, Larimoth, Sabbit, & Thebedias. And of the sonnes of zebe, Johannes, Amanias, zab- dias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Ban- dus, Olamus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Ala- bus, & Jeremoth. And of the sonnes of Addi, Ra- atus, & Moosias, & Caleus, & Raanas, Maasi- us, Mathathias, Besel, Banus, & Manasse. And of the sonnes of Raue: Rones, Afeas, Melchias, Saneas, Simo Ben Jamim, Mal- chus, and Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom- Carianeus, Mathathias, Banus, Eliphalach- Manasse, Semei. Of the sonnes of Banus Jerem, Woodias, Abzamas, Joell, Baneas, Pellaas, Jona, Marymoth, Eliasib, Mathan- nus, Eliasis, Ozias, Dielus, Semedius, zam- bys, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Robeus Ide- lus, Mathathias, Sababus, zeheda, Sedmi, Jellus, and Baneas. All these had taken oute landyshe women to mariage, & they put them a waye with they chylidren. The prestes and Le- uytes, and all they that were of Israel, dwelte at Jerusalem and thowout all the lande, in þ newe moneth of the seventh moneth, and the chil- dren of Israel were in they dwellynge: And the whole multitude came together, vpon the floore at the Eastsyde of the holpe porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Eldras þ hye prest and reader, that he wold hyng the lawe of Mo- ses: whych was geuen of the Lorde God of Is- rael. So Eldras the hye preaste broughte the lawe vnto the whole multitud, to man and wo- man, to all the preastes that they myght heare the lawe. * In the newe moneth of the vii. moneth And he red in the floore that is before þ holy port of the temple, from the morning early vnto the eveninge, before men and women. And they ap- plied they mynde all vnto the lawe. And Eldras the prest and reader of the lawe stode vpon a pulpet of wodde, whych was made therfore, and vpon hys ryght hand there stode by hym Mathathias, Sanius, Ananias, Azarias, Urias, Ozechias, & Balsamus vpon hys left hand stode Kaldus, Misael, Malachi- as, Abuschas, Sabus, Rabadias, and zachary. Then toke Eldras the booke before the whole multitude, for he was the pryncipal and had in moost honour of them al. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode al streyght vpon they fete. So Eldras prayled the Lorde the most hy- est God, the Almyghty God of hostes. And al the people answered: Amen: and helde vp they handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, & pray- led the Lorde. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbathus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, and Hilius, the Leuites lift they handes vwarde and bowed they faces to the grounde, & prayled the Lorde. Those were they whych taught the lawe of the Lorde, & red the lawe of the Lorde in the congre- gacyon: and euery man set them before that vn- derstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Eldras the hye preast and reader, and to the Le- uites that taught the multitude, saying: Chys daye is holpe vnto the Lorde, and all they that had hearde the lawe wepte. So Eldras sayde: * Depart your way then, and eate the best and dryncke the swetest, and send giftes vnto them that haue nothing: for this day is holy vnto the Lorde, & be ye not sorry, for the Lorde wyl bring you to honour. Then went they they way eue- ry chone, and dyd eate and dryncke, and wer me- ry, and sente rewardes vnto them that had no- thing, that they also myght eate wyth gladnes for they were exceadynge reioysed thowowe the wordes that were redde vnto them in the lawe. And so they were all gathered together at Jeru- salem to holde the feast, accordyng to the coue- nant of the Lorde God of Israel.

And why? they haue forgotten me, & haue offered vnto straung goddes. Am not I euen he that broughte them out of the lande of Egypte from the house of bondage? It is a people wythout learnynge and nourture. Howe longe shall I forbear them, vnto whome I haue doone somuche good? * Manye kynnes haue I destroyed for theyr sakes. * Pharaoh with his seruantes and al his powre haue I smytten downe & slayne: Al thenacions haue I destroyed and rooted out befoze them, and in the East haue I broughte two landes and people to naught, euen Tyre and Sidon, and haue slayne al theyr enemyes. Speake thou therfoze vnto them sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde. * I led you thorow the see: and haue geuen you sure stretes, sence the begynnynge. * I gaue you Moyses to be youre Captayne, and Aaron to be the preast: * I gaue you light in a pillar of fyre: and greate wonders haue I doone amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me: sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almyghtye Lorde: I gaue you quaples to eate, & tentes for youre socourt. Neuertheles ye murmured: and ascribed not the victorie of your enemyes vnto my name: yee, & same day do ye yet murmur. Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongrye in the wylernes, & dyd ye not crye vnto me? Why haste thou broughte vs into this wylernes to kyl vs? It had bene better for vs to haue serued the Egipcians, then to dye in this wylernes. Ther had I pytie vpon your mournynges. And gaue you Manna to eate. * Ye did eate Angels fode. * When ye were thurstye, dyd not I heve the hearde stone, and caused water to flowe thereoute? For the heat I couered you wyth the leaues of the trees. A good pleasaunt fat lande gaue I you: I caste oute the Canytes the Phelystes & Philistines befoze you. * What shall I do more for you sayth the Lorde?

Thus sayth the Almyghtye Lorde: when ye were in the wylernes, in the water of the Amorytes, beinge a thyrst, and blasphemynge my name, I gaue you not fyre for youre blasphemys but cast a tre into the water, and made the riuer swete. What shall I do vnto y, O Jacob? Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. * I wyll turne me to another people, and vnto those wyll I geue my name, that they may kepe my statutes. Seinge ye haue forsaken me. I wyll forsake you: When ye desyre me to be gracious vnto you, I shall haue no mercye vpon you. * When ye call vpon me: I wyll not heare you. For ye haue dyspplied youre handes wyth bloude, and your fete are swyfte to commyt mans slaughter, Ye haue not forsaken me (in amater) but your owne selues, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Almyghtye Lorde: haue I not praped you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her daughters, & as a nurse her yong babes that ye wolde be my people, & I shulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my chyldren, & I shulde be youre owne father? * I gathered you together as an henne gathereth her chekenes vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out from my face. * When you offre vnto me, I wyll turne my face frome you for youre solempne feaste dayes: youre new mones, and your circumcisions haue I forsaken. I sente vnto you my seruantes the Prophetes whom ye haue taken & slayne, & tozney theyr bodies in peces whose bloud I wil require of your handes sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Almyghtye Lorde: your house must be desolate: I wil cast you out as & wind doth the strawe, your chyldre shal not be frutful, for they haue dyspised my commaundement: and done the thyng that is euell befoze me: Your houses wyll I geue vnto a people that shal come, and * they that neuer heard me shal beleue in me: and they vnto whom I neuer shewed token: shall do the thyng that I commaund the. They haue sene no prophetes, yet shall they cal theyr synnes to remembraunce, & knowleg them. I report me vnto the grace I wil do for the people which is come, whose chyldren reioyse i gladnes, & though they haue not sene me wyth bodelye eyes, yet in spete they beleue the thyng that I saye. And nowe brother, behold what great worship, & se the people & commeth from the east, vnto whom I wyll geue the duke dome * of Abraham: Isaac, and Jacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Hychas, of Joel, Abdy, Jonas, Naum, and Abacuc, of Sophonye, Aggeus Zachary, and Malachy (whych is called also an angel, or messenger) of the Lorde.

The ii. Chapter.

The Synagoge sendeth saues wyth her owne chyldren. The Gentiles are called.

Thus sayth the Lorde: I brought this people oute of bondage, I gaue them my commaundementes, by my seruantes & prophetes: whych they wold not hear, but dyspised my counsels. The mother that bare them, sayth vnto them: Go your way ye chyldren, for I am a wyddowe and forsaken. I brought you vp wyth gladnes, but wyth sorrowe and heauynes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned befoze the Lorde your God, and done the thyng that is euell befoze hym. But what shall I nowe do vnto you? I am a wyddowe and forsaken: go your waye O my chyldren, and aske mercy of the Lorde. As for me O father, I call vpon the for a witness ouer the mother of these chyldren which wold not kepe my couenaunt, & thou bringe them to confusion: & theyr mother to a spoyle, that she beare homore. Let theyr names be scatered abroade amonge the heathen. Let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thoughte scoyme of my couenaunt.

Who be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the wyrghteous unrighteousnes by the. Thou wycked people remembre what I dyd vnto Sodome, and Gomorre, whose lande is turned to pytch and ashes: Euen so wyl I do vnto al the, that heare me not, sayth the almyghty Lord. Thus sayth the Lord vnto Edoas: tell my people, & I wil geue them the kyngedome of Ierusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel: They? glozy also wyl I take vnto me: and geue them the euerlastyng tabernacles, which I had prepared for those. The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete smellynge opntement: they shal nether labour nor be wery. So ye poure waye, and ye shall receaue it. Pray for your selues a few dayes that they maye dwell therein.

Howe is the kyngedome prepared for you therfore watch. Take heauen and erth to wytnes for I haue broken the euell in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lord. Mother embrace thy chyldren, and bynge them vp wyth gladnes: make they? fete as fast as a pyl-ler, for I haue cholen the sayth the Lord.

And those that be deade wyl I rayse vp agayne from they? places, and bynge them out of the graues. For I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren for I haue cholen the sayth the Lord. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruantes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctyfyed and prepared for the. xii. trees with diuers frutes, and as many welis: flowing with mylke and hony, & vii. mountaynes, wherupon there growe roses & lylies, wherin I wyl fyll my chyldren with ioye. Execute iustyce for the widdow be iudge for the fatherles, geue to the poore, defende the comfzrtles, clothe the naked: heale the wounded, and sycke: laughe not a lame man to scoone, defend the crepel, and let the blynd come into the lpyght of my clerkes: whersoeuer thou fyndest & dead, take them and bury them, and I shal geue the, the fyrst place in my resurrection holde styll & my people and take thy rest for thy quietnes is come. Rede thy chyldren, & thou good nurse, stablyshe they? fete. As for & seruantes whom I haue geuen the, there shall not one of them perishe, for I wyl seke them fro thy nombze, were not thy selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heauyness cometh, other shall wepe & be sorrowfull, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous. The heathen shalbe gelous but they shalbe able to do nothig agaynst the, sayth the Lord. My handes shal soute the, so that thy chyldren shal not se the fyre euerlastyng. Be ioyful, & thou mother wyth thy chyldren, for I wil delpyer the sayth the Lord. Remembre thy deade chyldren, for I shal bring them out of the earth, & shewe mercy vnto them for I am mercyfull, sayth the Lord Almighty. Embrace thy chyldren, vntyll I comie and shewe mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer: and my grace shal not fayle.

I Edoas receaued a charge of the Lord vpon the mounte Oreb, that I shulde go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naught, and dyspyled the commaundemente of the Lord. And therfore I laye vnto you, O ye heathen that hear and vnderstand. Loke for your shepharde, he shall geue you euerlastyng rest, for he is nye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the worlde. Be redy to the rewarde of & kyngedome, for the euerlastyng lpyghte shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Fle the shadowe of thys worlde, receaue the ioyefulnes of youre glozy. I testyfie my sauour openly: O receaue the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, geuinge thanckes vnto hym: that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Arple vp, and stande faste: beholde, the nombze of those that be seald in the feast of & Lord whych are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, and haue receaued glozyous garmentes of the Lord. Take thy nombze O Syon, and shut vp the purfeyd, whych haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lord. The nombze of the chyldren whom thou longest for, is fulfilled: be seche the power of the Lord, & the people which haue bene called from the begynnyng, maye be halowed.

* I Edoas sawe vpon the mounte Syon a greate people whom I coulde not number, and they al prayled & Lord with songes of thanckes geuyng. And in the myddest of them ther was a yong ma of an hye stature, more excellent the all they, & vpon euery one of they? heades be set a crowne, and was euer hyer and hyer, whych I marueled at greatly. So I asked the Angell, and sayde: Sy: what are these? he answered & sayd vnto me: These be they, that haue put of & mostall clothynge, and put on the immortal and haue testyfyed and knowleged the name of God. Howe are they crowned & receaue the rewarde

Then sayde I vnto the Angell: what ponge person is it, & crowne them, and geueth them the Palmes in they? handes? So he answered, and sayd vnto me it is the sonne of God, whom they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to comende them, that stode so styf for the name of the Lord. And so the angel sayd vnto me: Go thy way, and tel my people, what maner of thynges: and howe greate wonders of the Lord thy God, thou hast sene.

The. iii. Chapter.

The wonderous woekes whiche God dyd for the people are recyted. Edoas marueled that God sufferd the Babilonians to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are synners also.

In the. xxx. year of the fall of the cite I was at Babilon, and lay troubled vpon my bed, & my thoughtes came vponer my herte: for I sawe the desolacion of Sion, and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelte at Babilon, & my spyt was soze moued, so & I begane to speake fearfull wordes to the most hyest, and sayde O Lord Lord, thou spakest at the begynnyng whi thou plantedst the earth (& that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundemente vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whych was a creature of thy handes, and hast byrthed in hym the byrth of lyfe, and so he lyued before the, & thou leddeste hym into Paradyce: whych garden of pleasure thy rpyghte hande had plained, & euer the earth was made: And vnto hym thou gauest commandement to loue thy wape whyche he transgressed, & immediatly thou appoyntedste death in hym, & his generacions. Of him came nacyns: trybes, people, and kynredes, oute of number. * And every people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges befoze the: & as for thy commandementes they dispised the. * But in processe of time thou broughtest the water froude, vpon those that dwelt in þ world and destroyedst the. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was the water froude also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou leftest, namelpe Noe, wyth his housholde, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened þ when they þ dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiplye, & had gottē many children, and were a great people, they begā to be more vngodly then þ fyrste. Howe when they all lyued so wyckedly befoze the, * thou dyddest chose the a man frome amonge them: whose name was Abraham: him thou louedst, and vnto hym only thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an everlastyng cōuenant wyth hym, promysinge him that thou woldest neuer forlake his seide. * And vnto him thou gauest Israhac: vnto Israhac also thou gauest Jacob, and Esau. As for Jacob, thou dyddest chose hym, and put back Esau. * And so Jacob became a great multitude.

And it happened that when thou leddest his seede oute of Egypt: thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, & downe the heauens setting fast the earth, mooung the ground makynge the depthes to shake, and troublinge the worlde. And thy glory went thowowe four portes of fyre, and earthquakes, and wyndes & colde: that thou myghtest geue the lawe vnto the seide of Jacob, and dyligence vnto the generacion of Israhel. And yet tokest thou not away frome them that wycked herte, that thy lawe myght bypnyng forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed: and was ouercome, and so be al they that are borne of hym. * Thus remayned weakenes wyth the lawe: in the hertes of the people, wyth the wyckednes of the roote: so that the good departed awaye and the euell abode still. So the tymes passed awaye, and the peares were broughte to an ende. * Then dyddest thou rayle the vp a seruaunt called Dauid, * whome thou commaundedste to buylde a cytye vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifyce vnto the therein. Thys was done now many peares. Then the inhabytors of the cite forsoke the, & in al thynges dydeuen as Adam and al his generacions had done, for they also had a wycked herte.

And so thou gaueste thy cytye ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and moze ryghteous then thy people that they shall therfore haue the domynyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe their vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse: that it coude not be nombred: yee, when my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the xxx. yere) my herte sayled me, for I sawe, howe thou sufferdest them in suche vngodlynesse, and sparedste the wycked doers, but thyne owne people hast thou roted oute, and p̄serued thyne enemyes, and thys hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceaue howe thys happeneth. Do they of Babilon then better: then they of Syon? Is there any other people that knoweth the sayunge that people of Israhel? What generacyon hath so beleued thy cōuenantes, as Jacob? And yet they? rewarde appereth not, and they? labour hath no frute. For I haue goone heare and there thowowt the heathen, and I se that they be ryche and welthy, and thynke not vpon thy commandementes: Wepe thou therfore our wyckednes now in the balaunce and they? also that dwell in the worlde, and so shal thy name be no where founde but in Israhel. Where is there a people vpon earth, that hath not synned befoze the? What people hath kept thy commandementes? Thou shalt fynde that Israhel by name hath kepte thy p̄ceptes: but not the other people and heathen.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The Angel reprooueth Elzas, because he seemed to enter into the profounde iudgements of God.

And the Angell that was sent vnto me (whose name was Urpel) gaue me an answer and sayde: thy herte hath taken to much vpon it in this worlde and thou thynkest to comprehend the wape of the byeste. Then sayde I: Yee, my Lorde. And he answered me, and sayde I am sente to shewe the thre wayes and to sette forth the symplytudes befoze the, whereof yt I canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the way, that thou desyrest to se. And I shall shewe the frome whence the wycked herte cometh. And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Go thy wape, wepe me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me the blaske of the wynde, or call me agayne the dape that is passe. Then answered I, and sayde: What man borne, is able to do that? Why requirerest thou such of me? And he sayde vnto me: Yf I shuld aske the how depe dwellynge are in the see? Or howe greate watersprynge are vpon the fyrmamente? Or howe greate watersprynge are in the begynnyng of the depe? Or whych are the outgorgynge of Paradyce? Peradventure thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe or hell, neyther dyd I ever clyme vp to heauen. Neuerthelesse now haue I asked the but onely of fyre, and wynde, and of the dape, where thowowe thou hast trauayled, & from the which thou canst not be seperated, and yet canst thou geue me none answer of them.

He sayde moze ouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and such as are growen vp wyth the canst þ not know: howe shuld thy vessel then be able to comprehend the wape of the byest, and now outewardely in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstande the corrupcyon that is euident in my syghte? Then sayd I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all: then that we shulde lyue in wyckednes, and to suffre, & not to know wherfore. He answered me and sayde: I wente in a wo in a wood, and the trees take such a deuice, & sayd: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynst p see that it maye departe awayne before vs, and that we maye make vs yet moore woddess.

The floudes of p see also in lyke maner take thys deuice, and sayde: Come let vs go vp, and fyghte agaynst the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thoughte and deuice of the wood was but vayne and nothyng worth, for the fyre came & consumed the wood: The thought of the floudes of p see, came lyke wyse to noughte also, for the lande stode vp and stopped them.

When thou were iudge nowe betwixt these two, whom woldest thou iustifye, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & sayde: Merely it is a folysh thought that they both haue deuyled for the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and p see also hath thys place to beate thys floudes. The answered he me, and sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgemēt, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, and the see to his floudes, euen so they p dwell vpon earth maye vnderstande nothyng but that whych is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, may onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseeche the, O Lord let me haue vnderstanding: for it was not my mynd to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of such as we dayly meele withal, namelye wherfoze that Israel is blasphemed of the heathē, & for what cause the people (whom thou hast euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly nations: and why the lawe of oure fathers is brought to noughte and the wyrtten couenantes come to none effecte, and passe awaye out of the worlde as the greshoppers, & oure lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to optayne mercye. What wilt thou do then vnto thys name, whych is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The more thou searchest, the more thou shalt marnell, for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye, & cannot comprehend the thynges that are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come, for this worlde is full of vnyghteousnes and weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges whereof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euell is sown, but the destruction therof is not yet come. If the euell nowe that is sown, be not turned vpsyde downe, and if the place where the euell is sown, passe not awaye, then can not p thyng come that is sown wyth good. For the corne of euell seede hath bene sown in the hert of man fro the begynnyng, and howe muche vngodlynes hath he brought vp vnto thys tyme: and howe much shall he yet byrnyge for the vntill he come into the barne.

And nowe by thy selfe, whē p corne of euell is cut downe, howe greate a barne shall it be? I answered and sayde: Howe & when shall these thynges come to passe? Wherfoze are oure prayes se we and euell? And he answered me, say-enge: Hast not thou sa much vpon the best, for thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to much ado. Wd not the sonles also of the ryghteous aske questyon of these thynges in their holynes, saying: How longe shall I hope of this fashion: When cometh the frute of my barne and my reward? And vpon thys Jeremi-el the Archangel gaue them answer, and sayde: Euen when the nombze of the seedes is fylled in you, for he hath weyed the worlde in p balauce: in measure & nombze hath he measured the time and moueth it not vntil the same measure be ful fylled. Then answered I & sayd: O Lorde Lord nowe are we full of synne, & for our sake paraventure it is not, that the barne of the righteous shall not be fulfylled, because of the synne of the that dwell vpon earth.

So he answered me & sayd: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chylde, & aske of her, when she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, if her chyldebed may kepe the byrth any longer within her. The sayd I: No Lorde, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secreete places of soules are lyke the preue chambze of a woman that traunapleth, and maketh hast, when the tyme of necessitye of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it if it is comytted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shall be shewed the fro the begynnyng. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syght and if it be possible, & if I be mete therfoze, shewe me then whether there be mo to come the is past, or moze past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, & I shall expounde p similitude vnto the. So I stode and behold, an whote burnynge ouen went ouer before me: & it happened p when the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there wente ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe much rayne wyth a storme: & when p stormy rayne was past p dropes remainyd styll. The said he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is moze then p dropes, & as fyre exceedeth p smoke, eue so the measure of the thynges that are past hath the vpper hande. Then went the dropes and the smoke aboue: and I prayde & sayde: maye I lye (thynkest thou) vntill that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? he answered me, and sayd: As for the tokens wherof thou askest me, I maye tel the aparte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent therfoze.

The. v. Chapter.

Eldras and the Angell comen together.

Euerthelesse, as concernynge the tokens, marke this: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shall be taken in a greate nombze, and the waye of the truthe shall be byd, & the lande shall be barrē from sayth: but iniquyte shall haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast sene nowe, and as thou hast heard longe ago. And the lande that thou seyst nowe to haue rule, shalt thou shortly se wast. But pf

God graunte the to lyne, thou shalt se after the thynde trumpet that þe sunne shall sodenly wyne agayne in the nyghte, and the mone thre tymes in the daye, & bloude shall drop out of the wood, and the stone shall geue hys voyce, & the people shall be vnquyet: & euen he shall rule, whome they hope not, & dwell vpon earth, & the foules shall flyt & þe Sodomytish see shall cast out his fyre, & make a noyse in þe nyght, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shall be a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shall be oft sent agayne, & the world beastes shall go theyr way, and monstrous women shall bare monstres, and salte waters shall be founde in the swete: one frende shall fyghte agaynst another: then shall wyte & vnderstandyng be hyd and put asyde into theyr secrete places, & shall be sought of many, & yet not be founde: then shall vnrightheousnes & voluptuousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shall aske another, & saye: Is rightheousnes gone thorowe the? And it shall say: No. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shall laboure, but theyr wayes shall not prosper.

To thewe the such tokens I haue leue and yf thou wilt praye agayn, and wepe as now, and faste seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, & a fearefulness went thorowe all my bodye, & my mynde was feble & carefull, so that I almost souned wythall. So þe Angel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyghte it happened, that Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countynance so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israel is commytted vnto the in the lande of theyr captiuitie? Up then and eate, & forsaake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth hys flocke in the handes of the wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy wayes from me & come not nye me: and he herde it, and as I sayde: so wente he hys waye from me. And I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and weppynge, lyke as Ariel the angel commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened that þe thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receaued the sperte of vnderstandynge, and I began to talke wyth the moost hygheste agayne, & sayd: O Lorde Lorde, of euery wood of the earth and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneparde: and of all landes of the whole worlde, thou hast chosen the one vit, & of floures of the grounde, thou hast chosen the one lylpe: & of all the depthes of the see: thou hast fylled the one ryuer: and of al bylded cyties thou hast bellowed Hyon vnto thy selfe: & of al the foules þe are created, thou hast named the one doue, and of all the cattell that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe: & amonge al the myltitude of folkes: thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto thys people whome thou louedest, thou gaueste a lawe, that is proued of all.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen thys one people ouer into manys? And vpon the one root thou hast prepared o ther, and why hast thou scatered the one onely people amonge many, whych treade them downe, yee, whych haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes.

And thoughte thou were enemy vnto thy people, yet shuldest thou punyssh them wyth thyne owne handes. Nowe when I had spoken these wordes, the Angel that came to me the nyght afore was sente vnto me, and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thyng that I saye and I shall tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then him that made the? And I sayde: No Lorde: but of very grete and compassion haue I spoken. For my raynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experyence of the waye of the mooste hygheste, and to seke out parte of hys iudgemente. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayeste not. And I sayde: Wherefore Lorde? Wherunto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldbed then my graue? So had I not sene the myserye and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel?

And he sayde vnto me: Rombze the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together þe droppes: that are scatered abrode, make me the floures grene agayne, that are wythered, open me the thyng that is closed: and byng me forth the windes, that are shut vp, shewe me þe ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thyng, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not hys dwellinge wyth men. As for me, I am vnwysse: how may I the speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me.

Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgemente or in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde, O Lorde, yet arte thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they do that haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyl lyken my iudgement vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of the last, euen so is there no swyftnesse of the fyrst. So I answered and sayde: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy iudgemente the soner? Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haue aboue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at once, that shall be created.

And I sayde: Howe hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruaut, þe thou lpyng maker, hast made the creature lpyng at once, & the creature bare it: euen so myghte it now also beate them þe present, at once. And he sayd vnto me: Aske the chyldbed of a womā, & say vnto her: If þe byngest forth the chyldren, why doest thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therfore to byng to bringe forth .x. children at once. And I ſaide ſhe can not, but muſt do it one after another.

Then ſayde he vnto me: Euen ſo haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earth: for thoſe that be ſowen vpon it by proceſſe of tyme. For lyke as a ponge childe maye not bringe forth the thyngges that belonge to the aged: euen ſo haue I ordained the worlde whych I made.

And I asked and ſaide: Seynge thou haſt nowe geuen me away, I will ſpeake befoze the, for our mother of whom thou haſte tolde me is yet ponge, and nowe ſhe draweth nye vnto age.
He aunſwered me and ſayde: Aſke a woman y beareth children, & ſhe ſhal tell the. Saye vnto her: wherefoze are not they (whome thou haſte nowe brought forth) like thoſe y were befoze y but leſſe of ſtature? And ſhe ſhal aunſwere the:
They that be bozne in y yowth of ſtrength, are of one ſayppon, & they y are bozne in the tyme of age, (when the childebed ſayleth) are other wyſe.
Conſider nowe thy ſelfe, howe that ye are leſſe of ſtature, then thoſe that were befoze you, and ſo are they that come after you, leſſe then ye: as the creatures which nowe begin to be olde, and haue paſſed ouer the ſtrength of yowthe. Then ſaide I: Lorde I beſeeche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy ſpyghte, ſhe we thy ſeruaunte, by whome doeſt thou viſet thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

The Angel instructeth Eſdras, and geueth hym aunſwere to his queſtions.

And he ſaide vnto me: In the beginnyng when y grounde was made were ſene, or euer y moueable powers were ſta-blyſhed, befoze the innumerable multitude of Angels were gathered together, or euer y bygh-neſſes of the ayre were liſted vp, afore the mea-ſures of the firmāt were named, or euer y chimneys in Sion were hote, & or the preſent yeaeres were ſought out, & or euer the inuencions of the ynowde ſpyne, were put aſyde, befoze they were ſealed y now gather ſaith for a treaſure: the did I conſider & ponder al theſe thynges, & all they were made thozow me, & thozow none other: by me alſo they be ended, & by none other. Then aunſwered I & ſaide: which ſhal be the parting aſunder of t he times? Or when ſhal be the ende of the firſte, & the begynnynge of it y foloweth.

And he ſayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Iſaac, when Iacob & Eſau, were bozne of him, Iacobs hande helde firſte the hele of Eſau: for Eſau is the ende of this worlde, and Iacob is the begynnynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixt the hele and the hande. Other queſtion (Eſdras) aſke thou not.

I aunſwered then & ſaide: O Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy ſpyght, I beſeech the ſhe we thy ſeruaunte the ende of thy tokens wherof thou ſhe weſt me parte the laſt nighte.
So he aunſwered and ſaide vnto me: Stande vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce & ſounde. There ſhall come a greate moeyon, but the place wher thou ſtandeſt ſhal not be moued.

And therfoze when thou heareſt the wordes be not afraid, for of the ende ſhall the worde and foundation of the earth be vnderſtande. And why? the worde therof trebleth and quaketh for it knoweth, y it muſt be chaunged at the end.
And it happened, y when I had herde it, I ſtoode vpon my fete: and herkened, & beholde, there was a voyce, that ſpake, & the ſounde of it was like the ſounde of many waters, and it ſaide: Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, & to viſet them that dwell vpon earth, & wyll begynne to make inquiſycon of the, what they be that haue burnt equite with vnrigheteouſnes, & when y lowe eſtate of Sion ſhal be fulfilled: & whē y worlde, y ſhal vaniſh away: ſhal be ouerſealed, the wil I do theſe tokēs.

The bookes ſhal be opened befoze the firmament, & they ſhall ſe all together, & the children of a yeaere olde ſhall ſpeake wyth their voyces: the women wyth childe ſhall bringe forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, & they ſhall lye: & be raiſed vp: and ſodenly ſhall the ſowen places appere as y vnſowne, the fulloze honſes ſhal ſodenly be founde emptye, and the trompete ſhall geue a ſounde, whiche when euer ye mā heareth, they ſhal be haſtely afraid.
* At that tyme ſhall frendes fighte one againſt another lyke enemyes, and the earthe ſhall ſtande in ſeare with them.

The. iiii. booke.

 Gen. 1. a* (euen the fyrst daye) and sayedst: * Let heauen and earth be made, and thy word was a perfect worcke. And then was there the sperte, and the darcknesse were yet on euery syde, and scilicet: there was no mans voyce as yet from y. Then commaundest thou a fayre lighte to come forth oute of thy treasures, that thy worcke myghte appeare and be sene.

Upon the second day thou madest the sperte of the firmament, and commaundest it to part a sunder, & to make a diuision betwixte y waters, y the one part myghte remaine aboue, and the other beneth. Upon y. iii. day thou broughtest to passe, y the waters were gathered in the vii. part of y earth. vi. partes hast thou dried vp and kepte them, to thyntente that men mighte sow & occupy husbandry therein. As sone as thy worde went forth, the worcke was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable frut and many diuerse pleasures and desyres of temptation, floures of changeable colour & smell, and this was done the. iii. daye.

 Gen. 1. b* * Upon the. iiii. daye thou commaundest that the sunne shulde geue his hyne, and the moone her lpght: y starres dydst thou set in ordre and gauest the a charge, to do scrupce euen vnto ma y was for to be made. Upo y. v. day y saidst vnto the. vii. parte * (wher y waters were gathered) y they shulde byngge forth dyuers beastes, foules & fishes. And so it came to passe, that the dome waters: and without soule brought forth liuyng beastes, at the commaundement of God that all people myghte prayse thy wonderouse worckes. Then dydst thou preserue two soulles, y one thou calledst Enoch: & the other Leuiathan, and didst seporate the one from the other for the. vii. parte (namely where y water was gathered together) myght not holde them both vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dyed vp y. iii. daye, y he shuld dwel in the same part, wherin are a. ii. hylls. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the. vii. part, namely y moyst and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wylt and when. Upon the. vi. day thou ganest commaundement vnto y earth, y before the, it shuld byngge forth beastes, catell, and all y crepe, and (besyds this) Adam also, whom y madst lord of all thy creatures. Of him come we all, and y people also, whome thou haste chosen specyally vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayde nowe and spoken before the, that I myghte shewe how y the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people whych also come of Adam y haste sayde y they are nothyng, but be lyke a spytle, & hast lykened the abundaunce of them vnto a dozop (y falleth) from the rofe of the house.

And nowe, O Lorde: the heathen whyche haue euer bene reputed as nothing, haue begon to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuour vs: but we thy people (whome thou haste called the fyrste bozne, thy only begottē, and thy foruent louer) are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde nowe be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde. Howe longe shall this endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

The Angel sheweth vnto as many thynges to come.

And it happened after that I had spokē out these wordes there was sente vnto me an Angell, whych had bene by me also the nyghtes afore and he sayde vnto me: Up & as, and heare y wordes: that I am come to tel the. And I said speake on Lord my God. Then sayde he vnto me. The see is set in a wylde place that it myghte be deape and greete, but the entraunce is narrowe and small lyke a ryuer.

For who wolde go into the see, to looke vpon it, and to rule it? Yf he went not thowow y narrowe, howe myghte he come into the brode?

Item an other: A cyprie is buylde and set vpon a broade felde, and is full of all goodnesse the entraunce is narrowe and sodayne, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryghte hande, and a depe water at the lefte, and as it were onely one strait pathe betwixt them both so smale that there coulde but one man go there.

Yf thys cyprie nowe were geuen vnto an heyre and he neuer wente thowow the parlous waye, howe wold he receaue hys inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lorde. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porcion. And why? for theyr sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyngge Judged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrowe, full of sorowe and trauayle. They are but fewe and cuell, full of pavelles and labour. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wide and sure, and broughte immortall fruite.

Yf they nowe whyche are entred into this worlde, maye not comprehend these strait and vaine thynges, much lesse maye they comprehend & vnderstand the secret thynges. Why disquietest thou thy selfe then seing thou art but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe where as thou art but mortall? And why haste thou not receaued into thyne herte the thyngge that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, * thou haste ordeyned in thy lawe, that the ryghteous shulde inherete these thynges, but that the vnlawfull and vngodly shulde perishe. Reuerthelesse, the ryghteous shall suffer strait thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffered strait thynges, shall not le the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstanding aboue y hyghest. For there be many y perishe, because they dispise the lawe of God y is set before them. For God hath geuen strait commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and howe they shulde lyue: and yf they kepte this, they shulde not be punished.

Reuerthelesse, they were not obedient vnto him, but spake agaynst hym: ymagined vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayde moouer, y there was no God, and y God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, y his lawe lawe haue they dyspyssed, and denyed bys promyses: in his statutes and ordynances haue they not bene faythfull and steadfast, and haue not perfourmed his woꝛkes.

And therfore Eldras: vnto the full, plenty and to the empty, emptinesse. Beholde the time shall come, that these tokens which I haue told the, shall come to passe, and the byrde shall aperc and the earth that nowe passeth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoever is deliuered fro the euell, shall be my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall openly declared, with those that be with hym & they that remaine: shall be my in foure hundred yeres.

After these same yeres shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shall be turned into the olde sylence seuen dayes, lyke as in the foze Judgements so that noman shall remaine. And after seuen dayes, I worlde that yet a waked not, shall be raised vp, and shall dye corrupt. And the earthe, shall restore those that haue slept in her: and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylence, and the secret places shall deliuer those that be commytted vnto them. And the moost hyghest shall be openly declared vpon the seate of Judgemente, and all miserie shall vanishe awaye and longe sufferynge shall be gathered together. But the Judgement shall continue, I truth shall remaine, and sayth shall waxe strong, I woꝛke shall folowe, & I reward shall be shewed: I ryghteousnes shall watch, and the vnryghteousnes shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: * Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, & Moses for the fathers that synned in the wyldernesse, & he that came after him for Israel, in I tyme of Achas, & Samuel: and * David for the destruccyon, and Salomō for them that came into the sanctuary, & I heli as for those that receaued rayne, & for the dead that he myghte liue, & Ezechias, for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and dyuerse other in lyke maner, whych haue prayed for many.

Euen so nowe, seying the corrupt is growen by, & wyckednes increased, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so nowe also?

He answered me, and sayde: This present worlde is not the ende, there remaineth muche honoure in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shall be I ende of this tyme, & the begynnyng of the immortalite for to come, wherein al corrupcyon is vanisshed all voluptuousnes is lowed al my belefe taken away, righteousnes growen, & the verite sprōg by. Then shall no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, nor oppresse him I hath gotten the victorie. I answered then, & sayd: This is my first and last sayng: I it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym that he shulde not synne. For what profyt is it for men nowe in this presente tyme to lyue in heynesse, and after death to loke for punishment? O thou Adam, what haste thou done? For thought it was thou that synned, thou art not fallen alone but we al that come of the. For what profyt is it vnto vs, yf there be promysed an immortal tyme: where as we medle wyth deadly woꝛkes? And yf there is promised vs an euerlasting hope, where as oure selues are euell and wayne and that there are layde vp for vs dwellynge of helthe and fredome, where as we haue lyued euell, and that the woꝛthyppe of the hyghest is kepte to defende them whych haue led a paciente lyfe, where as we haue walked in the most wycked wayes of all? And that there shall be shewed a Paradise, whose fruyte indureth for euer, where in is fredome and medycyne, where as we shall not goo in: for we haue walked in vnpleasaunte places: And that the faces of the whych haue abstayned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as oure faces shall be blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghteously, we considered not, that we shulde suffre deathe.

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consyderacyon and thoughte of the bat-tayle, whych the man hath vpon earthe: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayd. But yf he get the victorie, he shall receaue the thyng that I saye. For this is the lyfe, wherof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, sayng: * Chuse the lyfe that thou mayest lyue: * Deu. xxx. d. Neuerthelesse, they beleued him not, neither the Prophetes after hym.

So, now me whych haue spoken vnto them, that heynesse shulde not reache vnto them, to thez destruccyon, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be intourmed in saluacyon.

I answered then and sayde: I knowe Lord, that the hyghest is mercyfull, in that he hath the mercye vpon them, whych are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walke in hys lawe: and that * he is paciente and longe sufferynge towarde those that haue synned in thez woꝛkes, and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyeth: and that he is of greates mercye, for he multiplied his louing kindnesse towarde those that are presente, and that are paste, and to them whiche are for to come.

For yf he mutyllpe not his mercyes, the worlde shall not be made Ipyng, with those that dwell therein. He geueth also, for yf he gave not of his goodnes that they whiche haue done euell, myghte be eased, from thez wyckednes, the ten thousand part of men shuld not be made Ipyng. And yf I Judge forgaue not those that be healed with his worde, & yf he wold destroy the multitude that strineth, there shuld be very fewe left in an vnnumerable multitude.

The. viii. Chapter.

Eldras prayeth God rather to loke vpon his owne mercye: then vpon the synnes of the people.

And he answered me, saynge: The mooste hyghest made this worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a symple tude, Eldras: As when thou askest the earthe, it shall saye vnto the, that it groweth muche moulde whereof earthen vesselles are made, but lytle of it that gold cometh of. Euen so is it with the wozke of thys worlde. * There be many created, but fewe shal be p̄serued. Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe vp the wytte (thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstādyng, for thou arte agreed to berken & to geue care, & wyllyng to prophesy: for thou haste no longer space geuen the, but onely to lye. O Lorde, wylt thou not geue thy seruauit leaue, that he may pray before the, and that thou mayst geue seed vnto oure herte, and buyde oure vnderstandyng that there may come fruite of it: and that euery one whiche is corrupte, and beareth the state & and place of a man, may lye?

For thou art alone, and we al are one wozke māshpp of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayde & like as the body is fashyned nowe in the mothers wombe, & geuest the membris & thy creature is p̄serued in fyre & water: & nyne moonethes doth thy wozke suffer thy creature which is fashyned in her: but the thyng that p̄serueth, and it that is p̄serued shal bothe be kept together: and when tyme is, the wombe deliue-reth the thyng that is kepte and growen in her.

For thou haste commaunded the bestes to geue milke vnto the frut, that the thyng which is created and fashyned, may be noysshed for a tyme: & then thou dysposest & ordrest it wpth thy mercye, byngest it vp with thy ryghteous-nesse: nuturest it in thy lawe, and refourmest it with thy vnderstādyng, mortifiest it as thy creature, & makest it liuyng as thy wozke. Seyng then that I destrouest him, which with so great labours is created & fashyned thow wth thy cōmaūdemēt, I couldest lyghtly ordayne also, I the thyng whiche is made myght be p̄serued.

And this I spake now of all men in general as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am soz: & of thine inheritaunce for whose cause I mourne: & of Israell, for whō I am wo-ful: and for Jacob: for whose sake I am greued therfore begin I to pray before I, for my selfe & for the, for I se the fal of vs: euen of vs, ydwell vpōerth. But I haue herd I swiftnesse of I iudge which is to come: therfore heare my voice, & vnderstāde my wordes: & I shal speake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of Eldas, before he was receaued: O Lorde thou that dwellest in euerlastyngenesse, whose eyes are lyfte vp in the ayre, whose scoole is exceadyng hye, whose gloze and magestye may not be comprehended, before whom the hoostes of heauen stande with tremblng, whose keepyng is turned in wyne and fyre, whose word is true whose talkyng is steadfast, whose commaun-dement is stronge, whose ordynauce is fearful, whose lookes dyeth by the depthes, whose wzath maketh the mountaynes to melte away and whose truth beareth witness: O heare the prayer of thy seruauit, and marcke with thyne eares the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lye I wyl speake, & so longe as I haue vnderstandyng, I wyl aunswere O looke not vpon the synnes of the people whiche serue in the truthe. Haue no respecte vnto the wycked studeys of the heathen, but to the dyspre of those that kepte thy testymonys wpth sozowes. Thynke not vpon those that haue walked fapnedly before the, but vpon them, whych with wyl haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy them, whiche haue had beastly maners, but to looke vpon the that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacyon at them, whiche are whorise the beastes: but loue them, & alway put theyr trust in thy righteounes and gloze: for we and oure fathers haue all the same syknes & disease, but because of our synnes I shal be called merciful.

For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called merciful, where as we haue no workes of ryghteounes: for the ryghteous whiche haue layde vp manye good wozkes together, shall oute of the p̄ dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, I thou shouldest take dyspleasure at him? O what is I corruptible mortal generation, I thou shouldest be so rough toward him.

* For of a truthe there is no man among the that be bozne, but he hath dealt wyckedly, and among the saythfull there is none whiche hath not done amysse. For in this (O Lorde) thy rigteousnesse and thy goodnesse shal be prayd & declared, yf thou be merciful vnto them, whiche are not ryche in good wozkes.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spoken a ryght, & accordyng vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wyl not vere-ly consyder the wozkes of them, whiche haue sinned before the death, before I iudgement, before destruction: but * I wyl reioyse ouer the wozke & thought of the righteous. I wyl remembere also I pylgrymage, I holpe makynge & I reward. Lyke as I haue spoken nowe, so shal it come to passe. For as I husband man soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sown or planted is not al kept safe, neyther doth it al take roote: Euen so is it of them that are sown in the worlde, they shal not all be p̄serued.

I answered then and sayd: yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake lyke as the husbāde manes seede perysheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to muche rayne vpon it: Euen so perysheth man also whiche is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thine owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou haste made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto the husbādmans seede. Be not wzoth at vs, O Lorde: but spare the people & haue mercy vpon thyne owne inheritaunce O be merciful vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Thynges present are for I present, & thynges to come for such as be to come. For I lackest yet moche seyng thou mayest loue my creature aboue me.
I haue oftymes drawen ny vnto the, but neuer to I vnrightheous. In this also I art maruelous before the yf in that thou haste humbled thy selfe, as it becometh the, and hast not regarded thyne

thyne owne selfe, that thou art had in suche honour amonge the rpyghteous. Therfore shall grete wretchednesse and myserye come vpon them þ in the latter tyme shal dwel in þ world, because they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke oute glory for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyse opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, þ tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made ready, a cytie is buylded for you, and rest is prepared: yee, perfecte goodnesse and wysedome.

The rote of euil is marked from you, the wea benesse and moth is byd from you, & into hel shal corruption in forgetfulnesse. Sorowes are banished away: & in þ ende is shewed þ treasure of immortalytie. And therfore aske þ no more questis concernyng þ multitude of the that perish. For they haue takē liberte, despised þ dyest thought scozne of his law, & forsaķ his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys rpyghteous, & * sayde in they herte, that there is no God: yea, and that wittingly: for they dy. For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is thyre and payne prepared for the. For it was not his wil þ men shulde come to naught: but they whiche he created, haue despled the name of hym that made them, and are vntthankfull vnto hym, whiche prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement nowe at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe namelpe vnto the and suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I & sayde: Beholde, O Lord nowe hast þ shewed me the multytude of the to kens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the laste: but at what tyme & when þ hast not shewed me.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ Eldras hath vspous shewed vnto hym.

I answered me then, and sayde: Declure thou the tyme dpygentye in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde the before, so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherein the byeste wyl begynne to vplet þ world, which he made. And whē there shal be an erthquake & vpyre of the people in the world, then shalt þ wel vnderstande þ the most byeste spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen frō the begynnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the world be by the begynnyng and ende, and the ende is ma nifest: Euen so the times also of the byest haue playne begynnynges in wonders, and sygnes, and the ende in woorkyng and in tokens. And every one that shal be saued, and shal be able to escape by his woorkes and by sayth: wherein ye haue byered, shal be preserued from the sayde perpysh and shal te my sauour in my lande, and within my borders. for I haue halowed me frō the world. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche nowe haue abused my wayes, and they that haue caste them oute dyspytefullpe, shall dwell in paynes.

For lyke as in they lyfe haue receaued be nefptes, & haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhozred my lawe, whyle they had yet fre dome, and when they had yet open leysure of a mendmente & conuersyon, and vnderstode not but dyspyled it: the same muste knowe it after deathe in payne. And therfore be thou nomore careful, howe the vngodly shal be punished, and howe the righteous shal be saued, and whose the world is: and when it is. Then answered I: & sayde: * I haue talked before, & nowe: I speake & wyl speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche perpysh, then shal be saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the seede: as the floures be, so are the coloures also: suche as the woorkeman is, such is the woork: and as the husbandman is him selfe, so is his husbandry also, for it was the tyme of the world.

And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the world was made, wherein they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wythstode me. Nowe when every one was, and the maker also in the world which is nowe prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whiche is vnslerarcheable: they maners were corrupte. So I consydered the world, & beholde, there was perpyl, because of the thoughtes, that were come into it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wyne berrye of the grapes, & plante, from among many generacyons. Let the multitude perpysh then, whiche are growen vp in vayne: & let my grape and wyne berrye be kepte: euen my plante for wyth great labour haue I made it vp.

Reuerthelesse, yf thou wylte take vpon the yet leue dayes mo (but þ shalt not fast in them) go thy way then into the felde of floures, where no house is builded: and eate only of the floures of the felde, tast no fleshe, drynke no wyne, but eate praye vnto the byeste continually: so wll come, and talke with the.

So I wente my waye and came into the felde whiche is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of þ same satisfied me. After leuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my herte was vbered within me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth and began to talke before the byeste, and sayde O Lord, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou haste declared & opened, thy selfe vnto our fathers, in the wylderneffe, in a place where no mā dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypte, and thou spakest sayng: Heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes thou seede of Jacob. Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, & it shal bying frute in you, & ye shal be honoured in it for euer. For our fathers whiche receaued the lawe kepte it not, & obserued not thy ordynances & statutes, and the frut of thy law was not declared: for it might not: for why? it was thine * For they preceaued it, perpyshed because they kepte not the thyng that was sown in them.

It is a custome when þ ground receaueth seed of the see a ship, or a vessel meate & drinke, that when it perissheth or is broken wherin a thing is sown, or wherin any thyng is put: & thynges also perissheth & are broken: which are sown or put therein. But vnto vs it hath not hapned so, for we haue receaued the lawe, perissheth in synne: and oure herte whyche also receaued the lawe: notwithstandinge, * the lawe perissheth not: but remayneth in his labour.

And when I considered these thynges in my herte after this maner, I looked aboute me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryghte syde, * I sawe a woman, whyche mourned sore, made greate lamentacyon, and wepte wyth lowde voyce: her clothes were rente in peeces, and she had ashes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayd: wherefore wepest thou? Why artest thou so sore and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me: Syr let me bewaile my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my minde, and broughte vnto lowe. And I sayde vnto her: What ayleth thee? Or who hath done any thyng to thee? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene vnfructful and barren, and haue had an husbnde thyrtie yeares. And these thyrtie yeares I doo nothyng elles daye and nyghte, and all houres: but make my prayer to the best. After thyrtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden, and looked vpon my myserye, considered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of hym, so was my husband also and all my neyghbours, and we gaue greate honoure vnto the myghte. And I nourished him with great trauayle. So when he grewe vp and came to the tyme, that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

The. x. Chapter.

* Chap. x. a ii. C. vii. a

And it happened, that when my sonne wente into his chambze, he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthwe we all the lyghtes, & all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me.

Then toke I my rest vntill the seconde day at nyght: & when they had al rested, & they myght comforte me, I rested & also rose vp by nyghte, & fled, & am come hether into this felde as I sest & am purposed not to come in the cty, but to remaine here & nether to eat nor drynke, but continuallye to mourne and faste, vntill I dye.

Then let I my medytatyns and thoughtes fall that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou folowest the woman: seest thou not oure heuynesse and mournynge, and what happeneth vnto vs? howe syon oure mother is all wooful and sore: and howe she is cleane broughte downe and in mysery: seing we be all nowe in heuynesse and make hurt more (for we be all sore woofull.) As for I heuynesse & thou takest: it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth and she shall tel the: & it is she whyche ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For frome the begynnynge all men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde they walke almost all into destruction, and many of them shall be rooted oute.

Who shulde then (by reason) make moare mournynge then she, that hath losse so greate a multitude: and not thou whyche arte sore: but for one. But yf thou woldest say vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mournynge of the earth: for I haue losse the fruyte of my bodye, whyche I bare with heuynesse: but the earth is accordyng to the maner of the earth, and the presente multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as I haste borne, with trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also frome the begynnynge geueth her fruyte vnto man, for hym that made her. And therfore wythholde thy sorowe and heuynesse by thy selfe, & loke what happeneth vnto the beare it strongly. For if thou iudgest the marche and ende of God, to be righteous and good, and receaueste his counsaile in tyme, thou shalt be comended therein. Goo thy waye then into the citie to thy husbnde.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do: I wyll not go into the cty: but here wyll I dye. So I communed moze with her, and sayde: do not so, but be counsailed, & folowe me, for howe many falles hath syon? We of good comforte because of the sorowe of Ierusalem. For thou seest that oure Sanctuarie is layed wast, oure altare broken, oure temple destroyed, our playnge of instrumentes and singynge layde downe the thanckesgyuynge put to silence, oure myght is vanyshed awaye, the lyghte of oure candlestykke is quenched, the Arcke of the conuynant is taken from vs, al oure holpe thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: oure chyldren are put to shame our pzeastes are brente: our Leuytes are caried awaye into captiuitie: our virgins are defiled, and oure wyues rauished: our ryghteous men spoiled: and our chyldren destroyed: our yong men are broughte in bondage, and oure strong worthyes are become weake: and syon (which seale is the greatest of al) is loosed by her wordes: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore wake of thy great heuynesse and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the myghte maye be mercysful vnto the: & that the best maye geue thee rest from thy labour and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkynge wyth her, her face dyd shyne and glister, so that I was afrayed of her and woked what it might be. And immediatly she cast out a great voyce, verie fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I flosed, & beholde, the woman appered vnto me nomore: but there was a ctye buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacyon.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed, with a loud voyce, and sayde: Where is Ariel the Angell? which came to me at the fyrst? For he hath sed me to come in many consideracyons & thyghtes, & myne ende is turned into corrupcyon: and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge speaking these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me: and I laye as one that had bene deade, and myne vnderstandyng was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and comforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstandyng vaxed? and the vnderstandyng of thy herte? and wherfore arte thou sorpe? And I sayde: Because thou haste forsaken me, and I haue doone * accordyng vnto thy wordes, I went into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. he sayd vnto me: Stande vp, and be manlye, and I shall geue the exhortacion.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and heard that I do not knowe. O, shall my vnderstandyng be disceryned, and my mynde? But nowe I beseeche the that thou wylt shewe thy seruauit of this world. he answered me then, and sayd heare me, and I shall enfourme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the hyst hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

he hath sene that thy wayes are ryght, and that thou takest sorowe contynuallye for thy people: and makest great lamentacion for syon: and therfore vnderstande the visyon, which thou sawest a litle while ago after this maner. Thou sawest a woman mournyng, and thou hast comforted her: neuer thelesse nowe seest the likenesse of a woman nomore, but a though test there was a cytie buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so this is an answer. The woman whome thou sawest is syon: and where as she tolde the, that she hath ben chastyt peres vnfrutefull and barren, those are the chastyt peres wherin there was no offering made in her.

But after chastyt peres, Salomon builded her and offred, and then bare the barren a sonne. And where as she tolde the: that she noz shewed hym wyth laboure, that was the dwellynge of Ierusalem. But where as she tolde the her sonne dyed when she came into her chambze, that is the fall of Ierusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse howe she mourned for her sonne: what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sorpy in thy mynde, and suffrest fro thy herte for her, & hath be shewed the her clerenesse, & the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therfore I bad the remain in the felde where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the hyst woulde shewe thes vnto the: therfore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundation nor building is. For in the place where the hyst wyl shewe his cytie, there shal be no mans buyldyng. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne herte be afrayed, but goo thy waye in, and se the glorious saye buyldyng, and howe greate it is and howe great thou thinkest it, after the measure of thyne eyes. & then shalt thou heare as muche as thyne eares may comprehend. For thou arte blessed aboue many other: and art called with the hyst as the fewe

But to morowe at nyght thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the biggest shewe the visyons of hygh thynges, which we wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earth, in the last dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he comaunded me.

¶ The xi. Chapter.

In this chapter and in the two nexte ensuyng the interest of certain visyons, and of the interpretacions thereof.

Then sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from the sea an Aegle whiche had twelue wynges, and thre heades: And I sawe and beholde, he spredde hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the windes of the ayre blew in them, & so they were put together agayne.

And I behelde, and oute of his fetthers there grew out other lytle contrarie fetthers, & bedes rested, the head in the myddst was greater then the other, yet rested it with the respydue.

Mozouer I sawe, that the Aegle flew with hys wynges, and raygned vpon earth, & ouer all them that dwelt vpon the earth: And I saw that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynst him no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes, and gaue a sounde with hys fetthers, and a voyce saynge after this maner: watche not all together, slepe euery man in his owne place, and watche for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. neuer thelesse, I sawe, that the voyce went not oute of hys heades, but from the myddest of his bodye. And I nombred his contrarie fetthers, and beholde, there were eyght of them. And I looked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fetther: and raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it raygned, the end of it came, and the place thereof appered nomore. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and raygned and had a great tyme: and it happened, when it raygned, the end of it came also lyke as the first so that it appered nomore.

Then there came a voyce vnto it, and sayde: heare thou that hast kept in the earth so longe this I saye vnto the: before thou begynnest to appeare nomore. There shal none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thirde and raygned as the other afore, & appered nomore also. So went it with all the respydue one after another, so that euery one raygned, and their appered nomore. Then I looked, and beholde in processe of tyme the fetthers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a while they appered no more: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked and beholde, the twelue fetthers appered nomore and the two wynges, and there was no moare vpon the Aegles body, but two brades that rested and syre fetthers. Then saw I also that the syre fetthers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpon the ryght syde: for the foure contynued in theyr place. So I looked, and beholde: they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. The was there one set vp but shortly it appered nomore, and the seconde was lone awaye then the fyrste. And I beheld, and loo, the two thoughte also by theim selues to raygne, & whē they so thought, behold, ther awaked one of the heades that were at rest: namelpe, it that was in the middell, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled wth hym, & the heade was turned with them, & were by hym, & dyd eat vp the two vnder wynges & woulde haue raygned

C But thys heade put the hole earthe in feare and bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelte vpon earthe with muche labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I looked, and beholde the head & was in the myddell, sodaynly appered nomore, lyke as the wynges, then came the two heades, whiche ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I behelde, and lo the heade vpon the ryghte syde deuoured & was vpon the lefte syde. And I heard a voyce which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and conspyde & thynge that thou seest. Then I sawe and beholde as it were a Lyon that roareth, rennyng hastyly out of the wood, and he sent oute a mannes voyce vnto the Aegle, and saide: heare thou: I wyll talke with the, & the byghest shall say vnto the: Is it not thou that haste the victoize of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpon earth and in my worlde, & that the ende of their tymes myght come thowowe them?

D And the fourthe came, and ouer ranne al the beastes that wer paste, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulness, & ouer the hole compasse of the earthe with the moste wyched labour, and so longe tyme dwelte he vpon the earthe with dyscreite, and the earthe haste thou iudged not with truth. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurte & peacable and quyet: thou haste loued lypers, & destroyed the dwellinges of them that brought forth the frute, and hast caste downe the walles of suche as dyd the no harme. Therefore is thy wyngfull dealynge and blasphemie come vp vnto the highest: & thy pryde vnto the myghty. The best also hath looked vpon the proude tymes, & beholde they are ended and they: abhominacions are fulfilled. And therfore appere no more thou Aegle, and thy horrible wynges, & thy wyched fethers, & thy vngreuous heades, & thy synful clawes, and all thy vaine body, & the earth may be refreshed, & come agayne to her selfe: when she is deliuered from thy violence: & that she maye hope for the iudgement and mercye of hym that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

A And it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Aegle I sawe, and beholde, the heade that afore had the vpper hande, appered no more: neyther dyd the fourte wynges appere any more, that came to hym and were set vp to raygne: & they: kyngdome was small and full of vyroure. And I sawe & beholde they appered nomore, and the whole body of & Aegle was bzent, and the earthe was in greete feare. Then I awaked oute of the trance of my mynde, & from great feare, and sayde vnto my spiryte: Loo, this hast thou geue me in that thou searchest oute the wayes of the best: loo, yet am I wery in my mynde, and verpe weake in my spiryte, and lytle strength is there in me, for the greete feare that I receyued this nyght. Therefore now I wyll beseeche the best that he wyll comfort me vnto the ende: & I sayde Lord Lord, if I haue founde grace before thy syght and if I am iustified wth the before many a ther, & if my prayer be come vp before thy face comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruante the interpretacon and plain dyfference of this horrible syght, that thou mayst perfectly comforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretacon of this syght. The Aegle whome thou sawest come vp from the sea, is the kyngdome whiche was sene in the visyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him: for now I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kyngdom shall twelue kynges raigne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raygne & shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: & this doo the twelue wynges signifye, whiche thou sawest. As for the voyce & spake, and that thou sawest goo oute from the heades, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after & time of the kyngdome there shall aryse greete stryunges, and it shall stande in parell of fallynge. Neuerthelesse, it shall not yet fall, but shall be set into his begynnyng. And the eyght vnder wynges whiche thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, & in hym there shall aryse eight kynges, whose tyme shall be but smal, and their peres shal pisse, and two of them shall perishe. But when the myddell tyme cometh, there shall be foure kept in the tyme, when bys tyme begynneth to come, & it maye be ended, but two shall be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heades resting: thys is the interpretacon. In bys laste shall the best rayse vp thre kyngdomes, & call many agayn into them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those & dwell therein, with much labour aboue all those that were before them. Therefore are they called & heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bring forth his wychednesse agayn, and & shall perforce and synne his laste. And where as thou sawest that the great heade appered nomore, it signifyeth: that one of them shall dye vpon his bed and yet with payn, for the two & remain shall slayne with the sword. For the sword of & one shall denoute the other, but at the laste, shall be fall thowow the sword hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnder wynges vpon the heade that is they, whome the best hath kepte vnto they: ende: thys is a small kyngdome, kyngdome & full of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest risynge vp, oute of the wood, and roaryng and speakynge vnto the Aegle, and rebukynge hym for his vnrpyghteousnesse, is the wynde whiche the hyghest hath kepte for them and for theyr wyckednesse vnto þe ende þe shall reioyne them, & rent them asundre before them for he shall let them luyng before the iudgement, and shall rebuke theim: for the resydue of my people shall be delpyer with trouble, these þe be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull, vntill the comynge of the daie of iudgement: wherof I haue spoken vnto þe from the begynning. This is the dreame þe thou sawest: and this is þe interpretacion. Thou only hast bene mete to know the secret of the hyst.

Therefore wyte all the seithynges that thou haste sene in a booke, and hyde theim, and teach them the wyse in the people, whose bertes thou knowest maye comprehend and kepe these secretes. But wyte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes mo, that it maye be shewed the whatsoeuer it please th the hyghest to declare vnto the: and with that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceyued, that the seuen dayes were past, & I not come again into the cytie, they gathered them al together, from the leest vnto the moste, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the: & what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and syttest here in this place: for of all the people, thou only art lefte vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candle in a darcke place, & as an haueu & shippe preserued from þe tempest. Haue we not elleg aduersytie ynough, but thou must forsake vs: Were it not better for vs: that we had bene byrente wyth Syon: for we are not better then they that dyed there: and they wept with loude voyce. Then answered I them, and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israel, & be not heyr thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath you in remembraunce, & the myghtye hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into thys place to praye, because of the myserye of Israell, that I myghte seeke mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarie. And now go your waye home euery man and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went theyr waye into the cytie, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the felde seuen dayes, as the Aungel had me, and dydeat only of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those daies.

And it happened after the seuen dayes that I dreamed a dreame by nighte. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the sea, that it moued al the floures therof. And I looked, and beholde, the man was stronge, and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned his countynance to consyder, al the thynges trembled that were sene vnder hym: and when the voyce went out of his mouth, all they byent þe hearde hym lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered together a myltitude of men oute of nombre, from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynst the man that came out from the sea. And I looked and beholde, he graued him selfe a great mountayn, and stowe vp vpon it. But I wold hau: sene þe border or place wherout the hyll was grauen, and I could not.

I sawe after these, that all they which came to fyght agaynst hym, were soze afrayed & yet they durste fyght. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe the fearcenesse & vpolence of þe people he neither lyfte vp his hande nor helde a swearde nor any weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sente oute of his mouth as it had bene a blasfe of fyre & oute of his tong he caste out sparkes & stormes: & they were all myrte together: the blasfe of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, & the great storme, and fell with a rushe vpon the people, whiche was prepared to fyght, & byent them vpeuery chone so that of the innumerable multitud there was nothyng sene, but only duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same manne come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people, and there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad some were sorre, some of them were bound, so þe they were carped and brought forth.

Then was I spcke thorow great feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruauant all thy wonders, from the begynnyng and haste counted me worthy, that thou myghtest receyue my prayer: the we me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I consydre in my vnderstandynge: woe vnto them þe shalbe lefte in those dayes, and much moze woe vnto them that are not lefte behynde, for they that were not lefte were in heynnesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter dayes whiche shall happen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therefore are they come into greates paylles and many necessyties lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe a waye as a cloude oute of the wynde, and nowe to see the thynges that shall happen in the laste.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretacion of the fyght shal I shewe the, and I wyll open to the, the thyng that thou hast requyred. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, & this is the interpretacion. He that taketh a way the parrell in that tyme, hath kepte hym self. They that be fallen into harme are suche as haue woakes and say the vnto the mooste myghtye. Knowe thys therfore, that they whiche be lefte behynde, are moze blessed then they that be deade. Thys is the meanynge of the visyon: Where as thou sawest a man comynge vp from the depe of the see, the same is he whome God the hyghest hath kepte a great season: whiche by his owne selfe shall delpyer his creature creature and he shall orde them that are left be hynde. And where as thou sawest, that out of his mouth there came a blast of wynd, fyre and storme: and howe that he lyft vp nether sword nor weapon, but that the rushing in of hym destroyed the hole multitude, that came to fyght against hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come when God wyl deliuer them þat are vpon earth and in a traunce of mind shal he come vpon the that dwel in the earth. And one shal undertake to fyght agaynst another, one cite agaynst another, one place agaynst another, * and one people agaynst another one realme agaynst another. ¶ When this cometh to passe, the shal tokens coe þat I shewed þe before: & then shal my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shal in theiꝝ owne lande leaue the battayl that they haue one agaynst another. and an innumerable multytud shal be gathered together as they that be wylling to come, & to ouercome hym by fyghtyng. But he shall stande vpon þe toppe of the mounte Syon. Nevertheless, Si-on shall come, and shal be shewed, be yng prepared and buylded for all men like as thou sawest the hyi grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people, that are come for theiꝝ wyckednesse, with the tempeste: and for theiꝝ enellymagynacions: and theiꝝ paynes wherewith they shal be punished, are lykened vnto the flamme: and without any labour shal he destroye them, euen by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peacable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes which were carped a way prisoners out of theiꝝ owne lande, * in the tyme of Oseas the kyng, whom Salmanaſar the king of Assyria toke prisoner, and carped them ouer the water, and so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them thys counsaile, that they shulde leaue the multytude of the heathen and to go forth into a farther countrie, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe theiꝝ statutes, whiche they neuer kepte in theiꝝ owne lande. And so they entred in at the narrow passages of the water of Euphrates, & so God shewed tokens for them, * and held styll the floud tyl they were passed ouer, for thow the countrie, there was a great way: namely of a yere, and a halfe iourney for the same region is called Assareth. Then dwelt they there vntil the latter tyme: & when they come forth agayn the hyghest shal holde styll the springes of the streame agayn. that they may go thow, therfore sawest thou the multytud with peace. And they that be left behynd of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Nowe when he destroyeth the multytud þat is gathered together, he shall defende his people þat remayne, and then shal he shewe great wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the deape of the see? And he saide vnto me: Lyke as thou canste neyther see oute nor knowe these thynges that are in the depe of the sea, euen so maist thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretacyon of þe dreame whiche thou sawest, therfore thou only arte lyghtened for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, & applyed thy dylgence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyfe haste thou ordered in wylledome, and * haste called vnderstandynge thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyghest. After the dayes, I wyl shewe þe more and talke with þe more at large: yea, heuyn and wondrous thynges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth vnto the felde, geuyng praiſe and thankes greatly vnto God, because of this wonders whiche he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat the dayes.

The.iiii. Chapter.

God appereth to Esayas in the bush, & sheweth him what he shal do

Don the thirde day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush and said: Esayas Esayas: And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and stood vp vpon my feete. Then spake he vnto me: * in the bush dyd I appere vnto Moyses, and talked with hym when my people serued in Egypte. And I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought hym vpon the mount Syon, wher I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wondrous woꝝkes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the end, and commaunded hym sayng These woꝝdes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I saye vnto the, that thou lay vp in thyne herte the dreames þat thou hast sene, and the interpretacyons whiche I haue shewed the, for thou shalt be receyued of all, thou shalt be turned, and remayne with my counsell, and with suche as be lyke the, vntyll þe tymes be ended. For the woꝝlde hath losse his yowth, and þe tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is decayed into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alreedy, and halfe of the tenth parte yet remayneth there þat whiche is after the halfe of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and orde thy house, and reforme thy people: comfort such of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruccyon, let go from the, moztall thoughtes: caste away þe burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes þat are most deuyn vnto the, and haste the to fflye from these tymes: for suche euell & wyckednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shal they do muche woꝝse.

* For the weaker þe woꝝlde and the tyme is the more shal synne and wyckednesse increase in them þat dwell vpon earth. For the truth is fled farre away & lesing is hard at hande. For nowe hasteth the visyon to come, þat thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyl goo as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme þe people whiche are present. But they þat shal be boꝝne afterwarde, who who wyl exhorze or rebuke theim? Thus the worlde is set in darkenes: and they þ dwell ther in are without lychte, for thy lawe is kyndled: because no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or þ shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghoſte into me and I shall wyte all that hath bene done in the worlde ſyns the begynning whiche was wyrtten in thy law, þ men maye ſynde þ path, and þ they which wyl lyue in þ latter daies, may lyue

And he answered me ſaying: Go thy waye gather the people together, and ſaie vnto them that they ſeke the not for forty daies, but loke thou gather many bore trees, and take with þ Harea, Dabzia, Selemia, Ecanus, and Aſiel: theſe fyue whiche are redy to wyte ſwiftly, & come hether, and I ſhal lycht a candle of vnderſtandynge in thyne hert, whiche ſhall not be put oute tyll the thynges be perfourmed whiche þ ſhalt begyn to wyte. And then ſhalt þ declare ſome thynges openly vnto the perfecte, & ſome thynges ſhalt thou ſe we ſecretly vnto þ wyſe. To morow this houre ſhalt þ begyn to wyte.

Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together & ſayd heare theſe wordes, O Iſraell: Dure fathers at the begynnynge were ſtraungers in Egypt from whence they were deliuered, and receiued the lawe of lyfe: whiche they kepte not, whiche ye alſo haue traſgreſſed after them. Then was this lande, & the lande of Syon parted emonge you by lot to poſſeſſe. But your fathers and ye your ſelues alſo haue done vnrightheouſneſſe, and haue not kept the wayes whiche the hyghſt commaunded you. And for ſomuch as he is a righteous Iudge, he toke from you in tyme the thyng that he had geuen you. And now are ye here and your brethren emonge you. Therefore ſo be that ye wyl ſubdue your owne vnderſtandynge, and reforme your herte ye ſhal be kept alſue, and after death ſhall ye optaine merce. For after death ſhall the iudgement come, when we ſhal lyue agayn: & then ſhall þ names of the righteous be manifeſt, and the workes of þ vngodly ſhal be declared. Let no man therefore come now vnto me, nor aſke any queſtion of me theſe fortye dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the felde, and remayned there. The nexte daye a voyce called me ſaying Eldras: open thy mouth, and drynke þ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde: he reached me a full cuppe whiche was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and drancke. And when I had dronke it, my hert had vnderſtandynge and wylsome grewe in my brest: for my ſpyrete was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and ſpake nomore. The hyghſt gaue vnderſtandynge vnto the fyue men, þ they wrote the þe thynges of the nyghte, whiche they vnderſtoode not. But in þ nyghte they dyd eate bread as for me I ſpake in the daye and helde not my tonge by nyghte. In fortye dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

And it happened when the forty dayes wer fulfilled, þ the hyghſt ſpake, ſaying: The firſt that thou haſte written ſpake openly þ the wor thy and vnderſtandynge may reade it. But kepe the lxx. laſte, þ thou mayeſt ſewe it onelye to ſuche as be wyſe emonge thy people. For in them is þ ſpyng of vnderſtandynge the fountayn of wiſdome & the ſtreame of knowlage. And I did ſo.

The xv. Chapter.

The punyſhmente that euell people ſhall haue: whiche God commaunded Eldras to ſhewe vnto them.

Behold, ſpake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecy which I wyl put in thy mouth, ſayeth the Lorde: and cauſe them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. Feare not the ymaginacyons agaynſt the. Let not the vnſaythfulneſſe of them trouble the, þ ſpake agaynſt the. For all the vnſaythfull ſhal dye in they: vnſaythfulneſſe. Behold, ſaith the Lorde I wyl bynge plagis vpon the worlde, the ſweard, hunger, death, and deſtruction, for wyckedneſſe hath the vpperhand in all þ earth and they: ſhamfull workes are fulfilled.

Therefore ſayeth the Lorde: I wyl holde my tonge nomore vnto they: wyckedneſſe, whiche they do ſo vngodly: neyther wyl I ſuffre them in the thynges, that they deale withall ſo wyckedly. Beholde, * the innocent bloud of þ righ teous complayn continually: & therefore (ſaith the Lorde) I ſhal ſurely auenge: & receyue vnto me all the innocent bloud from amonge them.

* Behold, my people is led as a flocke of ſhepe to be ſlapy. I wyl not ſuffre them now to dwell in Egypte but wyl bynge theim oute with a mighty hande & a ſtretched out arme, and ſmite it with plagis as afore and wyl deſtrope all þ lande of it. Egypt ſhall mourne and the foundacyons of it ſhal be ſmytten with the plage & punyſhmente that God ſhall bynge vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde ſhal mourne, for they: ſeedes ſhal be deſtroyed thowowe the blaſtyng and haile, & an horrible ſtar. Alſo worth þ worlde and them þ dwell therein, for þ ſweard & they: deſtruction draweth nye, & one people ſhal ſtand vnto fyght agaynſt another & ſweardes in they: handes. For men ſhal be vntedfaſte & ſome ſhal doo vyolence vnto other: they ſhal not regard they: kyng and prynces, the wayes of they: doinges and handlynges in they: power. A man ſhal deſyre to go in the cytie and ſhal not be able. For becauſe of they: pryde þ cyties ſhal be broughte in feare, the houſes ſhal ſhake & men ſhal be afraid: A man ſhal haue no pite vpon his neygbboure, but one ſhal prouoke another vnto battayle to ſpoile they: goodes, becauſe of the hunger of breade, and becauſe of the greate trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth, whiche are from the vppry ſyng, from the South, from the Eaſt, and Lybanus to turne vnto them, and reſtore the thynges þ they haue geuen the. Like as they do per this daye vnto my choſen, ſo wyl I do alſo, and recompeneſe them in they: boſome. Thus ſaith the Lorde God: My ryght hande ſhal not ſpare the the synners, and my sword shall not cease ouer them that shed innocent blood vpon earth. The fyer is gone out from his wrath, & hath consumed the foundations, of the earth, & the sinners lyke the strawe that is kindled. Wo worth the that synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lord: I wyl not spare them. So pour wape ye chyldren from violence, desyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lord knoweth all them & synne agaynst hym, and therfore deliuereth he them vnto deathe and destruction: For now are the plagues come vpon the worlde, & ye shall remayn in them. For God shall not deliuer you because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

Behold, an horrible visyon cometh from the East, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, & the people of Arabies with many charetes, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde vpon the earth that all they whiche heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, maye feare and be afrayd and as the wilde bores out of the wodde, so shall they go oute, and with great power shall they come, and stande fyghtynge with them: and shall waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, and not remembre their byrth, and shall turne about swarig together in a great power to persecute them. But these shall be afrayed, & kepe silence at theyr power, & shall flee, and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shall be sege the and consume one of them, & in their hoste shall be feare and drede, & stryfe amonge theyr kynges.

Behold, cloudes from the East, and from the North, vnto the South, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and storme. They shall smite one vpon another: & they shall synne at the great starre vpon earth and theyr starre, & the bloude shall be from the sword vnto the helpe: and the smoke of man vnto the Camelles lytter: And there shall be greafe fearfulness & trembling vpon earth, & theyr se the wrath, shall be afrayde, & a trembling shall come vpon the.

And then there shall come great raines from the South, & from the North, & parte from the West, & from the stormy winde from the East and shall put them vp again, & the cloud which he raised vp in wrath, & the starre to cause feare toward the East and West wynde shall be destroyed: and the great cloudes shall be lyfte vp, and the myghtye cloudes full of wrath and the starre that they may make all the earth afraid and them dwell therein, and they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyer and hyle, and flyng swordes, and many waters: that all felde maye be full, and all ryuers, and they shall breake downe the cyties & walles, moynaynes and hylles, all trees, wodde, & the grasse of the medowes, & all their frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babilon, & make her afraid: they shall come to her and be sege her: the starre and all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Euen shall the duste and smoke go vp vnto the Heuen and all theyr be about her: shall be walle her: and they that remayn vnder her shall do seruice vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asya, that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babilon, & arte a worshyp of her persone: Woe be vnto the & wretch, because thou haste made thy selfe like vnto her, & haste dect thy daughters in whoredome, & they might triumph & please thy louers, which haue alway desyred to comit whoredome with the: thou hast folowed the abhomyable cytie in all her workes and inuencions.

Therefore sayeth God: I wyl sende plagues vpon the, wedowhed, pouerte, hunger, warres and pestilence, to wast thy houses with destruction and death, & the glozy of thy power shall be dreyed vp as a floure, when the beate ryseth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be sycke as a poore wyfe that is plagued & beaten of women: so that thy myghtye & louer shall not be able to receyue the. Wolde I hate the sayth the Lord: yf thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, exaltynge the stroke of thy handes, & sayde ouer theyr death, when thou wast drunken: set forth the bewtye of thy countenance.

There warde of thy whoredome shall be recompenced the in thy bosome, therefore shalt thou receyue warde.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen, (sayeth the Lord) euen so shall God do vnto the, & shall deliuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall thorow the sword. Thy cyties shall be broken downe: and all thyng shall perishe with the sword in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, & eat theyr owne fleshe, & drinke theyr owne bloude for very hunger of breade & thirst of water. Thou unhappy shalt come thorow the see, and receyue plagues agayn.

In the passage they shall caste downe the slayne cytie, and shall rote oute one parte of thy lande: and consume the porcyon of thy gloze. They shall treade the downe lyke stuble, and they shall be thy fyre, and shall consume the: thy cyties and thy lande, thy wodde and thy frutefull trees shall they burne with the fyre. Thy chyldren shall they carpe awaye captiue, and loke what thou haste, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The heathen shall be punished.

Woe be vnto the Babylon & Asia, & woe be vnto the Egypt and Siria gyde youre selues with clothes of lacke and heare, and mourne your chyldren, be sozry, for your destruction is at hand. A sword is set vpon you, and who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kindled amonge you, & who wyl quenche it? Plagues are sente vnto you, & what is he that wyl dryue the awaye? May any man dryue awaye an hongry Lyon in the woode? Or may any man quenche the fyre in stuble when it hath begunne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arrowe, & is shot of a stronge archer? The myghtye Lord sendeth the plagues, and what is he that wyl dryue them awaye? The fyre is kindled and gone forth in his hys wrath, and what is he that wyl quench it? he shall caste lyghtenynge: and who shall not feare? he shall thonder and who shall not be afrayed? The Lorde shall threaten, and who shall not utterly be beaten to poulder at his ptesence? The earth quaketh, and the foundacyon therof the see aryleth vp wyth waues from the depe & the floudes of it are vnquyet and the fishes therof also befoze the Lorde, and befoze the glozy of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghte hande & holdeth the bowe, hys arrowes that he shoteth are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

Beholde, the plagis are sente, and shall not turne agayne, til they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled and shall not be put out, tyl it consume the foundacyons of the earth. Lyke as an arrowe whych is shot of a myghty archer, returneth not backward: euen so the plagis that shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Who is me, who is me, who wyl delyuer me in those dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnynge of deth and great death, the begynnynge of warres, and the powers shall stande in feare: the begynnynge of euels and they shall trymble every one. What shall I do in these thynges: when the plagis come? Behold hunger, and plage, trouble, & angurthe are sent as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shall not turne from theyr wickednes, nor be alwaye myndefull of the scourges.

Beholde, vntayles shall be so good chepe vpon earth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case, & euen then shall myschefe grow vpon earth, warres, dearth, & greate dysquyetnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perishe of hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shall the swerde destroye, and the dead shall be cast out as donge & there shall be no man to conforzte them. For the earth shall be wasted, and the cyties shall be cast downe, there shall be no man left to tyll the earth and to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall plucke them of and gather them? The grapes shall be ripe, and who shall treade them? For al places shall be desolate of men, so that one man shall desyre to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole cytye there shall be ten left, and two in the felde: whych shall hyde them selues in the thicke bushes, & in the clyffes of stones, lyke as when there remaine thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tre, or as when a vyneparde is gathered, there are left some grapes of them that dylygently sought thorow the vyneparde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or four left for them that search theyr houses with the swerde. And the earth shall be left wast and the felde therof shall ware olde, and her wayes that al her pathes shall growe ful of thornes because noman shall traunple there thorow. The daughters shall mourne, haunynge no byde gromes: the womē shall make lamentacion, haunynge no husbundes, theyr daughters shall mourne haunynge no helpe of theyr byde grome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and theyr husbundes shall perishe of hunger. Ope seruantes of the Lorde heare these thynges, and marke them.

Beholde, the worde of the Lorde, & receaue it: beholde the plagis draw nye, and are not slake in taryng. Lyke as a traunplyng womā whych after the nyne moneth byyngeth forth a sonne, when the houre of byrth is come an houre two or thre afore the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chylde cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twyncklynge of an eye. Euen so shall not the plagis be slake to come vpon earth, and the worlde shall mourne and sorowes shall come vpon it, on euerye syde. O my people heare my worde: make you redy to the battell: and in all euil beue as pylgryms vpon earth. * he p sellet h, Coz. vii. d let hym be as he that steth his way, and he that byeth as one that wyl lease.

Who so occupyeth marchaundyce: as he that wyndeth not, and he that buydeth: as he that shall not dwell therein, he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that twyseth the vyneyard as he that shall not gather the grapes, they that mary, as they that shall get no chylde, & they that mary not: as the wyddowes: and therefore * they that laboure, labour in vayne. For straungers shall reape theyr fruytes, and spole theyr goodes, ouerthorowe theyr houses, take theyr chylde, captiue, for in captiue and hunger shall they get chylde. And they p occupy their marchaundise w robbery, how longe decke they theyr cities, their houses: theyr possessions, and persons: the more wyl I punysh them for theyr synnes: sayth the Lorde. Lyke as an whoze eueryeth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte, when she decketh her selfe, & shall accuse her to her face: when he cometh that defedeth, whych shall make inquisition for al synne vpon earth. And therefore be ye not lyke therunto, nor to the workes thereof: for or ener it be longe: iniquyte shall be taken awaye out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall raygne among you.

Let not the synner say, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpon hys head whych sayth befoze the Lorde God and hys glozy: I haue not synned. Beholde the Lorde knoweth all the workes of men, theyr ymagynacions, theyr thoughtes, and theyr hertes.

* For he spake but the word: let the earth be made, & it was made, let the heauē be made and it was made. In hys worde were sterres made and he knoweth the number of the. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures thereof: he hath mesured the see, & what it containeth he hath shut the see, in the myddest of the waters, and wyth hys worde hath he hanged the earth vpon the waters. He spredeth out the heauē like a vawte, vpon the waters hath he found it. In the desert and drye wyldernes hath he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaines, that the floudes myght power downe from the stony rokes to water the earth. He made man, and put his hert in the myddest of the bodye, and gaue hym bzyeth, lyfe, and vnderstandynge, pee, and the sprete of the Almyghty God, whych made all thynges, and hath lea-

He knoweth your ymagynacions and inuencions, and what ye thynke when ye synne and wolde hyde your selues. Therfore hath the Lord searched and sought out all your workes, and he shall bewraye you all. And when youre synnes are broughte forth, ye shalbe ashamed before men, and youre owne synnes shalbe youre accusers in that daye. What wyl ye do (oz how wyl ye hyde youre synnes before God, and his Angelles) Behold, God him selfe is the iudge feare hym, leaue of from youre synnes, and forget youre vnrpyghteousnes, and meble no more wylth them: so shall God leade you forth: and deliuer you frome all trouble. For behold, the heate of a great multitude is kindled ouer you and they shall take awaye certayne of you, and feede the ydle wylth Idols, and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in dyspylon, laughed to scozne, and troden vnder foote.

For vnto the places there shalbe a place and in the nexte cytyes a greate insurreccyon, vpon those that feare the Lord. They shalbe lyke mad men, they shal spare no mā, they shal spoyle and wast such as feare the Lord, their goodes shal they take from them: and shut them out of their houses. The shall it be known who are my chosen, and they shalbe tried as the gold in the fyre heare, O ye my beloued, sayth the Lord: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyl deliuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispayre not, for god is youre captayne.

Who so kepeth my commaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not youre synnes waye you downe, and let not youre vnrpyghteousnes be left vp. Who be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes, and tangled in theyr wyckednesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in wylth bushes, and the path therof couered with thornes, and that no man may traualy thow and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre and bent byethren that were of hys kynred. And though he were yonger then all the trybe of Reubyn, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe chydlyshelye in hys workes. And when all the other wente to the golden calves, which Jeroboham the kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fledd all theyr companies, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lord, and there worshipped the Lord God of Israel, saythfully offering of all his fyrste frutes and tythes, so that in the thyrde yere he mynystred all the tythes vnto the strangers and conuertes. These and such lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordyng to the lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke out of hys owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whome he called after hys owne name, and taught him from hys youth vp, to feare God, and to refrayne from al synne.

Nowe when he wylth hys wyfe, hys sonne and wylth all hys kynred was come into captiuite vnto the cytye of Ninine, what tyme as they al did eate of the meates of the heathē, he kept hys soule, and was neuer defyled in theyr meates. And forsomuch as he was myndfull of the Lord in all hys herte, God gaue hym fauoure in the syghte of Salmansar the kynge, which gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do whatsoeuer hym lyst.

So wente Tobias vnto all them that were in dyspylon, and comforted them, and gaue them wholsome exhortacions. And when he came to Ragas, a cytye of the Medes, hauyng ten talents of syluer of thynges wherwylth the kynge had honoured him & sawe amonge a great company of people of his kered, one Gabiel which was of hys owne trybe beyng in necessyte he gaue hym the sayde weyght of syluer vnder an hande wytyng.

After a longe season when Salmansar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib hys sonne reigned in hys steade: which hated the chyldren of Israel. Tobias went dayly thowtweoute all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue hys goodes to euery one of the, as much as he might he fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and buryed the deade and slayne and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne & fled out of Jewrye what tyme as God punished hym for hys blasphemie and in hys wrath slew many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was told the kynge, he commaunded to slaye him, & toke awaye all hys goodes. Neuertheles, Tobias & hys sonne and wylth hys wyfe fled hys waye & was hys naked, for there were many that loued him. But after .xlv. dayes the king was slaynt of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to hys house, and all hys goodes were restoyred to hym.

The ii. Chapter.

Tobias byddeth such of his frendes as feare God to a banquet oz feast. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He recommeth hym by the perm. of God and sufferance of God. Hys kynfolkes mocke hym.

The fyrst Chapter.

Tobias beinge taken prysoner, forsaketh not the lawe of truth. He receyue and chargeth of Tobias, & the maners of hym in hys youth. He taketh Anna to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He socoureth Gabiel wylth monye. He and his are saynt to fle, but after the death of Sennacherib they retorne agayne.

Tobias was of the trybe and cytye of Reubyn, which lyeth in the hye countreyes of Galile about Naalon, the waye towarde the west hauyng the cite of Sephet vpon the lefte syde. Though he was taken prysoner in the dayes of Salmansar kynge of the Assyrians, neuertheles beinge in captiuite, he forsake not the waye of truthe. In so much that whatsoeuer he myghte get, he parted it dayly wylth hys felowe prysoners and After those thynges vpon a solempne day of the Lord, Tobias made a good feaste in his house, and sayd vnto his sonne: Go thy waye and bring hether some of our tribe, such as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father, that one of his children of Israel lay slayne vpon the strete. And immediatly he leapt fro his table lefte the feast, came fast vnto the dead carcase, toke him and bare him preuile into his house, & when the sunne was downe he myghte safely burye hym. And when he had buryd the carcase, he did eate his meate with ioy, & feare, remembryng the wordes, that the Lord sayde by the Prophete Amos: your hye feastes shalbe turned to sorow and heynesse.

But when the Sunne was downe, he went his waye and buried hym. Then all his neyghbours reprovied hym, sayng: It is not longe sence it was commaunded to slay the: because of this matter, & hast scarce escaped the danger of death, & buryest thou the deade agayne? Nevertheless, Tobias fearyng God more then theyng, tooke the bodies of the slayne, & buryd them in his house, & buryed them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buried the deade, & was werpe, came home, & layd hym downe by the wall and slepte. And while he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes darke dunge out of the swalows nest, so that he was blinde. This temptaciō did God suffer to happē vnto him, that they whych came after myghte haue an example of his pacience lyke as of holpe Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from his yowth vp, and kept his commaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that the plague of blindness chaunced vnto him, but remained steadfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

For lyke as blessed Job was had in derisyon of kynnes, euen so was he laughed to scorn of his elders and kynfolk, whiche sayde vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes, & buryed the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, & spake: Saye not so, for we are the children of holy men, and looke for the lyfe, whiche God shall geue vnto them that neuer turne theyr belefe from hym. Anna his wyfe wente dailye to the weayng worke: and looke what buyng she coulde get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened that she toke a kynd and brought it home.

And when her husbāde hearde it crye, he sayd: looke that it be not stold, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eate or to touche any thyng of theste. Then was his wyfe angrie and sayd: Nowe is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy almes dedes are manifeste. With these and suche lyke wordes dyd she caste hym in the tette.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Raguel is sclaundered of her fathers seruantes. The prayer and sayngs of Sara. And also the innocēcy and chastyty of her. The prayers of Tobias and Sara are prayes.

When Tobias toke it heuily, & with teares: beganne to make his prayer sayng: O Lord, thou arte ryghteous, & all thy iudgementes are true: all thy wayes are mercy, faithfulness and iudgement. And nowe O Lord: be mynde of me, and take no vengeance of my synnes, nether remember my misdeades, nether the mysdeades of my elders. For we haue not bene obediēte vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captiuitie, into death, into derision, & shame vnto all nacions, amonge whome thou hast scattered vs. And nowe O Lord, thy iudgementes are great: for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundementes, nether haue walked innocēte before the. And nowe O Lord, deale with me accordyng to thy wyl, and commaunde my sprete to be receaied in peace, for more expedient were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At the same tyme it happened that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Ragas a city of Mesopotamia was sclaundered of one of her fathers hand-maydens: namelye, that she shulde haue had seuen husbādes, which as sone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Therefore, when she reprovied the mayden for her faute, she answered her sayng: God let vs neuer se sone nor daughter of the more vpon earth, thou killer of thy husbādes. Wilt thou slay me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce went Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether eate nor dranke, but continued in prayer and besoughte God wyth teares that he wolde deliuer her from this rebuke.

Vpon the thirde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayed the Lord sayng: Blessed be thy name, O God of oure fathers, whych when thou arte wroth: thou wilt mercy, & in time of trouble thou shal geue the liues of them, & call vpon the. Vnto the O Lord turne I my face, vnto the lifte I vp myne eyes, I beseeche the O Lord, lose me oute of the bondes of this rebuke, or elles take me utterly awaye from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord that I neuer had desire vnto mā, & that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly luste, I haue not kepte companye wyth those & passe their tyme in sport, nether haue I made my selfe partaker with them & walke in light behauiour. Neuerthelasse an husbāde haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Nowe parauenture ether haue I bene unworthy of them, or elles were they vnmete for me, for thou happily hast kept me to another husbāde. For why: thy counsell is not in the power of man. But whosoever loueth the and serueth the aryghte, is sure of this, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryng and yf he endure in pacience, he shall haue a reward and be hyghly crowned: and yf he be in trouble, than God (no doubte) shal deliuer him and yf his lyfe be in chastenyng, than he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

The. iiii. Chapter.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be heard, & he might dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias and sayd vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, & laye the in thine herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, bury thou my bodye & holde thy mother in honour all the dayes of her lyfe. For þou oughtest to remember what and howe great paines she suffred for the in her wombe. And whē she hath also fulfilled þe tyme of her life, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and beware lest at any tyme þe consent vnto synne, & lest thou lett off the commaundementes of þe Lord our God. Geue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: & so shall it come to passe that the face of þe Lord shall not be turned away from þe. Be mercifull after thy power. If þe haue much, geue plenteously: if thou haue litle, do thy dyligence, gladly to geue of þe litle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good reward in the day of neccesitye. For mercy deliuereth fro all synne & from deathe, & suffereth not þe soule to come in darknes. A greate comforte is mercy before þe hygh God, vnto all them that shewe it.

My sonne, kepe the wel from all whoredome & (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faute be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde beganne all destruction. Whosoeuer worketh anye thyng for the, immediatly geue hym hymselfe, & loke that thy byrd seruantes wages requayne not by the ouer nyghte. Look that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou wouldest not another man shulde do vnto the. Eate thy bread with the hongrye and poore, and couer the naked wyth thy clothes. Set thy bread and wyne vpon the burpall of the ryghteous, & do not thou eate and dryncke thereof wyth the synners. Aske euer counsell at the wyse.

Be alwaye thankefull vnto God, and beseeche hym that he wyll order thy wayes, & that what sorner thou deuysest or takest in hande, it maye remaine in him. I certifie the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I deliuered ten talentes of siluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytie of the Medes, and bys hand wyrtynge haue I by me. And therefore seeke some meanes, howe thou mayest come by him, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer and geue him his hande wyrtynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: truthe it is, we leade heare a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne: and do well.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ The obedience of yonge Tobias to his father, whiche is sente into Rages. An Angell accompanyeth with him in his iourney.

When answered Tobias bys father, and sayd: father: all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do & that dyligently. But howe I shall requyre this money I can not tell. Whether doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What tokē shall I geue him? And as for the waye whether I neuer kneweit. Then bys father answered hym, & sayde: I haue his handewyrtynge by me which when thou shewest hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now, & get the some saythfull man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the monye, whyle I am yet lyuyng. Then went Tobias out, & vpo the strete he founde a fayre yonge man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knew not that it was an Angell of God, but saluted hym and sayde: From whence arte thou, thou good yonge man. He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye þe leadeth vnto the countrie of the Medes? He answered I knowe it well, & all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, þe dwelleth i Rages a citie of the Medes, which lieth vpo the mount Egbatanis: Tobias sayde vnto hym: I pray the tary for me, tyl I haue told my father these thynges. Then wente Tobias in and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father meruayled and prayde, that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Nowe when the Angell came in, he saluted him, and sayd: Joye be with the for ever moare. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that syt here in darknesse, & se not the lyght of heauen? The yonge man sayd vnto hym: Be of good chere, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst thou byrge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytie of Rages in Medea? And when thou comest agayne, I shall paye the thy byrge. And the Angell sayde vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne & byrge him to the agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I pray the, of what house or of what tribe art thou? The Angell Raphael sayd vnto him: Askest þe after þe kynred of an byrreling, or sekest þe a guyde for thy sonne to go wyth hym? But þe I make þe not careful, I am Azarias the sone of great Hananias. And Tobias answered þe arte come of a great kynred: but I pray the be not displeased, þe I desyre to know thy kynred. The angel said vnto him: thy sone shall I leade forth safelye, & byrge him hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias and sayd: wel go on poure waye, and God be in your iourney, & his Angel bear you company. So when they had prepared al thinges, þe they wolde take with them in thei iourney: Tobias had bys father and his mother his mother fare well, and they wente on theyr dapes bothe together. Nowe when they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The state of oure age haste thou taken awaye, & sente hym frome vs. Wolde God that mony had neuer ben, for the whyche thou haste sente hym awaye. If we had bene contente wyth our pouertye, this had bene great ryches vnto vs. We saw oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thynne eyes shall se hym. For I truste, that the good Angel of God shall beare him compayne, and order wel all the thynges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother left of from wepyng, and helde her tonge.

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias is deliuered from the fyth by the Angel, The Angel exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

Then sayde the Angell Raphael vnto him heare me & I wyl tell the what they be, of whō the deuyl hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of luche & falschyd, & they shute God out fro them, & fro theyr hert & geue the selues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, whyche haue no vnderstandynge: vpon luche hath the deuyl power. But when thou takest her, & arte come into the chāber, withholde thy selfe from her thre dapes, and geue thy dyligence vnto nothyng but vnto prayer w her. And in the fyrste nyght, rost the lyuer of the fythe, & the deuyl shall be driuen awaye. The seconde nyght make thou be receaued into the company of the holy patryarkes. The thyrde nyght shalt thou optayne the blessing of God so that whole chyldren shall be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God: and more for the desire of chyldren, the for any fleschly luste: that in the seed of Abraham & mayest optayne the blessing in chyldren.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguel, & requyeth Raguel's daughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

Then wente on his waye, & a dogge folowed hym, and the fyrste nyght they abode by the water of Tygrys. Then wente he oute to washe hys feete, and beholde there came forth an horrible fyth to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayde: and cryed with a lowde voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and drawe him to the. And he dyd so, and drew hym vpon the lande. And the fythe beganne to leape at his feete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto him: take oute the bowels of this fythe, & as for the herte, the gaul and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medycine. Tobias dyd so, & roasted the fythe, & they toke hym with them in their iourney: & residue they salted, as much as was sufficient for them, tyl they came to Rages a cytie of the Medes. The Tobias asked the Angell, & sayde vnto him: I pray & brother Azaria tell me whereto are these thynges good of the fythe & thou haste bydden me kepe.

The Angell aunswered hym, and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the coales, & smoke therof driuer awaye all maner of euill spites, whether it be from man or from womā so that from thenceforth the same shall come no more vnto them. The gaul is good to annoint or to stryke the eyes withall, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shall be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym, where wylt thou & we remayne? The Angell aunswered and sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thynne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath nether sone nor daughter but her. All this good belongeth vnto the & thou must marry her, & therfore desire her of her father, & he shall geue her the to wyfe. The answered Tobias & sayd: As I vnderstand, he hath bene married vnto. vii. husbādes, & they al are dead: & I haue herd say & the deuyl slewe the. I am afrayd therfore, lest such thynges happē vnto me also: whyche if it came to passe (seyng I am the only sonne of my father & my mother) I shuld buryng them in their age with sorowes to their graues.

Then went they into Raguel, whych receaued them ioyfully. And whē Raguel looked vpon Tobias he sayd vnto Anna his wyfe. How lyke is this yonge mā vnto my systers sone? And when he had spokē this he sayd whence be ye good byethen? They sayde Of the trybe of Nephtaly, oute of the captiuitie of Nineue. Then sayd Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They said: yee, we know him wel. And whē they had spoken much good of him, & Angel sayd vnto Raguel Tobias of whome thou askest is this yonge mans father.

Then Raguel bowed him selfe downe: and wepte, toke him aboute the necke, & kyssed him, & sayd: Gods blessing haue I my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wepte also. Now when they had talked together, Raguel bad kyll a wether, & to make a feast: And when he prayed them to syt downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyl nether eate nor drynke here this day except I first graunt me my petition, & promise me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguel herde this, he was astonied: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other. vii. men, & went in vnto her, & he began to feare, if it shalde chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, & gaue the yonge man no aunswere, the Angel sayde vnto hym: feare not to geue hym thy daughter, for vnto this man I seareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doubte not but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in hys sight, and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intente, that thys daughter of myne, myghte be marryed in her owne kynred, accordynge to the lawe of Moles.

And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyl geue her vnto the: soo he tooke the righte hande of hys daughter, & gaue her into the ryghte hande of Tobias, and sayde. The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be wyth you, ioyne you together, and fulfyll bys blessinge in you. And they toke a letter & made a wrytynge of the mariage: And then made they merce, and prayled God.

And Raguel, called Anna his wyfe vnto him, and bad her prepare another chambze, and thether he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayd he vnto her: Be of good cheere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen geue the loye, for the heauynesse that thou haste suffered.

The. viii. Chapter.

The Angell byndeth the deuyl. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to prayer: and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

After that they had supped, they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angell: & tooke out of his bagge, a pece of the leuer of the fishe, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the Angell Raphael toke holde of the deuyl, & sente hym awaye, & bounde hym in the wyldernesse of the pyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & sayd: Up Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, to morowe, and euermore: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconlyse oure selues wyth God, and when the thyrde holpe nyghte is paste, we shal ioyne together in the dutye of maryage. For we are the chyldzen of holy men, and we may not come together, as the heathen, that knowe not God.

Then stode they vp bothe together, and besought God earnestly, that he wold preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of our fathers, prayled be thou of heauen and earth of the see, welles and fountes, and of al thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the
* Gen. ii. a. * moule of the earth, & gauest hym Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse that I take this sylter of myne to wyfe but onely for the loue of children, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd haue mercy vpon vs (O Lord) haue mercy vpon vs: & let vs bothe come hole and sounde together to a good arge.

And aboute the cocke crowynge it happened, that Raguel called his seruauntes, & they wente with him to make a graue. For he sayde it is chauned now vnto him paradiuenteure, as it dyd vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deade, that I maye burie hym afoze the lyghte daye: So she sente a mayden to se, which when she came into the chamber, founde them hole & sounde, slepyng together. And so she came agayne, and broughte good tidynge. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe prayled the Lord, and sayde: Prayled be thou O Lord God of Israel for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thoughte. For thou haste dealt mercifully with vs, and putt awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, & haste shewed merce vnto ponde: who be-loued. O Lord cause them to magnifye & more perfectlye, and offer the sacrifice of thy praise, and of their healt: that al people maye knowe that thou onely arte God in all the earth.

And immediatlye, Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fil the graue yf they had made with earth afoze it was lyghte, & bad his wyfe prepare a feaste, and to make ready all thinges that were necessarye for meate, to such as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slaine and meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remayne with him two weekes. As for al the good yf he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, & made this wrytynge, that the halfe which remained, shulde fall vnto Tobias after they death.

The. xi. Chapter.

The Angell goeth to Gabelus at the desyre of Tobias: whych deliuereth the letter, and receaueth the monye.

Then Tobias called vnto hym the Angell whom he thoughte to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azaryas, I praye the herken vnto my wordes: yf I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shal not deserue thy prouydence. Neuer thelesse, I beseeche the yf thou wylte take the beastes & the seruantes, & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the cytye of Medes, & deliuer hym his hande wrytynge, & receaue the mony of hym, & praye hym to come to my maryage. For thou knowest thy selfe, yf my father dothe nombe the dayes: & yf I tarie one daye to longe, he wyl be soze in his mynde. Nowe seyst thou how earnestlye Raguel hath requyred me, so that I can not save hym naye.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two camels, and wente vnto Rages the cytye of the Medes: & when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hande wrytynge, and receaued all the monye. He tolde hym also of Tobias the sonne of Toby, howe all thynge had happened, & caused hym to come wyth hym to the maryage. Nowe when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sitting at the table: & he leaped vp, & they kissed one another: and Gabelus wepte, & prayled God, and sayde: the blessinge of the God of Israel, haue thou for thou arte the sonne of a right vertuous and iuste man, & of one that feareth the God, and geneth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyf and youre elders, that ye maye se your children & youre childers chyldzen, vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion, & youre seed be blessed of the God of Israel, whych he ragyneth wylde with oute ende. And when they all had sayde Amen: they wente to the feaste, but wyth the feare of the Lorde helde they the feaste of the maryage.

The. x. Chapter.

Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the taryng of theyr sonne, Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

Nowe whyle yonge Tobias made long taryng by reason of y marriage his father was ful of care and heauynesse, and thought what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so long? O wyf

Why shulde he be kepte so long there? Par-adventure Gabelus is dead, and no man wyl geue him the mony. Thus beganne he to be very sorrowful, he and Anna his wyfe with him, and beganne to weepe bothe together, because their sonne was not come againe vnto them at the daye appointed. As for his mother, she we-pte with dyscomfutable teares and sayde: Allome my sonne: Oh what ailed vs to sende the awaye into a straunge countrey, thou lycht of oure eyes, thou staffe of oure age, thou comfort of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generacyon: Seinge all the thynges y we haue are onely in the we shulde not haue sente the awaye from vs.

Then Tobys comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted, oure sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sente hym wythall is faythfull ynoughe. Neuerthelesse, he might in no wise be comforted but day lye wente oute, looked aboute, and went aboute all the stretes, whereby he thoughte he shulde come againe: that (if it were possible) he might se him commynge a farre of. But Raguel said vnto his sonne in lawe: Dary heare, & I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias to tell him that thou arte in good health. Tobias said vnto him: I am sure, y my father, & my mother counte every day, & y their hertes are soye.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias wyth manye wordes, and wold in no wyse heare him he deliuered Sara vnto him, & the halfe parte of all his good, in seruantes, and hande may-dens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kyne, & much mony, & so sente him awaye fro him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holye Angell of the Lorde be with you in poure iourneys, & bypnye you forth safe and sounde, that ye may finde al thynges in good case wyth poure elders, & that myne eyes maye se poure chyldren afoze I dye.
So the elders embraced the daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhorteinge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husband, to rule wel her household, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe fawtlesse.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias leuynge hys wyfe and household in the citye, cometh befoze with the Angell. The dreame of his mother looking after her sonne. He is ioyfully receaued of his father and mother. Sara cometh seuen dayes after.

They were now goynge home warde agayne, vppon the. xi. daye, they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninue.
And the Angell sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the, we toweyll go befoze, & let the household wyth thy wyfe & the cattell come softe and fayer after vs. And when Tobias was contente y they shulde go befoze, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gaule of the spyde wyth the, for it shal be necessarye. So Tobias toke of y gaule, & they went their way.
But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, frome whence she might se farre about her. And while she was waytynge there, for hys commynge, she looked a farre of and at none she perceaued her sonne commynge, and ranne & told her husband sayinge: Beholde thy sonne cometh. And Ra-phael said vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commeste into the house, immediatly worshype the Lorde thy God, and geue thanckes vnto him: then go to thy father, and kisse him, and stricke hys eyes ouer with the gall of the spyde, y thou hast brought with y. For be sure, that his eyes shall streyghte waye be opened, and thy father shall se the lycht of heauen, and shal reioyce at the syght of the. Then the dog y had bene with them in theyr iourney, ranne befoze, & came as a messenger, and wagged his taile for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne and strombled with hys feete, and gaue a seruaunte hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed hym, he and his wyfe and they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Nowe when they had worshipped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of y fishes gal, & annointed his fathers eyes: & taried halfe an houre, & then began the blemyshe to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene y whyte skyn of an egge: which Tobias toke, and drew from his eyes: and immediatly he receaued his sight.

Then they prayled God, he and hys wyfe and al they that knew him. And Tobias sayd: O Lorde God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thanckes, for y hast chastened me, and made me hole. And loo nowe I do se my sonne Tobias.
After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sounde wyth all the household & cattell, with Camels and muche moneye of hys wyues, and with the moneye that he had recea-ued of Gabelus, & he tolde hys father & his mother all the benefytes, whych God had done for hym, by the man that led him. Achyo: also and Rabath, Tobias sister sonnes came, and were glad, and reioled with hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, & and were ryghte ioyfull euerychone.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias rekened vnto his father the pleasures that the Angell dyd hym. He offered vnto the Angell halfe the goodes that he brought wyth hym.

Then Tobias called hys sonne vnto him and sayde: What may we geue this holy man, that went with the?
Tobias answered hys father and sayde: Father, what rewarde shall we geue him? O: what thyng can deserue his benefytes? He hath bene my guide, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the mony from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he dyone the cuel spyde from her, he hath bene an occasyon of gladnesse to her father, and mother: he deli-uered me, that I was not deuoured of the spyde: he hath made the to se the lycht of heauen, yea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Howe shulde we worchely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, y thou wylte desire him, yf haplye he wyl vouchsafe, to take with hym the halfe of al that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, toke him aspyde, and beganne to pray hym, that he wolde be contente to take in good worth the halfe parte of all that they had broughte.

When sayde he secretly vnto them. Praise ye the God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto him befoze all men lypunge, for he hath shewed his mercye vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges secreete, but to shewe and prayse the woorkes of God, it is an honourable thing. Prayer is good with fastyng, and mercye is better then to hoorde vp treasures of golde. For mercye deliuereth from death, clenseth synne, and causeth to finde euerlasting lyf. But they þo sinne & vnrigh- teousnesse, are the enemies of their owne soule.

Wherfoze I tell you the truthe, and wyll hyde nothyng from you. When thou prayedest with teares, and buryedest the dead, and leste thy dyner, & hyddest the dead in thy house vpon the daye time, that thou myghtest burye the in the nyght: I offered thy prayer befoze the Lord. And because thou wast accepte and beloued of God, it was necessarye, that temptacyon shuld trye the. And nowe hath the Lord sente me to heale the & to deliuer Sara thy sones wyfe fro the euil sprete. For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seuen that stande befoze God.

When they hearde this, they were soze a- frayed, and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayde the Angel Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene with you, it is the wyl of God: geue praise and thankes vnto hym.

And when he had spoken those wordes, he was taken awaye oute of thei syghte, so that they sawe him nomoore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces, by the space of thre houres, & prayed God, when they arose vp they tolde all hys wonderous woorkes.

The. xliii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias the elder geueth thankes vnto God.

When olde Tobias opened his mouth and prayed the Lord and sayde: Create arte thou O lord for euermore, and thy kyngedome worlde without ende: for thou scourgest & healest, thou ledest vnto hel, and byngest out agayne: & there is none that maye escape thyne hande. O geue thankes vnto the Lord, ye chyldren of Israel, & praise him in the syghte of the heathen. For among the heathen whych know hym not hath he scattered you, to the intent þe shalde shewe furthe hys meruelous woorkes, and cause them for to know, that there is none other God I myghte but he. He that cha- tenech vs for oure mysdoes, & for his owne mer- cy sake shal he saue vs.

Consyder then, howe he hath dealte wth you, and prayse hym with feare and drede, and magnifye the euerlastyng kyng in your wo:

kes I wyll prayse hym euen in the lande of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiestie vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfoze O ye sinners, & do righteousnes befoze God, & be sure þe wyl shewe his mercye vpon you. As for me, and my soule, we wil reioyce in God. O praise the Lord all ye hys chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, & be thankfull vnto hym, O Jeru- salem þe cytie of God, the Lord hath punyshed the for the woorkes of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lord in thy good thynges, & geue tha- kes to the euerlastyng God, þe maye buylde vp his tabernacle agayne in the, þe maye call agayne vnto the, al such as be in captiuitie, and þe thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. With a fayer light shalt thou shyne, and al the endes of the world shal honour þe. The people shal come vnto the from farre, they shal bynge gyftes, and worshyppe the Lord in the, and thy lande shal they haue for a Sanctuarie, for they shal call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that dyspyle the, and all that blaspheme the, shal be condempned: but blessed shall they be that buylde the vp. As for the thou shalt reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shal be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all that loue the and that be glad of thy peace. Praise thou the Lord O my soule, for the Lord oure God hath deli- uered his citie Jerusalem from al her troubles. I wyll counte my selfe happye, yf my seed re- mayne to se the clearnesse of Jerusalem. The gates of Jerusalem shal be buylde wyth Sa- phyre, & Smaragde, and all the compass of her walles w precious stones. Al her stretes shal be paved w white marble stone, & in al the streets shal Alle luya be songe. Praise be the Lord, whiche hath exalted her, þe his kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

The. xliii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias prophesyeth the destruction of Ninue. & to whom returneth to Raguell after the desesse of hys father & mother.

And after þe Tobias had gotten his sight agayne, he lpyed. xlii. yeres, & sawe his chylders chyldren. Nowe when he was, C. & ii. yere old, he died: & was buried honourablye in Ninue. For whē he was. lvi. yeres of age he lost the syghte of his eyes, & whē he was lx. yere old, he gat his syghte agayne. The resydue of hys lyfe led he in ioye, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in peace. But in the houre of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, & vii. yonge spryngaldes hys sonnes & chyldren, & sayde vnto them: The destruccyon of Ninue is at hande, for the worde of the Lord cannot fayne: and our brythre þe are scattered out of the land of Israel, shal come thether agayne. And þe hole lāde of it þe hath ben wast, shal be fil- led: & the house of God þe was bzent in it, shal be buylde agayne: & all such as feare God, shal re- turne thether: þe heathen also shal for sake thei- ydolles and come to Jerusalem, & dwel there, & all the kynges of the earthe shal be glad of her, and worshyppe the Lord God of Israel.

And therfoze

And therfore my chyldren, heare poure father: serue the Lorde in the truth, seke after his wyll, and do the thyng that pleaseth hym. Commaunde your chyldren, that they do right true almes: be myndeful of God, and euer to be thankefull vnto hym in truth, & with al theyr power: heare me now therfore my chyldren, and abyde not heare: but in what dape soeuer ye haue buryed your mother besyd me, get you from hence. For I se that the wyckednesse of it shall byynge it to destruccyon and ende.

After the death of hys mother, Tobias departed awaye from Ninue, with his wyfe and chyldren, & wyth his chylders chyldren, & came agayne to his father & mother in lawe, & found them hole & in good age, & toke the care of them. And he closed their eyes, & was heyre vnto Ragules goodes, & sawe the fyfte generacion, and hys chylders chyldren. And when he was. xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, & his kynfolkes buryed hym. And all hys poste rite continued in a good lyfe, & holy couersacion so that they were loued & accepted both of God and man: and of all the people of the lande.

The fyfte Chapter.

The buyldyng of Egbathanis. The victorie of Nabuchodonosor against Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are dyspyssed.

Arpharat the kyng of the Medes subdued manye people vnto hys dominion, and buylded a noble stronge cytye, whych he called Egbathanis: The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, seuentye cubites hyghe, and thyrtye cubites brode. He made towres there vpon an hundred cubytes hye. But vpon the foure corners euery syde was twentye foote broad. He made the portes in the heygth, lyke as the towres. This kyng trusted in hys myghty hoost, and in his glourous charettes.

So in the tweluenth yere of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians (whych raygned in the great cytye of Ninue) foughte agaynst Arpharat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Bagau, betwixt Euphrates & Tygrys, and Jadasan in the felde of Egypt the kyng of the Elykes.

Then was the kyngedome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his hert was lyfte vp: and he came vnto all them that dwelt in Elypta, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the heathen that dwelt in Carmel & Cedar, & to suche as dwelt in Samarie in the great felde of Elydon, to all them that dwelt in Samaria, and beyond the river of Iordane vnto Jerusalem and the hole lande of Iesse, vnto the mountaynes of Elyon. And all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consent wolde not agre vnto him, and sent the messengers agayne emptye and put them awaye wythout honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indygnacion at all those landes, and swore by hys throne, & by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreyes.

The ii. Chapter.

Holofernes is sente of Nabuchodonosor to subdue all the world, The preparacion and perfute of Holofernes.

In the thyrtyeth yere of kyng Nabuchodonosor, vpon the twelue day of the fyfte moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defende him selfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, al his captaynes, and men of warre and shewed them hys secrete counsaile, and tolde them that his purpose was, to byynge the hole earthe vnder his domynyon. Nowe when they were all contente with hys sayinge, Nabuchodonosor the kyng called Holofernes, the chefe captayne of hys warres, and sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the Weste, and specially agaynst those that haue dyspyssed my commaundemente. Thou shalte spare no realme, all stronge cyties shalte thou byynge in subieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes, and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldiers vnto the hooste (lyke as the kyng commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtyng men vpon foote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All hys ordynance sente he afore w an innumerable multytude of camels: so that the hooste was well prouyded for with oren, and small cattell, and that without number. He caused corne to be prepared oute of all Syria for his hooste. Muche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he tooke hys iourneye, he and all hys hooste with charettes, horsemen, & archers, of whome there were so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the greshoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, whych lye vpon the lefte syde of Elypta: & so he wente vp into all theyr castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welthie citie of Belothus, he brake it downe and spoiled all the chyldren of Charis, and the Ismaelytes, whych lape towarde the wyldernes, and vpon the South syde of the lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the highe cities that were there, from the broke of Hambré tyl a mā come to the see: & he tooke the borders in frome Elypta, vnto the coastes of Iaphet towarde the South: he caried awaye all the Medes, and spoiled all theyr goodes, and whosoever wythstode hym he slewe them with the swerde.

After this he wnt downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and byente vp al the corne and all the trees, and caused the dynes to be cut downe. And the seate of him fell vpon al them that dwelt vpon the earth.

The.iii. Chapter.

*¶ Kynges become wyllyngly subiecte to Holofernes.
The tyrannye and crueltie of hym.*

And the kynges and princes of al cytys and landes sente theyr Embassadors: namelpe they of Syria, & Mesopotamia, Siria, Sobal: and Lybea, and Cecilia, which came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease toward vs. It is better for vs to serue the greates kyng Nabuchodonosor wthoure lyes, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we shulde dye and be slayne: and receaue great hurte. All oure cytys and possessyons, al mountaynes and hylles, feldeg, great and small cartell, shepe goates, horses, and camels, all oure goodes, and householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subieccpō be it altogether. We oure selues also, & oure chyldren wyl be thynne owne, come vnto vs a peceable lord, and vse oure seruyce at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes, downe from the mountaynes wth horsemen, & greates power, and conquered all stronge defended cytys and all that dwelte in the lande and out of al cyties he tooke stronge men, and soche as were mete for the warre to helpe him. There came suche a feare also vpon those countreys, that the indwellers of all the cities, the princes and rulers, and the people together wente forth to mete him as he came, & receaued hym honourably wth garlandes, & torches, & daunces, tabzettes & pipes.

¶ Asuerthelesse, though they dyd this, yet myght they no swage hys rigorous stomache: but he destroyed their cities, and hewed downe their woodes. For Nabuchodonosor the kyng had commaunded hym that he shulde roote out all the goddes of the land: to the intente that he onely might be called and taken for the god of the nacions: which Holofernes wth his power brought vnder him. So went he thowowe Siria, Sobal, and thowowe all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, and came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa, and Septopolie, and toke theyr cyties and remayned there thyrtye dayes wherein he caused all the hole multitude of hys host to be gathered together.

The.iiii. Chapter.

*¶ Israel requyeth helpe of God, agaynst Holofernes.
They faste and praye.*

When the chyldren of Israel ydwelt in Jewry herd this, they were soze afrayde of hym. There came suche tremblyng also & feare vpon them that they lozowed he shuld do vnto the cytie of Jerusalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cytys and their temples. So they sent into all Samaria round aboute vnto Jerycho, toke in and occupped all the toppes of the mountaynes, and made faste the townes wth walles, and prepared corne, for them agaynst the battayle.

and vnto all those by whome men myght haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of y mountaynes, wherby there myght be anye waye and passage to Jerusalem, & that they shulde holde dyligent watche where anye strayte was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israel dyd as Eliachim the preaste of the Lorde had commaunded them. And al the people cryed earnestly, and humbled theyr soules wth fastynges and prayers, they and their wyues. The preastes put on beery clothes, and layde the yonge babes befoze the temple of the Lorde, and couered the aulter of the Lorde wth an beery cloth. And wth one accord they cried vnto the Lorde God of Israel, that theyr chyldren shulde not be geuen into a praye, and theyr wyues into a spoyle, that their cytys shulde not be layed waste, and that theyr Sanctuary shulde not be unhalowed, and so they to be ashamed and rebuke vnto the heathen.

Then Eliachim the hye preast of the Lorde wente rounde aboute al Israel: and spake vnto the saying: Be ye sure, that the Lorde wyl heare your petycyons, yf ye contynue stedfaste in fastynges and prayers in the sygh te of the Lorde. Remembze Moyses the seruaunt of the Lorde, whiche ouerthrew the Amelechites (that trusted in their myghte and power, in their hoste in their shylde, in theyr charrettes & horsemen) not wth weapons, but wth holy prayers. Euen so shall all the enemies of Israel be, yf ye continue in thys worcke that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacyon, they continued in prayer befoze the Lorde: In so muche that they which offered burnt sacrifices vnto the Lorde offered the offerynges vnto the Lorde, beyng araied in beery clothes, & had aches vpon their heades. And they al besought God from theyr hole herte, yf he wolde viset his people of Israel.

The.v. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes is discontented wth the Jewes. Achior sheweth Holofernes the merueles of God done vnto the Jewes: for the which thing the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry wth hym.

And worde came to Holofernes the prince of the warre of the Assyrians that the chyldre of Israel prepared them selues to make resistance, & howe they had stopped the wayes betwixt the mountaynes. Then was he extredynge wroth, and called all the princes of Moab, and the captaynes of Ammon, and sayd vnto them: Tell me, what people is this, that kepeth in the mountaynes? What maner of cities are they? What is theyr power? What maner of hoste haue they? Who is theyr captayne? And why do they dyspyle vs (more then all those that dwell in the Ester) and come not forth to meete vs, that they myghte erre out wth peace? Then Achior the captayne of al the Ammonytes answered, and sayde: Hye, yf please the to heare, I wyl tel the truth befoze y concerning this people ydwell in the mountaynes, and there shall na lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generation of y Chal-dees, they dwell first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde wolde not folow the goddes of theyr fathers þe were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke they the custome of theyr forefathers (whiche had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heauen & earth: whiche also commaunded them that they wolde goo from thence, and dwel at Haran. Now when there came a dertþ into the hole lande, they went downe to Egypt and there they dwelte foure hundred yeres, in the whiche they multiplied greatly, that theyr hoste myghte not be nombred. And when the kyng of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in buydyng of hys cyties wþ makyng of clate and brycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lord, whiche punyshed þe hole lande of Egypt with dyuers plagues.

Nowe when the kyng of Egypt let them goo theyr waye, and the plage ceased, and then folowed after them, to take them and to bryng them agayne into his seruyce, whyle they were slpyng a waye, the God of heauen opened the see so that the waters stode faste vpon bothe sydes as a wall, and these wente thowre the botome of the see drye thodde. In the whiche place when an innumerable people of þe Egyptians, folowed vpon them, they wer so ouerwhelmed with the waters: that there remayned non one to tell them that came after, howe it happened. So when this people was passed thowre the red see, they came into the wildernes of mount Synay, where neuer man myghte dwell afore, and wher the sonne of man neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for theim, that they myghte drinke, and for the yeres had they meat from heuen. Whersoeuer they went (without bowe and arrow, without buckler or sword) their god fought for them, & caused the to haue the victorie. Yea, no man was hable to hurt this people, except it were, þe they departed vnfaithfully from the worshypping of þe Lord their God. But as oft as they worshipped any other helyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusion. Neuerthelesse, as ofte as they were led for theyr departing from þe worshypp of their God, the same god of heauen gaue them power and strengthe to withstande theyr enemyes.

Moreover, they slue the kyng of the Canaanites, Jebusites, Hethites, Gyprians, and Amozites, & al the myghtie in Hesebon and toke theyr landes and cyties in possession: and so longe as they synned not in the syghte of theyr God, it went well wþ them, for theyr God hated vnpygheousnesse. For in tymes past when they went oute of the waye whiche God had geuen them, that they shoulde walke in, they were destroyed in dyuers battayles of many nacions, and many of them were carped awaye prysoners vnto a straunge countrey. But nowe lately they haue turned themselues agayne vnto the Lord theyr God, & are come together agayn out of the countreies where they were scattered abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwel therein: and as for Jerusalem where þe Sanctuarie is, they haue it agayne in possession.

And therfore my Lord, make diligent inquiry, yf this people haue done wyckednes in the syght of theyr God, then let vs goo vpon agaynst them, for doubtelesse theyr God shal deliuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not displeased their God, we shal not be hable to withstande them, for theyr God shal defende them: and so shal we be a shame to all the worlde.

Now when Achior had spokē out these wordes all the great men of Holofernes wer wroth and thought to slay hym, & said one to another What is he this, that dare saye, þe chyldren of Israel are hable to withstand Nabuchodonosor the kyng, & his hoste: where as they are vnto weapened people, without strengthe, or vnderstandyng of the feates of warre: That Achior therfore mape know that he hath disceined vs, we wyl go vpon to the mountaynes: when þe myghtye men of theim are taken, he also shalbe stricke with the sword, that all people mape know, yf Nabuchodonosor is the god of the earth, & that there is none other withoute hym.

¶ The vi Chapter.

¶ Achior is comytted into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

When they had lefte of speaking, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, & said vnto Achior: For so much as þu hast prophesied vnto vs sayng: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of theyr God, I wyl shewe the þe there is no god but Nabuchodonosor. Yee, whē we slay them all as one man, & also shalte perishe with them thowre the sword of the Assirians, & all Israel shalbe destroyed wþ the, and then þu shalte fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the lord of the whole earth. Then shal þe sword of my knyght hode go thowre thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe stycke amonge the wounded of Israel, & shalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be utterly destroyed with theim. But yf thou thynkest thy prophesy to be true, why dost þe then change thy colour why art thou afearde? Thynkest þe that my wordes ar not hable to be perfourmed? But that thou maist knowe that þu shalte fele these thynges with them, behold: from this houre forth wyl I sende the to ponde people, that when the punyishment of my sword (whiche they haue worthely deserved) falleth vpon the thou mayst be punyshed with them.

So Holofernes commaunded hys seruantes to take Achior, & carpe hym to Bethulpa, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruantes tooke hym and wente thowre the playne felde. But when they drewe nygh vnto the mountaynes, the synge casters came out agaynst them. Neuerthelesse, they gat them a way by the syde of the mountayne, and bounde Achior hande and foote to a tree, and so left hym bounde with wy thes, and turned agayne vnto theyr Lorde.

Notwithstandynge, the chyldren of Israell wente downe from Bethulia, came vnto hym loosed hym, broughte hym into Bethulia: sette hym in the myddst of the people, and asked hym what the matter was, that the Assyrians had lefte hym bounde.

C Asias, the sonne of Micha: of the trybe Symeon, and Charmin (whiche is also called Gothoniell) were the principall rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the Sena toures, & befoze them all: he tolde them, what aunswere he gaue Holofernes to þe thynge that he asked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayng: & how Holofernes hym selfe was wrothe, & commaunded hym for þe same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelytes: that when he ouercame þe chyldren of Israell, he myght commaunde Achior also to be put to deathe with dyuers tormentes, because he sayde the God of heauen is theyr defender. And when Achior had playne-lye tolde oute all these thynges, all the people fel downe vpon theyr faces, praisynge the Lord and poured oute theyr prayes together vnto the Lorde, wyth a generall complaynt and wepyng, and sayde: O Lorde God of heauen and of earthe, beholde theyr pyde: and looke vpon oure lowlynesse, & consyder howe it standeth wth thy saintes, & make it to be knowne, that þe for sakest not those, whiche holde them fast: by the and howe that thou byngest them lowe þe presume of them selues, & make theyr host in theyr owne strenght. So when the wepyng & prayer of the people (whych the had made the hole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achior sayng: The God of oure fathers, whose power and strengthe thou haste prayed, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather see theyr destruction. When the Lorde our God then shall geue his seruauntes this lyberte: God be also with the amonge vs: so þe if it please the, thou with all thyne, maist dwell with vs.

Now when Asias had ended the counsaile: he toke hym into his house, and made a greate supper, called the elders to it: & so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together which made theyr prayes all the night longe in þe congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The vii. Chapter.

Withulia is beseged of Holofernes. The people requirerth help of God. They of Bethulia wold geue ouer the cite for want of water. The prayer of the people with teares & lamentacyon.

In the nexte daye Holofernes commaunded his hoste to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There was an. C. and. xx. myghtynge men on fote, and. xxii. horsemen, besyde the preparynge of them that were wonne: and came to them on euery syde out of the countreyes & cyties whiche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle agaynst the Israelytes, and came on the hyl side, vnto the top þe loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place whiche is called Bel-ma, vnto Chelmon þe lyeth toward Esdrelon.

Nowe when the chyldren of Israell sawe so greate a multitude of the Assyrians, they fell downe flat vpon the ground, strowed ashes vpon theyr heades, & prayed with one accorde, þe the God of Israel woulde shewe his mercye vpon his people. And so they toke theyr weapons and sat betwene the mountaynes in the narrow place, & kepte the waye, daye and nyghte. But whyle Holofernes was goynge about, he found the water sprynge, whiche from the South syde was conueyed into the cytie by a condyte: this commaunded he to dysrecte an other waye, and to cut theyr condyte in sonder. There were welles also not farre from þe walles, whiche they used secretly, moze for pleasure then for necessitye.

Then wente the Amorytes, and the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and said: The chyldren of Israel truste nether in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes & hylles. That thou mayst ouercome them therfore, withoute the stryking of any battaile, let men to kepe the welles, & they drawe no water oute of them: so shalt thou destroye them withoute swearde, or at the leste they shall be so feble, that they must be sayne to geue ouer the cytie, which they thinke not hable to be wonne: for so much as it lyeth in the mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and all his menne of warre, and he sette an hundred that euery well rounde aboute.

And when this watche had endured twentye daies, the Cyterns and al þe had water, sayled them þe dwelte in the cytie of Bethulia, so þe in the hole cytie they had not drynke ynoughe for one day, for the people had water geuen the daye in a measure. Then came the menne and women, yong persones, & chyldren all vnto Asias, and sayd all with one voyce: God be indge bet wyrt vs and the, for thou hast delt euell wth vs: thou woldest not speake peccably wyth the kynge of þe Assyrians, therfore hath the God solde vs in their handes, & there is no man to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe befoze theyr eyes in thriste and great destruction. Therfore gather nowe together all the people that be in the cytie, & we maye all pelde oure selues wplynglye vnto the people of Holofernes, for better it is that we be captiue and prayse þe Lorde with oure lyues, then to be slayne and perished, and to be laughed to scoorne & shamed of euery man, when we se our wyues & chyldren dye befoze oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this day to recoorde: & the God of our fathers (which punyssheth vs accordynge to the deservynge of oure synnes) and geue pon warnynge, that we geue vp the cytie nowe into the power of Holofernes hoste, that our ende maye be shorte with the swearde, whiche els shall endure longe, for want of water and for thyrste.

When they had spoken out these wordes, there was a greate wepyng & howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man: and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto god with one voyce, sayng: we haue sinned with our fathers we we haue done amysse, we haue delte wyckedly. Thou arte gracious, haue mercye vpon vs: pynne oure vneyghtheousnesse wth thynne owne scourge, and geue not those ouer þ knowlage þ vnto a people whiche know þ not, lest they say amonge the heathen: where is they? God.

And when they were so werpe with thys cryng and weppng, that they helde they? tonges. Othas stode vp with watry eyes, and saide: O take good heres vnto you, (dere bryethen) and be of good chere, and let vs wayt yet these fyue dayes for mercye of the Lorde peradventure he shall put away his indygnacyon, and geue glo ry vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not whē these fyue dayes are paste, we shall dooe as ye haue sayde.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the vertuous woman Iudith: which reprimeth the auncy- entes because they tempted the Lorde. She also moueth them to encourage and herten the people, and sheweth her counsel against the enemies of the Jewes.

And it happened when these wordes came to the eares of Iudith a wyd- dow, whiche was þ daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idox, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Othas, the sonne of Elay, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedron, þ sonne of Rapphoim, the sonne of Achirob the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Euan, þ sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, þ sonne of Simeon the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly haruest. For whyle he was bindyng the sheues together in the feld the heate came vpon his head, and he died at Bethulia, his cytie, and there was he buried besyde his fathers.

Nowe was Iudith his desolate wyddowe the yeres and syxe monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a pceue chambze, where she dwelt, being closed in with her maydens. She ware a smocke of heare and fasted all the daies of her lyfe, excepte the Sab bothes, and newe mones: & the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayer and bewtyful person. Her husband also had left her greates riches, a plenteous household, great vnumoueable possessions and many catel. This Iudith was a woman of a very good repoyte with euery one, for she feared the Lorde greatly, and there was no bodye þ spake anenell worde of her.

When this Iudith heard, howe Othas had promysed the people, that after the fyfte day he wold geue vp the cytie vnto the Assyrans, she sent for the elders Chambyr, and Charmyr, and when they came to her, she saide, what thyng is this, wherein Othas hath consented, yf God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer þ cytie to the Assyrans. What are ye þ ye tempt the Lorde? This deuylce optayneth no mercye of God, but prouoketh hym to wrath & dyspleasure. Wyl ye let the mercye of the Lorde a tyme, and appointe hym a daye after your wyll?

Reuert thelesse, for so muche as the Lorde is pacyente, let vs rather repente, pourynge oute teares, and besechyng hym of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, neither wyl he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hartely fal downe before hym, & serue hym with a meke spete, and w weppng eyes saye vnto the Lorde þ he deale with vs accordyng to his owne wyll and mercye: þ lyke as our herte is nowe vexed, and brought lowe thorow the pyde of them, it maye be so comforted thowoe his grace: in somuche as we folow not the synnes of our fathers, whiche forsoke they? God, & worshipped other goddes: for the which synne they perished with the sword, were spoiled and brought to shame, of all they? enemies. As for vs we knowe none other God but onely him, for whose comforte let vs tary with me here. He shal requyre and make inquisition for our bloude, from the veracions of our enemies he shall bring downe all the heathen, that ryse vp agaynst vs, and put them to dishonour, eue the Lorde our God.

Therfore dere bryethen, seying ye are the honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whome all the people haue respecte, and vpon whome the lyfe of the people standeth, lyfte vp they? heres wyth your exhortacyon that they maye call to remembraunce, howe our fathers also in tymes past were tempted, þ they myghte be proued, yf they worshipped they? God a ryghte. They ought to remember, howe our father Abraham beyng tempted, and tryed thowoe many trybulacions, was founde a louer: and frende of God. So was Isahac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they? pleased God being tryed thowoe many troubles, wer found stedfaste in saythe. Agayne, they that receyued not they? temptacions with the feare of God: but putte theim selues forth, with vnpatyency and murmurynge agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shuld not we vnder take to be auenged for the thyng þ is done vnto vs, but consyder: that all these punyshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdoes. Seleuyng also that this correccyon commeth vnto vs (as to the seruantes of God) for amendemente, and not for oure destruccyon.

Then sayde Othas, and the elders vnto Iudith: all that thou spakest, is true: and no man can reprove thy wordes. Pray þ for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman, & fearest God. And Iudith sayde vnto them: Seynge ye knowe þ my wordes are of God, then proue my counceyl & deuise, yf it be of God: & beseech god þ he wil bring my counceyl to good end.

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stande thys nyghte before the porte, and I wyl gooe forth wyth Abiamy mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God: that he wyl graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyons of it: tyll I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothing els but pray vnto the Lorde your God for me. Then Othas, the pynce of the people of Iuda, saide vnto her: God shal waye in peace, the Lorde be with the: that that we maye be auenged of our enemyes. And so they wente from her agayne.

The prayer of Iudith for the victorie.

And when they were gone they wape, Iudith went into her closet: put on an hearpe smocke, strawed ashes vpon her head, fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto him saying: O Lorde God of my father * Symeon whiche gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemyes that vsed vyolence & wylfulnesse, and that rauyned the vyrgine and put her to dyshoneste. Thou that gauest theyr wyes into a pray, and theyr daughters into captiuitie, and all theyr pray for a spoyle vnto thy seruantes, whiche bare a zeale vnto þ: helpe me wyddow, O Lorde my God I beseeche the. For thou haste done all thynges from þ: begynning and loke what thou haste taken in hand and deuyled, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlastyng foreknowlage. O loke now vpon the armys of þ: Assyrians lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpon the hoste of the Egyptians, when they beyng weaponed, persecuted thy seruantes, and put theyr truste in theyr charrettes, horsmen: and in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lookedest vpon theyr hoste, castyng a thycke darckenesse before them: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

¶ Euen so Lorde let it go with these, þ: truste in the power & multitude of theyr men of warre in theyr charrets, arrowes, and speares, & know not that þ: only art our God, whiche destroyest warres from the begynning, & that thou arte þ: Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme now, lyke as euer from the begynning, & in thy power byng theyr power to naught: cause theyr myghtie to fall in thy wrath. They make theyr hoste, that they wyl vnhalow and desyle thy Sanctuary and to waste the tabernacle of thy name, & to caste downe þ: horne of thyne altar, with theyr swerd. Byng to passe (O Lorde) þ: the pryde of the enemye be cutte downe with þys owne swerd, that he maye be taken with the snares of his eyes in me, and þ: thou mayst synke hym with þ: lypes of my lone. O geue me a stedfast mynd, that I may dispyle hym and his strength and þ: I maye destroye hym.

¶ This shall byng thy name an euerlastyng remembraunce, of the bande of a woman overthrowyn. For thy power (O Lorde) standeth not in the power of men, neyther haste thou any pleasure in the strengthe of horses. There was neuer proude parson that pleased þ:, but in the prayer of the humble and meke, hath thy pleasure bene evermore.

O thou God of the Heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lord of all creatures, heare me poore woman: callynge vpon the, and puttyng my truste in thy merce. Remembre thy couchaunte. O Lorde: and minyster wordes in my mouth, & stablyshe thy deuyce in my hert that thy house maye contynue styll in holynesse and that all the heauen may knowe that thou art God, and that there is none other but thou

The x. Chapter.

Iudith decketh her selfe to go to Holofernes. The blessing that the elders gaue Iudith. Holofernes is in loue with Iudith.

And when she had leste of cryng vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from þ: place where she had lyen flat before the Lorde: and called her mayden, wente downe into her house, layde the heary cloth from her, put of the garments of her wyddowhode: washed her bodye, anoynted her selfe with precyous thynges, of swete sauoure: brydded & platted her heare: set an houe vpon her head, & put on suche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, sylppers vpon her fete, armeletes: spanges, earynges: syngerynges, & decked her selfe with all her best aray.

The Lorde gaue her also a special bewtye & fayernesse (for all this decking of her selfe, was not done for any voluptuousnesse, & pleasure of the fleshe: but of a ryght discrecyon and vertue therfore dyd the Lorde increase her beuty:) so that she was excedyng ampyble, & well fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wyne, a pot with oyle: pottage, cake bzeade and cheese, & went her waye.

¶ Nowe when she came: to the porte of the cytie, she founde Olyas, and the elders of the cytie waytyng there. Whiche when they sawe her, they were astonied, & marvelled greatly at her bewty. Neuerthelesse, they asked no questy on at her, but let her goo, sayng: The God of oure fathers geue the þys grace, and with þys power perfourme all þ: deuyce of thy hert, that Ierusalem maye reioyce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombze of the holy & ryghteous. And all they that wer there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made her prayer vnto the Lord, and went out at þ: porte she and her mayde.

¶ And as she was goynge downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the spyng of þ: daye, the spyers of the Assyrians met with her, and toke her, sayng: whence comest thou? O whether goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of þ: Hebzeus, & am fled from them: for I know that they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thought scozne to yelde them selues vnto you, that they myghte fynde mirce in youre syght. Therfore haue I deuyled by my selfe after this maner: I wyl go before the Prince Holofernes, & tell hym all thes secretes, and wyl shewe hym, how he may come by them and wyne them, so that not one man of his hoste shall peryshe.

¶ And when these menne had heard her wordes, & conspyred her fayre face they were astonied (for they wondred at her excellent bewty) & sayde vnto her: Thou haste saurd thy lyfe by syndynge out this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to oure Lorde: & be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreat the well, and thou shalt please hym at the herte So they

So they brought her into Holofernes pauplyon, and tolde hym of her. Nowe when she came in before hym, immediatly he was overcome: and taken with her bewtie. Then saide his ser-uautes: who wolde despyse the people of Jerusalem, that haue so fayre women? Shuld we not by reason fyghte agaynst theim for these? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes, sytting in a canape, that was wrought of purple sylke: gold amaragde, & peryous stones, she looked faste vpon hym and fell downe vpon the earth. And Holofernes seruautes toke her vp agayne at theyr Lozdes commaundement.

The. xi. Chapter.

Holofernes requirith of Iudith the cause of her coming: which griueth hym a fittell answer.

Ihen sayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne herse, for I neuer hurte man & wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge.

As for thy people, yf they had not despyed me I shulde not haue lyfte vp my speare agaynst them. But tell me nowe, what is the cause that thou art departed from them, and wherefore art thou come vnto vs.

And Iudith sayde vnto hym: Syr, under-stande the wordes of thy handmayden, for yf thou wilt do after the wordes of thy handmay-den, the Lozde shall bypnyng thy matter to a prosperous effect. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lozde of the lande lyueth, & as truly as hys power lyueth, which is in the to & punishment of all men that go wronge, all men shall not only be subdued vnto hym thow to the, but all & beastes of the felde. For all the people spake of thy pudent actiue: and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou only arte good and myghty in all his kyngdome, and thy dyscrecyon is comen ded in all landes.

The thyng is manifest also, that Achyoz spake, and it is wel knowe, what thou commaun-dest to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a certtie, that our God is so wrath with vs (by the reason of our synnes) that he hath shewed by hys Prophetes vnto the people, howe & for they synnes he wyl deliuer them ouer vnto & enemye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israell, knowe that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are soze afrayed of the.

They suffre great hunger also, & for want of water, they are deade now in a maner. More-ouer, they are apoynted to slaye all theyr catell that they maye drynke the bloude of them, and are purposed to spend all the holy ornaments of theyr God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for cozne, wyne, and oyle. Seyng nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, & they must nedes be destroyed. Whiche when I thy handmayden percepued, I fled from them and the Lozde hath sente me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshipped God euen now here besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I wyl make my prayer vnto God, & he shal tell me when he wyl rewarde them theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bypnyng & thow to the middest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt haue all & people of Israell, as the shepe withoute a shepherd: there shal not so much as one dogge barke agaynst the, for these thynges are shewed me, by & prouidence of God: & for so much as God is displeased with the, he hath set me to tel the & same

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruautes, which merueled at & wysdome of her, & sayde one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earth, in bewtye & discrecyon of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hether be-foze thy people that thou mayst geue them into our handes. And for so much as thy promise is good, yf God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and & shalt be excellent and great in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shal be spoken of in all the lande.

The. xii. Chapter.

Holofernes commaundeth that Iudith be well intreated. She de-sireth licence to go out in the night season to praye, & obtayneth it. Hagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, and she cometh. Holofernes is drunken.

Ihen commaunded he her to go in where hys treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from his table. Iudith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it, as nowe (lest I displease my God) but wyl eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then saide Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thynges that thou hast brought with the sayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my Lozde thy handmayden shal not spende all this, tyl God haue brought to passe in my hand the thynges that I haue deuyled.

So his seruautes brought her into the tent where as he had appoynted. And as she was goyng in, she despyed that she might haue leaue to go forth by nyght, and before daye to her prayer and to make intercessyon vnto & Lozde. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth into the valley of Bethulia, & washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp & besoughte the Lozde God of Israell: That he wolde pros-pere her waye, for the deliuerance of hys prople. And so she went in, & remained cleane in her tente, tyl she toke her meate in the euening.

Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruautes, & sayde vnto Hagao hys chamberlayne: Go thy way, and counsell this hebrewelle, that she may be wyllyng to consente to kepe company with me.
For it were a shame vnto all & Assyrians that a woman shulde so laughe a man to scorn that she were come from hym vnmeeled withal.

Then went Hagao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Let not the good doughter be afrayde, to come into my Lozde, & she maye be honoured before hym that she maye eate and drynke wyne, and be merce with hym. Unto whome Judith answered: Who am I, that I shoulde save my Lord naye: what so ever is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and looke what is his pleasure, that shall I thinke well done, as longe as I lyve.

D So she stode vp, and decke her selfe wth her apparell, and went in: and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so þe he bent in the delyze toward her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: drynke now and syt downe and be merce, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyl drynke for my mynde is merce to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dyd eate and dranke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merce with her, and dranke more wyne, the euer he dyd afore in all his lyfe.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Holofernes slepeth for very dronkenness, and Judith cutteth of his heade: and gorth therwith to her owne people of whome she is receiued with lope. They geue thanks vnto God for their deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achpor: Whiche mercuri- lly at her seate done vnto Holofernes.

N Owe when it was late in the nyghte his seruantes made hast every man to his lodgyng. And Agao shutte the chambze doozes, and wente his waye, for they were all ouerladen w wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed al dronken, and of very dronkenness fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden to stande wythoute before the doze, and to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed, makynge her praper with teares, & moued her lyppes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue a respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this our, that thou mayest set vp the cytie of Jerusalem, lyke as þe haste promysed. O graunte that by þe I may perfourme the thyng, whiche I haue deuysed thowowe the belefe, that I haue in the.

W And when she had spoken thys, she went to the bedstade, and lowled the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it oute. Then toke she holde of the heary lockes of his heade, and sayd strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre and with that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his head. Then toke she the canapy away, and rolled the deade body asyde. Immedyatly she got her forth, and deliuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, & bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye and so passed by the hoste, and came thowow the valley vnto the porte of the cytie. And Judith cryed a farre vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (saide she) for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed his power vpon Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytie together. And they came all to mete her: lytle and greate, yonge and olde for they thought not that she shoulde haue come so sone: So they lyghted candels, & gathered about her every chone: but she went vp into an hye place & caused scyence to be proclaymed.

When every manne nowe helde his tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God for he hath not dyspyled, nor forsaken them, that put theyr truste in hym, and in me his handmaiden he hath performed his mercy, whiche he promysed vnto þe house of Israel: yee, in my hand this same night hath he slain þe enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, & she shewed it them sayng: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captain of þe Assyrians, & this is the canapy, where in he laye in his dronkenness: where the Lord our God hath slain hym by þe hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord lyueth, his Angell hath kepte me goyng thether, remayninge there, and comming hether again from thence. And the Lord hath not suffered me his handmaiden to be despyled, but withoute any fylthyng of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: and that with greate victoie, so that I am escaped, and deliuered. O geue thanks vnto hym every chone, for he is gracys and his merce endureth for euer.

So they praised the Lord all together, and gaue thanks vnto hym. And to her they sayde The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thowowe þe hath brought our enemies to naught. And Olias the chiefe ruler of þe people of Israel sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lord þe hye God, about all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, the maker of Heauen and earth, whiche hath gupped the a ryghte to wounde and smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemies. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shal neuer come oute of the mouth of men, whiche shall alwaye remembre the power of the Lord: seying thou haste not spared thyne owne selfe, but put the in iopardye: consydering the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so haste helped theyr fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achpor also was called, and he came. Then saide Judith vnto hym: The God of Israel vnto whome thou gauest wytnesse, that he wolde be aduenged of his enemyes, euen he hath thys nyghte thowow my hande: smytten of the head of all the vnfaythfull. And that thou mayest see that it is so, beholde: this is the heade of Holofernes, whiche in his presumptuous pryde: dyspyled the God of the people of Israel, & threatened the with destruccyon, sayng: when the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause the also to be stycte wth the swerde. When Achpor sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde, for very anguysh & feare so that he souned withall.

But after þe he was come again to hym selfe he fell downe before her: and praysed her, sayng: Blessed arte þe of thy God, in al the tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people þe heare of thy name, shal praise þe god of Israel because of the

The. xlii. Chapter.

The counsaile of Judyth. Achior being an heathen man tured to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

Judith said vnto all the people: brethren, heare me. Stoppe vp thys heade vpon our walles, & when the sunne aryseth, take euery man hys weapon, & fall out violently: not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to runne vpon them with violence. When the spyres in the tentes se this, they shal of necessity be compelled to fflye backward, & to rapse vp theyr capayne to the battayle. So when theyr captaynes come into Holofernes paulison, & fynde the dead body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulness shall fall vpon them, & when ye perceyue þ they fflye, folow them without all care, for God shal deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seing þ power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israell, fell of from hys heathen þe belef, and put his trust in God, and let hym self be circumcysed: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israell, and all his pasteryte vnto this daye.

Now as sone as it was day, they styct vp Holofernes head vpon þ walles, & euery man toke his weapon, and so they went out with an horrible crye. When the spies saw þ, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they þ wer within the tent, came befoze his chambze, & made a greateshyng to wake hym vp, because they thoughte with þ noise to haue raised him. For there durst not one of þ Assyrians knocke, go in: or open.

But when the captaynes and prynces: and all the chiefe in the kyng of the Assyrians hoste came together, they sayd vnto the chamberlaynes: Go your way in, and wake hym vp for the myle are crepte out of theyr holes, and dare þ wake vs vnto battayle.

Then went Agao into his chambze, & stode befoze the bed, & clapped with his handes, for he thoughte he had be slepyng with Judith.

But when he had herkened perfectlye with hys eares, and coulde perceyue no sterynge, he wente nygher to the bedde, and lyfte it vp: and then sawe he the deade bodye of Holofernes lyng there without a head, welterd in hys bloud vpon þ earth. Then cryed he wyth loude voyce and with wepyng rent his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lepte oute vnto the people & sayde: one woman of the Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people vnto shame. For loo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hath no heade.

When the chiefe of the Assyrians hoste heard that, they rent theyr clothes, and there fel an intolerable feare and tremblyng vpon them so þ theyr myndes were soze afraid. And there was an exceeding great crye in the hole hoste.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The sight of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after the Israel becometh ryche by the spoiles of the Assyrians. Judith is prayd of Joachim: and of the people.

Nowe when all the hoste heard that Holofernes was headed, theyr mynde & concell fel from hym, and suche a feare came vpon them þ they undertoke to defende theim selues by flyng away: one spake not to another but hanged downe theyr heades, lefte al behynd them: and made haste to escape from the Hebrewes: for they hearde, þ they were hastnyng to come after with theyr weapons, and so they fled by þ waies of the feldest, & thorough al the fore pathes of the dales. And when the chyldren of Israell saw that they fled, they folowed vpon them, & went doune with trompetes blowyng, and making a great crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no order: and kept not them selues together, but fled theyr way. Neuerthelesse the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one company and order, & discomfyted as many as they myght get. And Olias sent messaungers vnto all the cyties & countries of Israel.

So all the regyons and euery cytie sent out theyr best men after the in harnes, & smote the with the sword, tyll they came to the vtmostte parte of theyr borders. And the other þ were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians and toke all, þ they which fled had lefte behynd them, and so they found great good. And they þ came agayne to Bethulia from the battayle, toke w them suche thynges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombre of the catell, and of the costlye Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hygheste, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hygh preaste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia w all the elders that they myght se Judith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to praise her with one voyce, sayng: Thou worsthypp of the cytie of Jerusalem, þ ioye of Israell, þ honoure of our people, þ haste done manly, & thy hert is comforted, because þ haste loued cleynnesse & chastyte, & haste knowen no man but thine owne husband: therfore hath the hand of þ Lord comforted the: & blessed shalt þ be for euer. And all people saide so be it, so be it.

In thys tye dayes coulde the people of Israell scarce gather vp the spoyles of þ Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, & had ben his, specially (whether it were of golde, of syluer, precyous stones, clothynge, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, both women, maydens, & yong people: with pypes and harpes.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The songe of Judith for the victorie. After the victorie obtained: the people cometh to Jerusalem: to worsthypp and praise God.

Then songe Judith thys songe vnto the Lord: Begynne vnto the Lord vpon the tabrettes. syng vnto the Lord vpon the cymbales, & syng vnto hym a newe songe of thankesgeuyng, be ioyfull: and call vpon hys name. It is the Lord that destroyeth warres: euen the Lord is his name. Whiche hath pitched hys tentes in the myddeste of hys people, that he myght deliuer vs from the hande of all our enemyes. Assur came out of the mountaines of the north in the myltitud of his strength. His people ple stopped the water brokes, and they: horses covered þ walles. He purposed to haue bzient vp my lande, & slay my yonge men w the swerde.

W He wold haue carped awaye my chyldren & byrgens into captiuitie, but the Almyghtye Lorde bynded hym, and deliuered hym into þ handes of a woman, which brought hym to confusion. For they: myghtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Tytan þ slue hym, neyther haue the great Gyantes set them selues agaynst hym: but Judyth the daughter of Merary wyth her sayre bewty hath discōfited hym, & brought hym to naught. For she layde awaye her wyddowes garment: and put on the parel of gladnesse to þ reioysing of the chyldren of Israell. She annoynted her face, & bounde vp her heare in an houe to begyle hym. Her sylppers rauyshed his eyes, her bewty captiuated hys mynde, wyth the swerde smote she of hys necke. The Percians were astonied at her stedfastnes, & the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armys of the Assyrians, when my symple appered, dyre of thys. The sonnes of þ daughters haue pearled them thozow & slayn them as fugitiue chyldren: they perysched in the battayle, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs syng a song of thankes gyng vnto þ Lord, a new songe of praise wyl we syng vnto our God: Lorde Lorde, thou art a great God, myghtie in power, whome no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shalde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, & they were made: thou sentest thy spere, & they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundations wyth the waters, the stony rockes shal melt befoze the lyke ware. But they that feare the shal be great wyth the in all thynges. Woe vnto the people, þ ryle vp agaynst my generation, for the Almyghtye Lorde wyl aduenge hym selfe of them, and in the day of Judgement wyl he vylet them. For he shal geue syer and woymes into they: fleshe, that they may burne and fele it for euermore.

After thys it happened, that after the victorye, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue praise and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purifyed, they offred all they: burnt sacrificies, & they: promysed offerynges. And Judyth offered all holofernes weapons, and all the Jewels that the people had geuen her, and canapp that she toke from hys bed, and hanged them vp vnto þ Lord. The people was ioyfull as the vse is: & this ioye by reason of the victorye, with Judyth endured thze monethes.

So after these dayes, euery man went home agayne, and Judyth was in great reputacyon at Bethulia, & ryght honourably taken in all the lande of Israell. Unto her vertue also was chastyte ioynd, so that after her husbāde Hannas, she neuer knewe man all þ dayes of her lyfe. Upon þ hye solempne dayes she went out with greate wo:shyppe. She dwelt in her husbādes house an hundred and fyue yeare, and leste her hande mayden fre, and dyed: and was buried besyde her husbāde in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her. vii. dayes. So long as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israell, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherin thys victorye was gotten, was solemplye holden: and rekened of the Jewes in the nombze of the holpe dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of þ Jewes euer sence vnto this daye.

The. xi. Chapter, after the Latyn.

The dreame of Mardocheus.

Mardocheus the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Eliezer of the tribe of Beniamin, a Jew whiche had his dwelling in the cite of Susis, a man of great reputacyon and excellent among all them that were in the kynges court. (Neuerthelesse, he was one of the pylsoners, whome Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias the kyng of Juda.) In the second yere of the raigne of great Artaxerxes in the fyfte daie of the moneth Nisan, had thys Mardocheus such a dreame: he thought he heard a grete tempest horrible thonderclappes, earthquakes, & great vpyoure in the lande, and that he sawe ii. great dragons redy to fyght one agaynst another.

They: crye was great. At þ which roaring & crye all þ heathen were vp to fight agaynst the ryghteous people. And the same daye was full of darkenesse, and very vnclerefull of trouble and angurthe, yea: a great fearfulness was there in all the land. The ryghteous were amazed, for they feared the plage and cruel that was deuysed ouer them; and were at apoint w them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: & while they were cryng: the lytle well grewe into a great ryuer: and into many waters. And with that it was daye and the sonne rose vp agayne. And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude.

Nowe when Mardocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in hys herte, what God wolde do, and so he despyed to know all the matter, and his mynde was there vpon, vntill the nyght.

The. xii. Chapter.

Mardocheus with the treason deuysed agaynst the kyng and is therfore rewarded of hym.

The same tyme dwelte Mardocheus wyth Bagatha and Tares, in the kynges court, the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he heard they: deuice, and had diligently conspyed their ymagynacyon so he certified the kyng therof. Then caused the whe they had graūted it, they wer put to death.

But Aman þ sonne of Amadathu the Agagite which was holden in great honour & reputaciō in þ kinges court vnder toke to hurt Wardocheus & his people because of þ. ii. chamberlaines þ were put to death. The. xlii. Chapter.

The coppe of the letters of Artaxerxes againste the Jewes. The prayer of Wardochens.

The great kyng Artaxerxes whych raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an C. & xlii. landes, sendeth his frendly salacryon vnto al þ princes & debites of þ counties which be subiect vnto his dominio. Whe I was made lord ouer many people, & had subdued þ whole earth vnto my dominio, my mynde was not w cruelty & wrong to exhale my selfe by reason of my power: but purposed w equi-te alway & gentelnes, to gouerne those þ be vnder my iurisdicciō, & wholie to set the in a peceable lyfe, & therby to bring my kygdom vnto trāquillite, þ men might safely go thowow on eue-ry syde, & to renew peace agayne, which al men desire. Nowe when I asked my councelers howe these thynges myght be brought to a good ende there was one by vs, excellent in wysdō whose good wyl, truth and faythfulness hath oft bene shewed & proued (which was also the principal nerte to the kyng) Aman by name: which certified vs howe þ in all landes there was scatered abroad a rebellious folke, that made statutes & lawes againste all other people: & haue al-waie dyspyled þ proclaymed commaundemen-tes of kynges: & how that for this cause it were not to be suffered that suche rule shulde conty-nue by you and not to be put downe.

Seinge nowe we perceauē the same, þ this people alone ar contrary vnto euery mā, vsing straunge & other maner of lawes, & withstand our statutes & doynges, & go about to stablysh shewed matters, þ our kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate & stedfastnesse: Therefore haue we commaunded, þ all they þ are appointed in wytyng & shewed vnto you by Aman, (whiche is ordyned & set ouer all our landes) & the most pynncipal next vnto the kyng, & in maner as a father, shall w their wyues & chyliden be destroyed & rooted oute with the swerde of theyr enemies & aduersaries, and þ there shalbe no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shalbe done the. xlii. daye of the moneth (called Adar) of this yere, that they whiche of olde (& nowe also) haue euer bene rebellious maye in one daye wth vyolence be thruste downe into the hell, to thintente that after this maner oure empyre maye haue peace and tranquyllyte.

But Wardochens thoughte vpon all the wozkes and noble actes of the Lord, and made hys prayer vnto him, saynge: O Lord Lord, thou valeaunte and Almyghty kyng (for all thynges are in thy power) & þ thou wylt helpe & deliuer Israel; there is no man that can withstande or let the: for thou hast made heauē and earth, & what wonderous thynges so euer is vnder the heauen: thou arte Lord of all thynges, & there is no man that can resiste thy maiestye (O Lord.) Thou knowest al thynges, thou wo-test Lord that it was nether of malice, nor pre-sumpcyon, nor for anye desyre of glōrye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor wozshyppouder proude presumpuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene contente, and that with good wyl þ it myghte haue done Israel anye good, to haue kyfte euen hys footesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not let the honour of aman in the stede of the glōry of God: & because I wolde wozshyp none but only the my Lord, And thys haue I done in no pryde nor presumpcyon.

And therfore O Lord thou God and kyng haue mercye vpon thy people, for they pmygn howe they may bypnyng vs to naught: yea, they mynde & desyre is to destroye, & to ouerthrowe thy people, þ hath ben euer thyne enherytaunce of olde. O dyspyse not the porciō, whych thou hast deliuered & broughte oute of Egypte for thyne owne seife. Heare my prayer, & be mercyfull vnto thy people whom thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our cōplainte & sorowe into ioye, that we may lyue, O Lord, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffer not the mouthes of them that praise the to be destroyed.

Al the people of Israel in lyke maner, cryed as earnestlye as they coude vnto the Lord: for theyr death & destrucciō stode before their eyes.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of her & her people.

Quene Esther also beyng in þ battayle of death, resorted vnto þ Lord, laide a way her glorious apparel, & put on þ garmentes þ serued for syghing & mournynge. In þ sted of precious ointment, she scattered ashes & dong vpo her head: & as for her bodye, she hūbled it w fastig, & brought it very low. Al þ places wher she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she w the heere & the plucke of her selfe. She praised also vnto þ Lord God of Israel w these wordes O my Lord, þ only art our king, helpe me desolate womā, whych haue no helper but þ, for my misery & destrucciō is hard at my hand. From my youth vpon I haue hard out of þ kyndred of my father, þ thou tokest Israel fro amōg al people (& so haue our fathers of their forelders) that they shuld be thy perpetual enheritaunce & loke what þ dydest promyse the, þ hast made it good vnto the. Nowe lord, we haue sined before þ, therefore hast þ geuen vs into þ handes of oure enemyes because we wozshipped their gods. Lord, þ art ryghtous. Neuertheles, it satisfied them not, þ we are in bytter & heuy captiuite and oppressed amōg them, but þ hast layde their hādes vpo þ handes of their gods: so þ they begyn to take away þ thyng þ thou w thy mouth hast ordened & appoynted, to destroy thyne enherytaunce, to shut and stop the mouthes of them þat praise þe, to quench the gloze & worshippe of thy boule, & thyne alter, & to open the mouthes of þe heathen, that they maye prayse the power and vertue of the gods, & to magnify the fleshy king for ever.

C Lord geue not thy septer vnto them þe nothyng, lest they laugh vs to scozne in our miserie and fall: but turne theyr deuise vpon them selues, & punishe hym, þat hath begonne the same ouer vs, & set him to an example. Thinke vpon vs O Lord, & shew thy selfe vnto vs in þe time of oure destresse, & of oure trouble. Strengthen me O thou kyng of gods, þe Lord of al power, geue me eloquent & a pleasaunt speach in my mouth befoze þe Lion. Turne his hert in the hate of our enemies, to destroy him, & al such as consent vnto him. But deliuer vs wthine hand, & helpe me thy handmaide, which haue no defence nor helper but onely the Lord, þe knowest al thinges, þe wotest þe I loue not the gloze and worshippe of the vnrightheous, and þe I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcised, and of all heathen.

D Thou knowest my necessity, þe I hate the token of preheminence & worship which I beare vpon my head, what time as I must shewe my selfe & be sene, and þe I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and þe I were it not when I am quyet & alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also, þe I thy handmaiden haue not eaten at Amans table, & that I haue had no pleasure nor delite in þe kinges feaste, þe I haue not droncke the wine of the dyncke offerynges & that I thy handmaiden haue no ioye sence the day that I was brought hether, vntil this daye, but onely in the Lord. O thou God of Abrahā, O thou myghty God aboue all, he are the voyce of them, þe haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hande of the wycked, and deliuer me oute of my feare.

The .xv. Chapter.

C Harodochus moueth Esther to go into the kynges and make intercession for her people: and she perswaimeth his requeste.

A Harodochus also had Esther goo in: vnto the kyng, & praye for her people, and for her countrey. Remember (sayth he) the dayes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast noyshed vnder my hande: for Aman which is nexte vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfoze vpon the Lord, & speake for vs vnto the kyng, & deliuer vs from death. And vpon the thirde day it happened, þe Esther layde awaye the mournynge garmentes, & put on her glorious apparel, & deckt her selfe goodly (after þe she had called vpon God, which is the beholder & sauntour of al thinges) toke two handmaidens wth her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one þe was teder: þe other folowed her, & bare þe traine of her vesture. The shine of her beweye made her face roseol coured. The similitude of her face was chearfull & amiable, but her herte was sorowfull for greates feare. She wente in thowow al the doores, & stode befoze the kyng. The kyng sat vpon the throne of hys kyngdome, & was clothed in his goodlye aray, al of gold, & set wth precious stones, & he was very terrible he lyfte vpon his face, that shone in the clearenesse, and looked grymlye vpon her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and faynt and leaned her self vpon the head of the mayd, þe went wth her. Neuertheles, God turned to the kynges mynde that he was gentyle, that he leaped oute of his seate for feare, and gat her in hys armes, and helde her vpon tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her louinge wordes also, and sayd vnto her. Esther, what is þe matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for oure commaundemente toucheth the commons & not the. Come nye. And wth þe helde vpon his golden roden, & layd it vpon her necke, and embzased her frendelye, and sayde talke wth me. Then sayd she: I sawe the (O Lord) as an Angell of God, & my herte was troubled, for feare of thy maiestye and clearenesse. For excellent & wonderfull arte thou (O Lord) and thy face is full of ampte. But as she was thus speakynge vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnesse for the which cause the kyng was afrayed, and all his seruantes comforted her.

The .xvi. Chapter.

C The coppe of the letters of Artaxerxes, wherby he reuoketh those which be spytte sence forth.

The greates king Artaxerxes, which I raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred & seuene & twentye landes, sendeth vnto the Dynces and rulers of the same landes, such as loue hym, his frendly salutacon. There be manye that for the sondry frendshippes & benefytes whiche are dyuersly done vnto them for theyr worshippe be ever the more proude & hye minded, and undertake not onely to hurte theyr subiectes (for plenteous benefytes maye they not suffer, & begyn to ymagine some thing agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthanckefulnesse a waye from men) but in pryde and presumption (as they that be vnmyndefull and vnthanckfull for the good deades) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seyth all thynges, whiche iudgemente hateth and punysethe all wyckednesse: It happeneth ofte also that they whiche be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynesse and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proude, and defyle them selues wth sheadynge of innocent bloude, whiche byngeth them to intollerable hurte. Whych also wth false and deceptfull wordes and wth lyngge tales, disceau and betray the innocent goodnesse of Dynces.

Nowe it is proufytable & good, that we take hede, make search thereafter, & consider, not only what hath happened vnto vs of old: but þe shamefull, vnbonest, & noisome thynges, that the debittes haue now taken in hand befoze our eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, that we maye make the kyngdom quyet and peaceable for all men: and þe we mighte sometyme brawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thyng that now is presente befoze oure eyes, to wythstande it, & to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner

The booke of wysdome

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Whiche we oughte to seache and enquire after God, and who be those that fynde hym. Of the holy ghost. We ought to fynde some waye to hym and not murmure.

Det your affection vpon right teousnesse, ye that be Judges of the earth. Haue a good opinyon of the Lorde, & like hym in the synghenesse of hert. For he wyl be tound of them that tempte him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. As for fro-ward thoughtes, they seperat fro God: but ver-tue (if it be allowed) refourmeth the vntuyl.

And why? wysdome shall not enter into a frowarde soule, nor dwel in the body þat is subdued vnto synne. For þe holy Ghost abhorreth fap-ned hurtour, and wythdraweth hym selfe from the thoughtes þat are without vnderstandyng, & where wyckednesse hath the vpperhande, he fly-eth from thence, for the sprete of wysdome is loupnge, gentle & gracys, & wyl haue no pleasure in him þat speaketh euell with his lippes.

For God is a wylner of hys raynes, a true searcher out of his hert, & an hearer of his tong. For the spret of the Lord fylleth the round compassse of the worlde: and the same þat vpholdeth al thin-ges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges can not be hpd: nether maye he escape the iudgement of reproofe. And why? inquisicio shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the repute of hys wordes shall come vnto God, so that this wyckednesse shalbe punished.
For the care of gelousye heareth all thynges, & the noyse of the grudgynges shall not be hpd.
Therefore beware of murmure, whyche is nothyng worth: and refrayne your tunge from flaunder. For there is no worke so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for thoughte, & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

¶ Seke not your owne death in the errour of your lyfe: destroye not your selues thowowe the workes of your owne handes. For God hath not made death, neyther hath he pleasure in the destruction of the liuyng. For he created all thynges, & they myghte haue theyr beyng: yea, all þe people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue health, & there shulde be no de-structyon in them, and that the kyngedome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for righteounes-se is euerlastyng & immortall, but vnryghteounesse byngeth death.) Neuerthelesse, the vngodlye call her vnto them bothe wyth wordes and workes: and while they thynke to haue a frende of her they come to naughte: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

The. ii. Chapter.

¶ Ddd ii The ymagy

What tyme nowe as Aman, the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger vere-ly of the Percians bloude, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among vs as an aleant and had optayned the frendeshyppe that we be-are towarde all the people, so that he was called our father, and had in hyge honoure of e-uerie man, as the nexte and principal vnto the kyng, he could not forbeare him selfe from his pyde, hath vnderaken, not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.

With manyfolde dyscreete also hath he despised to destroye Harbocheus our helper and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all thin-ges: and innocent Esther the lyke partaker of oure kyngedome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken them oute of þe waye, and robbed vs of them) by thys meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Percians vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Jewes (whyche were accused of the wycked, & they myghte be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse resonable and ryght lawes, and þat they be the children of the mooste hyghlyuyng God by whome the kyngedome of vs and our proge-nitoures haue bene well ordred hetherto.

Wherefore, as for the letters and commaunde-mentes that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do wel, yf ye holde them of nohe effecte: for he that set them vp and in-uented the, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred: and God, (whyche hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hi after his deservynge.

And vpon this ye shall publyshe and set vp the coppe of this letter in al places, that the Jewes maye frelye and wythoute byndraunce hold them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and y vpon the thre & twentye daye of the twelue moneth Adar, they maye be aduenged of them, whiche in the tyme of theyr angurthe and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the daye, wherein the chosen people shulde haue perished.

Moreover, amonge the hyge solempne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shall holde thys also with all gladnesse, that now & in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good, for all such as loue the prosperitie of the Percians: but a remembraunce of destructyon to those that be sedycyous vnto vs.

All cities and landes that do not this, shal ho-ryblye perishe and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomozetaba-bited of me, but be abhorred also of the wyld beastes and foules.

The ende of the reast of the booke of Esther.

The booke.

The ymagynacions and desires of the wycked, and theyr counsaile agaynste the saythfull.

A O the vngodlye talke and ymagyn thus amonge them selues (but not ryght :) The tyme of oure lyfe is but shorte & tedious: and when a man is once gone, he hath nomaie ioye nor pleasure, nether knowe we any man þ turneth agayne from death: for we are bozne of nought, & we shalbe hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure breath is a smoke in oure nostrels, & the wordes as a sparke to moue our hert. As for our body, it shalbe very ashes þ are quenched, & oure soule shal vanyshe as the soft ayre. Our life shal passe away as the trace of a cloude & come to naught as the mist þ is driuen awaye with the beames of the Sunne, and put downe with the heate thereof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by litle and litle, and no man shal haue oure worckes in remembraunce.

B For oure tyme is a very shadowe þ passeth awaye: & after our ende there is no returnyng, for it is fast sealed: so þ no man cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that there are, and let vs sone vse the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs fyll oure selues wpth good wyne and opyntment, & let there no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our selues with roses afore they be withered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but oure luste go thowowe it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptuousnesse. Let vs leue some token of our pleasure in euery place, for þ is oure porcion, els get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore ryghteous, let vs no spare the wyddowe nor olde man let vs not regarde the heades þ are gray for age. Let þ lawe of vnyrghteousnesse be our aucthorite, for the thyng þ is feble is nothyng worth. Therefore let vs defraude the ryghteous: and why? he is not for oure profite: yea, he is cleane contrarie to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendyng agaynste the lawe, and flaundreth vs as transgressours of all hurtoure. He maketh þys booke to haue the knowlege of God: yea he calleth him selfe gods sonne. He is the be wyaper of our thoughtes: It greuet þ also to looke vpon hym, for þys lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of another fashion. He coueteth vs but vayne persons, he wythdraweth hym selfe from oure wayes as from fylthynges he commendeth greatlye the latter ende of the inst, & maketh þys booke that God is his father. Let vs se then if his wordes be true, let vs proue what ende he shal haue. For yf he be the true sonne of God, he wyll receaue him: and deliuer hym from the handes of þys enemyes. Let vs examine hym with dyspytetull rebuke and tormentyng, that we maye knowe þys dygnitie and proue his patience. Let vs condemne hym with moost shamefull death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shal he be rewarded.

Suche thynges dothe vngodlye ymagyne and goo astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath blynded them. As for þe mysteries of God they vnderstande them not: they nether hope for the reward of ryghteousnesse, nor regarde þ woorth that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vndestroyed: yea, after the ymage of þys owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuerthelesse, thowowe enuy of the deuyl, came death into the world: and they that holde of þis syde do as he doth.

The.iii. Chapter.

The conuersacion and assurance of the ryghteous. The rewardes of the saythfull.

At the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shal not touche them. In the syghte of the vnywysse they appeared to dye, and theyr ende is taken for very destruction. The wyse of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in reste. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is their hopefull of immortalitie. They are punyshed but in fewe thynges, neuerthelesse, in manye thynges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and findeth them mete for him selfe: yea, as the golde in the fornaçe, dothe he trye them: and reccaueth them as a burnt offering, and when the tyme cometh, they shalbe looked vpon.

The ryghteous shal wyne as the sparkes that runne thowowe the red bushe. They shal iudge the nacyns, and haue domynyon ouer the people, and theyr Lord shal raygne for euer. They that put theyr trust in hym, shal vnderstande the truth, and suche as be saythfull, wyl agre vnto hym in loue: for his chosen shal haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodlye shalbe punyshed accordyng to theyr ymagynacions, for they haue dyspysed þ ryghteous: & forsake þ lord.

Wholo dyspyseth wysedome and nourtoure he is vnhappye: and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne: theyr laboures vnfrutefull, and theyr worckes vnprofytable. Theyr wyues are vndyscrete, and theyr chyldren mooste vngodlye. Theyr creature is cursyd. Blessed is rather the barren and vndeyled, which hath not knowe the synfull bed: she shal haue fruyte in the rewardes of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, which with his handes hath wrought no vnyrghteousnesse, nor ymagyned wycked thynges agaynste God. For vnto hym shal be geuen the speccial gyfte of sayth, and the mooste acceptable porcion in the temple of God. For glorious is the fruyte of good labour, and the roote of wysedome shal neuer fade awaye.

As for the chyldren of aduocaters, they shal come to an ende, & the seed of an vnyrghteous bedde shalbe rooted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shal they be nothyng regarded, and theyr last age shalbe without honoure. Yf they dye hastily, they haue no hope, nether shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowlege. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnyrghteous.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Of the chaste generacion of the saythfull, and of theyr felicitye. Of the death of the ryghteous, and of the condemnation of the vnsaythfull.

Howe

Q Howe fayre is a chaste generation with vertue. The memorial thereof is immoztall, for it is knowe with God & with men.
When it is present, men take example therat, and yf it go away yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honoure, and winneth the rewarde of the undefyled battayle. But the multitude of un-godly children is vnprofitable: & the thynges y are planted wth whozedom shall take no depe ro-te, nor laye any fast foundacyon. Though they be grene in y^e braunches for a time, yet they shall be shaken wth the wynd: for they stand not fast, & thozowe y^e vehemency of the wynd they shall be roted out. For y^e vnperfect braunches shall be broke they^e frute shall be vnprofitable & sower to eat: yet mete for nothyng. And why? al the chyldre are borne of y^e wycked, must beare recoorde of y^e wyckednesse agaynst they^e fathers & mothers when they be asked. But though they be righteous beouertaken with death, yet shall he be in rest.

Age an is honourable thyng: neuertheles it standyth not onely in the length of time, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyldome is the graye beare, and an undefyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued among synners, he translated him. * Nea, sodenly was he taken away, to the intente that wyckednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandyng and that hypocry-sy shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewtychyng of lyfes make good thynges darke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wyckednesse of vo-luptuous desire, turne aside the vnderstandyng of the symple. Though he was sone dead, yet fulfylled he muche tyme. For hys soule pleased God: therfore hasted he to take him away from among the wycked. This the people se, and vnderstande it not: they lay not vpon suche thynges in they^e hertes: howe that the louyng fauoure and mercye of God is vpon hys saynctes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deade, condem-neth the vngodly whiche are lyuyng: and the youth y^e is soone broughte to an ende, the long lyfe of the vnyghteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuyled for him, and wherfore the Lorde hath taken hym away. And why? they se hym and bewtyse hym, therfore shall God also laugh them to scoone: so that they them selues shall be heareafter (but wythoute honoure) yea, in Geme amonge the deade for euermoore. For wythoute anye voyce shall he burste those that be putte vpon, and remoue them from the foundacyons, so that they shall be layde waste vnto the wyckednesse. They shall mourne, and their memoryall shall peryshe. So they beyng afrayde, shall remember they^e synnes: and they^e owne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

¶ The v. Chapter.

The constancie of the righteous before thozow persecutions. The hope of the vnyghteous is vnderstande. The blessednesse of the saynctes and godlye.

When shall y^e ryghteous stand in great steadfastnesse agaynst such as haue dealt extreemly with them, and taken away they^e laboures. When they se it, they shall be vexed with horrible feare, and shall wondre at the hastynesse of the sodayne healeth: growyng for very destresse of mynde, and shall laye within them selues, ha-uyng inwarde sorowe, & mournyng for verpe anguythe of mynde. These are they, whom we somtime had in derisio, & iested vpon. We foolis thought their life very madnes: & their ende to be wout honoure. But lo, howe they are cousted among the chyldren of God, & they^e porcyon is among y^e saynctes. Therfore we haue erred fro the way of trouth, y^e light of righteousnesse hath not shined vnto vs, & y^e sunne of vnderstandyng rose not vpon vs. We haue werped oure selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destructyon.
Tedyous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it.

¶ What good hath oure pyrd done vnto vs? W ¶ What profyte hath the pompe of rychebroughte vs? All those thynges are passed away lyke a shadowe, & as a messenger runnyng before: as a shippe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be founde, neither the path of it in the floudes. ¶ As a byrde that flyeth thozowe in the ayre, & no man can se any token where she is flowne, but onely heare the noyse of her wynges, beatyng the lyght wynd, partynge the ayre thozowe the vehemency of her gopng, and fly-eth on shakynge her wiges, where as after ward no token of her waye can be founde. ¶ Like as whē an arrowe is shot at a marke it parteth the ayre, whiche immediatly commeth together again, so a man can not know where it went thozowe. Euen so now in like maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to dya-to oure ende, and haue shewed no token of ver-tue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse.

Suche wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodlye is lyke a dype. Thysle floure (or duske) that is blowne awaye wyth the wynde: lyke a thyng come that is scatered abroad wyth the storme, lyke as the smooke whiche is disperled heare and there wyth the wynde, and as the re-membraunce of a straunger, that tarreth for a dape, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermoore: they^e rewarde also is with the Lorde: and they^e remembraunce with the hygheste. Therefore shall they receaue a glorious kyngedome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his ryghte hande shall he couer them: and wyth hys owne holpe arme, shall he defende them. Hys gelousye also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapon the creatur to be aduenged of the enemyes.
He shall put on ryghteousnesse for a brest plate and take sure Judgemente in steade of an helmete. The inuysible shylde of equyte shall be take, hys cruell tozawe shall be sharpen for a speare, and the whole compasse of the worlde, shall fyghte wyth hym agaynst the vnwyle.

D Then shall the thonder boltes go oute of the lyghtnynges, and come out of the raygne bowe of y cloudes to the place appoynted: oute of the harde stony indignacion, there shall fall thycke halles, & the water of y see shall be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall runne roughlye together. Yea, a myghty wind shall stand vp agaynst them, and a storme shall scatter them abroade.
 Thus y vnrightheous dealing of the shall bring all the land to a wyldevnesse, and wyckednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of y myghtye

The. vi. Chapter.

The callinge of kynges. Prynces and Judges: whiche are also exhorted to searce wysdome.

Wysdom is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one y is stronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstande: O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, and delyte in much people. For y power is geue you of the Lorde, & the strength from the hyghest: whych shall trye your wor-kes, and searce oute youre ymagynacions: Howe that ye beyng officers of his kyngdome haue not executed true Judgemente, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnesse, nor walked after the wyll of God. Horrible, & that ryghte sone shall be appeare vnto you: for an hard iud-gemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercy is graunted vnto the simple, but they that be in auctoryte shall be soze punished. For God which is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans persone, neyther shall he stande in awe of anye mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small and greate, and careth for all a lyke. But the myghtye shall haue the soze punishmente.

Vnto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I speake that ye maye learne wysedome, & not go amisse.
 For they that kepe hys ryghteousnesse, shall be righteouslye iudged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make an-swere. Wherefore, set youre lust vpon my wor-des, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourtoure Wysedome is a noble thyng and neuer fadeth awaye: yea, she is easelye fene of them y loue her, & founde of suche as seke her. She pre-uenteth them y desyre her, y she maye first see her selfe vnto them. Whoso awaketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greate trouble, for he shall fynde her syttinge readye at his doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandynge; and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe: and that sone. For she goeth about, sekynge such as are mete for her, she weth her selfe cherfullye vnto them in theyr goynges, & meteth them wyth all diligence. For the vnfayned desyre of refor-macyon is her begynnynge: to care for nourtour is loue, & loue is the keepynge of her lawes. Now the keepynge of y lawe is perfectiō, & an vncorrupt lif: & an vncorrupt lyfe maketh a man familiar w God. And so y desyre of wysedome leadeth to the kyngedome euerlastynge. If youre delyte be then in royall seates and septrs (O ye kynges of the people) set youre luste vpon wysedome, that ye maye raygne for euermore. O loue the lyghte of wysedome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you: and wyll not hyde the mysteries of God from you: but wyll serke her oute frome the begynnynge of the natyuitie and byynge the knowlege of her into lighte, and wyll not kepe backe the truthe: Neyerther wyll I haue to do with consumynge enuye, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wysedome. But the multitude of the wyle, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyle kinge is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thowme my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The. vii. Chapter.

Wysedome oughte to be preferred aboue all thynges.

I myselfe am also a mortall mā, like as all other, & am come of y earthye generacyon of hym that was fyrste made, & in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes was I broughte together in bloude thowme the seed of man, and the commodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne I receaued like ayre as other men, and fel vpon the earth (which is my nature) cryng and we-ping at the fyrst as al other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, & brought vp w greate cares. For there is no king y had any other begyn-nyng of birth. Al men then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge oute in lyke maner.

Wherefor I desired, & vnderstandynge was geuen me: I called and the spryte of wysedome came vnto me. I set more by her then by kyng-domes & royall seates, and counted rycheesse nothyng in comparison of her. As for precyous stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shall be counted but clay before her sight. I loued her aboue welfare & bewtye, and purposed to take her for my light, for her light can not be queched. Al good thynges come to me with her, and innumerable rycheesse thowme her handes. I was glad in the all, for this wysedome wente before me, and I knew not y she is the mother of al good thynges.
 Now as I myselfe learned vnfaynedlye, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her rycheesse from no man: for she is an infinite treasure vnto men, which whoso vse, become parta-kers of the loue & frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto him for the gyftes of wysedome.

God hath graunted me to talke wyselye, & conueniently to handle the thynges y he hath graciouslye lente me. For it is he, y leadeth vnto wysdome, & teacheth to vse wysedome aright.
 In hys hande are bothe we and oure wordes: yea, al our wysdome, our vnderstanding & knowlege of all oure workes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thynges, so y I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the begynnynge, endynge, and myddeste of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, howe one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled, y course of the yere: the ordinaun-ces of the of the starres: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furpousnesse of beastes: the power of þ wyndes: þ ymaginacions of men: þ diuersities of yong plantes: the vertues of rootes, and all suche thynges as are secrete and not loked for, haue I learned: for þ woꝛkemaſter of al thin-ges hath taught me wysdome. In her is þ ſpꝛet of vnderſtandynge whiche is onlpe, manyfolde, one onelp, ſubtyll, curteous, diſcrete, quicke, vnderſyled, playne, ſwete, lounge that is good, ſharpe, whyche forþyddeth not to do well, gentile, kinde, ſtedfaſt, ſure, fre, hauynge al vertues cꝛcumſpecte in all thynges: receaupnge all ſpi-rytes of vnderſtandynge, beyng cleane and ſharpe. for wiſdome is nymbler then all nym-ble thynges: ſhe goeth thozowe and attayneth to all thynges, becauſe of her cleannesſe. for ſhe is the bzeth of the power of God, and a pure cleane expꝛeſſynge of the cleannesſe of Almyghtye God. Therfore canno vnderſyled thyng come vnto her: for ſhe is þ bygghteneſſe of the euerla-ſtyng lpyghte, þ vnderſyled myꝛroure of the ma-ieſtye of God and the ymage of hys goodneſſe.

 And for ſo muche as ſhe is one, ſhe maye do all thynges, & beyng ſtedfaſt her ſelfe, ſhe renueth all: & amonge þ people conuapeth her ſelfe, into the holpe ſoules. ſhe maketh Gods frendes & pꝛophetes: for God loueth no man, but hym in whome wyſedome dwelleth. for ſhe is moare bewyful then the Sunne, & geueth moze lighte then the ſtarres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpo the daye cometh nyght.
 But wyckedneſſe cannot ouercome wyſdome:
 and folpſheneſſe maye not be with her.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

¶ The effectes of wyſedome.

Wysdome reacheth frome one ende to another myghtely, and lounge ly doth ſhe ozder all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I dyd my dyllygence to marve my ſelfe wyth her, ſuch lone had I vnto her bewtie. Who ſo hath the com-panye of God, commendeth her nobyltye: yea, the Loꝛde of all thynges hym ſelfe loueth her. for ſhe is the ſcolemaſtreſſe of the nouꝛtoure of God, and the choſer oute of hys woꝛkes. ¶ If a man wolde deſpyze rycheſſe in this lpyfe, what is richer then wiſdom, that woꝛketh al thynges?
 Thou wylte ſaye: vnderſtandynge woꝛketh.
 ¶ What is it amonge al thynges, that woꝛketh moare then wyſedome? ¶ If a man loue vertue & righteouſneſſe, let hym labour for wiſdome, for ſhe hath greate vertues. And why? ſhe teacheth ſoberneſſe and pꝛudence, ryghteouſneſſe and ſtrength, whiche are ſuche thynges as men can haue nothyng moze pꝛofitable in their lpyfe.
 ¶ If a man deſpyze muche knowlege, ſhe can tell the thynges that are paſte, and dyſcerne thynges for to come: ſhe knoweth the ſubtyltes of woꝛdes, and can expounde darcke ſentences. ſhe can tell of tokens, & wonderous thynges oz euer they come to paſſe, and the endes of all tymes: & ages. So I purpoſed after this maner

I wyl take her vnto my compayne, & comune lounge wyth her: no doubt, he ſhal geue me good counſayle, & ſpeake comfortably vnto me in my carefulneſſe & greefe. for her ſake ſhal I be well & honeſtly taken among the commens & loꝛdes of þ counſaile. Though I be yong, yet ſhal I haue ſharpe vnderſtandynge, ſo þ I ſhal be meruelous in the ſpyghte of great men, & the faces of pꝛinces ſhal wonder at me, whē I holde my tonge, they ſhall abyde my lpyſure: when I ſpeake, they ſhal loke vpo me, & if I talke much they ſhal laye theyꝝ handes vpo theyꝝ mouth.

¶ Moꝛeouer, by the meanes of her I ſhall obtayne immortalyte, and leaue behynd me an euerlaſtyng memorizall amonge the that come after me. I ſhall ſet the people in ozder, and the nacyns ſhal be ſubdued vnto me. Hoꝛrrible tyrauntes ſhal be aſtꝛayde when they do but heare of me, amonge the multitude I ſhal be counted good, and myghtye in battayle. When I come home, I ſhall ſpynderreſte wyth her: for her com-panye hath no bitterneſſe, and her felowſhypp hath no tedpouſneſſe, but myꝛthe and ioye.

¶ Nowe when I conſidꝛed theſe thynges by my ſelfe, and pondꝛed them in my herte, howe þ to be ioyned vnto wyſedome is immortalytie, and greate pleaſure to haue her frendſhypp, howe þ in the woꝛkes of her handes are infin-tie richelle: howe that, whoſo kepeth compayny wyth her ſhal be wylle, and that he whyche tal-keth wyth her, ſhall come to honoure: I went about ſeking, to gather her vnto me: for I was alad of aſtype wyt, & had a good vnderſtandynge But when I grewe to moze vnderſtandynge, I came to an vnderſyled bodye. Reuertheleſſe, when I perceaued þ I coulde not kepe my ſelfe chaſte, except God gaue it me, (and that was a poynthe of wiſdome alſo, to knowe whoſe gyfte it was) I ſtepped vnto þ Loꝛd: & beſought hym & wyth my whole hert I ſaid after this maner.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

Knoweth thy works whiche also was with the was acceptable in thy syghte, and righte in thy commaundementes. O sende her oute of thy holy heauens, and from the throne of thy maiestie that she maye be with me, & labour with me: for I maye knowe what is acceptable in thy syght for she knoweth and vnderstandeth al thinges: and she shal leade me soberly in mye workes, & preserue me in her power. So shall mye workes bee acceptable, & then shall I gouerne thy people ryghteously, & be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what man is he that maye knowe the counsaile of God? For who can thynke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are mesurable, & our forecassess are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall & corruptyble bodie is heuie vnto the soule, & the earthlye mansion kepeth downe that vnderstanding that museth vpon many thinges. Clerpe hardlye canne we decerne the thynges that are vpo whiche are vpon earth, maye be reformed: that

The .x. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the ryghteous commeth thowowe wysdome.

Wysdome preserued the fyrste man, whome God made a father of the world, when he was created alone broughte hym oute of hys offence toke him out of the *moulde of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thynges.
*When the vnrightheous wente awaye in hys wrauth from the wysdome, the brothered per-shed thowowe the wrauth of murder. Agayne, when the *water destroyed the whole worlde, wysdome preserued the ryghteous thowowe a pore tree, where of he was gouernour her selfe Moreouer, whē wickednesse had gotten the v-perhande so that the nacyns were putte vpon pyrde he knewe the ryghteous, preserued hym fautelesse vnto God, and layde vpon sure mercye of hys chyldren. She preserued the ryghteous, *when he fled from the vngodlye that perished what tyme as the fyre fel downe vpon the fyue cyties: Lyke as yet this daye the vncruptfull waste, and smokyng lande geueth testymonie of theyr wyckednes: yee, the vnrype and vnti-melye frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnsaithful soule, there standeth a pillar of salte for all such as regarded not wysdome gat not onelye this hurte, that they knewe not the thin-ges whiche were good, but also lefte behynde them vnto men, a memoial of theyr foolyshenes: so that in thinges wherein they synned, they coude not be hyd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, she shal deliuer them fro sorow

*When the ryghteous fled because of hys brothers wrauth, wysdome led hym the ryghte waye, shewed him the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowlege of holpe thynges made hym ry-che in his laboures, & brought to passe the thyn-ges that he wente aboute. In discreafulnesse of suche as defrauded hym, she stode by hym and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the ene-myes, & defended him from the deceauers. She made hym stronge in battayle, & gaue hym the victorie, that he myght knowe howe that wis-dome is stronger then all thynges. *When the ryghteous was solde, she forsoke hym not, but deliuered him from synners. She wente downe with hym into the dongeon, & sayled hym not in the bandes, *till she had broughte hym the scepter of the realme, and powre agaynst those that opprest him. As for them that had accused him, she declared the to be lyers, & broughte hym to perpetuall wysdome.

*She deliuered the ryghteous people and fautelesse, from the nacyns that opprest them She entred into the soule of yseruaunt of God & stode by hym in wonders & tokens agaynst horrible kynges. She gaue the ryghteous the warde of their laboures, & led them forth a mer-uelous way: on the day tyme she was a shadow vnto them, & a light of starres in the nyght season. *She brought the thowowe the red see, & caried them thowowe y great water. She browned theyr enemyes in y see, & brought them out of y depe. So the ryghteous toke y spoiles of y vngodly, & prayled thy holy name. O Lorde & magnified thy victorious hand w one accord *for wysdome openeth the mouth of the domme, maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

The .xi. Chapter.

The myracles done for Israel. The vengeance of synners. The greates power and mercye of God.

He ordred theyr workes in the ban-des of thy holy prophete: *so that they went thowowe the wyldernes that was not inhabited, & pytched theyr tentes in the waste deserte.
They stode agaynst the enemyes, and were aduenged of theyr aduersaries. *When they were thyrstye, they called vpon the, & water was geuen them oute of the moost hye rocke, & theyr thyrst was quenched oute of the harde stoon.
For by y thinges were thowowe theyr enemyes were punyshed, were the chyldren of Israel helped in theyr nede, so theire comforte. For vnto y enemies thou gaueste mang bloude in steade of lyuynge water. And where as they hadde scarnesse in the rebuke, when y chyldren were slaine, thou gaueste vnto thyne owne a plenteous water vnloked for: declarynge by the thynges that was at y tyme howe thou woldest byng thine owne vnto honoure, & slaye theyr aduersaries. *
*For when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherlye mercye, they knowledged howe the vngodlye were iudged & punyshed thowowe y wrauth of God. These hast thou exhorted as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boyterous kyng, layde harde to theyr charge, & condemned the. Whether they were absente or presente, they punysshement was alpe. For they grete was double: namely, mourning, & the remembraunce of thynges past. But when they perceyued that they punysshementes dyd them good, they thoughte vpon the Lorde, & wondered at the ende. For at last they helde much of hym, of whome in y out casting they thought scorne, as of an abiect. Neuerthelesse, the righteous dyd not so when they were thursty: but euen lyke as the thoughtes of the folys were, so was also they wyckednes.

* Where as certayne men now (thozow erroure) dyd woorthyp dome serpentes & vain beastes thou sendest a multitude of dome beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce, that they myght knowe, that loke where withal a man synneth by the same also shal be punished. * For vnto thy Almighty hande, that made the worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende emog them an heape of beares, or wood Lyons, or cruell beastes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vknownen, or spoute fyre, or caste out a smokynge bryth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes which myght not only destroye them with burning, but also to kyll them with they horrible fyght. Yea, without these beastes myghte they haue bene slaine with one wynde, being persecuted of they owne workes, & scattered abrode thozow the bryth of thy power.

Neuerthelesse thou haste ordred all thynges in measure, nombze & wyght. For thou haste euer had great strength & myghte, & whome may withstand the power of thyne arme? And why lyke as the smal thyng that the balaunce weyeth, so is the worlde before the: yea, as a droppe of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou haste mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: * and makest the as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they shulde amende. For thou louest all thynges that are, and hatest none of them whō thou hast made: neither dydest thou ordeyne or make any thyng of euell wyll. Howe myghte any thyng endure yf it were not thy wyll? Or howe coulde any thyng be pserued, excepte it were called of the? But thou sparest all, for all are thyne (O Lorde) thou louer of soules.

The. xii. Chapter.

The mercy of God toward synners, the workes of God are unspurable. God giueth lesure to repent vs.

O Lorde, howe gracious & swete is thy spyrite in all thynges? Therefore chastenest & them measurably that go wrong, & warnest them concerning thynges wherein they offende: thou speakest vnto theim (O Lorde) & exhortest them to leaue their wickednesse, & to put they trust in y. * As for those olde inhabytors of the holy land thou myghtest not a waie with theim, for they comytted abhominable workes agaynst the, as wythchrafte, sorcery, & Idolatry, they slew they owne chyldzen wythout mercy: they dyd eat vpon mens bowels, and deuoured the bloud: yea, because of suche abhominacyons, misbeleuers, & offringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: y the lande whiche thou louest aboue all other, myght be a dwelling for the chyldzen of God.

Neuerthelesse, thou sparedst them also (as men) and sendest the fore runners of thine hoste euen hornettes to destroye them out by lytle & lytle. Not that thou wast vnable to subdue the vngodly vnto thynghteous in battayl: or with euell beastes, or wyth one rough worde to destroye them together. * But thy mynde was to dryue them out by lytle & lytle, geuyng them tyme & place to amende: knowyng well, that it was an vnyghteous nacyon, & wycked of nature, & y their thought myght neuer be altered. For it was a curled lede from the begynnyng & feared no man. Yet haste y pardoned they synnes. For who wyl saye vnto the: why haste y done that? Or who wyl stande agaynst thy iudgement? Or who wyl come before thy face: an aduenger of vnyghteous men? Or who wyl blame the, yf the people peryshe, whome y hast made? For there is none other God but thou. * Carest for all thynges: y thou maist declare how that thy iudgement is not vnyght. Ther dare nether kyng, nor tyraunte in thy syght requyre accomptes of them whom y hast destroyed.

For so muche then as thou arte ryghteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges ryghteouslye * and punysshed euen hym that hath not deserued to be punished, & takest him for a stranger and an aleaunt in the lande of thy power. For thy power is the begynnyng of righteoursnesse and because thou art Lorde of all thynges, therfore arte thou gracious vnto all.

When menne thynke the not to bee of a fall strength thou declarest thy power: and boldly deliuerest thou them ouer, that know the not. But thou Lorde of power iudget quietly, and ordrest vs with great woorthyp, for thou maist do as thou wylte.

By suche workes now haste thou taughte thy people, that a man also shoulde be iuste and louyng: and haste made thy chyldzen to bee of a good hope: for euen when thou iudget, thou geuest rowme to amende from synnes.

For in somuche as thou hast punyshed, and with suche dylgence deliuered the enemyes of thy seruauntes, whiche were woorthye to dye, (where thozow thou gauest them tyme & place of amendement y they myght turne from they wyckednes) with how great dylgence then punyshest thou thyne owne chyldzen vnto whose fathers thou haste swoyne and made coneuantes of good promyses? So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest our enemyes by nerse waies, to the intent that when we punished we shuld remembre thy goodnes: & whē we our selues are punished to put our trust in thy mercy.

Wherefore, where as men haue luyed ygnorantly and vnyghteously y hast punished the soze, euen thozow the same thynges that they worshipped. * For they went astray very long in the waye of erroure, and helde the beastes (whiche euen their enemyes dyspysed) for goddes liuyng as childzen of no vnderstanding. Therefore hast thou sent a scornfull punishment among the childzen of ygnorance. As for such as wolde not be reformed by those scornes and rebukes, they felte the worthy punishment of God. For the thynges that they suffered they bare them vnpatiently, being not contented in them but vnderstanding. And when they perished by the same thynges they toke for goddes, they knowlaged then, yf there was, but one true god whome afore they wolde not knowe: therefore came the ende of theyr dampnation vpon them.

The xiii. Chapter.

All thynges be made, excepte the knowlage of God. Idolatry and Idols are mocked.

Roma. 1. b.

Vayne are all men, whiche haue not knowlage of God: as wer they that out of the good thynges whiche are sene, knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euergla-itling. Rather toke they so much regarde of the workes that are made, as to know, who was the craftesman of them, but some toke the fyre, some the wynd or ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water, some the sunne and mone, or the lightes of heauen whiche rule the earth, for gods. But though they had suche pleasure in their bewtie that they thoughte them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowen, how muche more fayrer he is that made them.

For the maker of bewty hath ordeined all these thynges. Or yf they maruailed at the power & workes of them, they shuld haue perceiued thereby, that he which made these thynges, is mightier then they. For by the greatnesse and bewtye of the creature, the maker thereof may plainly be known. Notwithstanding they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, & wolde fynde hym and yet mysse. And why: for so muche as they gooe aboute in his workes and seke after them, it is a token, that they regarde and holde muche of his workes that are sene, howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For yf they vnderstand a knowlage be so great: that they can deserue the world & the creatures, why do they not rather fynde oute the Lorde thereof?

But vnhappy are they, and among the dead is theyr hope, that call them gods which are but the workes of mens handes, golde, syluer, and the thyng that is founde out by connyng, the similitude of beastes, or any vayne stone that hath bene made by the hande of olde. * As when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the woode, and parcth of the barke of it conningly, and so with the one parte maketh a vessell to be vsed, and besteth meate with the resydue. As for the other parte that is lefte, whiche is profitable for nothyng (for it is a croked pece of wood and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thezowe his vanite, and accordyng to the knowlage of his connyng, he geueth it some proportion, fashioneth it after the similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beast straketh it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spotte is in it he casteth some coloure vpon it.

Then maketh he a conueniente tabernacle for it, setteth it in a wall, & maketh it faste with pyon: prouidyng so for it, lest it happen to fall: for it is well known, that it can not helpe it selfe. And why: it is but an ymage, & must of necessity be helped. Then gooeth he & offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his childzen, and for his wyfe: he seeketh helpe at it, he asketh counsel at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it, & hath no soule: for death, he maketh his peticyon vnto hym that is sicke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto hym that is dead: he calleth vpon hym for helpe: he is not hable to helpe hym selfe: & to sende hym a good iourney he prayeth hym that maye not goo. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hand (whether it be to obtayn any thyng or to worke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages. A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The cruelties that come of ydolatrie.

Ayane, another man purposing to sayle, and begynnyng to take his iourney thozowe the ragynge se, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weaker then the tre that beareth hym. For as for it, couetousnes of money hath founde it oute, and the craftesman made it with his connyng.

But thy prouydence, O father governeth all thynges from the begynnyng: * For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of the waues: declarynge thereby that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges, yea though a man went to the see withoute shippe. Neuerthelesse, that the workes of thy wisdom shulde not be vayne, * thou hast caused an Arke to be made: and therefore do men comit their liues to a smale pece of woode, passynge ouer the see in a shippe, and are saued.

* For in the olde tyme also when the proude Gygantes perished, he (in whome the hope was lefte to encrease the worlde) went into the shippe whiche was governed thozowe thy hande, and so lefte sede behynde hym vnto the worlde. For happye is the tre where thozowe ryghteousnes cometh: but cursed is the ydole that is made with handes, * yea both it & he that made it. He because he made it: & it because it was called God, where as it is but a fraile thyng. * For the vngodly & hye vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God. Enso the worke and he that made it also, shalbe punished together. Therefore shall there a plague come vpon the ydols of the heathen: for out of the creatures of God they are become abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the vnwise. And why: the sekynge out of ydols is the begynnyng of whozedome, and the byngynge vpon of them is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnyng, neither shal they contynne for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath found them out vpon earth, therefore shall they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne that was taken awaye from hym, he made him an ymage (in al that he had) of his

Esa. xlii. a

of his deade sonne: and so beganne to worshyp hym as a god, whiche was but a deade manne, and ordeyned his seruantes to offer vnto hym. Thus by proces of tyme & thozowe an vngreuous custome, this errour was kept as a lawe and tirauntes compelled men by violence to honoure ymages. As for those that were so farre of that men myght not worshyp them presently, the picture was brought from farre (lyke the ymage of a kyng, whome they wolde honoure) to the intent that wyth grete dyligence they might worshyp hym which was farre of, as though he had bene presente.

Againe the synful conning of a craftesman gaue the ymaginacion also a grete occasyon to worshyppe ymages. For the workeman wyllynge to do hym a pleasure & set hym a worke, laboured wyth all his connyng to make the ymage of the best fashyon. And (so thozowe the beuote of the worke) the common people was deceyued, in so much that they toke hym now for a god, whiche a litle afore was but honored as a man. And this was a perroun of mans lyfe, wher men (ether for to serue theirowne affectyon, or to do some pleasure vnto the kynges) ascribed vnto stones & stockes the name of God, whiche ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreouer, this was not ynough for theim that they erred in the knowlage of God: but where as they liued in grete warres of ymaginacion, those many and grete plages called they peace. For ether they slue theirowne children, & offered them, or dyd sacrifice in the nyght season vnto theirowne watches: so that they kept neither lyfe nor mariage cleane: but ether one slue another to death maliciously, or elles greued his neyghboure with aduoutre. And thus were all thynges myxt together, bloud, manslaughter, thefte, dissimulacion, corrupcion, vnfaithfulnesse, sedicion, perjury, disquyeting of good men, vnchanchfulnesse, defyling of soules, chaungyng of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, misorder of aduoutre and vnclennesse. And why? the honouryng of abhominable ymages is the cause, & begynning and ende of all euell. For they that worshyppe Idolles: ether they be mad when they be merp, or prophete lyse: or lyue vngodly, or elles lyghthe for to save them selues: For in so much as their truste is in the ydolles (which haue nether soule nor vnderstandyng) though they sweare falsely yet they thynke it shall not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a grete plage vnto them and a worthe, for they haue an euell opinon of God, geuyng hede vnto ydolles swearynge vnjustly to deceyue, and despisyng ryghteousnesse. For they swearyng is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euer wyth the offence of the vngodly.

The .xv. Chapter.

The hope of the faithfull, praisynge the mercede of God for whose graces sake they serue not ydolles.

But thou (Ooure God) arte swete longe sufferynge, and true, & in mercye ordeiste thou all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thynke, for we know thy strength. Yet we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte ryghteousnes. Yea, to knowe thy ryghteousnes and power is the rote of immortalyte. As for the thyng that men haue founde oute thozow their euell science it hath not deceyued vs: as the paintyng of the picture (an vnproftable labour) and carued ymage, wherbyuers coloures, whose syght entyleth the ignorant: so the honoureth & loueth the picture of a dead ymage & hath no soule.

Neuerthelesse, they that loue suche euell thynges, are worthy of the death: they that trust in theim, they make theim, they loue them, and they honour theim. The potter also taketh & temporeth soft earth, labourerth it, and geueth it the fashio of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruyce, and some contrary. But where, to euery vessel serueth, & knoweth the potter hym selfe. So with his vayne labour he maketh a god of the same claye: this dothe euen he, whiche a litle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and within a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the earth again.

Notwithstandyng, he careth not the more because he shall labour, nor because his lyfe is shorte: but stryuethe to excell golde smithes, the syluer smithes and cooper smithes, and taketh it for an honoure to make vaine thynges. For his herte is ashy, his hope is but vayne earth, and his lyfe is more vyle then claye, for so much as he knoweth not hymselfe maker, & gaue hym his soule to worke, and bryethed in hym & bryeth of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a pastime, and our conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be gettyng: and that by euell meanes. Nowe he that of earth maketh fraile vesselles and ymages, knoweth hym self to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of people, and that holde them in subiection, are vnyse, vnhappye, and excedyng proude vnto theirowne soules: for they iudge all the ydolles of the heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye syghte to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor fyngers or handes for to grope: & as for theirowne fete, they are to slowe to goe. For man made them, and he hath but a borrowed sprete, fashioned them. But no man can make a God lyke vnto hym: for sayng he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall & he maketh wyth vnrightheous handes. He hym selfe is better then they whome he worshyppe, for he lyued though he was mortall so dyd neuer they. Yea, they worshypped bestes also, whiche are moste myserable: for compare thynges, that can not fele vnto theim, and they are worse then those.

Yet is there not one of these bestes, that wyth his syghte can beholde any good thyng, neyther haue they geuen prayse nor thanks vnto God.

* For when þ vnrighteous thought to haue thy holy people in subieccion, they wer bounde with the bandes of darchenesse, & longe nigte, that vnder the rose, thynkyng to escape the euerlastyng wysedome. And whyle they thought to be byd in the darkenes of they syn-nes, they were scatered abzode in the very middest of the darke couering of forgetfulnessse, put to horryble feare and wonderously vexed: for the corner where they might not kepe them fro feare (because the sounde came downe and ver-ed them) yea, many terryble and straunge visy-ons made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre myghte gene them lyghte, nether myght the clere flammes of the starres lyghten þ horrible nyght. For there appered vnto them a sodayne fyre, very dredefull At the which (when they saue nothynge) they were so afrayde, þ they thought þ thynge which they saue, to be the moze fearefull. * As for the sozcery and enchauntement þ they vled it came to derisyon, & the proude wisdom was brought to shame. For they that promysed to dyue awaye the fearefulnessse and drede from þ weake soules were lyke for feare them selues, and þ with scozne. And though none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, and at the byssing of the serpentis. In so muche that wptremblyng they sowned, and saide they saue not the ayze, whiche no manne yet maye escape.

C For it is an heuy thyng, when a mans owne conscience beareth recozde of his wyckednes & condemneth hym. And why? A vered & wondred conscience, taketh ever cruell thynges in hande. * Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to an swere for hym selfe. And loke howe much lesse the hope is within, the more is the uncertaynte of the matter, for y^e whiche he is punyshed. But they that came in the myghte nyght, slept the slepe that fell vpon them from vnder and from above: sometyme were they afraide thozowe y^e feare of the wonders, & sometyme they were so weake that they sowned wall: for an hasty and sodain fearfulnesse came vpon them.

D Afterwarde, yf anye of theim had fallen, he was kepte and shutte in pylone, but wythout chaynes. But yf any dwelte in a byllage, yf he had ben an hearde or husbandman, he suffered intollerable necessity: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darckenesse.

Whether it were a blaspyng wind, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thycke bryanches of the trees, or the vehemency of hasty running water, or great noyse of y^e falling doune of stones, or the playnge & runnyng of bestes: whom they sawe not, or y^e myghte noyse of roaring bestes, or the sound y^e aunswereth again in the hye mountaynes: it made them sowne for very feare. For al the earth thined wth clere light and no man was hyndred in his labour. Only vpon them there fell an heuy nyght, an ymage of darckenesse y^e was to come vpon them. Yea, they wer vnto them selues the moste heuie and horryble darckenesse.

The. xviii. Chapter.

The fyre lyghts that the Israhelytes had in Egypt. The persecution of the fawthful. The Lord smote all the fyre bozme of Egypt. The synne of the people in the wyldernes. Aaron stode betwixt the lyue & the dead, with his censoure.

N Everthelesse, thy saynctes had a very great lighte (& the enemies heard they^r voice but they sawe not the fygure of them.) And because they suffered not the same thynges they magnified y^e: and they y^e were vered afoze (because they were not hurte nowe) thanked the, and besought the. D God y^e there myght be a difference. * Therefore had they a burning pyller of fyre to leade them in the vnkowen waye, & thou gauest them the same for a free gyfte without any hurte. Reason was y^e they shoulde wante lyghte, and be put in the pylon of darckenesse, whiche kept thy chyldren in captiuyte, by whome the vncorrupt lyghte of the lawe of the worlde was for to bee geuen. * When they thought to slay the babes of the ryghteous (one beynge layde out, and presented to be leader vnto the other,) * y^e broughte oute the whole multitude of the chyldren and destroyedest these in the myghte water. Of that nyghte were oure fathers certified afoze, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myghte be of good chere. Thus thy people receyued the helth of the righteous, but the vngodly wer destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast y^e promoted vs whom thou calledst afoze. For the righteous chyldren of the good men offered secretly and ordred the law of righteousness vnto vnite that the iuste shoulde receyue good and euell in like maner, synging praises vnto y^e father of al men. Again, there was heard an vnconuenient voice of y^e enemies, & a piteous crye for the chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruaunt wer punished in like maner. For they altogether had innumerable y^e died one death.

* Neyther were the lyunge sufficente to burye the dead, for in the twyncklyng of an eye the noblest nacyon of them was destroyed. As ofte as God helped them afoze, yet wolde it not make them beleue: but in the destruccyon of the fyre bozme they knowlaged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges wer styl and when the nyghte was in the myddest of her course, thy almyghty worde (D Lord) leape downe from Heauen oute of thy roiall thzone, as a rough man of warre, in the myddest of the lande that was destroyed: & the sharpe swerde perfourmed they^r strypte comaundement standynge and fyllyng all thynges with death: yea it stode vpon the earthe and reached vnto the heauen. Then the syghte of the euell dreames vered them sodenlye, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares. Then laie there one here, another there, halfe dead, halfe quicke, & shewed the cause of his death. For the visyons y^e vered them shewed them these thynges afoze: so y^e they were not ignoraunt, wherfore they perished.

Then temptacyon of death touched the D ryghteous also, and amonge the multytude in the wyldernes there was insurreccion, but thy wrath endured not longe. For y^e blamelesman went in all the haste, and tooke the battayle vpon hym, brought for the the weapon of his mystryacyon: euen prayer and the censoures of reconstyng: set hym selfe agaynst the wrath, & so broughte the myserye to an ende: declaringe thereby that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouer came not the multytude wyth bodelye power, nor wyth weapons of myghte: but wth the worde he subdued hym y^e vered hym, puttyng them in remembraunce of y^e othe & couenant made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middes, pacyfied the wrath, and parted the waye vnto the liuing. * And why? in his longe garment was all the bewty, & in y^e foure rowes of the stones was the gloze of the fathers grauen, and thy maiesty was written in y^e crowne of his head. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place and was afraid of them: for it was only a temptacyon worthye of wrath.

 tite, the quayles came vnto them from the see, and punishmentes came vpon the synners not withoute the tokens whiche came to passe afoze by the vehemence of the streames, for they suffered woorthely accordyng to they^r wickednesses, they delt so abhomyably and charlyshely wth straungers. Some receyued no vnknewen gesses, some brought the straungers into bondage þe did them good. Beside all these thynges there were some, þe not onely receyued no straungers with they^r wylls, but persecu-ted those also, * and dyd them muche euell, that receyued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with * blyndenesse, lyke as they that were couered wth sodayne darchenesse at the dozes of the ryghteous, so þe euery one soughte the entraunce of his doze.

Thus the elementes turned into them sel-ues, lyke as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrumente of musyke and yet all the resy-due kepe they^r melodye, whiche maye easely be perceyued, by the syght of the thynges that are come to passe.

The drie lande was turned into a waterpe and the thyng that afoze swamme in the water, wente nowe vpon drie grounde. The fyre had power in þe water (contrary vnto his owne vertue) and the water forgat hys owne kynde to quenche. Again, the flames of nopsome beastes hurte not the flesh of them that went with them, neyther melted they the yse, whiche elles melteth lyghtly. In all thynges haste thou promoted thy people (O Lorde) and brought them to honour: þe haste not despised them but alway and in all places hast þe stande by them.

The ende of the booke of wisdom.

The booke of Jesus, the sonne of Sirach / which is called in Latin Ecclesiasticus.

The prologue of Jesus the sonne of Sirach vnto hys booke.

Any and greate men haue declared wylsdom vnto vs oute of the lawe, oute of the Prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israell ought to be commended by the reason of doctryne and wysedome: Therefore, they that haue it: and reade it, shulde not onelye them selues be wylse therthoroze, but serue other also wth teachyng and wrytyng.

After that my graundefather Jesus had geuen dyligente labour to reade the lawe, the Prophetes, and other bookes that were left vs of our fathers, & had well exercysed hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wryte some thyng of wysedome and good maners, to the intent that they whiche were wyllynge to learne & to be wylse myght haue the moze vnderstandynge, and be the moze apte to leade a good conuersacyon. Therfore, I exhorte you to receyue it louyngly, to read it wth diligence, & to take it in good woorth though our wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng þe is wrytten in þe hebreue tunge, soundeth not so well when it is translated into another spech. Not only this booke of myne, but also þe lawe, the Prophetes, & other bookes sounde far otherwylse, then they do, when they are spoken in they^r owne language. Nowe in þe xxxviii. yere when I came into Egypte in þe time of Ptolomy Euergetes: & continued there almy life, I gat liberte to rede & wryte many good thynges. Therfore I thought it good & necessary, to bestow my diligence & trauayle to interpret this booke. And consydeyng that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this booke, & to bypnyng it vnto lyghte: þe straungers also whiche are disposed to learne, myght apply them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde.

Ecclesi-

of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Col. xxxij. Ecclesiasticus.

The fyfte chapter.

Wysdome procedeth and cometh of God. A prayse of the feare of God. Righteousnesse is a degree to come by wysdome.

Al wysdome * cometh of God the Lorde, and hath bene euer with hym, & is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the sande of the see, the droppes of rain, and the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heygth of heuen, the bredth of the earthe, and the depeneth of the sea? Who hath sought out the grounde of Goddes wysdome which hath bene afore al thinges? * Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandynge of prudence from euerlastynge. (Goddes worde in the heygth is the wel of wysdome, and the euerlastynge comaundementes are the entraunce of her.)

Unto whom hath y roote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyse? Unto whome hath the doctryne of wysdome bene discovered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the byggette the maker of all thynges, the Almyghty, the kyng of power (of whom men oughte to stande greatly in awe) which setteth vpon his throne beyng a God of dominyon: he hath created her thow the holy ghooste: he hath sen her, nombred her, and measured her, he hath powred her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all fleshe, accordyng to his gyfte: he geueth her ryche vnto them y loue hym: The feare of the Lorde is wysdome and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Whoso feareth the Lorde, it shall go well with hym at the laste, that in y day of his death he shall be blessed.

The loue of God is honourable wysdome looke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it for they se what wonderous thinges it doth. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome, and was made with the faythefull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with y chosen women, and shall be knowen of the ryghteous and faythfull. The feare of the Lorde is the ryghte Goddes seruyce, that preserueth and iustifyeth the hert, & geueth mirth and gladnesse. Whoso feareth the Lorde shall be happy, & when he hath neede of comfort, he shall be blessed. To feare god is wisdom y maketh riche, & byngeth all good with her. She filleth the whole house with her gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and helth. He hath sen her & nombred her: (bothe these are the gyftes of God) knowlage, and vnderstandynge of wysdome hath bene poured out as rayne, and them that helde her faste, hath he broughte vnto honoure.

The feare of the Lorde is the roote of wysdome, and her brāunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandynge and deuocyon of knowlage, but wysdome is abhored of synners. The feare of the Lorde dyspucth oute synne, for he yis without feare can not be made ryghteous, & his wyfull boldenes is his owne destruccyon. A pacient man wyll suffer vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyll byde his wordes for a tyme, & manye mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracyon of doctryne, but y synner abhorreth the worship of God. My sonne, yf thou desyre wysdome, kepe the comaundementes, & God shall geue her vnto the: for y feare of the Lorde is wisdom & nourtour, he hath pleasure in fayth & louyng mekenesse, & he shall fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaithfull to the feare of the Lorde, & come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an ypocryte in the syght of menne, & take good hede what y speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall & byng thy soule to dishonour, & so God discover thy secretes, & cast the doune in the myddest of the congregacyon: because y woldest not receyue the feare of God, & because thy hert is full of fayednes and disceyte.

The. ii. Chapter.

He exhorteth the seruantes of God to ryghteouslye, loue, vnderstandynge, and pacience, & exhorteth hym that feareth God, to beleue, to hope, and to loue, because God neither confoundeth nor forsaketh them that truste in hym. A crosse vpon the scille, feare, and impacient of herre.

My sonne, * yf thou wilt come into the seruyce of God, stande fast in ryghteousnes and feare, and arme thy soule to temptacyon: sette thyne hert & be pacient, bow downe thine eare, receiue y wordes of vnderstandynge, and byynke not awate, when thou art entiled. Holde the fast vpon God ioyne thy selfe vnto hym, & suffre that thy lyfe may encrease at y last. What soeuer happeneth vnto the, receyue it: suffer in heynesse, & be pacient in thy trouble. * For lyke as golde & syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornaice of aduersite. Beleue in God and he shall helpe the: order thy waye aright, & put thy truste in hym. Holde faste his feare and grow therein. O ye y feare the Lorde take sure holde of his mercy: byynke not away from him that ye fall not. O ye y feare the Lorde, beleue hym and your reward shall not be emptye. O ye that feare the Lorde, put your trust in hym, and mercye shall come vnto you for pleasure. O ye that feare the Lorde, set your loue vpon hym, and your hartes shall be lychtened.

Consyder the olde generacyons of men (O ye chyldren) and marke them well: * was there euer any one confounded, y put his truste in the Lorde? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? Or whome byd he euer dyspyle, y called faythfully vpon hym? For God is gracious and merciful, he forgoeth synnes in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them y seke him in the truthe. Woe be vnto them, that hath bath a double hert, wycked lyppes and enel oc-cupped handes, & to the spinner that goeth two maner of wayes. Alse be vnto them þare loose of herte, whiche put not theiꝝ trust in God, and therfore shal they not be defended of hym. Alse be vnto them that haue lost pacyence, for taken the ryght waies, and are turned backe into fro-ward waies. What wyll they do when þe Lord shall begynne to vylset them?

C They that feare the Lord wyll not mys-truste hys worde, & they that loue hym, wyll kepe his commaundemente. They þe feare the Lord, wyll seke out the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto hym, & they þe loue hym, shal fulfyl hys lawe. They þe feare the Lord wyll prepare theiꝝ hartes, & humble theiꝝ soules in his sight They þe feare the Lord, kepe his commaunde-mentes, & wyll be pacyent tyl they se hym selfe saipnge. Better it is for vs to fall into the han-des of the Lord, then into þe handes of men: for his mercede is as great as hym selfe.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ To our father and mother ought we to geue double honoure of the blessing and curse of the father & mother. No man ought ouer curiously to seache out the secretes of God.

A The chyldren of wysedome are a con-gregacion of þe righteous, and theiꝝ exerccise is obedyence & loue. Heare me your father (O my dere chyldre) and do after that ye maye be safe. For þe Lord wyll haue the father honoured of the chyldren: and looke what a mother commaundeth her chyldren to do, he wyll haue it kepte. Who so honoureth his father, his synnes shal be forgiven him & and he that honoureth his mother: is lyke one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shal haue ioye of hys owne chyldren & when he maketh his prayer he shal be herd. He þe honoureth his father, shal haue a longe lyfe: & he that is obedyent for the Lordes sake, his mother shal haue ioye of hym.

B He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his father and mother, and doeth theiꝝ seruyce, as it were vnto the Lord hym selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in worde and in all pacience, that þe mayst haue goddes blessing, and his blessing shal abyde with the at the laste.

C The blessing of the father buyldeth vp þe houses of the chyldren, but the mothers curse roseth out the foundacyons. Reioyse not when thy father is reprovved, for it is not honoure vnto the but shame. For the worshippe of a mans father is hys owne worshippe, & where the father is withoute honoure, it is the dishonour of the sonne. My sonne, make muche of thy father in hys age, & greue hym not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandyng fayle, haue pacyence with hym, and despise hym not in thy strength. For the good dede þe thou shewest vnto thy father, shal not bee forgotten, & when þe thy selfe wantest it shal be rewarded the (& for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompenced with good, yee: it shal be founded for þe in ryghteousnes) & in the dayes of trouble thou shalt be remembred: thy synnes also shal melte a waie lyke as the yce in the saye warme wyther.

He that forsaketh his father shal come to shame, and he that despeth his mother, is curs-sed of God. My sonne perfourme thy woꝝkes with loupng mekenesse, so shalt thou be beloued aboue other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy selfe (in all thynges) & then shalt fynde fauoure in the syghte of God. For greate power belongeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

¶ Seke not out the thynges that are aboue thy capacite, and searcho not the ground of such thynges as are to mighty for the: but loke what god hath comaunded the, thinke vpon þe alway and be not curious in many of his woꝝkes. For it is not nedefull for the to see wth thine eyes the thynges þe ar secret. Make not þe to much searcho in superfluous thynges, & be not curious in many of his woꝝkes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the alreadye, which be aboue the capacite of men. The medlyng with suche hath begyled many a man, & tangled theiꝝ wyttes in vanyte Now he þe loueth pael shal perseye therein.

An harde harte shal fare euell at the laste, (and he that loneth daunger, shal perseye there in) an harte þe goeth two wayes, shal not pros-pere: and he that is frowarde of hart wyll euer be worse and worse. A wycked harte shal be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly spinner wyll beape one synne vpon another. The counceyl of the proude hath no health, for þe plant of synne shal be rooted oute in theiꝝ, and not knowen.
The hert of hym that hath vnderstanding shal perceyue hys thynges, & a good care wyll gladly herken vnto wysdome. An harte þe is wyle hath vnderstandyng, wyll abstaine from synne and encrease in the woꝝkes of ryghteousnesse.
Water quencheb burnyng synne, & mercede reconcilleth synnes. God hath respect vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym against þe tyme to come: so that when he falleth: he shal fynde a stronge holde.

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Almes must be done with all mekenesse. The study of wysdome and her frute. A iudge ought to be merciful. An exhortacion to escuse euell and to do good.

My sonne, & defraude not the poore of his almes, and turne not awaye thyne eyes frome hym that hath nede. Dyspyse not an hongry soule and despye not the poore in hys ne-cessyte: greue not the herte of hym that is helplesse, and wythdrawe not the gyfte frome the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face frome the nedye. Caste not thyne eyes asyde from þe poore for any euell wyll, that thou geue hym none occasyn to speake euell of the. For yf he complayne of the, in the bytternes of his soule, hys prayer shal be hearde, euen he that made hym: shal beare hym. Be curteous vnto the companye of poore: humble thy soule vnto the ruder, and bowe downe thy heade to a manne of woꝝ-shyppe. Lette it not greue the to bowe downe thyne eare vnto þe poore, but pay thy dette, & geue hym a frendly answer, and that wth mekenesse.

Delpuer

Of Iesus the Sonne of Syrach, Fol. xxxiij.

* Deluyver hym that suffreth wꝛonge from the hāde of the oppꝛessor, and be not saynt hered whan thou lyttest in iudgement. Be merciful vnto the fatherles as a father, & be in steade of an husbāde vnto their mother: so shalt thou be an obedyente sonne of the hꝛest: & he shal loue the more then thy mother doth. Wisdom bꝛethen lyfe into her chyldren, receaueth them that seke her, & wyl go before them in the waye of ryghteousnes. He pꝛoueth her, loueth lyfe, & they that seke her dyligently, shal haue great loy. They that kepe her, shal haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her, shal be the seruantes of the holye one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth care vnto her, shal iudge the heathen, and he that hath respecte vnto her, shal dwell safelye. He that beleueth her, shal haue her in possession, and his generacyon shal endure: for whā he falleth she goeth with hym, and closeth hym amonge the best. Feare, dꝛede, and temptacyon shal she bꝛynge vpon him, and tꝛye hym in her doctryne, tyll she haue pꝛoued hym in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then shal she stably she hym, bꝛynge the ryghte way vnto him, make him a gladman, she wyl hym her secretes, & heape vpon him yꝛ treasures of knowlege, vnderstandyng of ryghteousnes. But yf he goo wꝛonge, she shal forsake hym, and geue hym ouer into the handes of his enemye.

* My sonne, make muche of the tyme, eschue the thynge that is euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that bꝛyngeth synne, and there is a shame that bꝛyngeth woꝛshipp & fauoure: * Accept no personne after thyne owne wil, yꝛ thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersitie, & kepe not backe thy counsel whan it maye do good, nether hyde thy wysedome in her bewty. For in the tong is wysdome knowen, so is vnderstandyng knowlege and learnyng in the talkyng of the wysse and stedfastnesse in yꝛ woꝛkes of ryghteousnes. In no wysse speake agaynst the woꝛde of truth but be ashamed of the lyes of thyne owne ignorance. Shame not to confesse thyne erroure, & abynt not thy selfe vnto euery mā because of synne. Wythstande not the face of the myghtye and stꝛue thou not agaynst the streame. But for ryghteousnesse take paine with al thy soule and for the truth stꝛue thou vnto death, & God shal fyghte for the agaynst thyne enemyes. Be not hasty in thy tounge, neither slacke and neglygente in thy woꝛkes. Be not as a Lyon in thyne owne house, destroyng the household folkes, and oppꝛessing them that are vnder the. * Let not thine hand be stretched out to receaue, and shutte whan thou shuldest geue.

The. v. Chapter.

* In rycheesse maye we not put any confidence. The vengeance of God oughte to be feared and repentaunce maye we not slowe.

Ruste not vnto thy riches, * and say not tushe, I haue ynough for my life. (For it shal not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and temptacion.) Followe not the lust of thine owne herte in thy strength, and saye not: tushe, howe haue I had strenght, or who wyl bꝛynge me vnder because of my woꝛkes: for doubtles God shal aduenge it. And saye not: I haue synned, and what euell hath happened me: For the Almyghtye is a pacyente rewarder.

* Because thy sinne is forgiven the, be not therfore wythoute feare, neyther heape one sinne vpon another. * And saye not: tushe, the mercy of the Lord is greete, he shal forgive me my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is merciful, so goeth wꝛath, fro him also, & his indignacyon commeth downe vpon synners.

Make no taryng to turne vnto the Lorde & put not of from daye to daye: for sodenly shal his wꝛath come, & in the tyme of vengeance he shal destroy the. * Trust not in wycked ryches for they shal not helpe the in the daye of punymente & wꝛath. Be not carped aboute to euery wynde, and go not into euery waye: for so doth the sinner that hath a double tong. Stand fast in the waye of the Lorde, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the woꝛde, & folowe the woꝛde of peace & righteousness. Be gentle to be are the woꝛde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, and make a true aunswere with wysdome. * Be slowe to heare, but slow & pacyent in geuyng answer. If thou halte vnderstandyng, shap thy neyghboure an answer: If no, laye thy hand vpo thy mouth lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete woꝛde, & so cofounded. Honour and woꝛshipp is a mans wysse talkyng but the tonge of the vndiscrete is owne destrucyon. * Be not a pꝛeup accuser as long as thou lyuest, and vse no flaunder wyth thy tonge. For shame and sorowe goeth ouer the chefe, and an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but he that is a pꝛeup accuser of other men, shal be hated, enuyed and confounded. Se that thou in thyfye the small and greete a lyke.

The. vi. Chapter.

* It is the propertie of a sinner to be euell tonged. The doctrine and good counsel of the wysse is to be embraced, wisdom shulde be searched for. The pꝛeup after thys.

Be not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frendes sake, for who so is euell, shal be the heyze of rebuke and dishonoure, & whosoever beareth enuye and a double tonge offendeth. * Be not pꝛoude in the deuyce of thyne owne vnderstandyng (leaste thy strengthe be hurte by foolysenesse, and) leaste thy leaues wyther, and thy fruyte be destroyed, and so thou be left as a drye tree (in the wyldernesse.) For a wycked soule destroyeth hym that hathe it, maketh him to be laughed to scoꝛne of hys enemyes, (and bꝛynge th him to the porcyon of the vngodlye.) * A swete woꝛde multipliyeth frendes, and pacifieth them that be at variaunce, and a thankefull tonge wyl be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendeshyppe with manye, neuer thelesse haue but one counseller of a thousande.

Yf thou gettest a frende, * pꝛoue him fyrst, & be not hasty so geue him credence. For some mā is a frende, but for a tyme, & wyl not abyde in the daye of daye of trouble. And there is some frende that turneth to enemye, and taketh parte agaynst the: & yf he knowe any hurte by the, he telleth it out. * Agayne some frende is but a companion at the table, & in the daye of nede he continueth not. But a sure frende wyl be vnto the euen as thine owne selfe and deale faythfullye with thy household folke. Yf thou suffer troble and aduerfitye, he is wyth the, and hydeth not hym selfe from the. Departe frome thyne enemyes, yea, and beware of thy frendes.

Eccl. xxi. 12.

C A faythfull frende is a stronge defence, who so fyndeth suche one, fyndeth a treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare, the weyghte of golde & siluer is not to be compared to the goodnes of his fayth. A faithfull frende is a medicine of lyfe & they that feare the Lorde shall fynde hym. Who so feareth the Lorde shall prosper with frendes: and as he is him selfe, so shall his frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctrine from thy yowthe vp, so shalt thou fynde wysedome tyl thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth and soweth, and wayte paciently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes ryghte soone. Howe excedynglye sharpe is wysedome to vnlearned men: an vnstedfast bo-dye wyl not remayne in her. Vnto suche, she is as it were a touchstone, and he casteth her from hym in all the haste, for wysedome is with him but in name, there be but fewe that haue knowlege of her. (But with them that know her, she abydeth euen vnto the appearynge of God.)

Math. x. 16.

Geue eare (my sonne) receaue my doctrine, & refuse not my counsell. Put thy foote into her linkes, & take her pocke vpon thy necke: bowe downe thy shulder vnto her, beare her pacientlye, and be not werpe of her bandes. Come vnto her wyth thy whole herte, and kepe her wayes with al thy power. Seke after her, and she shall be shewed the: and when thou haste her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy greate ioye.

D Then shall her fetters be a stronge defence for the, and her pocke a glorious raiment. For the bewte of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the couplynge together of saluacion. Yea, a glorious raimente is it, thou shalt put it on, and the same crowne of ioye shalt thou weare.

Psalm. i. 1.

My sonne, yf thou wylte take heede, thou shalt haue vnderstandynge, and yf thou wylte applye thy mynde, thou shalt bewyse. If thou wylte bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine, and yf thou delyste in hearynge, thou shalt be wise. Stande with the multitude of suche elders as haue vnderstandynge, and consente vnto their wysedome with thine hert. * That thou mayest heare al godly sermons and that the worstye sentences escape the not. And yf thou seyst a man of dyscrete vnderstandynge get the soone vnto him, and let thy foote treade vpon the steppes of his doores. * Let thy minde be vpon the commaundementes of God, & be earnestly occupied in his lawes: so shall he stablysh thy hert, & geue the wysdome at thine owne desyre,

The. vii. Chapter.

We must so; sake euell, and yet not iustifye our selues. The behauioure of the wyse toward his wyfe, his frende his chyldren, his seruauntes, his father and mother the prelates, &c.

Do no euell, so shall there no harme happen vnto the. Departe awaye from the thyng that is wycked, & no misfortune shall medle with the. My sonne, sowe no euell thynges in the forowes of vnrightheousnes, so shalt thou not reape them seven folde. Labour not vnto man for anye Lorde wyppye, neyther vnto the kynge for the seate of honour. * Justifye not thy selfe before God, (for he knoweth thy hert) and despyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kynge. Make no labour to be made a Judge excepte it were so, that thou couldest myghtely put downe wickednes for if thou shouldest stonde in a we of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest fayle in geuyng sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the ctyte, and put not thy selfe among the people. * Binde not two synnes together, for in one sinne shalt thou not be vnpunished. Saye not: tush, God wyl looke vpon the multytude of my oblacions, and whan I offer to the hygheste God he wyl accepte it.

We not saynte herted whan thou makest thy prayer, neyther slacke in geuyng of almes. Laugh no man to scozne in þe upnesse of his soule, for God (whyche seyth all thynges) is he that can bypnyng downe, & set vp againe. Accepte not leasynge agaynst thy brother, neyther do the same against thy frend. Else not to make any maner of lie, for þe customes therof are not good. Make not manye wordes when thou arte among the elders: * & when þe prayest, make not muche babbling. * Let not laborious worke be tedious vnto the, neyther the husbandry which þe Almightye hath created. Make not thy boaste in the multitude of thy wickednes, but humble thy selfe euen from thine hert: and remember that the wrath, shall not be longe in taryng and that the vengeance of the fleshe of the vngodlye is a verpe fyre & worme. Geue not ouer thy frende for any good, nor thy faithfull brother for þe best golde.

Depart not from a dyscrete and good woman that is fallen vnto the for thy porcyon in the feare of the Lorde, for the gyft of her honestye is aboue golde. * Where as thy seruaunt wycketh trulpy, intreate hym not euell nor the bypnyng that is faythfull vnto the. Loue a discret seruaunt as thine owne soule: defraude him not of his lybertye, neyther leaue him a pooze man. * If thou haue catel, loke wel to them, & yf they be for thy profyte, kepe them. * If thou haue sonnes, bypnyng them vp in nouretour & learning & holde them in a we from their youth vp. If þe haue daughters, kepe theyr bodye, & shewe not thy face cherful toward the. Mary thy daughter, & so shalt thou perforce a weightie matter but geue her to a man of vnderstandynge. If þe haue a wyfe after thyne owne mynde, forsake her not, (but comit not thy selfe to the hateful) * Honour thy father fro thy whole herte: & for get not þe forowfull traunple þe thy mother had wyth the

with the: remember that thou wast borne thoro-we them, and howe canste thou recompence them the thynges that they haue done for the?
Feare the Lord with al thy soule, and honoure hys mynysters. Loue thy maker wyth all thy strength, & forsake not his seruauntes. Feare the Lord wyth all thy soule, and honoure hys praestes. * Geue them their porcyd of the fyrste frutes & increase of the earth, lyke as it is commaunded the: (and reconsole thy selfe of thy negligence wyth the lytle flocke) geue them the shoulders, and they appointed offerynges and fyrstlings: Reach thyne hande vnto the poore that God maye blesse the wyth plenteousnesse.
* Be liberal all vnto all men lyuinge, yet let not but do good euē vnto them that are deed. * Let not them that wepe, be wythout comforte, but mourne with such as mourne. * Let it not greue the to vylet the spycke, for y shall make the to be beloued, whatsoeuer thou takest in hande, remember the ende, & thou shalt neuer do amysse.

The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst thy better is no stryunge. Of the deathe of thyne enemye mayest thou not reioyce, nor dyspyse thy nephghours, nor the wordes of the wyse.

Stryue not with a myghty mā, lest thou chaunce to fall into his handes * Make not variaunce with a rygh-t man, lest he happen to byng vpon an harde quarell agaynst the. * For gold & siluer hath vndone many a man, yee, euē yhettes of kynnes hath it made to fall. Striue not with a man y is full of wordes: and laye no strokes vpon his fyre. Kepe no compaigny with the vnlarned, lest he geue thy kinned an euell re-poyte. * Dispyse not a man y turneth him selfe awaye fro syn, & cast him not in teeth wythall, but remember that we are frayle euerychone.
* Thynke scoone of noman in his olde age, for we waxe olde also. Be not glad of the deathe of thyne enemy, but remember y we muste dye all flosse of vs, (& faine wolde we come into ioy) * Dispyse not the sermons of such elders as haue vnderstandyng, but acquaynt thy selfe with y wise sentences of the, for of them y shalt learne wysdome and the doctrine of vnderstandyng, & howe to serue great men without complaint.
Go not from the doctrine of the elders: for they haue learned it of their fathers. For of the thou shalt learne vnderstandyng, so y thou mayeste make answer in y time of nede. Kindele not the coales of sinners, (whan y rebukest them lest y be brent in the fyre flammes of they synnes.
Resiste not the face of the blasphemers, y he lay not waite for thy mouth. * Lende not vnto him y is mightier then thy selfe: If thou lendest him count it but lost. Be not suertye aboute thy power: yf thou be: then thinke surely to paye it. Go not to lawe wth the Iudge: for he wyl iudge accor-dyng to his owne honour. * Trauayle not by the waye wyth him that is byapnelesse, lest he do the euell: for he foloweth his owne wyllfulnes, and so shalt thou perishe thoroowe his fol-we. * Striue not wyth hym that is angrie and cruell, and go not wyth hym into wyldernesse: for bloude is nothyng in hys syghte, and where there is no helpe he shall murther the. Eccl. vii. 9 * Take no counsell at fooles, for they loue nothyng but the thynges that please them selues * Make no counsell before a straunger, for thou canste not tell what wyl come of it. Open not thyne hert vnto euery man, least he be vnthankfull to the, and put the to reprofe.

The ix. Chapter.

The leopardes of chastenes are to be exchued. An olde frende is to be preferred before a newe. The glorie and riches of sinners.
Rygheous men shulde be hydden to geft: Labour is the chiefe thyng in a workman, and wysdome in a pryncer.

Be not gealous ouer thy wyfe of thy bolome, that she shewe not some shewed poynt of wycked doctryne vpon the. * Geue not pwyer of thy lif vnto a womā least she come in thy strength, & so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a womā that is despyous of many men, lest thou fall in to her snares. Use not the compaigny of a woman that is a player and a dauncer, & heare her not, lest thou perishe thoroowe her entysyng.
Beholde not a mayden, that thou be not purte in her bewtye. * Cast not thy mynde vpon har-leottes in any maner of thyng, lest thou destroy bothe thy selfe and thyne herytage. Go not a-boute gaspyng in euery lane of the cytye nether wander thou abroade in the stretes thereof. *
Turne awaye thy face from a bewtiful womā and looke not vpon the fayrenesse of other.

* Many a man hath perished thoroowe the bewtye of women, for thoroowe it the despye is kyndled as it were a fyre. An aduouterous woman shall be trodden vnder fote as myxe, of eue-ry one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wondering at the bewtye of a straunge womā hath bene caste oute, for her wordes kyndle as as a fyre. Syt not with another mans wyfe by any meanes, lye not wyth her vpon the bed, make no wordes with her at y wyne, least thine herte consent vnto her & so thou with thy bloude fall into destruction. Forsake not an olde frend for the newe shall not be lyke hym.

A newe frende is newe wyne: let hym be olde and thou shalt dyspyke hym wyth pleasure. Despye not the honoure and rychelesse of a synner, for thou knowest not what destruction is for to come vpon him. Despye not thou in the thyng that the vngodlye haue pleasure in, beyng sure, that the vngodlye shall not be accepted vntyll they graue.

Kepe the from the man that hath power to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayed of deathe.
And yf thou comest vnto hym, make no faute lest he happen to take awaye thy lyfe. Remember that thou goest in the myddeste of snares, & vpon the bulworkes of the cytye. Beware of thy nephghoure as nye as thou canst, & medle with such as be wyse and haue vnderstandyng Let iuste men be thy gesses let thy myghte be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy minde, & let all thy talkyng be in the commaundementes of the hyghest. In the han-des of the craftesmen shall the workes be commended, so shall the prynces of the people in the Wysedome of theyr talkyng. A man ful of woꝝdes is parlous in hys cōtype: and he that is rashe in hys talkyng, shal be abhoyred.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Of kynge and Judges. Pryde and couetousnes are to be abhoyred. Labour is praysed.

A Wylse iudge wyl order hys people wth dyscretion: and where a man of vnderstādyng beareth rule, ther goeth it well. * As the iudge of the people is hym selfe, euen so are hys officers: & loke what maner of man the ruler of the cite is, such are they that dwell therein also. * An vnwylse kyng destrōyeth his people: but where they that be in authoryte are men of vnderstandyng, there the cytie prospereth.

The power of the earthe is in the hande of God (and all iniquyte of the people is to be abhoyred) & whan his tyme is, he shal set a pꝛofytable ruler vpon it. In the hand of God is the power of man, & vpon the scribes shal he laye his honoure. * Remember no wꝛonge of thy neyghboure, & medle not thou wth no vnryghteous woꝝkes. Pryde is hatefull before God & man, & al wickednes of the heathē is to be abhoyred.

* Because of vnryghteous dealyng, wꝛonge blasphemys, dyuers dyscretes, a realme shal be translated from one people to another.

There is nothing worse the a couetous man. Why art thou proude, O thou earth & ashes? Ther is not a moare wycked thyng, then to loue money. And why? Suche one hath hys soule to sell, yet is he but fylthye dounge whyle he lyueth.

And though the dyspyscon shewe hys helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusyon it goeth after thys maner, to dāye a kyng, to moꝝowe deede. For whan a man dyeth, he is the heyre of serpentes, brastres, and woꝝmes. The begynnyng of mannes pryde, is to fall awaye frome God: And why? hys herte is gone from his maker, for Pryde is the oꝝygynail of all synne. Who so taketh holde thereof, shal be filled with cursynges, and at the laste it shal ouerthrowe hym. Therefore hathe the Lorde broughte the congregacions of the wycked to dyshonoure, and destrōyed them to the ende.

God hathe destrōyed the seates of proude pꝛynces, & set vpon the meke in theyr steade: God hath wethered the rootes of the proude heathē & planted the lowly among them. * God hathe ouerthrowen the landes of the heathen, and destrōyed them vnto the grounde. He hath caused them to wether away, he hath brought them to naughte, & made the memorial of them to cesse from out of the earth. (God hath destrōyed the name of the proude, & left the name of the humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, nether woꝝthfulnes for mens chyldꝛe. The seed of men & feare God, shal be brought to honoure, but the seed whych transgresseth the commaundementes of Lord shal be shamed. He & is the ruler amonge bꝛethꝛen, is holden in honoure amonge them, and he that regardeth suche as feare the Lorde. The glāze of the ryche of the honourable, and of the poꝛe is the feare of God.

Dyspysse not thou the lust poꝛe man, and magnifye not the ryche vngodly. Greate is the iudge and myghtie in honoure, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God. * Vnto the seruaunte that is dyscrete, shal the free delyver upce. * He that is wylse and wel nourtured, wyl not grudge when he is refourmed, and an ignoraunte bodye shal not come to honoure. Be not proude to do thy woꝝke, and dyspayre not in tyme of aduersite. * Better is he that laboureth and hath the plenteousnesse of all thynges, then he that is gorgeous, and wanteth bꝛeade.

My sonne, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her, her due honoure. Who shal iustify hym & synneth agaynst him selfe? Who wyl honour hym, & dishonoureth his owne soule? The poꝛe is honoured for his faithfulness and truthe, but the ryche is had in reputaciō because of his good des. He that oꝝdyeth him selfe honestly in pouerty, howe muche moꝝe shal he behaue hym selfe honestly in ryches? And who so oꝝdyeth hys selfe vnhonestly in ryches, howe muche moꝝe shal he behaue hym selfe vnhonestly in pouerty?

The .xi. Chapter.

¶ The prayse of humylyte. After the outwarde apperaunce oughte we not to iudge. Of beadye and rashe iudgements. The ryche is not without offence. All thynges come of God. All men are not to be bꝛoughte into thyne house.

He wysedome of hym & is brought lowe, shal lyfte vpon hys heade and shal make hym to syt among great men. Commende not thou a man in hys betwte, neyther dyspysse a man in hys vtter apperaunce. The Be is but a smal beast amonge the foules, yet is her frute excedyng swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, & exalte not thy selfe in the dāye of thy honoure for thy woꝝkes of thy best only are woꝝderful & glorious, secrete, & vnknoꝝen are hys woꝝkes. Many tꝛauntes haue bene sayne to sit downe vpon the erth. * & the vnykely hath woꝝne the crowne. Many myghty mē haue ben brought lowe, & the honourable haue bene deliuered into other mens hādes. * Cōdemne no mā before thou haue tryed out the matter, and whan thou hast made inquisicion, then refourme ryghteously. * Geue no sentence, before thou hast hard the cause, but fyrste let men tell oute theyr tales.

Strype not for a matter that toucheth not thy selfe, & stande not in the iudgemente of synners. My sonne medle not wth many matters * and yf thou wylte be ryche, thou shalt not get it: & though thou runnest thy way afoꝛe, yet shalt thou not escape. * There is some man & labourer & the moꝝe he werpeth him selfe, the lesse he hath agayne, some man is stoutfull, hath nede of helpe: wanteth strengthe, & hath greate pouerty, and Gods eye loketh vpon him to good, seteth hym vpon hys lowe estate, * and lyfeth vpon hys heade: so that many men maruell at hym, and geue honoure vnto God. * Prosperite & aduersite, lyfe and deathe, power & te and ryche come all of the Lorde. Wysdome, nourtoure, and knowlege of the lawe, are wth God.

God, loue and the wayes of good are with him. Erroure and darchenelle are made for synners (and they that exalte them selues in euell, waxe olde in euell.) The gyfte of God remayneth for the ryghteous, and the good wyll shall geue prosperite for euer. Some man is ryche by lypynge nypgardly, and that is hys porcion of his rewarde, in that he sayeth: * nowe I haue gotten rest, and nowe wyll I eate and dryncke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he consydereyth not, that the tyme draweth nye (and death approacheth) that he muste leaue all these thynge vnto other men, and dye him selfe. Stande thou faste in thy couenaunte, and excercise thy selfe therein, and remayne in the woꝝke vnto thy age. Continue not in the woꝝkes of sinners but put thy trust in God, & byde in thyne estate for it is but an easye thyng in the syght of God to make a poore man ryche, and yf sodenlye. The blessing of God hasteth to yf rewarde of yf ryghteous, and maketh his frutes sone to floꝝp & prospere. Saye not what helpeth it me: & what shal I haue the while? Againe, saye not: I haue ynough, howe can I wante? * When thou arte in wel fare, forget not aduersyte, & whe it goeth not wel with the, haue a good hope, that it shal be better. For it is but a smal thyng vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euerye man accordynge to hys wayes. The aduersyte of an houre maketh one to forgette all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, his woꝝkes are discouered. Prayse no bodye befoze hys deathe, for a man shal be knowne in hys chyldezen.

Bypunge not euerye man into thyne house, for the dysceatful layeth wayte dyuersly. Lyke as a parrich in a maunde, so is the herte of the proude: & like as a spyte that loketh vpon the fal of hys neyghboure. For he turneth good vnto euell, and slaundereth the chosen. Of one sparke is made a great fyre (and of one dysceatfull mā is bloude increased) & an vngodlye man layeth wayte for bloude. Beware of the dysceatful for he pynagyneth wycked thynges, to bypunge the into a perpetual shame. Yf yf takest an aleaunt vnto the, he shal destroye the in vnquietnes, and bypue the from thyne owne wayes.

The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Vnto whome we oughte to do good. Enemys oughte to be eschued.

When thou wylte do good, knowe to whom thou doest it, and so shalte yf be greatly thancked for thy benefytes. * Do good vnto the righteous and thou shalt fynde great rewarde though he not of hym, yet (no doubte) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alwaye occupped in euell & geueth no almes, for the byest hateth the synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shewe the woꝝkes of repentaunce. Geue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receaue not a synner. As for the vngodlye & sinners, he shal recompence ben graunce vnto them, & kepe them to the daye of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, & receaue not the synner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodly. Let not the breade be geuen hym, yf he be not myghty then thy selfe therein. For so shalt thou receaue twise as much euell, in all the good that thou doest vnto hym. And why? the hyghest hateth synners, and shal rewarde vengeance vnto the vngodly. In prosperite, a frende shal not be knowne & in aduersyte an enemye shal not be hyd. For when a mā is in wealth, it greueth hys enemies, but in heynynes, & trouble a man shal knowe hys frende. Trust neuer thyne enemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth hys wickednes. And though he make much crouchyng, and knelynge, yet kepe well thy mynde and be ware of hym. Set hym not by the nether let him syt at thy ryghte hāde lest he turne hym, get into thy place, take thy rowme & seke thy seat, & so thou at yf last remeber my woꝝdes, and be pricked at my saynges.

* Bynd not two synnes together, for there shal not one be unpunished. Who wyl haue pittie of the charmer, that is stinged of the serpent or of all suche as come nye the beastes? Euen so is it wyth him yf kepeth company wyth a wycked man, & lappeth him selfe in his synnes. For a season wyl he hyde with the, but yf thou stomble, he tarpeth not. * An enemye is swete in his lippes, he cā make many good woꝝdes & speake many good thynges: Yee, he cā weape with his eyes, but in hys herte he pynagyneth, howe to thꝛowe the into the pyt: & yf he maye find oportynyte, he wyl not be satysfied wyth bloude. If aduersyte come vpon the, thou shalt fynde him there fyrst and though he pretend to do the helpe, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal shake hys heade, and clappe hys handes ouer the for verpe gladnesse: and whyle he maketh manye woꝝdes, he shal dysguyle hys countenaunce.

The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ The companies of the proude & of the riche are to be eschewed. The loue of God: lyke do cōpānye with the lyke.

Who so toucheth pytych, shal be fylled wythall: and he that is famylar wyth the proude, shal clothe hym selfe with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanieth a more honozable mā than him selfe. Therefore kepe no famylaryte wyth one yf is rycher then thy selfe. Howe agre the ketel and the pot together: for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other it shal be broken. The ryche dealeth vnryghteouslye, and thꝛeateneith wyth all: but the poore beyng oppressed and wrongeouslye dealt with all, suffereth scarcenelle, and geueth sayre woꝝdes. Yf thou be for his profyte, he vsleth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake the. As longe as thou haste anye thyng of thyne owne he shal be a good felowe wyth the: yea, he shal make the a bare man, and not be sorpe for the.

Yf he haue nede of the, he shal defraude the: and (with a preuye moke) shal he put the in an hoose, and geue the all good woꝝdes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shal he shame the in hys meate, vntyl he haue supped the cleane vnto hys owne thꝛyse, & at the last shal he laughe the to scoꝝne. Afterwarde, when he seyth that that thou haste nothyng, he shal forsake the, & shake his heade at the. (Submit thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon hys hande.)

Beware that thou be not dysceaued and broughte downe in thy synplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysedome: lest whan thou arte broughte lowe, thou be disceaued thowowe foolyshenes. If thou be called of a myghtye mā, as sente thy selfe, so shal he cal the to him: the more ofte. Preasse not thou vnto hym, & thou be not shut oute. but go not & farre of, lest he forget & wythdrawe not thy selfe from his speech, but beleue not hys many wordes. For wyth muche communicaciō shal he tempte the, & (with a preuy mock) shal he quest: o & of thy secretes. The vnmmercifull mynde of his shal marcke thy wordes, he shal not spare to do & hurt, & to put the in pyrson. Beware & take good hede to thy selfe, for & walke in parell of thy ouerthrowinge.

Nowe when & hearest hys wordes, make the as though thou werest in a dreame, & wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, & cal vpo him in thy nede. Euerpe beaste loueth hys like, euen

Co let euerp man loue his neyghboure. Al flethe wyll resorte to the: lyke, and euerpe man wil kepe companie wyth luche as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth wyth the lambe, so doth the vngodly with the ryghteous. * What feloweshyppe shulde an holpe man haue with a dogge? How can the ryche & the poore agree together? The wyld Alle is the lyons praye in & wyldernesse, euen so are poore men & meat of the ryche. Lyke as the proude may not a way with lowlynes, euen so do the ryche abhoze the poore. If a rich mā fal, his frendes set him vp againe: but when the poore falleth, hys acquayntaunce forsake him. If a riche man fal into an erreure, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

DBut yf a poore man go wronge, he is punyshed: yea, though he be speake wylsele, yet can it haue no place. Whan the ryche man speaketh, euerpe man holdeth hys tonge: & looke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore mā speake, they saye: What felow is this? & yf he do amysse, they shal destroye hym. Ryches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in hys conscience, & pouerte is a wycked thinge in the mouth of the vngodly: The herte of a man chaungeth hys countenance, whether it be in good or euil. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good herte, for elles it is an hearde thyng to knowe the thoughte.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The offence of the tonge. Man is but a vayne thyng, happye is he that confyneth in wysedome.

Eccle. xix. c

Jaco. iii. a

Blessed is the man * & hath not fallen to the word of his mouth and is not pricked with the conscience of synne. happye is he & hath no heynenes in hys mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becommeth not a couetous man & a nigarde to be riche: & what shulde a nigarde do w gold? he & wythall hys carefullnes heapeth together vnryghteously, gathereth for other folkes, and another man shal make good cheare wyth his goodes. He that is wicked vnto him selfe, howe shuld he be good vnto other mē? howe can such one haue any pleasure of his goodes? There is nothyng worse, then whē one dissauogeth him selfe & this is a rewarde of his wyckednes. Yf he do any good he doth it not knowynge therof, & agaynst his wyll, & at the laste he declareth his vngyracyness. A nigarde hath a wycked eye he turneth away hys face, & dyspreth his owne soule. A couetous mā seeth neuer ynough in the porcyō of wyckednesse, vntyll the tyme & he wyther awaye, & hath losse his owne soule.

A wycked eye spareth bread, & there is scarcenes vpo his table. My sōne do good to thy selfe of & thou hast, & geue the Lozde hys due offerynges. Remember that death tarieth not, and howe & the couenaunt of & graue is shewed vnto & for & couenaunt of thys world shal dye the death. * Do good vnto thy frend before & dye, & accordyng to thy abylte reach out thine hande & geue vnto the poore. Be not dysapoynted of & good day & let not & porcyō of & good day ouerpass & shalt & not leaue thy trauails & labours vnto other men? In the deuydynge of the heritage geue & take & sanctifye thy soule. Woche & ryghteousnes before thy death, for in the hell there is no meate to fynde. * All flesch shal fade away like grasse, & like a floure & wythynge leafe in a grene tree. Some growe, some are caste downe euen so is & generacyō of all fleshe & bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is bozne. All transitory thynges shal fayle at & laste, & the wycker therof shal go withal. Euerp chosen worke shal be iustified, & he & medled wythal, shal haue honour therein. Blessed is the man & kepeth him in wysedome, & exercyseth hym selfe in vnderstandynge, & wyth dyscrecyon shal he thynke vpon the foreknowledge of God, whych considereth the wayes of wysedome in his hert hath vnderstandynge in hys secretes, goeth after her (as one & seeketh her oute) and continueth in her wayes. He loketh in at her wyndowes, and harkeneth at her doozes. He taketh his rest besyde her house, and fasteneth his stake in hys walles. He shal pytche his tentenye vnto her hande, & in hys tente shal good thynges reste for euer moare. He shal set his chyldren vnder her cowering, and shal dwel vnder her bzaunches. Under her cowerynge shal he be defended from the heate, and in her glozpe shal he rest.

The xv. Chapter.

The goodnes that foloweth hym which feareth God. God reiecteth and casteth of the spyner. God is not the author of euil.

He & feareth God, wyll do good & and who so kepeth the law, shal obtayne wysdome. As an honorable mother shal she mete him & as a vyrgyn shal she receaue hym. * Wyth the brace of lyfe and vnderstandynge shal she fed him, & geue him the water of whoisome wysedome to dreyne, & he be constant in her, he shal not be not be moued: and yf he holde hym selfe faste by her, he shall not come to confusion. She shall hyng hym to honoure amonge hys neyghbours, and in the myddest of the congregacyō shall he open his mouthe. Wyth the sprete of wysedome and vnderstandyng shall she fyll hym, and cloth him with the garment of glory. She shall heape the treasure of myght and ioye vpon hym and geue him an euerlastyng name to herptage. For the men wyl not take holde vpon her: but suche as haue vnderstandyng, wyl mete her. (Foolp the men shall not se her,) for she is farre from pryde and dysceate. Men that go aboute wylles, wyl not remembre her: but men of truthe shall be founde in her, and shall prosper euen vnto the beholdyng of God. Wyse is not semely in the mouth of the vngodly, for he is not sent of the Lorde. For of God cometh wysdome, and the wyse shall stande by the wysdome of God, and shall be plenteous in a faythfull mouthe, and the Lorde shall geue her vnto hym.

Save not thou: it is the Lordes faute that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thyng that God hateth. Say not thou: he hath caused me to do wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodlye. God hateth al abhomyng of erroure & they that feare God wyl loue none such. God made man from the begynnynge and left hym in the hande of his counsell. He gaue his commaundementes and preceptes: yf thou wylt obserue the commaundementes, & kepe acceptable faythfulness for euer, they shall preserve the. * He hath set water & fyre befoze the, reache oute thyne hande vnto whych thou wylt. Befoze man is lyfe and death, good and euell: loke what hym lyketh, shall be geuen hym. For the wysdome of God is grete and myghtie in power and beholdeth all men contynually. The eyes of the Lorde are vpon them that feare hym and he knoweth al the workes of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodlye, neyther hath he geuen any man space to synne.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Of vnhappy and wretched chyliden. No man shal hyde hym selfe from God. An exhortacion to the receauynge of instruction.

Delyte not thou in the multitude of vngodlye chyliden, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they fear not God. Truste not yf to theyre lyfe, & regard not theyre labours for one sonne that feareth God, is better, then a thousande vngodlye. And better is it for a man to dye wythoute chyliden, then to leaue behynde hym suche chyliden as are vngodlye. For by one that hath vnderstandyng, maye a whole cytie be vpholden, but though the vngodlye be many, yet shall it be wasted thowowe them. Many such thynges hath myne eye sene & greater thynges then these haue I hearde w myne eares. * In the congregacyō of y vngodly shall a fyre burne, & amonge vnfaythfull people shall the wrath be kyndled. * The olde gyauntes optayned no grace for theyre synnes, which were destroyed, trustyng to theyre owne strengthe. Nether spared he them, amonge whome Loth wyfch was a *straunger, Gen. xix. c but smote them and abhorred them: because of the pryde of theyre wordes. He had no ppyte vpon them, but destroyed all the people, that were so stoute in synne. * And for so muche as he ouersawe not the fyre hundreth thousande, that gathered them selues together in the hardenesse of theyre herte: it were maruell yf one beyng hardnecked, shoulde be fre. * For mercye and wrath is with him: he is bothe myghty to forgeue and to powre out dyspleasure. Lyke as his mercye is great, euen so is his punishment also, he iudgeth a man accordyng to hys workes. The vngodly shall not escape in his spyle, and the longe paycynce of hym that sheweth mercye, shall not hyde behynde. Al mercye shall make place vnto euery man accordyng to the workyness of hys workes, and after the vnderstandyng of hys pygremage.

Save not thou: I wyl hyde my selfe fro God for who wyl thynke vpon me, fro aboue I shall not be knowen in so great an heape of people, for what is my soule amonge so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee, the heauen of heauens the depe, the earth, and all y therein is shall be moued at his ptesence, the mountaynes, the hylls, and the foundacyōs of the earth shall shake for feare, when God dyspyteth them. These thynges doth no herte vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth euery hert, and who vnderstandeth hys wayes? Romanseyth his skowmes, and the moste part of his workes are secrete. Who wyl declare the workes of his ryghteousnes? Or who shall be able to abide them? For y couenaut is farre fro some, & tryng out of men is the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon suche thynges: but an vnwylle and erronys man casteth hys mynde vpon foolp the thynges.

My sonne, herken thou vnto me, & learne vnderstandyng, & merke my wordes wyth thyne herte, I wyl geue the a sure doctryne. & playnly shall I instructe the (marke my wordes then in thyne herte: for in ryghteousnes of the sprete do I speake of the wonders that God hath shewed amonge his workes from y begynnynge. And in truthe do I shew y knowledge of him) God hath set his workes in good order fro the begynnynge and part of them hath he sundred from the other he hath garnysed his workes fro euerlastyng and theyre begynnynges accordyng to theyre generations. None of them byndeth another, neyther was any of the dysobedyent vnto hys wordes. After this God looked vpon the earthe and fylled it wyth his goodes. Wyth al maner of lyuyng beastes hath he conered the ground, and they shall be turned vnto earth agayne.

The xviii. Chapter.

The meruelous workes of God, the mysterie and wze- chednes of man. Agaynst God ought we not to complayne. Wape must we continually.

H e lypueth for euermore, * made f all thynge together. God one- lye is righteous, and remayneth a vyctoryous kyng for euer.

* Who shall be able to expresse the workes of hym? Who wyl seke out the grounde of hys noble ac- tes? Who shall declare the power of hys great- nes? Or who wyl take vpon hym to tel out his mercede? As for the wonderous workes of the Lord, ther maye nothynge be taken from them nothynge maye be put vnto them, nether maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath done his best, he must begynne agayn and whē he thynketh to come to an ende he must go agayne to his labour. What is man? What to is he worthe? What good or euell can he do? * If the nombze of a mans dayes be almoost an hundred yere it is much.

Lyke as droppes of rayne are vnto the see, & as a grauell stone is in comparyson of the sand: * so are these fewe yeres to the dayes euera- stynge. Therfore is the Lord pacient wpyth the and podyeth out hys mercede vpon the. He saue and perceaued the thoughtes and ymagynacions of they herte, that they were euell, therfore hea- ped he vp hys mercifull goodnes vpon the, and shewed the the waye of ryghteousnes. The mer- cye that a mā hath, reacheth to his neyghboure: but the mercy of God is vpon all fliche. He cha- steneth, he teacheth and nourtoueth: pee, euen as a shepherde turneth agayne his flocke, so dothe he all them that receaue chastenynge, nourtour, and doctryne. * Mercifull is he vnto them, that stande in awe of his iudgementes.

My sonne, when thou doest good, make no grudgynge at it: and whatsoeuer thou geueste speake no dyscomfortable wordes. Shal not the dewe coole the hete? euen so is a word better the agyfte. * Is not a frendlye worde a good honell gyfte? but a gracypous man geueth them bothe. * A foole shall caste a man in the tethe, and that roughly, and a gyfte of the nygarde putteth out the eyes. Set f ryghteousnes before thou come to iudgemente. Learne before thou speake, and go to physpke or euer thou be sycke: * examen & iudge thy selfe, before the iudgemente come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the syghte of God. Humble thy selfe before thou be sycke, & in tyme of thy dysleale shewe the conuersacion.

* Let not to praye alwaye, and stande not in feare to be reformed vnto death, for f rewarde of God endureth for euer. Before thou prayeste prepare thy soule, and be not as one that temp- teth God. Thynke vpon the wrahtfull indyg- nacpon that shall be at the ende, and the houre of vengeance, whē he shall turne away his face. * When thou hast ynoughe remembze the tyme of hunger: and when thou art ryche, thynke vpon the pon the tyme of pouertye and scarcenes.

Frome the moynynge vntyll the eynynge the tyme is chaunged, and all such thynges are done in the syght of God. A wyle man feareth God in all thynges, & in the dayes of transgressyon he kepeth hym selfe from synne. A dyscrete man hath pleasure in wysedome, & he that fyndeth her, maketh much of her. They þ haue had vnderstandynge, haue dealte wylly in wordes, haue vnderstande the truth and righteoungnes: and haue sought out wyle sentences & iudgements. * If olo we not thy lustes, but turne þ from thyne owne wyl, for þf thou geuest thy soule her desyres, it shal make thyne enemyes to laugh the to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in greete voluptuousnes, and medle not to muche wylly all. Make not to great chere of the thyng þ thou hast wonne by aduantage, lest thou fale into pouertye, and haue nothyng in thy purse.

The. xix. Chapter.

Wylle and wylsdome bynge men to pouerte, in the wordes must thou vse dyscrecyon. The difference of the wysedome of God and man, wherþ thou mayest knowe what is in man. For recepyon must be used wyllyout anger.

A Laborynge man that is geuen vn to dronckennesse, shal not be ryche and he that maketh not muche of small thynges, shal fall by lytle & lytle. * Wylle and wemen make wylmen rennagates, and put men of vnderstandynge to reproue, and he that companyeth aduoucerers, shal become a wycked man. Mothes and wormes shal haue hym to herytage, yee, he shalbe set vp to a great example, and hys soule shalbe roted out of the number. * He that is hasty to geue credence, is lyghtemynded, & dothe agaynst hym selfe. Whoso reioyseth in wickednes, shalbe punyshed: he that hateth to be reformed: hys lyfe shalbe shortened, and he that abhorreth babylunge of wordes, quencheth wickednes. He that offendeth agaynst hys owne soule shal repent it: and he that reioyseth in wickednes, shalbe punyshed.

Rehearse not a wycked and churlythe word to wyle, and thou shalte not be hyndred. Shewe thy secretes nether to frend nor foe, and þf thou hast offended, tell it not. For he shal hearken vn to the and marke the, and when he findeth oportynite, he shal hate the (and so shal he be alway aboute þ). * Þf thou hast heard a worde agaynst thy neyghboure: let it be dedde wylly in the and belure, thou shalt haue no herme thereby. A sole traunpleth with a word, like as a woman that is payned wylly berynge of a chyld. Lyke as an arrowe shot in a dogges thygh, so is a worde in a foolles herte. * Tell thy frende hys faute least he be ignoraunt, and saye: I haue not done it, or þf he haue spoken: that he do it no more. Reproue thy neyghboure that he kepe hys tonge, and þf he haue spoken, that he say it no more.

Tell thy neyghboure hys faute, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and geue no credence to euerye worde. A man falleth sometyme wylly hys tonge, but not wylly hys wyl. * For what is he, that hath not offended in hys tonge, geue thy neyghbour warnynge, befoze thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the lawe of the Lorde. The stare of God is all wysedome, and he that is a ryghteous man, kepeth the law. As for the doctryne of wyckednesse, it is no wysdome and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednesse and abhomy nacion and blasphemynge of wysedome. A symple man of smal vnderstandynge: that feareth God is better then one that hath much wysedome, & transgresseth the lawe of the hyghest. A craftie soyle man can be wyle: but he is vnryghteous, and wylly gyftes he wasteth the open and manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humblye, and can duche wylly hys heade, yet is he but a disceuerer wylly in he hideth hys face * and dysguyseth it: and because he shuld not be knowne, he preuenteth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do þ no harme, yet when he maye finde oportynite he shal do some euell. A man maye be knowne by his face, and one that hath vnderstandynge maye be perceaued by the looke: of hys countenance. * A mans garmet, laughter: and going declareth what he is.

The. xx. Chapter.

Of the correction and repentance. Of the gyfte of the wyle man, and of the foole, of lpyng.

Some man * reproveth hys neyghboure ofte tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some man holdeth his tounge and he is wyle and dyscrete. It is much better to geue warning and to reprove, then to beare euell wylly: for he that knowlegeth hym selfe openly, shalbe preserved from hurt & destruccyon. Lyke as when a gelded man thowowe desyre and luste desyleth a mayden, euen so is it wylly hym that vseth violence: and vnryghteousnes in the lawe. O how good a thyng is it, a man that is reprovod to shewe openly hys repentance, for so shalt thou escape wylly synne.

Some man kepeth scylence, and is founde wyle, but he that is not ashamed, what he sayth is hatefull. Some man holdeth hys tounge, because he hath not the vnderstandynge of the language, and some man kepeth scylence, wyllyng a conueniente tyme. * A wyle man wylly holde his tonge tyll he se oportynite, but a wanton & vndyscrete bode shal regard no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shal hurte hys owne soule and he that taketh auctorytpe vpon hym vnryghteouslye, shalbe hated. Some man hath ofte tymes prosperytpe in wycked thynges, Agayne some man getteth much, and hath harme & losse. There is some gyfte, that is nothyng worthe, Agayne, there is some gyfte, whosere warde is double. Some man getteth a fall for beinge to proude, and some cometh to wyllypppe from lowe estate. Some man byeth much for a lytle pryce, and some must paye for it seuen folde.

* A wyle man with his wordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauoure of foolles, shal be poured oute. The gyfte of the vnwyle shal do the no good, for hys eyes are scuenfold. * He shal geue lytle, and say he geueth much: he ope Whoso buyldeth hys house wyth other mens cofte, is lyke one y gathereth stooness in wynter. * The congregacion of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, their ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodlye is set wyth stooness, but in theyr ende is hel, darchenes, and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wil holde fast the vnderstandynge therof: and the ende of the fear of God is wyledome and vnderstandynge. He that is not wyle, wyl not be taughte in good but the vnwyle man aboundeth in wyckednes and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstandynge. The knowlege of the wyle shal flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, and hys counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The herte of a foole is lyke a broken vessell he can kepe no wiledome. When a man of vnderstandynge heareth a wyle worde: he shal commend it, and make much of it. But yf a volupetuous man hear it, he shal haue no pleasure therein, but cast it behynde hys backe. The talkynge of a foole is lyke an heupe burthen by the waye but to heare a wyle man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacion, it is asked at the mouth of the wyle, and they shal ponder hys wordes in their hertes. Like as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wyledome vnto to a sole. As for the knowlege of y vnwyle, it is but darcke wordes. Doctryne is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters about his fete, and like manicles vpon his right hand. * A sole listeth by his voyce with laughter, but a wyle man shal scarce laugh secretly.

doughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse doughter is an herp tage vnto her husbnde: but she y commeth to dishonestye, bringeth her father in heynesse. A daughter that is paste shame, dys-honoureth both her father and her husband, the vngodly shal regard her, but they both shal dys-plese her. The playng of musycke is not mete wher heuines is: eue so is y correccion & doctrine of wysdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto foolles.

Who so tracheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potcherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man oute of an heupe slepe.

Who so telleth a foole of wysedome, is euen as a man, which speaketh to one that is a slepe. Whē he hath tolde his tale, he saith: what is y matter? When one dieth, lamentacion is made for hym: because the lyght fayleth hym, euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandyng. Make but lytle wepyng because of the dead: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is worse then the death. Seuen daies doo men mourne for hym that is dead, but y lamentacyon ouer the vnwyse & vngodly shulde endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Take not muche with a foole, and goo not with hym y hath no vnderstandyng. Beware of hym lest it turne the to trauaple, and thou shalte not be despyled with his synne. Departe from hym, and thou shalte fynde reste and shalt not be dꝛa wen backe into his foolishnes. What is heuer then leade? And what shulde a foole be called elles but leade? * Sande, salte, and a lumpe of yron is ealier to beare, the an vnwyse foolyshe, and vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of woode bound together in the foundacyon of the house cannot be lowled, euen so is it wyth y herte that is sta blished in the thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse shal nether feare nor be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayer plastered wall in a wynter house, and an hye buyldeyng, maye not abyde the wynde and stozme: euen so is a foolles herte afrayde in his ymaginacyon, he feareth at eue-ry thyng, and can not endure. (A wauerynge herte in the ymaginacion of a foole wyl not euer stand in a we, but he that abideth in the comaun dementes of God, wyl alway feare.) He y nyp- peth a mans eye byngeth forth teares, and he that pycketh the harte, byngeth forth the mea-nyng and thought. Who so casteth a stone at y byrdes frayeth them a waye: and he that blas-phemeth his frende, breaketh the frendeshyppe though thou dꝛewest a swerd at thy frend yet dispaire not, for thou mayst come again to thy frende. Yf he speake sowerly, feare not for ye maye be agreed together again, excepte it be y thou blasphemest hym, disdain hym, open his se-crettes and wound hym trayterously for al such thynges shal dryue a waye a frende.

See saythfull vnto thy neygbboure in his pouertie, that thou maist reioyce with hym al- so in his prosperite. Abyde stedfaste vnto hym in the time of his trouble, that y maist be heyre with hym in his herp tage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen befoze the fyre euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenyn- ges go befoze bloudesthedpyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyl not hide my face fro hym though he shulde do me harme. Who soeuer heareth it shal be ware of hym.

* Who shal set a watch befoze my mouth and a sure seale vpon my lyppes, y I fall not with them, and that my tonge destroy me not?

The. xliii. Chapter.

A prater agaynst pryde, lechery, & glotony. Of othes, blasphemie, and vnwyse comunicacyon. Of the thre kyndes of synnes. Many synnes procede of aduoutry. Of the feare of God.

Lord, father and gouernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymagina- cyon and counsell. O let me not fall in suche reprose. Who wyl kepe my thought with the scoutge, & the doc- tryne of wysedome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ygnorance, y I fall not with theim lest myne ygnorances increas, that myne of- fences be not many in number, and that my syn- nes excede not, lest I fall befoze myne enemies and so my aduersary reioyse. O Lorde: thou fa- ther & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr y- maginacyon. O let me not haue a proude looke but turne a waye all voluptuousnesse from me. Take from me the lustes of y body, let not y de- sires of vncleennes take hold vpon me, & geue me not ouer into an vnshamefast & obstinat minde.

Heare me (O ye chyldren) I wyl geue you a doctrine, howe you shal order poure mouthe who so kepeth it, shal not peryshe thozow his lyppes, nor be hurte thozowe wycked wordes. As for the synner, he shalbe taken in his owne vanytie: he that is proude and cursed, shal fall therein. * Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearpyng, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namyng of God be contynually in thy mouth: (and medle not with the names of sain-ctes, for thou shalte not be excused of them) for lyke as a seruaunt which is ofte punyshe can- not be wythoute some soore, euen so what so e- uer he be that sweareth & nameth God shal not be cleane purged from synne: A man y vseth muche swearpyng, shal be fylled with wycked-nes, and the plage shal neuer go from his house. Yf he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon hym, if he knowlage not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and yf he sweare in vayne, he shal not be found ryghteous: for his house shal be full of plages.

* The wordes of y swearer byngeth deeth (God graunte y it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, escheue all such, and lye not westerpyng in synne. * Use not thy mouth to vnhonest and fylthy talking, for in it is y worde of sinne. Remember vhy father & thy mother when thou arte set among grea-ten: lest God forget the in theyr synghete, & lest thou doryng in thy custome suffer rebuke, and wythe not to haue bene bozne & so curse the day of thy natypte. * The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemie, wyl neuer bee reformed all the dayes of his lyfe. twofle is to much, but the third bringeth wrath & destruccyon. An hote stomacke cannot be quenched: (euen lyke a burnyng fyre) til it hath swallowed vp some thyng: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in his flesh, til he haue kydded a fire.

D All hynde is swete to an whozemonger, he wyl not leane of tpe he haue his purpose. A mā that breaketh wedlocke, and regardeth not his soule, but saith: * Tyl he, who seyth me? I am compassed about with darckenesse, the walles couer me, no bodye seyth me: whome nede I to feare? The highest wyl not remembre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not that hye eyes see all thynges, for all such feare of men driueth a way the feare of God from hym: for he feareth only the eyes of men, and consydereth not y the eyes of the Lorde are clerer then the Sunne, beholdinge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokyng euen to mens hertes in secret places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they wer made, & after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon the all. * The same man shalbe openly punyshed in the stretes of y cytie: and shalbe chased abroade lyke a younge horse foale: and when he thynketh leaste vpon it, he shalbe takē. Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstand the feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it gooe also with euery wyfe, that leaueth her husband and getteth enherytaunce by a straunge marriage. * If y she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the hyghest. Secondely, she hath forsaken her owne husband. Thyrddly she hath playde the whoze in aduouerie, and gotten her chyldren by an other man. She shalbe brought oute of the congregacyon, and her chyldren shal be loked vpon. Her chyldren shal not take roote and as for frute, her brāches shal byng forth none. A shameful reporte shal she leaue behynd her, and her dishonoure shal not be put oute. And they that remayne, shal know that there is nothyng better then the feare of God: and y there is nothyng sweter then to take hede vnto the comaundementes of the Lord. A great worshyppe is to folow the Lord, for longe lyfe shal bee receyued of hym.

The. xliiii. Chapter.

A prais of wysdome procedyng forth of the mouth of God. Of her wordes and place where she resteth.

A Pledome shal praysle her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the myddeste of hys people: In the congregacyons of the hyghest shal she open her mouth, and tryumphe in the beholding of his power: In the myddest of her people shal she bee exalted and wondred at in the holyfulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe commended, and among suche as be blessed she shalbe prayled, and shal sape: I am come oute of the mouth of the hygheste, fyrste bozne before all creatures. I caused the lycht that sayleth not to arple in the heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwelling is aboue in the heygth, and my seate is in y pyl-ler of y cloude. I my self alone haue gone round aboute the compasse of heauen and pearled the grounde of the depe: I haue walked in the floudes of the sea, and haue stande in all landes: my dominyon is in euery people and in euery nacyon, and with my power haue I troden downe y hertes of all, both hye and low.

In all these thynges also I soughte rest, and a dwelling in some enherytaunce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a commaundement: and he that made me, appointed me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thyne enherytaunce in Israel, and roote thy selfe among my chosen. * I was created frome the begynnyng, and before the worlde, and shall not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. * In the holpe habitacyon haue I serued before hym, and so was I stablished in Si-on. * In the holpe cytie rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalem was my power: I tooke roote in an honorable people euen in the porcyon of y Lorde and in his herptage, and kepte me in the fulnes of the Saintes. I am set vp an hye lyke a Cedar vpon Lybanus, and as a Cypress tree, vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted like as a Palme tree in Cadex, and as a Roose plante in Jericho, As a sayre Olive tree in the feld, & am exalted lyke as a Plantayn tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes, as the Cynamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yea, a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrr of the beste.

I haue made my dwellynge to smell as it were of Rosen, Galbanum, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Lybanus when it is not bewen downe, and my odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Cerybint haue I stretched out my brāches, and my brāches are the brāches of honoure and lounyng sauoure. * As the vyne haue I brought forth frute of swete sauoure and my floures are the frute of honoure and riches. I am y mother of bewtie, of loue, of feare, of knowlage, and of holy hope. * In me is all grace and lyfe and truethe. In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue.

Come vnto me all ye that be despyous of me, and fyl your selues with my frutes: for my spiryte is sweter then honye: & so is myne enherytaunce more then the honye combe: the remembrance of me endureth for euer moare. They that ate me, shal haue the moare hunger, and they that drynke me, shal thyrste the moare. Whoso herkeneth vnto me shal not come to chafuson and they that worke in me shal not offende. They that make me to be knowen, shal haue euerlastyng lyfe.

All these thynges are the booke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the hyghest, and the knowlage of the truth. * Moses commaunded the law in the preceptes of ryghteousnesse for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and comitted the promyses vnto Israel. * Oute of Dauid his seruant he ordeined to rayle vp a moste myghty kyng sytting in the seate of honoure for euer moare. * This fylleth with wysdome lyke as the floud of Byfson, and as the floude of Tygrys, when the the newe fruytes are growynge.

Thys bypnygeth a plenteous understandyng lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp, as Iordajn in the tyme of haruest. This maketh nurture to breake forth as the lpght, and as the water Cyhon in the haruest. The spryke hath not known her perfectye, no more shall the laste seke oute the grounde of her. For her thoughte is fuller then the sea, & her counsell is profounder then the greate deepe.

as a great waterbrooke oute of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Doxyn, and as a water condite am

I wyll water the garden of my ponge plantes became excedyng greate, and my ryuer appo-ched vnto y sea. For I make doctryne to be vnto all men as light: as y faire morning, & I shal make it to be euer y clerer. I wil pearse thow all the lower partes of the earth. I wyll loke vpon all suche as be a slepe, and lighten al them that put they truste in the Lorde. I shal pet powze out doctryne, lyke as prophece & leaue it vnto suche as seke after wysdome, & their generacyons shal I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlastyng worlde. Beholde how that I haue not laboured for my selfe only, but for all them that seke after the trueth.

The. xxv. Chapter.

Of thre thynges whiche pleaseth God, and of thre whiche he hateth. Of nyne thynges that be not to be suspecte: and of the tenth, chesely of the malice of a woman.

These thynges there are, y my spiryte fauoureth, whiche be also alowed befoze God and men. * The vynte of byethzen y loue of neyghbours,
* a man and wife y agreeeth wel together. Thre thynges there be whiche my soule hateth, & I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of theim. A pooze man y is proude. A rich man that is a ly-er, and an olde body y doteth, and is vnchaste.

If thou hast gathered nothing in thy yowth what wylt thou fynde the in thine age: How pleasunt a thyng is it when grape headed men are discrete, and when the elders can geue good counsayle: How comely a thyng is wysdome vnto aged men: yea, vnderstandyng and counsell is a gloriouse thyng. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experyence & the feare of God is they worshyppe.

There be nyne thynges, whiche I haue iudged in myne herte to be happye, and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tongue. A man that whyle he lyueth, hath hope of his children, and seyth the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an houswyfe of vnderstandyng, * and that hath not fallen with his tonge, and that hath not bene faine to serue such as are vnmete for hym. Well is hym, that syn-dereth a faythfull frende: and well is hym, which talketh of wysdome to an eare y heareth hym.
Obowe greate is he, that fyndeth wysdome & knowlage: Yet is he not aboue hym, y feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto who it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shal he be lykened, y kepeth it fast: The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue and the begynnyng of faith is to cleaue fast vnto it.

The heynesse of the herte is all the punishmet and the wickednes of a woman goth aboue al All punishment and plage is nothyng in cōpa-ryson of the plage of the herte, euen so all wickednes is nothyng, to the wickednes of a woman.

Whatsoener happeneth vnto a man is nothyng in comparyson of it, that his euell wyl-lers do vnto hym: & all vengeaunce is nothyng to the vengeaunce of thyn enemye.

There is not a more wycked head then the head of the serpent, and there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a woman. * I wyll rather dwell w a Lyon and Dragon, then to kepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shal muffle her countenaunce as it were a beare, & as a sacke shal she shewe it among the neyghbours. Her husband is brought to shame among hys neyghbours & when he heareth it, it maketh hym to sygh. All wickednes is but lytle to y wickednes of a woman, y porcion of y vngodly shal fal vpon her.

Lyke as to clyme vp a sandy way is to y fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a styl quyet man. * Loke not to narrowly vpon the bewtye of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desire toward her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusyon. If a woman get the mastery, then is she contrary to her husband. A wicked wyfe maketh a soyy herte, an he nye countenaunce, and a deed wound. * Weake handes and feble knees is a woman y her husband is not the better for. Of y woman canie the begynnyng of synne: and thow her we all are deed. Geue thy water no passage, no not a litle: neither geue a wycked woman her wyll. If she walke not after thy hande, she shal confound the in the syght of thine enemyes. Cut her of the from thy flesch y she do not alway abuse the.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

Of the prais of a good woman. Of the feare of thre thynges, & of the fourth. Of the zelous and drunken woman. Of two thy-nges that cause sorow, & of the thirde whiche moueth wrath.

Appye is the man that hath a verteous wyfe, for the nombze of hys peres shalbe double. An honest woman maketh her hous bad a topful man, and she shal fyl the peres of his life in peace. A verteous woman is a noble gyfte whiche shal be geuen for a good porcyon vnto suche as feare god: Whether a mā be rich or pooze he maye haue euer a merye herte, and a cherefull countenaunce. There be thre thyn-ges that my herte feareth, & my face is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a cytie, a sedycious people, and noisome tonges, all these are deuy-er then death. But when one is zelous ouer his wyfe, it bypnygeth payne and sorowe vnto the herte and a woman y telleth out all thynges, is a scourge of the tonge. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is as when an vnlyke payze of Oren muske

The booke.

Judi. xvi. a. must drawe together, * he that getteth her getteth a Scorpion. A drunken woman is a great plague, for she can not couer her owne shame.

W The whoredome of a woman maye bee knowne in the pryde of her eyes and eyeliddes. * If thy doughter be not shamefast, holde her strait lye, lest she abuse her selfe thowowe ouer much lybertye. Beware of all the dishonestye of her eyes: and maruaile not if she doo agaynste the Lyke as one that goeth by the waye, & is thyrstye: so shall she open her mouth, and drynke of euery nexte water that she maye get.

By euery hedge shall she spytted downe, and open her quyuier agaynste euery arrowe. A louyng wyfe reioysyth her husbnde, and feedeth his bones with her wysdom. A woman of few wordes is a gyfte of God, & to all wel nurtered myndes maye nothing be compared.

C An honest an manerly woman is a gyfte a-boue other gyftes, and there is no weight to be compared vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it ariseth, is an ornameute in the hygge heauen of the Lorde, so is a vertuous wife the betwite of al her house. Lyke as the clere lyght is vpon f holy candlestyeke, so is the betwite of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pyllers are vpon f lockettes of syluer: so are the sayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetuall are the foundacyons that be layde vpon an hole stonye rocke: so are the comaundementes of God vpon f hert of an holy woman.

D There be two thynges that greue my herte and the thynde is a displeasure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre suffreth scarlesnes and pouerty. When men of vnderstanding and wysedome are not set by: And when one departeth from ryghteousnesse vnto synne. Who so doth such, the Lorde hath prepared hym vnto the swearde. There be two maner of thynges, whiche me thynke to be harde and parlous. A marchaunte cannot lyghtlye kepe hym frome wrong, neither a tauerneer hym selfe from syn.

The xxvii. Chapter.

¶ Of the poore that wolde be ryche. The probacyon of the man that feareth God. The vncoustantnes of a fool. The secretes of frendes, are not to be vttered. The wicked ymagineth euill whiche turneth vpon hym selfe.

Because of pouertye haue manye one offended: & he that seeketh to be ryche turneth hys eyes asyde. Lyke as a nayle in the walle stycketh faste betwixte two stones, euen so dooth synne stycke betwixte the byer and the seller. If he holde hym not diligentelye in the feare of the Lorde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one spytteth, the fylthynesse remaineth in the syue: so remaineth there some vncleane thing in the thought of man. The ouen proueth the potters vessel, * so doth temptation of trouble trye ryghteous men. * The tre of the felde is knownen by hys fruyte, so is the thought of mans herte knownen by his wordes. Prayse no man excepte thou haue hearde hym, for a man is knownen by his wordes. If f solowest ryghteournes, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon the as a sayre garmente. And shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the for ever: and in the daye of knowlage thou shalt finde stedfastnes. The birdes resozte vnto theyr lyke: so doth the truth turne vnto them that be occupied with all. The lyon wayteth the praye: so do the synners lurke vpon the workers of wyckednesse. The talkyng of hym that feareth God, is nothyng but wysedome: as for a fool he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be among the vndiscrete, kepe thy wordes vntill a conuenient tyme, but amonge such as be wysse, speake on hardelye. The talkyng of foolles is abhomyncyon, and theyr spozte is volupuousnesse and mysnurture. * Muche swearing maketh the here to stande by: and to stryue with such stoppeth the eares.

The stryfe of the proude is bloudebedding and their blaspheming is heuy to heare. * Who so discovereth secretes, leseth his credence, and fyndeth no frend after his wyll. Loue thy frend and hynde thy selfe in saythfulnesse with hym: but if thou betrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get hym agayne. For lyke as the man is f destroyth hys enemye: so is he also that dealeth falsely in the frendshipp of his neighbour.

Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go oute of his hande, cannot take her again: Euen so thou if thou geue ouer thy frende, thou canste not gette hym agayne. Yea, thou canste not come by hym: for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Raco escaped oute of the snare, for hys soule is wounded. As for woundes, they may be bound up agayne, and an euell worde may be reconcyled: but whoso betrayeth f secretes of a frend, there is nomoze hope to be had vnto hym.

* He that wyneketh with f eyes, ymagyneth some euell, and no man shall take hym from it. When f arte present he shall byghly comende and prayse thy wordes: but at the laste he shall turne his tale, and flaunder thy sayng. Many thynges haue I hated, but nothyng so euell, for the Lorde hym selfe also abhorreth suche a one.

* Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon his owne head: and he that smyteth with gyle, woundeth hym selfe: who so diggeth a pit shall fall therein (& he f laieth a stone in his neighbours way, shall stromble thereon) & he f layeth a snare for another shall be taken in it hym selfe. * Who so geneth a wycked noisome counsaill, it shall come vpon hym selfe, & he shall not knowe from whence: The proude blaspheme and are scornefull, but vengeance lurketh for them as a lyon. They f reioyse at the fall of the ryghteous, shall be taken in the snare: angurthe of hert shall consume them befoze they dye. Angre and rigorousnesse are two abhominable thynges, & the vngodlye hath them both vpon hym.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ We oughte not to desyre vengeance, but to forgiue the offence. Of the vices of the tongue, and of the daungers thereof.

He that seeketh vengeance, shall synde vengeance of the Lorde, whiche shall surely kepe hym hys synnes.

forgeue thy neyghbour the hurte that he hath done to the, and so shall thy synnes be forgeuen the also, when thou prayest. A man þ beareth hatred agaynst another, howe dare he despyre forgeuenesse of God? He that sheweth no mercye to a man which is lyke hym selfe, how dare he aske forgeuenesse of hys synnes? If he that is but fleshe, beareth hatred and kepe it, who wyl intreate for his synnes? Remember þ end and lette enemytie passe, whiche seketh deathe and destruccion, and abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remember the commaundementes so shall thou not bee rygorous ouer thy neyghbour. Thynke vpon the couenaunt of þ High-hest, and forgeue thy neyghbours ygnorance.

* Beware of stryfe and thou shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angry man kindleth variance, and the vngodlye disquieteth frendes and putteth discorde among them þ be at peace.

* The more wood there is: the more vehement is the fyre, and the mightyer þ men be, the greater is the wrath, and the longer the stryfe endureth, the more it burneth.

In hastye brawlyng kindleth a fyre, and an hastye stryfe shedeth bloude. A tonge also that beareth false wytnes byngeth deathe. If thou blow the sparke, it shall burne. If þ spyt vpon it, it shall go forth: & both these out of thy mouth.

* The slanderer and double tonged is cursed, for many one þ bec frendes setteth he at variance. The thirde tonge hath dysquyeted many one, and bypuen them from one lande to another. Stronge cyties of the ryche hath it brokē downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of grete men. (The strength of þ people hath it brought downe, and bene the decaye of myghty nacions.) The thyrd tongue hath caste out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours. Whoso herkeneth vnto suche, shall neuer fynde reste, and neuer dwell safelye. The stroke of the rodde maketh adders, but the stroke of þ tonge smyteth the bones in sonder. There be many þ haue perished with the sword: but many more thow the tonge.

Well is hym þ is kepte from an euell tonge: and cometh not in the angre thereof, whiche draweth not the pake of suche, & is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the pake thereof is of yron, & the bande of it of stele. The deathe thereof is a very euell deathe: hell were better for one then suche a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God. And the flamme thereof may not burne them. Suche as forsake the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be hable to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, & deuoure them as a leopard. Thou hedgest thy goodes w thornes, why dost thou not rather make dozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wayest thy golde and syluer, why dost thou not waye the wordes also vpon þ balaunce? Beware that thou styde not in thy tonge, & so fall befoze thine enemies, that laye wayte for the, (and thy fall bee incurable, euen vnto deathe.)

¶ The .xxix. Chapter.

¶ How we ought to lend our money, & do almesse. Of a faythfull man answering for his frende. Of liberalite & hospitalite.

Who so wyl thewe mercye * let hym A lende vnto hys neyghbour: and he that is able, let hym kepe the commaundement. Lend vnto thy neyghbour in tyme of his nede, and pay thou thy neyghbour again in due season. Kepe thy worde and deale faythfully with hym, and thou shalt alwaye fynde the thyng that is necessarye for the. There haue bene manye, that when a thyng was lent them, rekened it to be founde, and made them trauayle and labour that had helped them. Whyle they receyue any thyng, they kysse the handes of suche as geue them, for they neyghbours good they humble theyr voyce. But when they shulde pay again they kepe it backe, and geue euell wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet geueth he scarce the halfe again, and rekeneth þ other to be found. And if he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemye of hym, and that vnderfured.

He payeth hym with cursing and rebuke and geueth hym euell wordes for hys good dede.

There be manye one whiche are not glad for to lende, not because of euell, but they feare to lese the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacyence with the symple, and withholde not mercye from hym. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, & let hym not go emptye, from þ because of his necessite. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth.

* Gather thy treasure after the commaundemente of the hygheste, and so shall it bypynge the more profyte then golde: * Laye vpon thy almesse in the bande of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euell.

* A mans almesse is as a purse with hym, & shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye and after ward shall it arise and pay euery man his rewarde vpon his head. It shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enemies, better then þ shilde of a gyant, or speare of the myghtye.

A good honest man is suretye for his neyghbour, but a wycked person letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshyppe of thy suretye, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodly despyseth þ good dede of his suretye and the vnthankfull and ygnorante leaueh hys suretye in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghbour: and when he hath losse his honestye he shall forsake hym. Suretyeshyppe hath destroyed many a ryche man, and removed them as the waues of the sea. Mightie people hath it bypuen a waye, and caused them to wander in straunge countreys. An vngodly man trasgressyng the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall into the suretyeshyppe: and though he force hym selfe to get oute, yet shall he fall into the iudgement. Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power: and beware, that thou thy selfe fall not in such dette. * The chiefe thing that kepeth in thy lyfe, is water, and breade, clothynge, and lodgyng

Better it is to haue a poze luyng in a mans owne house, then delicate fare among y^e straunge content withall, and thou shalt not be blamed as a vaga bounde: for a myserable lyfe is it to go from house to house: & where a man is frended, he dare not open his mouth. Though he one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnworthye, and heare many bitter rough wordes, namely, thus: So thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy self and fede me also of that thou hast. Away, thou straunger (so that he regardeth his honoure no moze) my brother commeth into my house, and so he telleth hym the necessitie of his house. These thinges are heuy to a man y^e hath vnder standyng: namely, the forbidding of the house, and that the lender casteth hym in the teeth.

Who so loueth his chyldre * holdeth hym styll vnder correccion that he maye haue ioye of hym afterwarde and y^e he groye not after his neyghbours dozes. * He that teacheth his sonne, shall haue ioye in hym, and nede not to be ashamed of hym among his acquaintaunce. Whoso enfourmeth and teacheth his sonne, greuethe the enemye: and befoze his frendes he maye ioye of hym. Though the father dye yet is he as though he were not dead: for he hath lefte one behynde hym that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he saue hym and had ioye in hym, and was not sorry in his death: neyther was he ashamed befoze his enemyes. For he lefte behynde hym an auenger against his enemyes and a good doer vnto the frendes. For the lyfe of chyldren he shall bynde the woundes together, and his herte is greued at euery crye. An vntamed horse wyl be heard, and a wanton chyldre wyl be wyfull. If thou bypnyng vp thy sonne delicately, he shall make the aspyde: and if thou playe with hym, he shall bypnyng the to heynesse. Laugh not with hym, lest thou wepe with hym also, & least thy teeth be set on edge at the laste.

Eccle. vii. c.

* Geue hym no lyberty in his pouth, and excuse not his folye. Lowe downe his necke whyle he is yong, byt hym vpon y^e sydes, while he is yet but a chyldre, lest he ware stubburne, and geue nomoze force of the, and so shalt thou haue heynesse of soule. Teache thy chyldre and be dilygente therein, lest it be to thy shame. Better is the pooze bypnyng hole and strong then a man to be riche & not to haue his helth: helth and welfare is aboue all golde, and a whole bodye aboue all treasure. There is no rycheesse aboue a sounde bodie, and no ioye aboue the ioye of y^e herte. Death is better then a wretched lyfe and eternal rest better then continual sicknesse. The good thynges y^e are put in a close mouthe are lyke as when meate is laid vpon the graue so is he that is chased of the Lorde, and beareth the rewarde of iniquyte. He seeth with his eyes and grometh like a gelded man, that lieth with a vyrgyn & sygeth. * Geue not ouer thy minde into heynesse, and be not thy selfe in thyne owne counsaile. * The ioye and cherefulnesse of the hert is the lyfe of man, and a mans gladnes is the prolougynge of his daies. Loue thine owne soule, and comforte thyne herte: as for sorowe and heynesse, dryue it farre from the. * For heynesse hath slayned many a man, and byngeth no profyte, zeale, and anger shorten the dayes of the lyfe: carefulnesse and sorowe bypnyng age befoze the tyme. Vnto a mery herte euery thyng hath a good taste that he eateth.

The xxxi. Chapter.

¶ We oughte to geue dilygent hede to honestye. ¶ Of them that take paine to gather ryches. ¶ The praisse of a rich man without a faulte. ¶ We oughte to sipe dronkenness & folow sobrenes.

Trauaill and carefulnesse for * riches taketh awaye the slepe, and maketh the fleshe to consume. When one byteth and taketh care he awaketh euery lyke as a great sykenes breaketh the slepe. The rich hath great labour in gathering his riches together, & then with the pleasure of his ryches he taketh his rest, and is refreshed. But whoso labourerth, & prospereth not, he is pooze and though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He y^e loueth rycheesse, shall not be iustified: & whoso foloweth corrupcyon, shall haue ynough therof. * Many one are come in greate myffortune by the reason of gold, & haue founde their destruccyon befoze them. It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offer it vp, and all suche as be folowe fall therein. Blessed is the ryche which is found without blemish, and hath not gone after gold noz hysped in money & treasures. Where is there suche a one? and we shall comende hym, and cal hym blessed: for great thynges doeth he among his people. Whoso is tryed and founde perfect in suche thynges, shall be comended and praised. Whom y^e gyfte offende, and hath not offended? Who could do euell, and hath not done it? Therefore shall his good be stablyshed & the hole congregacyon shall declare his almesnes. If thou syt at a great mans table, open not thy mouth wide vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remember that an euell eye is a shewe.

What thyng created is worse then a wycked eye? therefore wepeth it befoze euery mans face: Laye not thyne hande vpon euery thyng that thyne eye seeth, and stryue not with hym in y^e dish. * Wonder by thy selfe, what thy neyghboure would sayne haue, and bee dyscrete in euery popnte. Eate the thyng that is set befoze the manerlye, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to much, lest thou be abhored. Leauethou of fyrst of al, because of nourtour, least thou be he whome no man maye satisfye, whiche maye turne to thy decaye. When thou syttest among many men, reache not thine hande out first of all. * Howe well content is a wyse man with a lytle wyne: so that in slepe thou shalt not be sycke therof, noz fele any payn. A swete whole some some slepe shal suche a one haue, and fele no inward greife. He riseth vp by tymes in the morning & is wel at ease in him selfe. But an vnstable eater slepeth vnquietly, & hath ach & payne of the body. If thou fealest þ thou hast eaten to much arysle, go thy way, cast it out of thy stomacke, & take thy rest: and it shal ease the, so þ thou shalte byynge no sicknesse vnto thy body.

My sonne, heare me, and dyspyle me not, and at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue tolde the. * In all thy workes be diligent and quicke so shal there no syknesse happē vnto the. * Who so is lyberall in dealynge oute his meate many men shal blesse hym, and prayse hym with their lippes: and the same is a sure token of hys loue and faythfulnesse. But he that is vnfaithful in meate, the hole cytpe shal complayne of him: & that is a sure experyence of hys infydelytie and wyckednesse. * Be not thou a wyne bybber, for wyne hath destroyed manye a man. The fyre proueth the harde yron, euē so doth wyne proue the hertes of the proude, when they be dronken. * Wyne soberly dronken, quyketh the lyfe of man. If thou drinkest it measurably, þ shalte be temperate. What lyfe is it that maye continue without wyne? (What taketh away lyfe: euē death.) Wyne was made from the be gynnynge to make men glad, & not for dronkennes. Wyne measurably dronken is a reioysynge of the soule & body. (A measurable drynkyng is helth to soule & body) But if it be dronke with excelle, it maketh bytternes and sorow vnto þ mynde. Drunkennes filleth the mynde of the folpe with shame & ruyne, miniseth þ strength and maketh woundes. * Rebuke not thy neyghboure at the wyne, and dyspyle hym not in hys myrthe. Geue hym no dyspylefull wordes, and please not vpon hym with contrary sayinges.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Of dyscrecion and prayse of the preacher, and of the hearer. Of the feare, fayth, and confidence in God.

If thou be made a Ruler, * pride not thy selfe therein, but be thou, as one of the people. * Take dyligente care for them and looke well thereto: and when thou hast done al thy dutye, set þ downe, that thou mayest be merce wyth them, and receaue a crowne of honoure. Talke wysely and honestly, for wysedome becommeth the ryghte well. Hyndre not musyke. Speake not, where there is no audience: * and poure not forth wysedome oute of tyme, at an inoportunte. Lyke as the Carbuncle stone shineth that is set in golde so dothe a longe garnyssh the wyne feaste: and as the Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the swetenesse of Musyke, by the myrth of wyne. (Geue care and be still, and for thy good behauioure thou shalte be loued.)

Thou yonge man speake that becommeth the, and that is profitable, and yet scarce when thou art twyle asked. Cōprehende muche with fewe wordes. In manye thinges be as one that is ignoraunte: geue care and holde thy tonge w all. If thou be amonge men of hyper auctorytie. dyspyre not to compare thy selfe vnto them: and when an elder speaketh, make not thou manye wordes therein. Befoze the thonder goeth ligh teninge, and befoze nourtour and shamefastnes goeth loue and fauoure. Stande vp by tymes, and be not the laste: but get the home soone and there take thy pastyme, and do what thou wilt so þ thou do none euell, and despy no man: but for all thinges geue thanckes vnto hym that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

Who so feareth the Lorde, wyll receaue his doctrine: and they that get them to him by tymes, shal fynde grace, he that seeketh the lawe, shalbe fylled wyth all: As for hym that is but fayned, he wyllbe offended thereat. They that feare the Lorde shal fynde the iudgement and their righteousnesse shalbe kindled as a lyghte. An vngodlye man wyll not be reformed, but can helpe him selfe with the example of other in hys purpose. A man of vnderstandynge dyspyleth no good counsayl: but a wyld and proude bodye hath no feare. (See, euē when he hath dealt rashlye with another man, but his owne dopnges shalbe hys rebuke) My sonne do nothyng without aduysment, so shal it not repente the after the dede. So not in þ way where thou mayest fal, nor wher thou maigest stumble agaynst the stone. Geue not thy selfe into a laborious slippyng waye, and beware of thy children, (and take hede of them that be thine owne household.) In all thy workes put thy truste in God, fro thy whole hert, for that is the keepynge of the comaūdementes. Who so beleueth Goddes word taketh heade to the comaūdementes: and he that putteth hys trust in the Lorde, shal want nothyng.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The deliuerance of him that feareth God. The answer of the wyse. The lytle dyscrecion of a foole. What is in the hande of God: as the earth is in the hande of the potter. We ought not to dyspose oure selues to become subiecte to other.

Here shal no euyl happen vnto him that feareth God: but when he is in temptacion, the Lorde shal deliuer him, and kepe him from euil. A wise man hateth not the law, but an ypo crite is as a ship in ragynge water. A man of vnderstandynge gyueth credence vnto the lawe of God, & the lawe is faythful vnto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke thereof: Be fyrste wel instructe, then mayest thou gyue answer. The hert of the folpe is lyke a cartewhele: and his thoughtes runne about lyke an axel tree. Lyke as a wild hourse that neieth vnder every one that sitteth vpon him, so is it with a scozeful frende. Why doth one dape excell an other, seynge all the dayes of the yere come of the Sonne? The wisdom of the Lord hath so parted them a son dre, and so hath he ordeyned the tymes, & solemne feastes. Some of them hath he chosen & halowed befoze other daies. And al men are made of the * grounde, and out of the earth of Adam. In the multitude of science hath the Lorde son dzed them, and made theyr wayes of diuers fassions. Some of the hath he blessed, made much of them, halowed them, & claymed them to hym selfe. But some of them hath he cursed, brought them lowe, Beholde, these are the woordes of the highest, & there are euer two agaynst two, & one set agaynst another. I am awaked by last of all, as one that gathereth after in haruest. Ec. xiii. d.

Hear me o ye great men of the people, and harken with your eares ye rulers of the congregation. Seeke not thy sonne and wyfe, thy brother & frende, power ouer the whyple thou lyuest and geue not away thy substance and good to another, lest it repent the: & thou be faine to beg therfoze thy selfe. As long as thou lyueste and hast b[ro]ther, let no man chaunge the: for better it is that thy chyldren to pray the, then that thou shuldest betayne to loke in their handes. In all thy woordes be excellent, that thyne honour be neuer stayned. At the tyme when thou shalt ende thy dayes, and synp[re] the thy lyfe, distribute thyne enheritaunce. The fodder, the whypp, & the burthen belongeth vnto the asse: Wheat, correction & woerde vnto thy seruaunt. If thou set thy seruaunt to labour, & shalt synde rest. But if thou let him go ydle, he shall seke liberte. The pocke & the whypp bowe downe the harde necke but tame & thy euell seruaunt with bondes and correctio[n]. Send him to labour & he go not ydle. If he be not obedient, bynde his fete: but do not to much vnto hym in any wyse, & without discrecion doo not bynge. * If thou haue a (faythful) seruaunt, let hym be vnto the as thyne owne soule: intreat hym as a brother for in bloude hast thou gotte him. If thou haue a seruaunt, holde him as thy selfe: for thou hast nede of hym, as of thy selfe. If thou intreat hym euell, and kepest hym hearde, and makeste hym to be proude and to runne a waye fro the, thou canst not tell what waye thou shalt seke hym.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ Of dreames, diuinations and enchauntements. We ought to confute wayne hope, & lyngs. The prayse of the that feare God. Of dyuerse woordes of men. God doth not allowe the woordes of an vnfaythfull man.

Wyle people begyle the selues with wayne and disceitful hope, and sooles truste in dreames. Whoso regardeth dreames, is lyke him & wyl take hold of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde. Ene so is it with the apperynges of dreames. Befoz the face, is the lykenes of a face. Who can be cleansed of the vncleane? What truth can be spoken of a lyer? Sothsayng, witchcraft, sozcerpe and dreampyng is but vanitie: lyke as when a woman trauyleth with chyld, and hath many fantasyes in her herte. Where as suche visyons come not of God, let not thine herte vpon them. For dreames haue dysceaued many a man, and fayled them that put theyr trust therein.

The lawe shall be fulfilled wythoute lyes, & and wysdome is sufficient to a faythful mouth. What knowledg hath he & is not tried? A wise man & is wel instruct, vnderstandeth much, & he that hath good experyence can talke of wysdome. He that hath no experyence knoweth lytle, and he that erreth, causeth much wyckednesse. He & is not tryed, what thynges knoweth he? Who so foloweth no rule is full of wyckednesse.

Whē I was yet in erreure, I learned muche also: yee, I was solearned & I could not expresse it all, and came ofte in perall of death therfoze, tyl I was deliuered from it (thozowe the grace of God.) Nowe I se, that they which feare God haue the right sp[re]te: for their hope standeth in hym, & can helpe them. And the eyes of the Lord are on them, that loue hym. Whoso feareth the Lord standeth in awe of no man, and is not afrayed for the Lord is his hope and comfort.

Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the Lord: In whome putteth he is truste. Who is his strenght? * For & eyes of the Lord haue respect vnto them, that loue him. He is their mighty protection, & strong grounde. A defence to the heat, a refuge for the hote noone daye, a succoure for stormyng, and an helpe for falling. He setteth vp the soule and lighteneth the eyes. He geueth lyfe, and blessing. He that geueth an offering of vnrp[re]teous goodes, his offering is refused: and the scornfull dealing of the vnrp[re]teous please not God (the Lord is theyr only, that paciently abide him in the way of the truthe, and of ryp[re]teousnesse. The h[er]est dothe not allowe & gyftes of the wicked.) And*, God hath no delite in the offerings of the vngodlye neyther maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblations. Whoso byngeth an offering out of the goodes of & poore, doth euen as one & kylleth the sonne, before the fathers eyes.

The bread of the nedefull is the lyfe of the poore: he & defraudeth hym thereof, is a man of bloude. Whoso robbeth his neyghbour of his liuing, doth as great sin as though he slew him to death. * He & defraudeth the labourer of his byre, is a bloude shedder. When one buyldeth & another byketh downe, what profit haue they the but labour? Whē one praiseth & another curseth, whose voyce wyl & Lord hear? * He & walsheth him self because of a deed bad, & toucheth the deed agayne, what doeth his washing? * So is it with a man & tasteth for his synnes, & doeth them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer? What doeth his fast ynge helpe hym?

The. xxxv. Chapter.

¶ It is well done to praye, and to do sacrifice. The prayer of sacrifices, and of the wyddowes and hym that humbleth hym selfe.

Whoso kepeth the lawe & byngeth offerings ynough. He & holdeth fast the commaundemente, offereth the ryght healt offering. He that is thankfull & recompenseth, offereth synne floure. * Whoso is merciful and geueth almes, that is the ryght chance thankofferynge. God hath pleasure when one departeth from sinne, and to forsake vnrpyghte onlines, reconpleth vs wyth hym.

* Thou shalt not appeare emptye before the Lord, for all such is done because of the com mandemente of God. * The offerynge of the rpyghteous maketh the aulter fat, and a swete smel is it before the Higdest. The offeryng of p rpyghteous is acceptable vnto God: and shal ne ver be forgotten. Gueve God hys honoure with a chearful herte, and kepe not backe the fyrstlin ges of thy handes. * In all thy gyftes shewe a merciful countenance, and halowe thy tithes vnto God with gladnesse. Geue vnto God ac cordynge as he hath enriched and prospered the * and looke what thyne hand is able, geue with a chearfull eye: for the Lord recompeneth, and geueth the seuen tymes as muche agayne.

Geue no vnrpyghteous gyftes, for such wyl be not receaue. Beware of wrongfull offeryng ges, for the Lorde is a rpyghteous Judge: and re gardeth no mans person. He accepteth not p per son of the pooze: but he heareth the praier of the oppressed. * He dispiseth not the despayre of the fa therles, nor the widdow, when she poureth out her praier before him. Doth not God se the tea res, that rine downe the cheakes of the widdow? Heareth he not the complaynte ouer such as make her to wepe? For from her cheakes do the teares go vp vnto heauen, and the Lord which heareth the doth accepte them. Whoso serueth God after his pleasur, shal be accepted: and his praier reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The praier of him that humbleth hym selfe, goeth thowowe the cloudes, tyll he come nye. She wyl not be comforted, nor goo her waye, tyll the hygheste God haue respecte vnto her, geue true sentence and perfourme the iudgemente. And the Lorde wyl not be slacke in commyng, nor tary longe tyl he hath smyt ten in soulder the backes of the vnnmerciful, and aduenged hym selfe of the Hea then: tyl he haue taken away the multitude of the cruell, and broken the Scepter of the vn righteous, tyl he geue euery man after his wor kes and rewarde them after theyr doinges: tyl he haue deliuered his people, mayntened theyr cause, and reioysed them in hys mercy. O howe fayre a thyng is mercye in the tyme of anguysh & trouble: It is lyke a cloude of rayne, that com meth in the tyme of a drouth.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

A prayer to God in the persone of all faythfull men: wyth the prayse of a good woman.

Aue mercy vpon vs O Lord, thou God of all thynges. Haue respecte vnto vs, shewe vs the light of thy mercyes, & sende thy feare among the heathen & straungers, whyche seke not after the, that they maye knowe howe that there is no God but thou, & that they may shewe thy wonderous worckes. Lifte vp thine heade ouer the outlandyshe heathen, that they maye learne to knowe thy myght, and power. Lyke as thou arte halowed in vs before them, so bypunge to passe, that thou mayest be magny fied also in the before vs: that they may knowe the, lyke as we knowe the. For there is none o ther God but onely thou, O Lord, Renue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous worckes. Shewe thyne hande, and thy rpyghte arme glo riously. Raile vp thy indignacion, and power oute thy wrath. Take awaye the aduersarye and smyte the enemye. Make the tyme shorte, remember thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous worckes maye be praised. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them that lyue so carelesse: and let them perishe that doth the people hurte. Smit in soulder the heade of the prynces that be oure enemyes, and saye there is none other but we.

Gather all the trybes of Jacob together againe, that they maye knowe howe that there is none other God but onelye thou, that they may shewe thy wonderous worckes, and be thou thy peoples herptage, lyke as frome the begyn nyng. O Lord, haue mercye vpon the people; that hath thy name, and vpon Israel, * whom thou haste lykened to a fyrste bozne soone. O be mercyfull vnto Jerusalem the cytye of thy Sanctuarpe. * the cytie of thy reste. Iyll shew on wyth thy vnspeakable vertues, and thy peo ple with thy glozy. Geue witness vnto thy cre ature, whome thou madest from the beginning and rayse vp the Prophecies that haue ben shewed in thy name. Rewarde them that wayte for the, that thy prophetes may be found fayth full. O Lorde, heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordynge to the blessinge of Aaron ouer thy people (& guyd thou vs in the waye of righ teousnesse) * that all they which dwel vpon the earth maye knowe that thou arte the Lord the eternall God, whiche is from euerlastynge.

The hely deuonreth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as the tounge tasteth vnylome, * so dothe an herte of vnder standynge marcke false wordes. A frowarde herte geueth heuynesse, but a man of experience lyftech him vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better then an other. A fayre wyfe reioiseth her husbände, and a man loueth nothyng better. If she be loupng and verteous wythall, then is not her husbänd like other men. He that hath gotten a verteous woman, hath a goodlye possession: she is vnto him a helpe, and pyller where vpon he resteth, Where no hedge is, there the goodes are spoy led: & where no houswyfe is, there the frendles mourneth. Like as there is no credence geuen to a robber, that goeth from one cytye to another: So is not the man beleued, p hath no nest: and must turne in, where he maye abyde in pnyght.

For a manes mynde is some tyme moze disposed to tell oute, then seven watchmen that sit aboue in an hygh place lokeynge aboute them. And aboue al this praye the hyest that he wyl leade thy waye in faithfulness & truth. Before al thy woorkes aske counsaile fyrst: & or euer thou doest any thyng, be wel aduysed. Ther be four thynges þe declare a chaunged hert, wherout there spyngeth euell and good: deathe & lyfe, and a masterfull tonge that bableth muche. Some man is apte and wel instructe in many thynges, and yet very vnprofitable vnto him self. Some man there is, that can geue wise & prudent counsaile, & yet is he hated, & continueth a begger: for þe grace is not geuen him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of al wysdome, yet is he wyse vnto him selfe & the frute of vnderstandynge is commendable in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wyse, and the frutes of his wysdome fayle not. A wise man shall be plenteously blessed of God: and all they that se hym shall speake good of hym. The lyfe of man, stādeth in the number of dayes, but the dayes of Israell are innumerable.

A wyse man shall obtayne faythfulnesse and reverence amonge his people, and his name shall be perpetual. My sonne, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: and þe thou se any euell thyng, geue it not vnto her. * For all thynges are not profitable for al men, nether hath euery soule pleasure in euery thyng. Be not greedy in euery eating, & be not to hasty vpon al meates. * For excess of meates byngeth syknes, & glotony cometh at þe last to an vnmesurable heate. Thorow surfet haue many one perished: but he that dieteth hym self temperatly, proulongeth his lyfe.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

A Physicion in syknes ought we to pray, and to fynde a physician which healeth by prayer. The bewepynge of the dead. Sadnes, wysdome. Artificers or craftesmen.

Doncur the Physicion, honour him because of necessity. God hath created hym (for of the best cometh medecyne) and he shall receiue gyftes of the kyng. The wysdome of the Physicion byngeth hym to great worship and in the syght of the great men of this world he shall honourably taken. The Lorde hath created medecine of the earth, & he that is wyse wil not abhorre it. * Was not the bitter water made swete wyth a tree, & men myghte learne to know the vertue therof? The Lorde hath geuen men wysdome, and vnderstanding, that he myght be honoured in his wonderous woorkes. With such doth he heale men, and taketh away theyr paynes: Of suche doth þe Apotecary make a confeccyon yet can no man perfourme all his woorkes. For of the Lorde cometh prosperous welth ouer all the earth.

My sonne, despyse not thys in thy syknes but praye vnto the Lorde, and he shall make the whole. Leue of from synne, and order thy bandes a ryght, clense thyne herte from al wickednesse. Geue a swete sauoured offering, and the fyne floure for a token of remembrance: make the offering fatte, as one that geueth the fyrste frutes, and geue rowme to the Physicion. For the Lorde hath created him, let him not go from the, for thou haste nede of hym. The houre maye come: that the sycke maye be helped thorowe them, when they praye vnto the Lorde, & he maye recouer, & get helth to lyue longer. He that synneth before his maker: shall fall into the bandes of the Physicion.

My sonne, byynge for thy teares ouer the deed: and beginne to mourne, as if thou haddest suffered great harme thy selfe, & then couer thy body after a conuenient maner and dyspyse not his burial. Enforce thy selfe to wepe & prouoke thy selfe to mourne, & make lamentacion expedyently, and that a day or two, lest thou be euell spoken of: & then comforte thy selfe because of the heupnesse. * For of heupnes cometh death, the heupnes of þe hert breaketh strength & pouertie greueth the hert in temptation and offence. Take no heupnesse to hert, dyspyse it awaye, and remembre the laste thynges. Forget it not, for there is no turnynge agayne. Thou shalt do hym no good, but hurte thy selfe. Remember his iudgement, thine also shall be like wyse: vnto me pesser daye vnto the to daye.

* Let

Of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Fol. xliij.

* Let the remembrance of the deepe cease in hys rest, and comforte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, seynge his sprete is departeth from hym. The wysedome of the scrype is at conueniente tyme of reste: and he that ceaseth from exercise and labour shal be wyse.

He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in p[ro]ddynge, and d[yr]ynge the oren, and goeth about w[ith] such wo[r]kes, he can speake of oren: he setteth hys herte to make fozowes, and is dyligent to gyue the h[er]ne fodder. So is every carpenter also and wo[r]kemaister that laboureth stylly nyghte and daye: he carueth, graueth, cutteth oute, and hys desyre is in sondrye conynge thynge, hys herte ymagineth howe he maye conynge cast an ymage, hys diligence also and watcynge perfourmeth the wo[r]ke. The p[ro]fitythe, in lyke maner bydeth by his stybe, and dothe hys dyligence to labour the p[ro]n. The vapour of the fyre burneth hys fleth & he muste fyghte w[ith] the heate of the foznace. The noyse of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, & his eyes loke stylly vpon the thynge that he maketh. He hath set his mynde thereupon, & he wil make out of his wo[r]ke, & therfore he watcheth, howe he may set it out, & bring it to an end.

So doth the potter syt by hys wo[r]ke, he turneth the whele about w[ith] his fete, he is dyligent and carefull in al doynges, & his labour and wo[r]ke is without nomb[er]. He fashyoneth the clape w[ith] his arme, & w[ith] his fecte he tempereth it. Hys herte ymagyneth howe he maye make it pleasaunte, & his dyligence is to clesse the ouen. All these hope in their handes, & every one thynketh to be conynge in hys wo[r]ke. Without these may not the cities be mayntayned, inhabited, nor occupied: and they come not bye in the congregacion, nether sit they vpon yndgement seates: they vnderstande not the conuenaunte of the lawe: they cannot declare equite & iudgemēt: they cannot finde out the darcke sentences, but thozow them that the creature of the worlde be mayntened, they praye concerneth onely the wo[r]ke and labour of conynge.

The xxxix. Chapter.

A wyse man. The wo[r]kes of God. Vnto the good, good thynges profite, but vnto the euil, euil good thynges are euil.

He that applyeth hys mynde to vnderstandynge the lawe of God, dothe dyligently seke oute the wysedome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyseth hym selfe in the p[ro]phetes. He kepeth the saynges of famous men, & p[re]sareth to ynderstanding of darcke sentences of wysedome. He seketh oute the mysterie of secrete saynges, and exerciseth hym selfe therein continually. He doth seruyce among great men and appereth befoze the p[ri]nce. He goeth into a straunge countrey, & traunyleth thozowe it: loke what good or euil is amonge men, he p[ro]neth it & seketh it out. He purpolet in his herte to resorte earlye vnto the Lord that made hym & to praye befoze the best God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & praieth for his synnes. Whē the great Lord wil, he shal be fylled w[ith] the sprete of vnderstandynge that he may then put out wise sentences, & geue thankes vnto the Lord in his prayer. He shal order his deuycce, & leade his knowledge a ryght: & geue hym vnderstandynge of secrete thynge. He shal shew forth the science of his learnynge, and reioyce in the conuenaunt of the lawe of the Lord. The whole congregacion shal commend his wysdome & it shal neuer be put out. The remembrance of him shal neuer be fozgotten, & his name shal continue fro one generacyon to another. His wysdome shal be spoken of among the people, & the whole congregacion shal openly declare his praise, while he liueth he hath a greater name then a thousand besyde: & after his death, the same name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyl I speake of moomen of vnderstandynge. For I am ful as the mone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chuldren) bynge forth the fruyte, as the Rose that is planted by the brookes of the felde, & geue ye a swete smel as Libanus. Florish as the Rosegardeyn synge a songe of prayse. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all his wo[r]kes. Geue glozpe and honoure vnto the Lord, shewe hys prayse w[ith] your lippes. Yee, euen w[ith] the songe of your lippes, w[ith] harpes, and playnge, and in geuyng thankes vnto hym, saye after this manner. * All the wo[r]kes of the Lord are exceeding good, and all hys commaundementes are mete and conueniente in due season.

A man nede not to saye: what is this? what is that? For at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, & at the word of his mouth the water stode stylly. * In his commaundement is every thynge acceptable & reconpled, and hys health cannot be mynyshed. The wo[r]kes of all fleth are befoze him, & there is nothynge hyd from his eyes. He seyth from euerlastynge to euerlastynge & there is nothynge to wonderfull, or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to saye then, what is this or that? For he hath made al thynges to do good vnto man. Hys blessing shal renne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earthe lyke a floude of water. Like as he maketh water foz drouth so shal his wrath fall vpon the heathen.

* His wayes are playne & right vnto the iust but the vngodlye stoble at them. For the good are good thynge created from the begynnynge & euil thynges foz the vngodly. * All thynges necessarye foz the lyfe of man are created from the beginning: water, fyre, salt, meale, whete and hony, mylke, and wyne, oyle, and clothynge. All these thynge are created foz the best to the faythfull. But to the vngodlye shal all these thynge be turned to hurt and harme. There be spretes that are created foz vengeaunce, and in theyr rigorosnes haue they fastened their tormentes. * In the tyme of the ende they shal put out theyr strength, & pacifye the wrath of him that made them. * Fyre, hayle, hunger, and deathe: all these thynges are created foz vengeaunce. The teeth of wilde noysome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the swerde are created also foz vengeaunce, to the destructio[n] of the vngodly.

¶ They shal be

The booke.

They shalbe glad to do his commaunde-mentes: and when nede is, they shalbe redy vpon earth: and when theyr houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commaundment of the Lord.

Therfore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the begynnynge, and thought to put these thynges in wytyng, and to leaue them be-hinde me. * All þe woorkes of the Lord are good & he geueth euery one in due season, & whē nede is, so þa man nede not to say: this is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt & good: And therfore prayse þe Lord with whole hert & mouth, and geue thanks vnto his name

The .xl. Chapter.

¶ As myseries lyght in a mans lyfe. All thynges passe awaye, but a fynde and a stable saythe remayneth: Of the blessinge of the ryghteous and prerogatyue of the feare of God.

A Greate trouaile is created for all men, and an heuie yocke vpon all men chyldren, frome the daye that they goo out of theyr mothers wombe, till they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thynges: namely their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the herte coun-cell, meditacions, longynge, and desyre the daye of death: from the highest that sitteth vpon the gloious seate, vnto the lowest and moost synple vpon the earth: from hym that is gozgiouly arayed, and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is but homely, and simply clothed. There is nothyng but wyathe, zeale, feartulnesse, vnquiet-nesse, & feare of death, rygourous, anger, & itryfe And in the nyght, when one shulde rest & sleape vpon his bed, the slepe chaungeth his vndersta-ndynge & knowlege. A lytle or nothyng is hys rest, in the sleape as wel as in the day of labour.

B He feareth and is dysquieted in the vision of his hert, as one that renneth out of a battaile and in the time of health he awaketh and marueleth that the feare was nothyng. Such thin-ges happen vnto al fleshe, both man and beast: but senē folde to the vngodly. For ouer, death bloudesthedynge, itryfe, and swearde, oppressiō hunger, destruction, and punishment: * these thynges are all created agaynst the vngodlye & for theyr sakes came the floude also. * Al that is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: and al waters ebbe agayne into the see. Al byzies & vnrightheousnesse shalbe put awaye, but saythfulnes and truth shal endure for euer. The substaunce & goodes of the vngodly shalbe dyped vpon and synke awaye as the water floude, and they shal make a soude like a great thōder in þe raine

C Lyke as the ryghteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the trangressours be faynte, when theyr goodes vanyshe and consume awaye. * The chyldren of the vngodlye shall not obtaine many byzaunches and the vncleane rootes vpon the hye rockes, shalbe rooted oute before the grasse by the water syde and vpon the ryuer banckes.

Frendlynesse and lyberallite in the increas and blessinge of God, is lyke a paradise & garden of pleasure: suche mercy also and kyndnes, endureth for euer. * To labour and to be cōtent with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt lyfe and that is to finde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chyldren and to repayre the cytie maketh a perpetuall name, but an honest woman is moze woorth then them bothe. Wyne and mynstrelly reioyce the hert, but the loue of wis-dome is aboue them bothe.

Hypynge and harpyng make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them bothe Thyne eye desyeth fauoure and beuote, but a grene seide tyme, rather then them both. A frend and companion come together at opportynite but aboue them bothe is a wife that agreeth w her husbāde. One by other helpeth another in þe time of trouble, but almes shal deliuer moze then them both. Gold and siluer fasten the feete but a good counsell is moze pleasaunt the them both. Tempozall substaunce and strenght, lyfe vpon the mynde: but the feare of the Lord wanteth nothyng, and nedeth no helpe.

The feare of the Lord is a pleasaunte garden of blessinge, and nothyng so bewtifull as it is. My sonne leade not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thoughte for his owne lyuyng howe to vpholde his lyfe, for he feadeth hym selfe with other mennes meate.
But a wyse and wel nurtered mā wyl be ware therof. Beggynge is swete in the mouth of þe vnchamefast, but in his belly there burneth a fier.

The .xli. Chapter.

¶ Of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the lawe of God. Good name and fame. An exhortacyon to geue hebe vnto wysedome. Of what thynges a man ought to be ashamed.

Deth, how bytter is the remembraunce of the, to a man that seeketh rest and comfort in his substaunce and ryches, vnto the mā þ hath nothing to vexe him, and that hath prosper yte in all thin-ges, yee, vnto him þe yet is able to receaue meat Death, howe acceptable and good is thy iud-gement vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strenght fayleth, & that is nowe in the last age, and that all thynges is full of care and fearful-nesse: vnto him also þe is in dyspayre, & hath no hope nor patience. Be not thou afraid of death remember them that haue bene before the: and that come after the: this is þe iudgemente of the Lord ouer all fleshe. * And why woldest thou be against the pleasure of the wyeste? Whether it be ten hundreth, or a thousande yeres: death asketh not howe longe one hath lyued.

The chyldren of the vngodly are abhomy-nable chyldren, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The inheritaunce of vngodly chyldren shal come to naughts, and the posterite shal haue a perpetual shame and cōfu-sion. The chyldren complaine of an vngodlye father, and why? for hys sake they are rebuked and dyspyled. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) whyche haue forsaken the lawe of the Highest God: yf ye be bozne, ye shalbe bozne to cursynge yf ye dye, the curse shalbe poure vpon you.

agayne

again: to go the vngodly also oute of the curse into destruction. The sorow of men is in theyr bodie: but the name of the vngodlye shal be put out. * Labour to get the a good name, for that shal contynue suer by the, then a thousande greete treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nobye of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

* Wy chyldeyn kepe wysedome in peace for wysdome that is hyd: and a treasure that is not sene, what profyte is in them both? A man that hydeth his foolyshe nesse, is better then a man y chydeth his wysdome. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges & alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth must proue and measure it. Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of leasping before the prynce & men of aucthorite: Of sinne before the Judge and ruler. Of offence before the cōgregation & people: Of vnryghteousnes before a companyon and frende. Of theste, before thy neighbours. * As for the truth of God and his couenaunte, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thine elbowes vpon the breaide: Be ashamed to looke vpon harlottes: Be ashamed to turne away thy face fro thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue. Be ashamed also to looke vpon another manes wyfe, and to make anye trispyng wordes with her maiden, or to stand by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vphayde thy frende when thou geueste anye thyng, caste him not in the teeth withal.

C The. xlii. Chapter.

Secretes maye not be opened. The lawe of God muste be taught. A daughter. A woman, God knoweth al thynges: yea, euen the secretes of thy herte.

Rearse not a thyng twyse, & disclose not the wordes, y thou hast hearde in secretes. Be shamefast & well manered in dede, so shal euery mā fauoure the. Of these thynges be not y ashamed, & accept no persone to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the couenaunte of Judgement to bypunge y vngodly fro his vngodlines vnto ryghteousnes: & to make him a good mā: to deale faithfully w thy neighbour & companyon: to distribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to be dyligente to kepe trewe measure and weyghte: to be contente whether thou gettest much or lytle: to deale trulye with temporal goodes: in bypunge & sellpunge, to bypunge wy chyldeyn with dyligence, to correcte an euil seruante, to kepe y thynge is from an euil wyfe to set a locke wher many hādes are: what thou delyuereest and geueste oute to be kepte, to tell it, & to wepe it: to wypte vp all thy oute geuyng & receaypunge: to enfourme the vnlearned and vndylle: Of the aged, that are iudged, of the yong y thou be diligent in these thynges, trulye thou shalte be learned & wyse and accepte of al men.

The daughter maketh the father to wathe secretly: and the carefulnes y he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yea, in the yowthe lest she shulde ouer growe hym: And when she hath an husbande, lest she shulde be hated: lest she shulde be despyled or rauished in her vyrgynphte, or got ten with childe in her fathers house: Or (when she cometh to the man) lest she behaue her selfe not ryghte, or contynue vnscrupetfull. * If thy daughter be wanton kepe her straptely, lest she cause thine enemies to laugh the to scorn, & the whole cite to geue the an euil repozte, & so thou be sayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before al the people. * Beholde not euerye bodys bewtpe, and haue not to muche dwellpunge amouge women. For lyke as the woyme & mothe cometh oute of the clothpunge so doth wyckednesse come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then wyth a frendlie wife that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remember the wordes of the Lorde, and declare the thynges that I haue sene. In the wordes of the Lorde are his wordes. The Sunne ouerlooketh all thynges with hys wyne, and all hys wordes are ful of the clearnesse thereof. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe that his sayntes shulde tell oute all his wonderous wordes, whyche the Almyghty Lord hath stablised? Al thynges endure in his gloze. He seketh out the grounde of the deepe, & the herte of men, & he knoweth all their ymaginacion and wysdome. For the Lorde knoweth all science, and he looketh into the token of the tyme. He declareth the thynges that are passe & for to come, & dyscloseth thynges y are secreete.

* No thoughte maye escape hym, neyther maye any worde be hid from hym. He hath garnished the hye excellent wordes of his wysdome, & he is from euerlastyng to euerlastyng. Vnto hym maye nothyng be added neyther ca he be minished, he hath no nede of any mans counsell. O, howe amplye are all hys wordes, and as a sparke to looke vpon. They lyue all, & endure for euer: and when soeuer nede is, they are all obedyente vnto hym. They are double, one agaynst another: he hath made nothyng that hath faute or blemyshe. * He hath stablised the goodes of euerye one: and who maye be satisfised with his gloze, when he seyth it?

C The. xliii. Chapter.

The Summe of the creatyon of the wordes of God.

The gloze of the hyght, is the sayre and clere fyrmant, the bewtpe of the heauen is hys gloriously cleares. The Sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the goyng out of it, a maruelous worke of the hyest. At noone it burneth the earth & who maye abyde for y heat therof? Who so kepeth an ouen when it is hote thre tymes more doth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, whē it bzyetheth out the fyrre beames & spyneth w the bzyghtnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the Lorde y made it, & in hys commaundement he causeth it to runne hastly.

* The Moone also is in al, and at conuenient season it sheweth the tymes & is a token of the tyme. * The token of the solempne feaste is taken of the Moone, a lyght y minisheth & increaseth agayne. The moneth is called after ymone it groweth wonderously in her chaungpunge.

The army of heuen also is in the hyght in the firmament.

firmamente of heauen: it geueth a cleare and gloriouse shyne. This is the clearenesse of the starres, the bewtyfull apparell of heauen, the apparel that the Lord lighteneth in the heygth. In his holie worke they contynue in theyr order, and not one of them faileth in hys watche.

 Gene. ix. b* * Loke vpon the rayne howe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in his shyne. He compasseth the heauen aboute with hys clearenesse and glorie, the handes of the hyghest hath bended it. Thowhe hys commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thunder of his iudgemente to sympte hastily. Thowhe his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the fowles. In hys power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broke the haille stones. The mountaynes melte at the syghte of hym the wynde bloweth accordynge to hys wil. The sounde of his thoder beateth the earth and so doth the storme of the North: the whoyle wynde also lyghteth downe as a feathered foule casteth out and spredeth the snowe abrode: and as the greshoppers that destroy al, so falleth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewtye of the withnesse thereof, and the herte is affrayed at the rayne of it. He poureth oute the frost vpon earthe lyke salte, and when it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the pycke of a thysle.

When the colde North wynde bloweth, harde they fall commethe of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynge together of water, and putteth on the waters as a breast plate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wylernes: & loke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medecyne of all these is whē a cloude commeth hastily: & when a dew commeth vpon the heate it shalbe refreshed agayne. In hys worde he styllteth the wynde: In hys counsel he setteth the depe, and (the Lord) Iesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of the paelles and harmes thereof, and when we heare it with oure eares, we maruaile thereat. For there be straunge wonderful worckes, dyuerse maner of nyce beastes & whalpyshes. Thowhe hym are al thynges set in good order, & parfourmed, and in hys worde all thynges endure.

I speake muche, but I cannot suffyciently attayne vnto it, for he him selfe onely is the perfection of all wordes. We shulde prayse the Lord after al our power, for he is greate in al hys worckes. The Lord is to be feared, yee, very greate is he, & maruelous is hys power. Prayse the Lord, and magnifye him as muche as ye may, yet doth he farre exceede al prayse. O magnifye hym with al your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able, suffyciently to prayse hym. Who hath sene hym, that he myghte tell vs?

 Deut. v. e*  John. i. b* * Who can magnifye hym so greatlye as he is. For there are hyd yet greater thynges then these be: as for vs, we haue sene but fewe of hys worckes. For the Lord hath made all thynges and geuen wysedome to suche as feare God.

The .xlviij. Chapter.

The prayse of certen holy men, Enoch, Noe, Abraham, Isaac & Jacob, Et vs commende the noble famous men, and the generacyon of our forefathers and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the Lord done, and shewed hys greates power euer sence the beginning. The noble famous men raygned in theyr kyngedomes, and bare excellent rule. In theyr wysedome and vnderstandynge, they folowed the counsel shewed in the prophetes. They led the folke thowhe the counsell & wysedome of the scribes of the people. Wyse sentences are found in their instruction. They sought the swetnes and melody of musyke, & brought forth the pleasaunte songes in scripture. They were ryche also, and coude comfort and pacify those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honourable men in theyr generations, and were well reported of in their times. These haue left a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shal alwaye be spoken of. Afterwarde, there were some, whose remembraunce is gone. * They came to naughte and perished as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene borne: yea, & their chyldren also with them.

Nevertheless, there are the lounge men, whose ryghteousnesse shal neuer be forgotten but contynue by theyr prosperyte. Theyr chyldren are an holie good heritage: Theyr seed endureth fast in the couenaunte. For theyr sakes shal theyr chyldren and seed continue for euer, & theyr prayse shal neuer be put downe. Their bodies are buryed in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euer moare. The people can speake of theyr wysedome, and the congregacyon can talke of theyr prayse. * Enoch walked ryghte and acceptably befoze the Lord: therefore was he translated for an example of a mendeunte to the generacions. * Noe, was a stedfast & ryghteous man, and in the time of wrath he became a reconsylynge. Therefore was he left a remnaunte vnto the earth, when the floude came. A neuerlastynge couenaunte was made with him, that all fleshe shulde perishe no moare with the water. Abraham was a greates father of manye people, in glory was there none lyke vnto hym. He kepte the lawe of the hyghest, and came into a couenaunte with him. He set the couenaunte in hys fleshe, and when he was proued, he was founde faythfull. Therefore swoze God vnto hym, with an othe, & he wolde blesse all people in hys seede, that he wolde multiplye and increase him as the duste of the earth, and to exhale hys seede as the starres: yee, and that hys seede shulde haue the possession, an inheritaunce of the lande from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the worlde.

* With Isaac dyd he stablyshe the same couenaunt, for Abraham his fathers sake. Yee, that gracious blesynge, and belth of all mens couenaunte dyd he stablyshe with Isaac, and made it rest vpon the heade of Jacob. He knewe hym in that he prospered hym so wel and ryghtly, and gaue them an heritage and sundred theyr porcyon by it selfe, & parted it amonge the twelve thelue trybes. Mercyfull men brought he out of him, which found fauour in y sight of al flesch

The. xlv. Chapter.

The prayse of Moses, Aaron, and Phinehas.

Moses beloued of God and menne, whose remembraunce is in his praise hym that the Lorde made lyke in y gloze of the sayntes, and magnified hym, so y the encynges stode in awe of hym, thowhe hys woordes he dyd great wonders. He made hym great in y syghte of kynges, gaue hym commaundement befoze his people, and thewed hym his glayous powe. He stablyhed hym with faythfulnesse and mekenesse, and chose hym out of all men. For he herde hys voyce, and he led hym in the darke cloude, * and there he gaue hym the commaundementes, yea, the lawe of lyfe and wylsdom that he myght teache Jacob the couenaunt and Israell hys lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of the trybe of Leuy, exalted hym, & made hym suche lyke. * An euerlastyng couenaunt made he with hym, and gaue him the presthode in the people. He made hym glayous in bewtyfull aray, and clothed hym with the garmente of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpon hym, and girded hym w strength. He decked hym with syde clothes, and a tynple, with an ouerbodye cote also and a gyrdle. Rounde about made he hym belles of gold and that many: * y when he went in, the sound myght be heard, that they might make a noise in the Sanctuary, & geue the people warnyng. The holy garment was wrought and brydged with golde, yelow sylke and purple. And in the brestlappe there was a goodly worke, wherein was fastened lyghte & perfectnesse.

* Upon the same also there was a woozke fastened, and set wyth costlye pcepyous stones, all bounde with golde: and this he broughte in hys mynstacyon. The stones were fastened for a remembraunce, after the nombze of y. xii. trybes of Israell. Upon his myster there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasure to looke vpon. Befoze hym were there sene no such fayze ornaments, and these it be-houed hym alway to vse. There myghte none other put them on, but onely hys chyldzen and his chylders chyldzen perpetuallie. Daily per-fourmed he his burnt offernynges two tymes. * Moses fylled his handes, and anoynted hym with holie oyle.

Thys was now confirmed hym wyth an euerlastyng couenaunte, and to hys sede, as the dayes of heauen, namely y his chyldzen should alway mynstre befoze hym, and perfourme the offyce of the Presthode, and wythe the people good in his name. Befoze all men liuyng chose he hym y he shulde offer incense befoze the Lord and make obours for a swete sauoure and reme-mbraunce that he shoulde reconyle the people of the Lorde wyth hym again. * He gaue hym au-ctoptye also in hys commaundementes and in the couenaunte that he shulde teache Jacob the statutes and testimonyes, and to enfourme Is-raell in hys lawe.

* Therfoze there stode by certayne agaynst hym, and had enuye at hym in the wyldernesse, namely they y wer at Dathan, & Abirams side and the surpous congregacyon of Choz. This the Lorde sawe: and it displeased hym, and in hys wathfull indygnacyon were they consu-med. A greate wonder dyd he vpon theim, and consumed them with the fyre. * Besyde this, he made Aaron yet more honourable and glayous. He gaue hym an herptage, and parted the fyrste frutes vnto hym. * Vnto hym specially he appoynted the breade for sustenance, (for the Priestes dyd eate of the offernynges of the Lorde) thys gaue he vnto hym and hys sede.

* Elles had he no herptage nor porcyon in the lande, and wyth the people. For the Lord hym selfe is his porcyon and enherptance.

The third noble and excellent man is * Phy-nehes the sonne of Eleazar, whiche pleased the God of Israell, because he had yzeale and feare of the Lorde. For when the people were turned backe, he put hym selfe for the ryghte soone, and that wyth a good wyll, to pacifye the wrathe of the Lorde towarde Israell. Therfoze was there a couenaunt of peace made with hym that he shulde be the pyncypall among the ryghteous and the people, that he and hys posteritye shulde haue the offyce of the Presthode for euer (Lyke as there was made a couenaunte wyth Dauid of the trybe of Iuda, that from among his sonnes onely there shulde be a kyng.) And that Aaron also and his sede shoulde be the herptage, to geue vs wylsdom in our hert, to iudge hys people in ryghteousnesse, that hys goodes shulde not come into forgetfulnesse, and y their honoure myght endure for euer.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The prayse of Josue, Caleb, and Samuel.

Manlye and stronge in battayle * was Jesus the sonne of Naue, whiche in steade of Moses the prophet was ge-uen to be a Capytaine of the people, whiche accordyng vnto his name, was a great saupoure vnto the electe of God to punyche the enemyes that rose by agaynst Israell, that Israell myghte obtayne theyr enherptance. How great, noble and excellent was he, whē he lefte by his hande, and drew out his sweard agaynst the ctyes. Who stode so manly befoze him? For y Lord hym self brought in y enemyes. * Stode not the Sunne styll at his commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two? He called vnto the hyghest and mooste myghtye, when the enemyes pleased vpon hym on euery syde, and the Lorde hearde hym with the hayle stones. They smote the heathenlye people myghtely, and in the fallyng doune they slewe all the aduersaries, so that the heathen knewe his hoste, and all his defence, that y Lorde hym selfe foughte agaynst them for he folowed by the myghtye men of them.

* In the tyme of Moses also, he and Caleb the sonne of Iephune, dyd a good worke, which stode agaynst the enemyes, withhelde the people from synne, and styllled the wycked murmuring. * And of syxe hundred thousande people of foote, they two were preserued to byrnyng the into the berptage, namely, a land that floweth with mylke and honey.

Jos. xiii. e.

* The Lorde gaue strengthe also vnto Caleb whiche remayned wyth hym vnto hys age, so that he went vp into the hygh places of the lande and his siede conquered the same for an berptage, that all the chyldren of Israel myghte see, how good a thyng it is, to be obedyente vnto the Lorde. And the Judges or rulers (euery one after his name) whose hert went not a whoyring, nor departed from the Lorde, and that for soke not the Lorde vnfaythfully, whose remembrance hath a good reposte.

Yea they bones flozethe out of theyr place, and theyr names shall neuer be chaunged, (but honoure remayneth styll wyth the chyldren of those holpe menne).

1. Reg. x. a. and. xvi. b.

C Samuel the prophete beloued of the Lorde hys God * ordeyned a kyng, and anoynted the princes ouer the people. In the lawe of the Lorde he iudged the congregacion, and the Lorde had respecte vnto Jacob: The Prophete was found diligent in his faythfulnesse: yea, & he is knowne faythfull in his wordes: because he sawe the God of lyghte. * He called vpon the Lorde Almighty, when the enemyes pleased vpon hym on euery syde, what tyme as he offered the suckyng lambs. And the Lorde thondered from heauen, and made his voyce to be heard wyth a greates noyse. He discomfyted the Princes of Tyre, and all the rulers of the Philistynes.

1. Re. xii. a.

* Before hys laste ende he made protestacyon in the syghte of the Lorde, and hys annoynted that he tooke nether substance nor good of any man, no, not so much as a shoe, and no man myght accuse hym. After this he tolde, that his ende was at hande, and shewed the kyng also hys ende and death, and from the earth lyfte he vp his voyce in the Prophecie that the vngodlye people shulde perishe.

The. xlvii Chapter.

The prayse of Nathan, Dauid, and Salomon.

1. Re. xli. a.

Afterward in the tyme of kyng Dauid there rose vp a Prophete called Nathan: For lyke as the fat is taken awaye from the offeringe, so was Dauid chosen oute of the chyldren of Israel. He tooke hys pastyme wyth the lyons, and wyth kyddes and wyth beares, lyke as wyth lambs. * Slewe he not a Gyaunte when he was yet but yonge, and tooke awaye the rebuke fro his people: what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, and smote doune proude Goliath with the syng: For he called vpon the Highest Lorde whiche gaue hym strength in his ryght hande, so that he ouerthrewe the mighty Gyaunte in the battayle that he myght set vp the borne of his people again.

1. Re. xlii. b.

* Thus broughte he hym to worshippe a-boue all Princes, and made him to haue a good reposte in the prayse of the Lorde, that he shulde were a crowne of glorie. * For he destroyed the enemyes on euery syde, rooted out the Philistynes hys aduersaries, and brake theyr borne in sunder, lyke as it is broken yet this day. In all his workes he praised the Highest and holdest, ascribed the honoure vnto hym.

Wyth hys whole herte dyd he prayse the Lorde, and loued God that made hym. * Hese theyr songers also before the aulter, and in their tyme he made swete songes.

He ordeyned to kepe the holpe dayes worshipfully, and that the solempne feaste thow the whole yere shulde be honozably holden with praisynge the name of the Lorde, & with syngynge by tymes in the moornyng in the sanctuary.

* The Lorde tooke away his synnes, and exhalted his borne for euer. He gaue hym a countenaunt of the kyngdom, and a throne of worshippe in Israel. * After hym there rose vp the wyle sonne called Salomon, and for hys sake he droue the enemyes awaye farre of. This Salomon rained with peace in hys tyme (for God gaue hym rest from hys enemyes on euery syde that he myght buyld hym an house in his name and prepare the Sanctuary for euer) like as he was wel instruct in his yowthe, and fylled wyth wylidome and vnderstandyng, as it wer with a water floude: He couered and fylled the whole land wth symilitudes & wyle prudent sentences.

Hys name wente abroade in the Isles, because of his peace he was beloued. All landes marueyled at his Songes, Prouerbes, symilitudes, and at hys peace, and at the name of the Lorde God, whiche is called the God of Israel.

* He gathered golde as tynne, and he had as muche syluer as leade. * He was moued in inordinate loue toward women, & was overcome in affection. He stayned his honoure & worshippe yea, hys posterite defyled he also in hyngyng the wrauth of the Lorde vpon his chyldren & sorrow after his ioye: * so that his kyngdome was deuoyded, and Ephraim became an vnfaythfull and vncoustant kyngdome. * Neuertheless, God forsoke not his mercye, nether was he utterly destroyed because of hys workes, that he shulde leaue hym no posterite. As for the seed he came vpon hym, whiche he loued, he brought it not utterly to naught but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Dauid out of hym.

Thus rested Salomon with his fathers, and oute of his sede he lefte behynde hym a very foolysheenes of the people, and suche one as had no vnderstandyng: * Euen Roboam, whiche turned away the people thow his counsell, & Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, which caused Israel to synne, & the wedd Ephraim a way of vngodlynes: In so much that they synnes & mysdedes had the vpper hande so sore, & at the laste they were dreyuen out of the lande for the same: Yea, he soughte oute and brought vp all wickednes, tyll the vengeance came vpon them.

The. xlviii Chapter.

The prais of Eliah, Elizeus, Ezechiah, and Esay.

Then

Of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Kol. xlii.

Then stode vp * Eliah the prophete as a fyre, and his worde bzente lyke a cresset. He broughte an hunger vpon them, and in hys zeale he made theim fewe in nombze. For they myghte not awaye with the commaundementes of the Lorde. Thow so woꝛde of the Lorde he wutte the heauen, * and thze tymes broughte he the fyre downe. Thus became Eliah honourable in his wonderous dedes. Who mai make his boast to be lyke hym: * One that was deed raysed he vp from deathe, and in the woꝛde of the hyst he broughte hym oute of the graue again. He cast doune kynges and destroyed them and the honourable from theyꝛ seate. Upon the mount Syna he hearde the punymente, and vpon Hozeb the iudgement of the vengeance. He propheted recompensing vnto kynges, * or dapped Prophetes after hym. * He was taken vp in the strome of fyre, in a charet of hores of the Lorde. He was ordeined in the reprounges in tyme to pacifye the wraethe of the Lorde, * to turne the hertes of the fathers vnto the chylde, and to set vp the trybes of Jacob agayne. Blesed were they that sawe the, and were garnished in loue, for we liue in lyfe: (but after death we shall haue no suche name.)

* Elia was couered in the skorne, but he-lyseus was fylled with his sprete. Whyle he lyued he was afraped of no wyce, and no man myght ouercome hym. There coude no woꝛde discerne hym, * & after his death his body propheted. * He dyd wonders in his lyfe, and in death were his woꝛkes maruelous. For al this the people amended not, neyther departed they from their synnes: * tyl they were caried away prysoners out of the lande, and were scatered abroad in all countreyes so that of them there remayned, but a very lytle people, & a pryncce vnto the house of Dauid. Howbeit some of them dyd ryght, and some heaped vp vngodlynes.

* Hezekias made his cytie stronge, conuey- ed hym water into it, dygged thow so the stoupe rocke with yron, and made vp a well by the water syde. * In his tyme came Sennacherib vp, and sente Rabshakes, lyfte vp hys hande agaynst Syon, and despyled theim with greute pryde. Then trembled theyꝛ hertes and handes so that they sorowed lyke a woman traueylng wyth chylde. So they called vpon the Lorde whiche is mercifull, and lyfte vp theyꝛ handes befoze hym. Immedyately the Lorde heard them oute of heauen: (he thought nomore vpon their synnes, nor gaue the ouer to their enemies:) but deliuered them by the hand of Elap. * He smote the hoste of the Assyrians, and hys Angell destroyed them. For Hezekias had done the thing that pleased the Lorde, and remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid hys father. As Elap the greate and faithfull prophete in the syght of God had commaunded hym. * In his tyme the sonne went backward: & he lengthened the kynges lyfe. With a ryghte spyrte propheted he, what shulde come to passe at the laste, & to such as were sozowfull in Syon: he gaue consolacyon, wherwith they myght comfort them selues for euermore. He shewed theynges þ were for to come, and secrete, or euer they came to passe.

The xlii. Chapter.

¶ Of Josiah, Hezekiah, Dauid, Jeremy, Ezechiel, Zorobabel, Iesus, Nehemiah, Enoch, and Joseph.

He remembraunce of * Josias is lyke as when the Apotecarpe maketh many pꝛecious swete smelling thinges together. His remembraunce shal be swete as honny in all mouthes and as the playng of Musycke at a banket of wyne. He was appointed to turne the people a gayne, and to take a waye all abhomyacions of the vngodly. He dyrected his herte vnto the Lorde, and in the tyme of the vngodly he set vp the woꝛshyppe of God agayne. All kynges (excepte Dauid, Hezekias and Josiah) commyted wyckednesse: for euen the kynges of Juda, also forsoke þ law of God. For they gaue theyꝛ horne vnto other, theyꝛ honour and woꝛshyppe also to a straunge people.

Therfoze was the elect cytie of the Sanctuarie bzente with fyre, * and the stretes thereof lay desolate & wast in the hande of Jeremy, for they entreated hym euell, whiche neuerthelesse was a Propheete ordeyned frome hys mother's wombe, that he myght roote oute, bꝛeake of * & destroye: and that he myghte buylde vp, and plant agayne. * Ezechiel sawe the gloꝛpe of the Lorde in a vision, which was shewed hym vpon the charet of þ cherubins. For he thought vpon the enemyes in the rapne, to do good vnto such as had ordred theyꝛ wayes aryght. And the bones of the twelue prophetes floꝛysshed from out of theyꝛ place for they gaue comforte & consolacion vnto Jacob, and deliuered the faithfully. * Howe shall we praise Zorobabel, which was as a ryng in the ryght hande?

* So was Iesus also þ sonne of Iosedec: these men in theyꝛ tyme builded the house, and set vp the Sanctuarie of the Lorde agayne: whiche was prepared for an euerlastyng woꝛshyppe. * And Nehemias is alwaye to be commended, which set vp for vs the walles that were broken downe, made the portes and barres agayne and buylde the houses of the newe. * But vpon the earth is there no man created lyke Enoch, for he was taken vp from the earth. * And Joseph whiche was Lorde of his bꝛethzen, and the vypholder of his people: hys bones were couered and kepte. Seth and Sem were in greute honoure among the people: and so was Adam aboue all the beastes when he was created.

The i. Chapter.

¶ Of Symon the sonne of Onias.

Symon the sonne of Onias the hye pꝛeste, whiche in his lyfe set vp the house agayne, & in hys dayes made fast the temple. The deygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldyng and the hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the welis of water flowed out, and were excedyng full as the sea. He toke care for his people, and deliuered them from destruction struccyon. He kepte his cytie, & made it stronge that it shulde not be beleged. He dwelte in honoure and worshipp among his people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, and his court. He gaue lychte as the mourning starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the Moone when it is full. He shined as the Sunne in the temple of God. He is as bright as the raynebow in his fayre cloudes, and flourisheth as the floures and roses in the spring of the yere, and as lyches by the ryuers of water. Like as the braunches vpon the mount Libanus, in the time of Sommer as a fyre and incense that is kindled. Like as an whole ornameute of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones, and as an Olive tree that is frutefull and as a Cypress tree, whiche groweth vpon hye.

When he put on the garment of honoure and was clothed with all bewte: when he went to the holpe aulter to garnyshe the coueryng of his Sanctuary: when he tooke the porcyons out of the Breastes bande, he hym self stode by his hartbe of the aulter, and his brethren round about in order. As the braunches of Cedre tree vpon the mount Libanus so stode they round about hym. And as the braunches of the Olive tree, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in their glorie, and the oblacions of the Lorde in their handes before all the congregacion of Israell. And that he myght sufficently perfourme his scrupce vpon the aulter, and garnyshe the offering of the best God, he stretched out his hand and tooke of the drinkoffring, and poured in of the wyne, so he poured vpon the botome of the aulter a good smel vnto the best Mynce.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to syng and to blowe with trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce & prayse vnto the Lorde. Then were all the people afrayed and fell downe to the earth vpon their faces to worshyppe the Lorde their God & to geue thanks to the Almighty God. They song goodly also with their voyces, so there was a pleasant noyse in the great house of the Lorde. And the people in their prayer, besought the Lorde the best, that he would be merciful tyll the honour of the Lorde were perfourmed, thus ended they their ministracion and seruice. Then went he downe & stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israell, that they shuld geue prayse and thanks out of their lyches vnto Lorde, and to reioyce in his name. He beganne yet once also to praye, & he mighte openly shewe the thankesgeuyng before his best, namely thus: O geue prayse and thanks (ye all) vnto the Lorde our God whiche hath neuer done noble & great thinges: whiche hath encreased our dayes from our mothers wombe, and delte with vs accordyng to his mercy: that he will geue vs the ioyfulness of herte, & peace for our tyme in Israell. Whiche saythfully keepeth his merce for vs euermore, and alwaye delyuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people that I abhorre from my herte: as for the thynde whome I hate, it is no people. They that syt vpon the mountayn of Samaria, the Philistines, and the foolish people that dwell in Sichymis.

I Jesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus, of Ierusalem, haue tokened by these informacions and documentes of wisdom & vnderstanding in this booke, and poured oute the wisdom of my herte. Blessed is he that exerceyth hym self therein: and who so taketh such to herte shalbe wise for euer. If he doo these thynges he shalbe stronge in all. For the lychte of the Lorde leadeth hym.

The li. Chapter.

A prayer of Jesus the sonne of Syrach.

I will thanke the O Lord and kyng and prayse the, O God, my sauour. I will yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper and hast preserued my bodie from destruction, from the snare of trayterous tounge, and from the lippes that are occupied with lyes. Thou hast bene my helper, from suche as stode vpon against me, and hast deliuered me after the multitude of thy merce, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from the roaring of them that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the handes of such as sought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them that troubled me and went about to sette fyre vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not brynte in the myddes of the fyre: from the depe of hell, from an vncleane tonge, from lying wordes, from wicked kyng, and from an vnyghteous tong. My soule shall prayse the Lord vnto death, for my lyfe drewe nyghe vnto hell downeward.

They compassed me rounde aboute on euery syde, and there was no man to helpe me. I looked aboute me, yf there were any man that wolde socour me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy, O Lord, and vpon thyne actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, that thou delyuerest suche as put their trust in the, and riddest them oute of the handes of the heathen. Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth and prayed for delyueraunce from death. I called vpon the Lorde the father of my Lord, that he wold not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude: I will prayse thy name continually, yeldyng honour and thanks vnto it: and so my prayer was heard. Thou saudest me from destruction and delyueredest me from my vnyghteous tyme. Therefore, will I acknowledge and prayse the, and magnifye the name of the Lorde.

When I was yet but yonge, or euer I went astraye, I despyed wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therfore before the temple, & sought her vnto the laste. Then floysthed she vnto me as a grape that is lone rypp. My herte reioysed in her, then went my foote the ryght way: yee from youthe vp, soughte I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receyued her. I found me muche wisdom: and prospered greatly in her. Therefore will I ascribe the glorie vnto hym that geueth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do ther.

do thereafter. I will be gelous to cleane vnto þe thing that is good, so that I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift myne handes on hye, the was my soule lyghtened thow wysdome, that I knowlaged my foolysnesse, I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one herte from the begynning, and I found her in clenness. And therfore that I not be forsaken. My hert longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thow her the Lord hath geuen me ane we tong, wherwith I will praise hym. * Come vnto me ye vnlarned & dwell in þe house of wysdome: withdrowe not youre selues from her, but talke and comune of these thynges, for youre soules are very thyrstye. I opened my mouth and spake: Come & by wysdome with out any money, howe doune your necke vnder her poke, and your soule shall receiue wysdome. She is hard at hand, and is content to be found. Behold with your eyes, * how that I haue had but lytle labour, & yet haue found muche reste. Receiue wysdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnes of siluer & gold in possession. Let your mind rest in his mercy, and be not ashamed of his praise. Wo ke his worke by tymes, and he shall geue you your reward in due season.

The ende of the booke of Iesus the sonne of Sirach: which is called in Latyne, Ecclesiasticus.

The booke of the prophet Baruch.

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Baruch wrote a boke during the captiuite of Babylon, which he red before Jechoniah and all the people. The Jewes sente the booke with money vnto Jerusalem, to the other brethren: to the intent that they shulde pray for them.

And these are the wordes of the booke, which were wrytten by Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasias, þe sonne of Sedechias, þe sonne of Sedechias, þe sonne of Belchias, at Babylon, in the fyfte yere, and in the vii. day of the moneth, what tyme as the Chaldees toke Jerusalem, and brente it by wyth fyre. And Baruch dyd reade the wordes of this booke, þe Jechoniah the sonne of Joachim kyng of Juda myght heare: & in the presence of all the people that were come to heare the booke: yea, and before all the noble kynges sones, before the Lordes of the counsel and elders: and before the hole people, from the lowest vnto the hiest: before al them þe dwelt at Babylon by the water of Soby. Whiche when they herd it, wept, fasted, & prayd before þe Lord. They made a collection also of money, accordyng to euery mans poure, and sente it to Jerusalem vnto Joachim the sonne of Belchias the sonne of Salon preast, with the other preastes and to all the people whiche were with hym at Jerusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornaments of the temple of the Lord (þe were taken away out of þe temple) that they myght bypnyng them agayne into the lande of Juda, the tenth daye of the moneth Syban: namely, syluer vesselles (whiche Sedechias the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda had made) after that Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon had taken Jechoniah, w all his prynces, lordes, & all the people, & led them captiue from Jerusalem vnto Babilon.

And they sayde: Beholde, we haue sent you money, * to buy you burnt offeringes & incence withall: make you vnlouened breade, and offere for synne vpon the alter of the Lord our God. * And pray for the prosperite of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, & for the welfare of Balthazar his sonne: that they daies may be vpon earth, as the daies of Heauen: þe God also maye geue vs strength & lighten our eyes, þe we maye lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, & vnder the proteccion of Balthazar his sonne: þe we may longe do them seruice, and synd fauour in their syght. Pray for vs also vnto the Lord our God, for we haue synned against the Lord our God & vnto this day, is not his wrath turned yet a waye from vs. And se that ye rede this booke (whiche we haue sent to you to bee reherled in the temple of þe Lord) vpon the hye daies, and at tyme conuenient.

Thus shall ye saye. * The Lord oure God is ryghteous, but we are worthy of confusyon, and shame: lyke as it is come to passe this daye vnto all Juda, and to euery one that dwelleth at Jerusalem: to oure kynges, prynces, preastes, prophetes, and our fathers. We haue synned before the Lord our God, we haue not put our trust in hym, nor geuen hym credence, we haue not obeyed hym, we haue not harkened vnto the voice of þe Lord our God, to walke in þe commaundementes that he gaue vs. Synys þe day that he brought our forefathers out of þe land of Egypt vnto this present day we haue beneuer a misbelouing & an vnfaithfull people vnto the Lord our God: destroyng our selues vtterly, & bringyng backe, þe we shuld not heare his voyce.

* Wherfore, there are come vpon vs greate plagues and dyuers curses. Lyke as the Lord deuised by Moyses his seruaunt: * which brought our fathers oute of the lande of Egypt, to geue vs a lande that floweth wyth mylke & honye, lyke as it is to se this daye. Neuerthelesse, we haue not harkened vnto þe voice of þe Lord our God, accordyng to all the wordes of the prophetes, whome he sent vnto vs & to our rulers: but euery man folowed his owne mynde & wicked ymaginacion: to offer vnto straunge gods & to do euell in the syght of the Lord our God.

The ii. Chapter.

¶ The Jewes confesse that they suffer iustly for their synnes. The true confession of the christen. The Jewes desyre to haue the wrath of God turned from them. The Lord wyl that we obeye vnto prynces all though they be euell. We promysed that he wyl call agayne the people from captiuite, and geue them a newe and an everlasting testamente.

the Lorde broughte vpon vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauen, lyke as it is fulfyllid in Ierusalem, * accordynge as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses: that a man shulde eate the fleshe of his owne sonne, & the fleshe of his owne doughter. Moreover, he hath deliuered them into the handes of all the kynnes, & are rounde about vs (to be confounded & desolate) and sca-tered them abrode in al landes & nations. Thus are we brought beneth and not aboue, because we haue synned against the Lorde our God, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce. * Therfore the Lorde oure God is ryghteous, and we with oure fathers (as reason is) are brought to open shame, as it is to se this daye. And as for these plagues that are come vpon vs alredy, the Lorde hath deuoyd them for vs: yet wolde we not prae vnto the Lorde our God & we myght turne euery man from his vngodly waies. So the Lorde hath caused suche plagues to come vpon vs: for he is ryghteous in all his workes, whiche he hath comaunded vs: whiche we also haue not done, nor harkened vnto his voyce: for of Egypte with a mighty hande, wyth tokens and wonders, wyth thy great power, and outstretched arme: & hast gotten thy selfe a name, as it is come to passe this daye, O Lorde our god we haue synned, we haue done wyckedly, we haue behaued our selues vngodly in al thy righ-teousnes. Turne thy wrath from vs we be-seche the for we are but a fewe left among the heathen, where thou hast scattered vs. * Heare our prayers (O Lorde) & our petitions: byng vs out of captiuyte, for thyne owne sake: geue vs fauoure in the sight of them, which haue led vs a way: that all landes may know that thou arte the Lorde oure God: and & Israel and his generacion calleth vpon thy name.

the dead that be gone downe to their graues, & and serue the kynge of Babylon, so shall ye re-mayne styl in the lande, that I gaue vnto your fathers. If ye wyll not do thys, nor heare the voyce of the Lorde your God, to serue the kynge of Babylon: I shall destroye you in the cyties of Iuda: within Ierusalem & wythoute, I wyll also take you from the voyce of mirth, and the voyce of ioye, the voyce of the bydegrome and the voyce of the byde, & there shal no man dwel more in the lande: But they wolde not hearken vnto thy voyce, to do the kynge of Babylon seruice: & therfore hast thou perfourmed the wodes that thou spakest by thy seruauntes the prophetes: namelpe, that the bones of oure kynnes and the bones of our fathers shulde be translated oute of theyr places. And lo, now we are they layed out in the heate of the sunne, & in the cold of the nyght, & deed in great misery, with hunger, with sword with pestilence, & are cleane cast forth. As for the temple wherein thy name was called vpon, thou hast laide it waste, as it is to se this daye: & that for the wyckednes of & house of Israel, & & house of Iuda. O Lorde our God, thou hast intreated vs after all thy goodnes, & accordynge to al that great louyng mercy of thyne, lyke as thou spakeste by thy seruaunt Moyses, in the day when thou didest comaunde him, to writ thy lawe befoze the chyldren of Israel, sayng: * If ye wyll not berken vnto my voyce, then shall this greete multitude be turned into a verye small people, for I wyll scatter them abrode. Notwithstandynge, I am sure & this folke wyll not heare me: for it is an harde-necked people, but in the lande of their captiuite, they shall remember them selues, and learne to know, that I am the Lorde their God, whē I geue them an herte to vnderstand, and eares to heare. Then shall they prae me in the lande of their captiuyte: and thynke vpon my name. Then shall they turne them from theyr harde backes, and from theyr vngodlynesse. Then shall they remember the thynges, that happened vnto theyr forefathers, whych synned agaynst me. So I wyll byng them agayne into the lade which I promysed wyth an oth vnto theyr fathers: Abraham, Isahac, & Iacob, & they shall be lordes of it: yee, I wil increase them, and not mynyshe them. * And I wyll make another couenant with them: such one as shal endure for euer, namelpe, that I wyll be theyr God, & they shal be my people: and I wyll nomore dryue my people the chyldren of Israel, oute of the lande that I haue geuen them.

The. iii. Chapter.

The people continueth in theyr prayer begon for their deliue-rance. he prayeth wylfully vnto the people, shewynge that so great aduersities came vnto them for the dyspysing thereof. Only God was the synder of wisdom. Of the incarnation of Christ.

AND now, O Lorde Almyghty, thou God of Israel, oure soule that is in trouble, and oure spyrte that is vexed, cryeth vnto the: heare vs (O Lorde) and haue ppyte vpon vs for thou arte a merciful God, be gracys vnto vs, for we haue synned befoze the. Thou endu-rest for euer, shulde we then vtterly perishe? O Lorde almyghty

Lord Almighty, thou God of Israel.

Hear now the prayer of the deed Israelites and of the children, which have sinned before thee, and not hearkened unto the voice of the Lord thy God, for the which cause these plagues have come upon us: O Lord, remember not the wickedness of our fathers, but think upon thy power and name now at this time: for thou art the Lord our God: the Lord will we praise. * For thou hast put thy fear in our hearts, to the intent that we should call upon thy name, and praise thee in our captivity, and that we might turn from the wickedness of our fathers, & sinned before thee.

Beholde, we are yet this day in our captivity, where as thou hast scattered us, to be an abomination, curse, and syn: * lyke as it hath happened unto our fathers also, because of the wickedness, and departing from thee.

O Israel, heare the commandmentes of life: ponder them well with thyne cares, that thou mayst learne wisdom. But how happeneth it Israel, that thou art in thyne enemies lande thou arte waken olde in a straunge countrey, & despyled with the deade. Why art thou become lyke them, & go downe to the graves? Even because thou hast forsaken the well of wisdom: for if thou haddest walked in the way of God truly, thou shouldst have remained safe in thyne owne land. * O learne then where discrecyon is, where vertue is, where understanding is, that thou mayst knowe also from whence cometh longe lyfe, a necessary liuing, the lyghte of the eyes, & quietnes. Who ever found out her place? & who ever came into her treasures.

Where are the princes of the heathen become, & such as ruled the bestes upon the earth? They that had theyr pastyme with the foules of the ayre, that hoorded up siluer & gold (wherein mentruist so much) & made no ende of theyr gathering: What is become of them & coynd siluer, and were so carefull, & could not byng theyr workes to passe? They be rotted out, and gone downe to hell, and other men are come up in their steades. Young men haue sene lyght, and dwelte upon earth: but the waye of reformation haue they not knowen, nor understande the pathes thereof: nether haue they children receyued it: yea, righte farre is it from them. It hath not bene heard of in the lande of Canaan, neyther hath it ben sene at Cheman.

The Agarenes soughte after wisdom, but that which is earthly, lyke as the marchauntres of the lande do. They of Cheman are conyng also, and they labour for wisdom and understanding: but the way of true wisdom they knowe not: neyther do they thinke upon the pathes thereof. O Israel howe greate is the house of God: and how large is the place of his possession: * Great is he & hath no ende: yea, & unmesurable. What is become of those famous gyautes, that were so great of bodies, and so worthy men of warre? Those had not the Lord chosen, neyther haue they founde the waye of reformation, therefore wer they destroyed, and for so muche as they had no wisdom, they perished because of the foolishenes.

Who hath gone up into heauen, to take wisdom there and broughte her downe from the cloudes? Who hath gone ouer the sea, to fynde her, & hath chosen her aboue gold, & so broughte her hether? No man knoweth the waies of wisdom, neither is there any that can seke out her pathes. But he that wotteth all thinges, knoweth her, and he hath founde her oute with his foreknowledge. * This same is he which prepared the earth at the beginning, and fylled it with all maner of foules and bestes. * When he sendeth out the lyghte, it goeth: and when he calleth it again, it obeyeth hym with feare.

The starres kepe theyr watche, and geue theyr light: yea & that gladly. When he calleth them they saye: here we be. And so with cherefulnesse they shewe lyght vnto hym that made them.

* This is our God and there shall none other be compared vnto hym. It is he that hath founde oute all wisdom, and hath geuen her vnto Jacob his seruante, and to Israel his beloued. * Afterwarde dyd he shewe hym selfe vpon earth, and dwelt among men.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The reward of them that kepe the lawe, & the punishment of them that despise it. A comfortyng of the people being in captiuitie. A complaine of Jerusalem & vnder the figure thereof of the church. A consolacyon & comfortyng of the same.

This is the booke of the commandmentes of God, and the lawe that endureth for euer. Al they that kepe it shall come to lyfe: but suche as forsake it, shall come to deathe. Turne the, O Jacob, take holde of it: walke by this waye thowowe his byghtnes and thyne. Geue not thyne honoure to another, and thy worshippe to a straunge people. O Israel, howe happye are we, seeing that God hath shewed vs suche thynges as are pleasaunt vnto hym: Be of good chere, thou people of God, O thou ancient Israel. * Nowe are ye solde among the heathen, howbeit, not for your vtter destruction: but because ye prouoked God the Lord to wrathe and dyspleasure, therefore were ye deliuered vnto your enemies: for ye displeased the euerlastyng God that made you offeryng vnto deuyls & not to God. Ye haue forgotten hym that broughte you up, and your nurse haue ye greued, O Israel.

When he sawe that the wraath of God was comyng vpon you, he sayde hearken. O ye & dwell about syon, for God hath broughte me into great heynesse, and why? I se the captivitye of my people, of my sonnes & daughters, which the euerlastyng God will byng vpon them. With hope dyd I nuryse them, but nowe must I leaue them with weeping & sorrow.

Let no man reioyce ouer me wyddowe, and forsaken: which for the synnes of my chyldren am desolate of euery manne. For why? they departed from the lawe of God: they woulde not know his righteousnesse, nor walke in the way of his commandmentes: & as for the pathes of truth & godlynes, they had no lust to go in the

The booke.

C O ye dwellers aboute Syon, come, and let vs call to remembraunce the captiuite, that þeuerlastyng God hath broughte vpon my sonnes and my daughters. * He hath broughte a people vpon them from farre, an vncircumsised people and of a straunge language which neither regard the olde, nor ppytie the yonge.

Go your way (O my chyldren) go your way for I am desolate & forsaken. * I haue put of þe clothynge of peace, and put vpon me the sackcloth of prayer, & for my tyme I wyll cal vpon the most hyeste. Be of good chere: O my chyldren, crye vnto the Lorde, and he shall deliuer you from the power of þe princes, your enemies.

For verely, I haue euer a good hope of your prosperous helth: yea, a very gladnesse is come vpon me from the holy one, because of þe mercy that ye shall haue of our euerlastyng sauour.

D With mourning and weping dyd I let you go from me, but with ioye & perpetual gladnesse shall the Lorde bring you again vnto me. Like as the neighbours of Sion sawe your captiuite from God, Euen so shall they also se shortly your helth in God, whiche shall come in you w great honoure and euerlastyng worship.

ii. Re. xlii. b.

O my chyldren, * suffer patiently þe wrath that shall come vpon you. For the enemye hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se his destruction, and shalt treade vpon his necke.

My darlynges haue gone rougher harde wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scattered abroad with the enemies. But he of good comforte (O my chyldren,) and crye vnto the Lorde: For he that led you away, hath you yet in remembraunce: & lyke as ye haue ben mynded to swarue from your God * so shall ye now endeuoure youre selues ten tymes more, to turne againe and to seke hym. For he þe hath brought these plagues vpon you shall bring you euerlastyng ioye againe, with your helth. Take a good hert vnto the O Jerusalem: for he whiche gaue the that name, exhorteth the so to do.

Jer. l. a. b. c.

* The wycked doers that nowe put the to trouble shall perishe, and suche as haue reioysed at thy fall, shall be punished. The cytyes whome thy chyldren serue, and that haue carped awaye thy sonnes, shall be correct. For lyke as they be now glad of thy decay (& reioyce at thy fall) so shall they mourne in their owne destruction. The ioye of theyr multitude shall be taken away, and theyr chere shall be turned to sorrowe. For a fyre shall fall vpon them from the euerlastyng God longe to endure: and it shall be inhabited of deuils for a great season.

The. v. Chapter.

Jerusalem is moued vnto gladnes for the returne of her people, and vnder the fygure thereof, the church.

Q Jerusalem, loke aboute the toward the East, and beholde the ioye that cometh vnto the fro God. For lo, thy sonnes (whome thou hast forsaken, & that were scattered abroad) come gathered together, from the east and weste, reioysing in the word of þe holy one, vnto þe honour of God.

Put of thy mournynge clothes (O Jerusalem) and thy sorowe, & decke the with the worshippe and honour, that cometh vnto the from God, with euerlastyng gloire. God shall put the garmente of ryghteousnesse vpon the, and sette a crowne of euerlastyng worshippe vpon thine heade, for vpon the wyl God declare bys byghtenesse, þe is vnder the heauen. Yee, an euerlastyng name shall be geuen the of God, w peace of righteousnesse, & the honoure of Gods feare.

Aryse, O Jerusalem, stand vp an hye: loke about the toward the East: & behold thy chyldren gathered from the East, vnto the west which reioyse in thy holy worde, hauing God in remembraunce. They departed from the on foote, and were led awaye of their enemies: but nowe shall the Lorde bring them carped w honoure as chyldren of the kingdome. For God is purposed to bring downe all stoute mountaynes: yee and all hye rockes, to fyll the valleyes, & so to make them euen with the grounde: that Israel maye be dilygente to lyue vnto the honoure of God. The woodes and all pleasaunt trees shall ouer shadowe Israel, at the comaundement of God. For hether shall God bring Israell w ioyfull mirth, and in the light of his maiesty: w the mercy and righteousness that cometh of hym selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

A copy of the ppylle that Jeremy sent vnto the Jewes, which were led awaye prisoners by the kyng of Babylon: wherein he certifieth them of the thyng that was comaunded hym of God.

Because of the synnes, that ye haue doone agaynst God, ye shall be ledde awaye captiue vnto Babylon, euen of Nabuchodonosor, the kyng of Babylon. So when ye bee come into Babylon, ye shall remaine there manye yeres, and for a longe season: namely seuen generacions, and after that wyll I bring you awaye peaceably from thence. Nowe shall ye se in Babylon goddes of golde, of syluer, of woode, and of stone, borne vpon mens shulders, to caste oute a fearfulnessse before the heathen. But looke that ye do not as the other: be not ye a frayde, & let not the feare of them overcome you.

Therefore when ye see the multitude of people worshyping them behynde and before, say ye in your hertes: O Lorde, * it is thou þeough- teste onely to bee worshypped. Myne aungell also shall bee wyth you, and I my selfe wyll care for youre soules. As for the tymber of those goddes, the carpenter hath polished them: yea, gilted be they, and layde ouer with syluer: yet are they but vaine thynges, and cannot speake. Lyke as a wench þe loueth paramours is trymply dect, euen so are these made and hanged with golde. Crownes of gold verely haue their Goddes des goddess vpon their heades: so the priestes them selues take gold and syluer from them: and put it to theiꝝ owne vses: pea, they geue of y^e same vnto harlottes, and trimme theiꝝ whores with al: againe, they take it from their whores, and decke theiꝝ gods there with. * Yet cannot these gods deliuer them selues from rust and mothes When they haue couered them with clothyng of purple, they wype theiꝝ faces for the duste of the temple, wherof there is much among them One hath a Scepter in his hande as though he were Judge of the countrey: yet can he not slay suche as offende hym. Another hath a swerde or an axe in his hande, for all that he is neyther able to defende him selfe from battayle, nor fro murderers. By this ye maye vnderstand, that they be no gods: therfore se that ye neyther wor-shipp them, nor feare them. For lyke as a vessell that a man vsyth, is nothyng worth when it is broken, euen so is it with their gods. Whē they be set vp in the temple, theiꝝ eyes be full of dust thowse the fete of those y^e come in. And lyke as the doores are shut in rounde aboute vpon him that hath offended the kynge: Or as it were a dead bodye kepte besyde the graue. Euen so the priestes kepe the doores with barres and lockes least theiꝝ gods be spoiled with robbers. They set vp candels befoze them (ye, verely and that manye) whereof they cannot se one but euen as blockes, so stande they in the temple. It is sayd that the serpentis and wormes, whych come of the earth, knowe out theiꝝ bertes, eatynge the and their clothes also, and yet they feele it not.

Theiꝝ faces are black thowse the smoke that is in the temple. The oules, swalowes and byr-des, fly vpon them, yee, & the cattes runne ouer their heades. By this ye maye be sure, that they are not gods, therfore feare them not. The gold that they haue, is to make them be wyfull: for all that, excepte some bodye dyght of theiꝝ rust they wyl geue no thynge: & when they were cast into a fourme, they felt it not. They are bought for mony and haue no byeth of life within them * They muste be borne vpon mens shulders, as those y^e haue no feete: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothyng worth. * Confouded be they then that worshipp them, for yf they fall to the grounde, they cannot rylle vp againe of them selues. Yee though one helpe them vp & set them ryghte, yet are they not able to stande alone: but must haue pꝛoppes set vnder the like dead men. As for the thynge that is offred vnto them, theiꝝ priestes sell it, and abuse it: yee, the priestes wiues take therof: but vnto the sicke and poze, they geue nothyng of it: the women with childe, and the menstruous lape handes of theiꝝ offerpuges: By this ye maye be sure that they are no gods, therfore be not ye affrayde of them. Frome whence cometh it then, that they are called gods? The women sit befoze the god-des of syluer, golde, & woode, & the priestes syt in their temples, hauing open clothes, whose heddes & beerdes are shauen & haue nothyng vpo their heades: roozyng, and cryng vpon theiꝝ gods as men do at the feaste when one is deade.

The priestes also take awaye the garmentes of the ymages and decke theiꝝ wyues and chyldren withall. Whether it be good or euell that any man do vnto the, they are not able to reco-pense it: they can neyther sette vp a kynge nor put hym downe. In lyke maner they may neyther geue ryches, nor rewarde euell. * Though a man make a vowe vnto the and kepe it not, they wyl not requyre it. They can saue no man frome deathe, neyther deliuer the weake frome the myghtye. They can not restore a blynde mā to his syghte, nor helpe anye man at his nede.
They can shewe no mercy to the wyddowe, nor do good to the fatherlesse. Theiꝝ goddesses of woode, stone, golde, and syluer, are but euen as other stones, that be betwen of the mountayne.
They that worshipp them, shal be confounded.
Howe shulde they than be taken for goddesses?
Yee, howe dare men call them goddesses? And though the Caldees worshypped them not, hearing y^e they were but dame & coulde not speake: Yet they the selues offre vnto Bell, and wolde fayne haue hym to speake: as who saye, they could fele, that may not moue. But when these men come to vnderstandyng, they shal forsake the, for their goddess haue no felynge. A greate sorte of women gyde with coardes, sytte in the stretes, & burne oliue beries. Howe yf one of the be coueyd awaye, & lye is anye such as come by: she casteth her neyghbours in the teth, because she was not so worthely reputed, nor her coard broke. What soeuer is done for the, it is but in vayne and lost. Howe maye it then be sayde or thoughte, y^e they are goddesses? Carpeters & gold-smithes make them, neyther be they anye other thynge but euen what the workeman wyl make of them. Yee, the goldsmithes them sel-ues that make them, are of no longe contyn-uance. Howe shulde then the thynge that are made of them, be goddesses? Mayne therfore are the thynge (ye, verely same is it) that they leauelynde them for theiꝝ prosperitie. For as soone as there cometh anye warre or plage vpon them, then the priestes ymagyne, where they maye hyde them selues wyth them. Howe can men thynke then, y^e they be goddesses, whych neyther may defende them selues frome warre, nor deliuer them from misfortune? For seynge they be but of wood, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynges shal knowe hereafter that they be but vayne thynge: yee, it shal be openly declared, that they be no goddesses: but euen the very workes of mens handes, and that God hath nothyng to do with them. (It is manifeste then that they are no goddesses, but the workes of mens handes, and no worcke of God in them.) They can set no kynge in the lande, nor geue raine vnto men. They can geue no sentence of a matter, neyther defende the land frome wronge. For they are not able to do so moche as a crowe, that flyeth betwyxte heauen and earth.

When there happeneth a fyre into the house of those goddesses of woode, and syluer, and of golde, the priestes wyl escape and saue them

selues, but the goddes burne as the balkes ther in. They cannot withstande any kynge or bat- tell: howe may it then be thoughte or graited, that they be goddes? Moreouer these goddes of woode, of stone, of golde, and syluer may ne- ther defende them selues frome theues nor rob- bers: yee, the very wycked are stronger the they. These stryppen them oute of theyr apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take theyr golde & syluer from them, and so get theyr away: yet ca- they not helpe them selues. Therfore it is moche better for a man, to be a kynge, and so to thewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in a house, wherin he that owethe it, myghte haue plea- sure: yee, or to be a doze in a house, to kepe such thynges safe as be therein, the to be such a vayne god. The Sunne, the moone, & all the starres, seynge they geue theyr shyne and lyghte, are o- bedient, and do men good. Whan the lyghte- nyng glistereth, all his cleare. The winde blo- weth in euery countre: and whā God commaū- deth the cloudes to go rounde aboute the whole worlde, they do as they are bydden, whan the fyre is sent downe from aboue & commaunded, it burneth vp hylles and woddes. But as for those goddes, they are not like one of these thin- ges, neyther in beuetye, neyther strength. Ther- fore, men shulde not thynke nor saye that they be goddes, seynge they can neither geue sentence in iudgemente, nor do men good. For so muche nowe as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare they not. For they can neyther speake euell nor good for kynges. They can thewe no tokens in heauen for þe heathen, neyther shyne as the Sunne, nor geue lyghte as the Moone: yee, the vnrasonable bestes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rose, and do them selues good. So can ye be certifyed by no maner of meanes, that they be goddes: ther- fore feare them not. For lyke as a scarcrowe in a garden of herbes kepeth nothyng, euen so are theyr goddes of woode, of syluer and golde: and lyke as a white thorne in an orcharde, that euery byrde sytteth vpon: yee, lyke as a dead bodie that is caste in the darcke: Euen so is it with those goddes of woode, syluer and golde. Wherby the purple and scarlet whych they haue vpon them, and soone saydeth away: ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: yee, they them selues shalbe consumed at the laste, whych shalbe a great confusyon of the lande. Blessed is the godlye man, that hath no yma- ges, and worshyp- peth none, for he shalbe farre from reproffe.

And they walked in the myddest of the flamine prayseynge God and magnifyed the Lorde. As- sarias stode vp, and prayde on thys maner. Euen in the myd- dest of the fyre opened he his mouth & sayde: Blessed be thou

(O Lord God of our fathers) ryght worthy to be prayled and honoured is þe name of thine for euermore: for thou arte righteous in al the thin- ges that thou hast done vnto vs, yee, saythfull are all thy woorkes, thy wayes are ryght, & all thy iudgementes true. In al þe thynges that thou hast brought vpon vs, and vpon the holy cytie of oure fathers (euen Jerusalem) thou hast exe- cuted true Iudgement: yee, accordyng to ryght and equite hast thou broughte al these thynges vpon vs because of oure synnes.

For why? we haue offended and done wyck- kedlye, departynge frome the: * In all thynges we haue we trespassed, and not obeyed thy commaū- dementes, nor kept them, nether done as thou hast bydden vs, þe we myght prosper. * Ther- fore all that thou hast broughte vpon vs, and euery thing that thou hast done to vs, thou hast done them in true Iudgement: As in deliuering vs into the handes of oure enemyes, among vn- godlye and wycked ymagynacyons, and to an vnrightheous kynge, yee, the mooste frowarde vpon earth. And nowe we maye not open oure mouthes, we are become a shame & reproffe vn- to thy seruantes, and to them that worshypp- the. Yet for thy names sake (we beseech the) geue vs not vp for euer, breake not thy conenant, & take not awaye thy mercy from vs, for thy be- loued Abrahams sake, for thy seruāt Isaaks sake, and for thy holy Israels sake. To whom thou hast spoken and promysed * that thou woldest multiply their seide as the sterres of heauen & as þe lande þe lieth vpon the see. For we (O Lord) are become lesse then any people, & we kept vnder this daye in all the world because of oure synnes: So that now we haue nether prince, prophet, burnt offering, sacrifice, oblatyon, incense, nor Sanctuary befoze the.

Nevertheless, in a contryte herte & an hum- ble sprete, let vs be receaued, that we maye ob- tayne thy mercy. Like as in the burnt offering of Rammes & bullockes, & lyke as in thousan- des of fat lambes so let our offeringes be in thy syght this day, that it may please the, * for ther is no confusyon vnto them that put there trust in the. And nowe we folowe the wyth all oure hert, we feare the & like thy face. But vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louynge and- nes, and accordyng to the multitude of thy mer- cyes. Delouer vs by thy myracles (O Lord) & get thy name an honoure, that all they whych do thy seruantes enell maye be confounded.

The story of Susanna

whych is the thyrtyene Chapter of Danyel after the Latyn.

There dwelt a man in Babilon called Ioachym, that tooke a wyfe, whose name was Susanna, þ daughter of Helchia, a verie fayre woman and such one as feared God. her father & her mother also were godlye people, & taught their doughter accordyng to þ law of Moles. Nowe Joachim (her husbände) was a grate ryche man, & had a faire orchard ioinig vnto his house. And to him resorted the Jewes comenly, because he was a mā of reputacion among the. The same yere were there made two iudges, suche as the Lord speaketh of: All the wyckednes of Babilon lon commeth from the elders (that is) from the iudges, which seme to rule & people. These came oft to Joachims house, and all such as had any thing to do in & law came thither vnto them.

Now when the people came againe at after none, Susanna went into her husbandes orcharde, to walke. The elders seynge this that she went in dayly, and walked, they burned for lust to her: yee, they wer almost out of their wyttes and cast downe their eyes, that they shoulde not se heauen, nor remember that God is a righteous iudge. For they were booth wounded with & loue of her, nether durst one shewe another his greife. And for shame, they durst not tel her their inordinate lust, that they woulde faine haue to do with her. Yet they laied wayt for her earnestly from day to day, that they might (at the last) haue a sight of her. And & one saied to the other: Up, let vs go home, for it is diner time. So they went their way from her.

When they returned again, they came together, enquiring out the matter betwixte them selues: yee, the one tolde the other of his wicked lust: Then apointed they a time when they might take Susanna alone.

It happened also that they spied out a conuenient time, when she went forth to walke (as her maner was) and nobody with her, but .ii. maydens, and thought * to wash her self in the garden, for it was an hote season: And ther was not one parson ther, except the two elders that had hid them selues to beholde her. So she saied to her maidens: go for me oyle and soope, and shut & orchard doze, that I may wash me. And they did as she bad them, and shut the orchard doze and went out them selues at a back doze, to fet the thyng that she had commaunded: but Susanna knew not, that the elders lay there hyd with in. Now when the maidens wer gone forth the two elders gat them vp and came vpon her, saying: now the orchard dozes ar shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs, and lye with vs.

Pf thou wilt not, we will bring a testimony all against the, that ther was a yonge feloe with the, and that thou hast sent away thy maidens from the for the same cause. Susanna sighed, & saied: Alas, I am in trouble on euery side. Though I folow youre mynde, it will be my death, and pf I consent not vnto you, I cannot escape your handes. Well, it is better for me, to fall into your handes without the deede doyng then to speme in the sight of the Lord: and with that, she cried out with a loud voyce: the elders also cried out against her.

Then ranne ther one to the orchard doze and smote it open. Now when the seruantes of the house heard the cry in the orchard they rushed in at the backe doze, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruantes were greatly ashamed, for why? there was neuer such a report made of Susanna. On & morow after, came the people to Joachim her husband, and the two elders came also, full of myscheuous ymaginacion agaynst Susanna, to bring her vnto death, and spake thus before the people: Send for Susanna the daughter of helchias Joachims wife. And immediatly they set for her. So she came with her father and mother, her chyldren and all her kynred. Now Susanna was a tender person and maruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wicked men commaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) that at the last they myghte so be satisfied in her bewtie. Then her frendes: yee, and all they that knewe her, began to wepe.

These two elders stood vp in the myddest of the people, * and laied their handes vpon Susanna, which wept and loked vp toward heauen for her hert had a sure trust in the Lord. And the elders saied: As we wer talkyng in the orchard alone this woman came in with her two maidens whome she sent awaye frome her, and spared the orchard dozes: with that a yonge feloe (whiche there was hid) came vnto her, and lay with her. As for vs, we stood in a corner in the orchard. And when we saw this wickednes, we came to her: and perceiued that they had medled together. But we coulde not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened the doze and gat him awaye.

Nowe when we had taken this woman, we asked her what yonge feloe this was: but she woulde not tell vs. This is the matter, and we be witnesses of the same. The comen sort beleued them: as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, and so they condemned her to deathe. Susanna cried oute with a loude voyce and saied: O euerlasting God, * thou sercher of secrettes, thou that knowest all thinges afoze they come to passe: thou wottest, that they haue bozne false wytnesse agaynst me, and behold, I muste dye, where as I neuer dyd suche thynges as these men haue maliciously inuited against me. And the Lord heard her voyce. For when she was led forth to deathe, the Lord raised vp the spyte of a yonge chyld, whose name was Daniel, which cried with a loude voyce: * I am cleane from this bloude. Then all the people turned them toward hym, and saied: What meane these wordes, that thou haste spoken? Daniell stood in the myddest of them and saied: Are ye such fooles, O ye chyldren of Israel, that ye can not discern nor knowe the truth? Ye haue here condemned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and know not the truth: wherfore, go sit on iudgement again, for they haue spokē false witness against her.

Wherfore the people turned again in all the hast. And the elders (that is the principall heades) said vnto him: come sit downe here among vs, and shew vs this matter, seying God hath geuen the as great honour as an elder. And Daniel saied vnto them: * But these two aside one fro another, and then shal I heare them. When they wer put a sonder one frome another, he called one of them and said vnto hym. O thou cankered carle, & hast vsed thy wickednesse so long thine vngacious dedes whiche thou hast done afoze, are nowe come to lyght.

The story of Bel and of the Dragon.

Fol. li.

For thou haste geuen false Judgementes, thou haste oppressed the innocente, and letten the gyltie go free where as yet the Lorde sayth * The innocent and righteous se thou slay not. Well, then yf thou ha ste sene her, tell me vnder what trece la west thou them talkyng together he answered, vnder a Holbery tree. And Danyell sayde, very well, nows thou lyste euen vpon thyne owne heade. Loo, the messaunger of the Lorde hath receyued the sentence of hym, to cut the in two. Then put he him asyde, & called for the other, & said vnto hym: O y lode of Canaan, but not of Juda: Kayrenes hath dysceined the, and lust hath subuerted thyne herre. Thus dealte pe afoze wyth the daughters of Israell, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Juda wolde not abyde poure wpykednesse. Nowe tell me then vnder what tree dydest thou take them speakyng together? he answered: Under a Pomegranate tree. Then sayde Danyell vnto hym: very wel, nowe thou lyste also euen vpon thyne owne head. The messaunger of the Lorde standeth waityng with the sword, to cut the in two & to slaye you both.

the liuyng God, which made heauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kyng sayd vnto hym: thinkest thou not y Bel is a liuyng God? O seest thou not howe muche he eate. y & dyspnketh euery dape: Danyel smiled and sayde O kyng, dysceyne not thy selfe, for this is but made of claye within, and of metall wythoute, * neyther eateth he euer any thyng.

Then the kyng was wroth, & called for his prestes, & said vnto them: Yf ye tel me not who is this, feateh vp these expences, ye shall dye: but if ye can certify me y Bel eateth them, then Danyel shal dye, for he hath spoken blasphemie agaynst Bel: And Danyel said vnto y kyng: let it so be, accordyng as thou haste sayde: The prestes of Bel were. lxx, besyde they wyues and chyldren. And y kyng went with Danyell into the temple of Bel. So Bels prestes sayde Loo, we wyll go oute, and sette thou the meate there (O kyng) & powze in the wyne, then shut the doze fast, and seale it with thyne owne sygnet: and to morowe when thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wyll suffer deathe, or els Daniel that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure ynough, for vnder the aulter they had made a priue entraunce, and there went they in euer, and dyd eate vp what there was.

So when they wer gone forth, the kyng set meates before Bel. Now Daniel had comaunded his seruantes to byng a shes, and these he syfied thorowout all the temple, that y kyng myght se. Then went they out, and sparred the doze, sealyng it with the kynges sygnet, and so departed. In the nyght came the prestes, with they wyues and chyldren (as they were wonte to doo) and dyd eate and dyspnke vp all. In the morning bet ymes at the byake of the day, the kyng arose, and Daniel with hym. And y kyng sayde: Daniel, are the seales whole yet? he answered: Yee (O kyng) they be whole. Nowe as soone as he had opened the doze, the kyng looked vnto the aultare, and cryed with a loude voyce Great art thou (O Bel) and with the is no dyscepte. Then laughed Daniel, and helde y kyng that he shulde not go in: and said. Beholde the pauement, marke well whose foote steppes are these? The kyng saide: Yse the foote steppes o men, women, and chyldren.

Therefore the kyng was angrye, and took the prestes with they wyues and chyldren: and they shewed hym the priue dozes, where they came in, & dyd eat vp such thynges as wer vnder the aulter. For the whiche cause the kyng slayd them, & and deliuered Bel into Daniels power which destroyed hym and his temple.

And in that same place there was a greete dragon, whiche they of Babylon woishypped. And the kyng sayde vnto Daniel: latestt thou, y this is but a god of metall also: lo, he lyueth, he eateth and dyspnketh: so that thou canste not saye, that he is no lyuinge god, therefore, woishypppe hym. Danyel sayde vnto the kyng: I wyll woishypppe the Lorde my God, * he is the true liuyng God: as for this, he is not y God of Eggis lyfa

Wyth that all the whole multitude gaue a greete shoute, and prayled God, * whych alwaye delyuered them y put they trust in hym: And they came vpon y two elders (whome Danyell had conuyct with they owne mouth that they had geuen false wytnesse and) delte wyth them, euen likewyse as they wold haue done w they neyghbours: yee, they dyd accordyng to the lawe of Moyses, & put them to deathe. Thus the innocent bloude was saued the same day.

Then Helchia and his wyfe prayled God for they daughter Susanna, wyth Joachym her husbände and all the kinred: that there was no dysponesty founde in her. From that dape forth was Danyel had in greete reputacyon in the sygute of the people. (And kyng Astyages was layde with his fathers, and Cyrus of Persya raygned in his steade.)

And the kyng sayde vnto hym: why dost not thou woishypp Bel? he answered and sayde: * Because I maye not woishypppe thynges y benmade with handes. * But to the endes of the worlde, and gettyng manye poples of the people: in so much that the world rode in greate awe of hym, * & therfore was he proude in hys herte. Nowe when he had gathered a myghty stronge host, & subdued the landes and people wryth theyr pynnes, so that they became tributaries vnto hym: he fell speke. And whē he perceaued þe he must nedes dye, he called for hys noble estates (which had bene broughte vnto hym of children) * and parted his kyngdome amonge the, whyle he was yet alpye. So Alexander ragged. xii. yere and then dyed.

After hys death fell the kyngdome vnto hys pynnes, and they optayned it euery owne in his rowme, and caused the selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd theyr chyldren after the many yeres, and much wickednes increased in the world. Out of these came the vnglacious rote, noble Antiochus þe sonne of Antiochus þe kyng (* whych hadde bene a pledge at Rome) and he ragged in the. C. and seuen and thyrty yere of the Emperre of the Grekes.

In those dayes went ther out of Israel wyched men, which moued much people wryth theyr counsell, sayenge: * Let vs go and make a couenant with the heathen, that are rounde about vs: for sence we departed from the we haue had much sorowe. So thys deuysie pleased them wel and certayne of the people toke vpon them for to go vnto the kyng, which gaue them lycence to do after the ordinaunce of the heathē. * Then let they vpon an open scole (at Jerusalem) of the lawes of the heathen, and were nomore cymcys-sed: but forsoke the holy testament, & ioynd the selues to the heathen, * and were cleane solde to do myschere. So whē Antiochus beganne to be myghty in hys kyngdome, he wente aboute to optayne the land of Egypte also, that he myght haue the dompion of two realmes. * Vpon this entred he into Egypte, with a strong host, with charrettes, Elephantes, horsemen, and a greate nombre of wyppes, & beganne to warre against Ptolomy the kyng of Egypte. But Ptolomy was afrayde of hym, and fled: and manye of hys people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wanne many stronge cyties, & toke a waye great good out of the lande of Egypte.

* And after þe Antiochus had syncten Egypt he turned agayne in the. Cxlii. yere, and wente towarde Israel, & came vnto Jerusalem wryth a myghty people: & entred proude into þe Sanctuary, & toke a waye the golden aulter, the can-delstyk and al the ornamente therof, the table of the shewbread, the powyrge vessell, the chargers, the golde spones, the vayle, the crownes, & the golden apparel of the temple, & brake doونه all. He toke also the spluer and golde, the precyous Jewels, & the secret treasures that he foude.
 And when he had taken awaye altogether, caused a great murder of mē, & so fulfilled his malyccious pryde, he departed into his owne lande.

Thus there arose a great heynes & myserye in all the lande of Israel. * The pynnes & the cl-bers of the people mourned, the yong men & the maydens were despyled, and the saye betwye of women was chaunged: the bypdegrome and the byde toke them to mournyng: the lande & those that dwelte therein, was moued: for al the house of Jacob was brought to confusion.

* After thos yeres the kyng sente hys chere treasurer into the cyties of Iuda, wher he came to Jerusalem with a great multitude of people speakyng peaceable wordes vnto them, but al was dysceate: for when they had geuen hym credence, he fell sodenly vpon the cytie, and smote it fore, & destroyed muche people of Israel. * And when he had spoyled the cytie, he set fyre on it, castyng downe houses & walles on euery syde.
 The women and theyr chyldren toke theyr captyue, and led awaye theyr catell. Then brylled they the cytie of David with a great and thicke wall, and wryth myghty towres, and made it a stronge holde for them. Werye all thys they set wyched people and vngodly men to kepe it, stored it with weapens and vntayles: gathered the goodes of Jerusalem and layed them vpon there: thus became it a thynke castell.

And thus was done to laye wyte for the people that wente into the Sanctuary, and for the cruel destruccyn of Israel. Thus they shed im-cent bloude on euery syde of the Sanctuary, & despyled it: In so much þe cytyens were sayne to departe, and the cytie became an habytacyon of straungers, beyng desolate of her owne sede for her owne natyues were sayne to leaue her.
 * Her Sanctuary was cleane wasted, her holpe dayes were turned into mournyng, her Sabbothe were had in dyspyson, and her honour brought to naught. Like howe great her glorie was afore so great was her confusion, & her toye turned into sorowe.

* Antiochus also the kyng sente oute a commyssyon vnto all hys kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they lefte euery man hys lawe, and all the heathē agreed to the commaundement of kyng Antiochus: Yee, many of the Israelytes consented therunto offeryng vnto Idols, and despylyng the Saboth. So the kyng Antiochus sente hys messangers wryth
